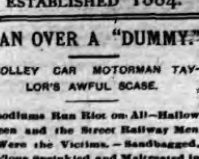
RAN OVER A "DUMMY."

TROLLEY CAR MOTORMAN TAYLOR'S AWFUL SCARE.

Bloodiams Ran Riot on All—Hallow'een and the Street Railway Men Were the Victims.—Sandbagged, Flour Sprinkled and Maltreated in all Sorts of Ways.



OOLING on Hallow'een is an old custom but if it was carried to such extremes often as it was last night, the police force would have to be doubled to catch the miscreants.

Joseph Taylor is a new man in the employ of the Street Railway Company and is at night motorman on car No. 24.

Last night, on Monroe avenue between eight and nine o'clock, when he had the car going along pretty lively he saw directly ahead a group of young men, apparently fighting. They were scuffling and yelling. Suddenly a pistol shot rang out; a scream from a boy, "My God, I'm killed," and the motor man, with inexpressible horror and terror, saw, as he thought, the figure of a man fall across the track. With fierce strength he wrenched at the brake, but the car slid on and ran over the recumbent form. The group of young men disappeared.

The motor man and conductor got off when the car stopped. They could hardly stand, their fright was so intense, when they saw, protuding from under the car, a pair of boot encased legs. The body was dragged in the car tracks that it took some time to get it out. The "dummy," for that is what it proved to be, was so well made, that, over an hour later, the motor man and conductor could not be convinced that they had not run over a man. They were absolutely sick.

Examination showed that the car-tracks had been greased for about twenty feet, so that the car would slide on in spite of all efforts to stop it. The "joke" had been carefully planned, and, to the perpetrators, must have seemed a huge success.

Such "jokes," however, need one addition to be perfection—a prolonged rest for the jokers at the expense of the state.

A Motor-Man Sandbagged.

Possibly the same gang that played the "dummy" joke on motorman Taylor, completely paralyzed motorman Wallace. He was hit with a sand bag, and, for about ten minutes, was so dazed as to be not only unfit, but unable, to perform his duty. The conductor had to run the car.

Conductor Wilson Knocked Down.

The trolley on Conductor Wilson's car was pulled off the wire by another gang, and, for a long time, his attempts to get it replaced were frustrated by organized assaults. Finally, he dashed at his tormentors. One fellow got in front of him and flung a tomato can at his head. another struck him with a bag stuffed with leaves and knocked him down. Then he was kicked and cuffed with a liberality that proclaimed the touch. He tried to bluff them with his punch, pretending it was a revolver but the bluff did not work. Eventually they tired of the "sport" and he was let go.

Conductor Nolan's Fortunate Escape.

A weighty stone or stick was hurled at Conductor Nolan on car No. 4. Fortunately, it missed him and struck the door, which was broken. The size and force of the projectile may be realized from its work.

Covered With Flour.

Flour was thrown at Mr. Hartpence, another employe of the Railway Company, in such quantities, and with such precision that he looked like a snow man. He was compelled to get inside the car several times to escape being blinded.

All the motormen and conductors were more or less hit with handfuls of flour, but none quite so much as Mr. Hartpence.

A Hallow-E'en Party.

A Hallow E'en party was held at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Horace [illegible], on Jackson avenue, last night. Games peculiar to that evening were indulged in. The refreshments were the most enjoyed of all. Charlotte Russe made of soap and cake with, pepper in it were given to the guests to eat.

Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Steimer, Mr. and Mrs. E. Messerschmidt, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. George Chickerer, Miss Alice Townsend, Miss Dorcomus, the Misses Wendell, Miss Nettie Florio, Mr. William Townsend and Mr. J. C. Martin.

500,000 Valves for Bicycle Tires.

Five hundred thousand valves for pneumatic bicycle tires are being made by Mr. Fred Chase at his North avenue factory. The contract was recently closed with the owner of the patent and work will be pushed on them at once. The valve is made of brass and aluminum and contains no springs nor rubbers, and it is claimed that it can neither wear out nor leak. Mr. Chase is also working on some new idea in bicycle propulsion and expects to place some of his machines on the market soon. He is also making the important parts for the newly invented machine of Mr. Drake of New Market, an account of which appeared in THE NEWS a few weeks ago.

COMMISSIONERS MEET.

TO HEAR MADISON AVENUE PROPERTY OWNERS.

Only Mssrs. James W. Jackson and Edward B Ryder Represented the Property Owners—Mr. Jackson Sets His Price.

Messrs. J. Fred MacDonald, Edward C. Mulford and Wm. M. Sandford, the commissioners appointed to assess the damages and benefits for the widening of Madison avenue, met last night in the Council Chamber on Park avenue. The commissioners organized by electing Mr. MacDonald chairman and Mr. Mulford secretary.

Only two property owners were present—Messrs. James W Jackson and Edward B. Ryder. The latter appeared in behalf of the Gillies estate.

Mr. Jackson asked how much the proposed widening would take off his lot, which is at the corner of Front street. Mr. MacDonald replied that he could not tell him until the city map could be gotten. Mr. MacDonald apologized to the property owners for the delay, but said it was owing to the stupidity of the City Clerk in not having the map before.

Mr. Ryder said he would have to set the number of feet of land to be taken off the Gillies estate and submit it to the board before he could inform the commissioners the amount of their damages.

The map was secured and it was found that the strip to be taken from Mr. Jackson's lot was about eight feet wide. This would cut through the house. Mr. Jackson said he was going to tear the house down anyhow and he would take $200 per foot for the land.

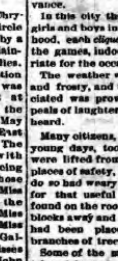
The proposed widening will cut about eight feet off Mrs. Dreier's property on the corner of Front street, and four feet off the Gilliga property.

This difference is occasioned by the irregularity of the street line.

A communication was read from Mrs. Holmes placing the damages to her property, along the railroad, at $600, and the moving of the coal bins, etc., at $400.

CHRYSANTHEMUM CIRCLE RECEPTION.

A Jolly Party at the Home of Miss Flannigan.



RECENTLY the Chrysanthemum Circle was organized by a number of Plainfield young ladies. The first reception of the circle was held last night at the home of the president, Miss May Flannigan, on East Front street. The house was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums. Music for dancing was furnished by Mrs. Buckley. Those present were: The Misses Carney, Miss Fannie Rafferty, the Misses Casey, the Misses Maddock, Miss Julia Fields, Miss Frances Rafferty, Miss Kittie Daly, Miss Mary Gloss, Miss Flynn, Miss Mary Galbraith, the Misses Keely, the Misses Flannigan, and Messrs. James Casey, John Hilbish, William Kiely, John Traynor, M. Mack, M. Whalen, M. Casey, J. Flynn, J. Flynn, Charles and James Daley, John Powers, J. Gallagher, Charles Ward, M. Cashin, Caspar Waglow and John Keely.

There was a donkey party before dancing began. Jim Gardner got the first prize, and William Kiely the booby prize.

THE SPEAKERS AT THE MASS MEETING.

A Rousing Meeting Expected in Which all Political Parties will Join.

The following letter from Mr. E. V. Lindabury, regarding the mass meeting in Music Hall Thursday night, explains itself:

Office of Elec. Supt.
Jersey City, Oct. 30, 1893.

"William M. Gallagher, Esq., Plainfield, N. J.
My Dear Sir:—Mr. Tyler called me up this morning on the telephone and asked me to speak at the meeting in your town Thursday night meeting, and I have gotten the consent of William H. Corbin, Esq., of Elizabeth; Rev. H. H. Obert, of Elizabeth and Thomas E. Adams, Esq., of Summit, to be present and address the meeting. These gentlemen have developed into the very best speakers we have in our campaign and you ought to take special pains to get the people out to hear them. I had not expected to send anybody to Mr. Corbin, but Mr. Tyler requested three and I have gotten them, and so they are each of such ability I do hope that you may have a rousing meeting * * * * * If you could find a man who is a prominent Democrat to preside I think it would be well.

Yours truly,
E. V. LINDABURY."

A LUCKY ITALIAN.

Antonio Lazzi Falls Heir to $12,000.

Antonio Lazzi, who lives in Dunellen, and worked at stone cutting in this city, has received word from Italy that he is heir to about $12,000, through the death of his father. Lazzi has lived in Dunellen for a number of years and is a hard working man. He will shortly leave for Italy to claim his money.

Mr. Harper's Store Closed.

The stationery business of Mr. Joseph Harper, of Park avenue, has been closed in the hands of Ex-Judge Codrington. The store is closed and there is a sign on the door to the above effect.

ALL HALLOWE'EN GAMES

YOUNG FOLKS ROMP AND PLAY TRICKS EVERYWHERE.

The Greatest Night of the Year for Innocent Pleasure and Fergo Into the Future.—The Police Watch our Sad Boys and They in Turn, Watch the Policemen.

N THESE days of enlightenment and general education many of the customs of old customs which had their root in simple, hearted ignorance are passing away; but old superstitions die hard in spite of the advances of a higher civilization, and it will be long before the keeping of Hallowe'en will become a thing of the past. As long as the human heart throbs and hates, as long as it needs scope for its hopes, and relief for its pains, just so long will it strive to peer into the unknown and seek the aid of some hoped-for power. Many girls, educated and up to the times, who would indignantly deny the charge of belief in superstitions, tried somelittle charm last night "just for fun" and few were strong enough to prevent a lightness or depression of the heart according to the result of the oracle.

The observance of All Hallow'en dates farther back than man can trace. Long before the people of ancient Britain embraced Christianity the Druids regarde d the evening of October 31 as a time when the powers of evil were abroad and believed that supernatural agencies could act within the range of humanity at that time. Fires were lit in the forests and around the bases of the hills and rites performed to the true God in order to ward off evil spirits. Later on, when All Hallow'eve became a Christian observance, new rites and superstitions were added to the old, and any little floating superstition that could not be located elsewhere was attached to this season, until the night became the high festival of concentrated superstition.

The true spirit of the festival, however, is gradually dying out, and it is only in the remote country parts, far away from the influence of city life, that the "youngsters" keep up this yearly observance.

In this city there were gatherings of girls and boys in nearly every neighborhood, each clique entering heartily into the games, indoor and outdoor, appropriate for the occasion.

The night was perfect, being clear and frosty, and that it was fully appreciated was proved by the shouts and peals of laughter which were frequently heard.

Many citizens, remembering their own young days, took care that their gates were lifted from their hinges and put in places of safety, but many who failed to do so had weary searches this morning for that useful article. Gates were found on the roofs of outhouses several blocks away and in one or two cases gates had been placed high among the branches of trees.

Some of the mischievous tricks were tying strings across the sidewalk so as to knock off the heels of unsuspecting pedestrians, playing tick-tack on windows, greasing door-knobs, and other similar annoyances.

Indoor games were generally carried on in the kitchen. From the ceiling a long string was hung, to which a skewer was attached. On one end of the skewer was a finger, on the other an apple. To catch the apple between one's teeth, at the same time avoiding possible stinging or tallow sprinkling from the candle, was the triumph and fun of this sport. The best games were pulled for, and the splashing and "ducking" and tearfully sprinkled moustaches of six months growth ensued, but no one thinks of such mishaps in the gale of fun that the game engenders.

The girls did not take part in this game, nor confine it to their pretty faces, but as the position in life of the future husband is always a burning question to the feminine mind, the girls were soon putting this to the test. Into the middle of the room they drew a tub full with water, into which each dropped some peeled lead. This lead was supposed to take a shape symbolic of the occupation of the future liege lord of the fair dropper. The shapes depended very much on the imagination and eyes of the participants.

Another jolly game was "bobbing for apples," which consisted of ducking the head into a tub full of water, an d grasping floating apples with the teeth. When this was done to have a peep into the future.

These, and many other observances were followed last night.

A Lamp Explosion Calls Out the Firemen.

A lamp exploded in the store at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place shortly after eight o'clock last night, and set fire to a curtain. An alarm was sent in and Warren Engine Company responded with a hose. Assistance promptly put the blazing lamp into the street. A line of hose laid was not needed. The damage was slight.

ABOUT JOHN WESLEY.

HIS LIFE, PIETY AND LOVE FOR HUMANITY.

The First Lecture in the Afternoon Course, at All Souls' Church, under the Auspices of Unitarian Women.

The first afternoon lecture in the course to be given under the auspices of Unitarian women was delivered yesterday afternoon by Mrs. J. F. Waller of Yonkers, in All Souls' church. Her subject was "John Wesley: His Liberality, Piety and Love for Humanity."

Mrs. Waller began by telling of John Wesley's childhood. He lived until he was eleven years old at Epworth. He said he lived until he was that age without sin. At seventeen years of age Wesley entered Oxford. Here he disgraced himself by running into debt. At 22 he resolved to devote his life to God. Then, with a few companions, he became known as a leader of a band of Methodists. From the time Wesley was 25 his 50 years of evangelistic labor was continuous.

His mother was a Unitarian until her husband converted her over to Methodism. Even her Wesley inherited his rationalism. He was the greatest rationalist of his time.

When Wesley began to preach he had to use the fields for a church. He never preached until the churches were out.

In 1790 there were 541 preachers and 128,000 members of the Methodist faith.

A BARN DANCE.

The Younger Set in Washington Park Society Enjoy Themselves.

The younger set in Washington Park society held a very enjoyable and most successful dance in the barn on Washington avenue belonging to Mr. B. A. Boardman, Jr. The barn was beautifully decorated with bunting, lanterns, etc., by the Misses Grace and Alice Barlow and Messrs. Carl Brown and Henry Wells.

The patronesses were: Mrs. E.S. Brown, Mrs. J. J. Henderson, Mrs. Charles A. Reed and Mrs. B. A. Boardman, Jr.

Those present were: Miss Marion Henderson, Miss Cornelia Faber, the Misses Kate and Blanche Miller, Miss Hallie Vandeventer, Miss Alice Thompson, Miss Dottie and Emma Haviland, Miss Edith Capp, Miss May Shreve, the Misses Alice and Grace Barlow, Miss May Godwin of New York, Miss Etta Rodman of Astoria, N. L., Miss Helen Hance, Miss Mamie Vandeventer, and Miss Grace T. Brown, and Messrs. Frank Thompson, William and Charles Faber, Edmund Rushmore, Howard Turrill, Charles Cook, Charles Case, Henry Wells, Carl Brown, and Philip Jacques of New York.

BREVITIES.

—The Borough Council will meet Friday night.

—Only one game was bowled in C. Y. M. L. Individual tournament, last night as follows: W. Kiely 166 vs. Galbraith, 156.

—Special Policeman Allabaugh, who was detailed to guard the Ackerman vault, states he is off duty for a week, on business, with the full knowledge and consent of his employer.

—The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of the city has received an invitation to attend the reception of the Catholic Young Men's Literary Association of New Brunswick, on Thanksgiving night.

—The Climax Bottle Stopper Factory will start up in about two weeks at its new factory, corner of Washington and Second streets. The machinery is being hoisted and offices have been removed.

—A horse belonging to Tobin & Addis became frightened at an electric car on Somerset street, about eight o'clock this morning, and, in starting to run, slipped and fell to the ground. The car did not dodged a few minutes to escape the horse's heels. The horse was not injured.

—Edsall says his lawyer has recently made some very favorable proposals to cease in fine and mixings goods on account of their recent history and that the principle obstacle now is to give the benefit of the same to their patrons. Hence of the present time he says he is enabled to offer the best bargains ever brought to this city, and he feels sure that he will be to the interest of buyers to call and see for themselves. Over thirty special items at extra low figures are mentioned in his new advertisement to-to-days News.

—Westervelt avenue from East Front street to "the brook" is one of Plainfield's newest streets, and one that the city may be proud of. The roadbed is well macadamized and the neighborhood is well built up with modern houses averaging in value about $5,000. The people of the locality are thrifty and take great pride in their street, keeping it free from rubbage and leaves. The new bridge for spanning the brook, which, for some time, has been needed, October 15th, has not progressed further than the foundations. The cause of delay is that the iron girders were made too short, consequently the taxpayers must do without it for many more months, and justly feel fault.

The Jury Disagreed.

The case to try right of property, was tried before Justice Mosier and a jury this morning. The property in question was thought to belong to Mr. Nolan, but was claimed by Mrs. Nolan, when on an attachment was secured against Nolan by Mr. Westphal. The jury disagreed.

His friends will be glad to know that he walked down town to day for the first time.

Invitations have been issued for the Assemblies to be held at the Casino the coming Winter. The patronesses are: Mrs. Charles E. Brown, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. Robert L. Barnett, Mrs. Harry G. Rankin and Mrs. William T. Kaufman. The dances will be held as follows: December 11th, January 1st, January 29th, and March 29th.

Mr. J. Fred MacDonald, whom every Plainfielder knows, has been making some very successful ventures in real estate recently, and finds that occupation more lucrative even than the grocery business. His territory is boundless in his new line, and his latest field of operation is Hackensack, N. J., which he says is a great place. He is associated with Mr. Wm. E. Taylor of that city and last Saturday purchased twenty acres of land not far from the heart of the town. He says he will be to see it will be a big boom. Since September 30, Mr. MacDonald and his partner have sold $90,000 worth of property.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

A Plainfielder's Experience in New York.

Mr. Richard Tolton of East Front street is said to have been drugged and robbed in New York Monday. He went to the city to buy merchandize. While there he decided to have a tooth pulled. To brace himself for the order he entered a saloon and took a hors'or' whisky. That was early in the afternoon. The next thing he knew he was on a car at 9 o'clock at night, he was then walking up Broadway. His overcoat and watch were gone. It is supposed he was drugged, and after wards robbed.

He denies the story.

Tribute to the Late Hon. Nathan Harper.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, desire to put on record, this minute, on the occasion of the death of the Hon. Nathan Harper. This hospital was one of the earliest works of benevolence, of our city, to which he was ready and glad to give aid and encouragement.

He was for several years in the early days a member of the Board of Trustees of the Board, cheerfully giving his time and counsel to the furtherance of its work.

The clearness of his perception and the calmness of his judgement, were of the best of great value in our deliberations, while his well known character in this community, for honor, truth and wise man, was of great assistance in the laying of the foundation upon which the Institution is built and on which it has met with so much success, and been the instrument of such great usefulness, to a large army of our needy and suffering fellowmen.

Women Cannot Vote in New York.

The Constitution of the State of New York stands in the way of female suffrage. By a law passed last year women, as in New Jersey, were permitted to vote for candidates for School Commissioners in the rural districts, but a decision handed down at Syracuse recently Judge Williams held that these offices being elective are within the rule of the Constitution which restricts the right of suffrage to male citizens. Consequently he has ordered that the names of women removed from the registry list, and the march of the sex toward political equality gets another set-back. It remains to be seen whether or not new that fiat cannot vote for school officers the succeeding years, and whether or not thus they did while so few of them were making any advantage of it.—Record News.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Dana on Journalism.

To young people who intend to enter the newspaper field Charles A. Dana's noble address on journalism offers inspiration as well as no end of useful information.

Mr. Dana's lecture was given at Union college. Perhaps since he was speaking to students he gave a little too much importance to the study of the dead languages. Certainly if we have not time to learn both Greek and German it will be better in these times for us to take the German.

Would you be a journalist? says Mr. Dana. Study the constitution and political history of America. Add also an acquaintance with the constitutions of the various states and territories. Do not merely commit them to memory, parrotlike, but think about them and compare them. The real journalist takes a natural interest in politics.

In order to be of importance in the affairs of the world in the newspaper profession, you must be a politician and you must know not merely the theories and doctrines of parties, but the personal peculiarities, the history, the records of individuals, their aims, their purposes and their deeds; know them if you can as they really are, not as the blind and the prejudiced may imagine them to be.

The journalist must know not only the history of his own country, but likewise that of every European country—first of all, the history of England. "The course of history offers a safe guide for human action, and especially for political action." A man must look beneath the mere events of political history and action and search out the principles and the motives that underlie them.

One is glad to see that this leader lays such intense stress on accuracy. The worst sin of reporters, correspondents and editors today is their lack of care to get at the exact facts. "The faculty of seeing a thing as it is, of knowing, for instance, that it is 2½, and not 2¾—this is one of the first and most precious ends of a good education." Both for literature and for research into human nature the Bible and Shakespeare are the books that will be most helpful to the journalist, says Dana.

Horace Greeley was the lecturer's exemplar in journalism, though in his judgment even this great newspaper man was deficient in the critical faculty. Mr. Dana gives the reporter his due meed of praise, which he does not always get by any means. A truthful reporter who can write with some degree of imagination and humor contributes at least one of the lion's shares to the making of a successful newspaper.

Next to the reporter one of the important makers of the paper is the exchange reader. He must go over a whole room-ful of papers more or less every day and select from them, for copying, paragraphs and articles that are pathetic, witty or that give information. On his judgment it depends greatly whether the paper shall furnish attractive reading or whether it shall be heavy as lead. One of the leading functionaries in a newspaper office is the man who reads exchanges, too—the individual who is up in electricity, chemistry and mechanics. It is typical of our particularized age that this is the case.

This sentence is golden, "An American who thinks another country is better than this should not go into journalism." Best of all perhaps is this:

Yet at the bottom of it all it is always question of character that governs success. What that is requiring acts of discretion may last a little while, but cannot last long. The man who signs in the name of his employer, and the staying power is not merely intellectual—it is moral. It is in the end not what people believe him to be if they are deceived but what they really find him to be.

The millionaires have succeeded in getting the real estate tax, which is the shrewd expedient of not owning much real estate in localities where the tax on such property is highest. Nobody can blame them really. We would do exactly the same thing ourselves if we were millionaires, you know. But the congressional wind now seems to be blowing in the direction of an income tax. Congressmen who are not millionaires will argue that part, which have made large incomes ought like honest and glorious government should now come forward, and should be made to some forward whether they will or not, and pay an income tax to help support that government when the import duties no longer suffice to do so. That newly baptized Populist, Representative Bryan of Nebraska, says he has been studying the subject with a view to preparing an income tax bill.

Consolation—Says Matthew Marshall in the New York Sun: "This wintry financial weather which now prevails must as certainly, sooner or later, yield first to spring and then to summer as the earth revolves around the sun. Unless the whole system of the universe changes we shall in a comparatively brief period begin again in the full tide of returning prosperity."

Instead of covering the dome of the new national library building at Washington with pure gold, as was originally intended, it is proposed to use the precious metal for the statue of Freedom which surmounts the building. Perhaps in the future the power of electricity to gild aluminum may be found to be of such importance as to play for a competition almost as heavily of bronze or wood of being purnished.

HOUSE TAKES ITS TURN

The Repeal Bill to Be Brought Up Today.

OUSTURE FOR THE FILIBUSTERS.

Passes the New York and New Jersey Bridge Bill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The silver men or the most intense silver men, in the house will, it is said, insist that the repeal bill be put through by force and without any agreement on their part as to time when debate shall end or anything else. They say they mean to be forced into submission.

The mode of procedure in the house today will probably be that as soon as the speaker lays the bill before the house Mr. Wilson of West Virginia will move that the house resolve itself in the senate amendments, and upon that he will demand the previous question. Then some one will suggest that time be given for debate. Mr. Wilson will ask how much time is desired and will endeavor to get an agreement. The silver men, if they do not change their minds, will not agree to anything. Mr. Wilson will then insist upon the previous question. Then the filibustering will begin.

It is doubtful how much strength the silver men will have. A number of those who have always voted for free coinage have announced their opposition to the senate amendment will not join the filibusters. But there is little doubt that their men will have sufficient strength to call the yeas and nays, and that will force the committee on rules to report a closure resolution. This will be done if the filibustering begins.

Bland Will Oppose It.

The regulars have been worried all the time about a quorum and can count just 165 members in the city who voted against the unconditional repeal bill before passing in the house before being sent to the senate. If all the other members—also 130—who are here and who supported silver in some form or another should refuse to vote on various motions, it would leave the house without a quorum. But it is understood that they will not do this. It is generally understood that Mr. Bland would like his case very much when he objected to Mr. Livingston's motion to take up and consider the bill until tonight, when a vote should be taken.

Mr. Bland wants an opportunity to vote on a free coinage proposition, and if the house will give it the silver men will proffer as an amendment to the repeal bill the coinage act of 1837.

"I have done with all compromises," he said to a reporter, "and want nothing but free coinage. I will not offer the Bland-Allison law, even if I am given an opportunity. I want free coinage and nothing else."

Mr. Bland will be given an opportunity to move to commit the bill to his committee on coinage, weights and measures as such a motion is privileged under the rules. The clause in the Voorhees' bill which declares the intention of this government to maintain the parity of all money and in favor of bimetallic coinage gives the coinage committee the right to report on any bill referred to a committee, and consequently Mr. Bland has the privilege of making such a motion. It would of course be voted down. It is probable that the rules committee will fix the time for voting on the bill at some time this evening—perhaps about 5 o'clock.

The Senate's Programme.

The senate will in all probability be occupied today with the bill extending the time for six months in which Chinese laborers can register under the Geary law. Mr. Dawes of California has arrived. He and Senator Perkins expect to speak upon the question, as do also Senators Hoar and Davis, but it is not probable that these will be any features of importance in the bill. There are some features of the measure that Messrs. White and Perkins do not entirely approve of, and the Republican side principle that the Chinese can be excluded from the country by legislative enactment, they will probably content themselves by explaining California's attitude upon the question.

Messrs. Hoar and Davis will probably make objection to the third reading. There is a general understanding that there will be no objection to taking up the bill this morning.

Senator Blackburn says it is his purpose, as chairman of the committee on rules, to take up the subject of the amendment and bring it to a vote as soon as possible. He is instructed by the resolution introducing the bill and passed by the senate as soon after the convening of the extra session as may be practical. He says that the opposition of the past three months has failed to convince him of the necessity for a change of the rules which would give the majority of the senate the power to bring debate to an end. He proposes to test the question by moving to reach a vote after reasonable debate upon any proposition before it, and says he cherishes the hope that he will be able to do so by a majority upon the present rules footing.

Will Take an Evening Vacation.

The New York and New Jersey bridge bill was taken up in the senate on motion of Mr. Hill, and the amendments of the committee on commerce were agreed to.

Mr. Morrison said the bridge proposed to be built would be a menace to navigation, to be destroy the harbor of New York, and he offered an amendment providing that the approaches of the bridge on the New York side should be subject to the approval of the secretary of war.

Mr. Hill did not know how much room such a bridge would cost as compared with a bridge with a 2,000 foot span nor did General Casey, chief of engineers.

The bill provided for a span of not less than 2,000 feet, and there was no such span in the world. It must be assumed that it was possible to construct such a bridge. If the secretary of war, acting in conjunction with the corps of engineers, should conclude, said Mr. Hill, that a greater space could be built and that the piers ought not to be a pier in the river at the 2,000 foot span, then the secretary was empowered, in his discretion, to require a longer span. To what extent is the bill capable of 2,100 feet.

The wisest course to pursue, Mr. Hill said, was to have the views of the officials of the government. Personally he had no more interest in the bridge proposed than any other citizen of New York, but he had more interest in it than any citizen of New Jersey or elsewhere. It was a public matter, in which all should take an interest.

Mr. Morrison's amendment was rejected—yeas, 22; nays, 27.

An amendment by Mr. Allen that the bridge might be used for military and postroad purposes by the government without charge was rejected without division. The bill was then passed without a division.

Mr. Gray moved that house bill to amend the act relating to the privileges conferred upon the consuls of foreign powers in the United States be taken up so that it would become the unfinished business. Mr. Davis of Minnesota called for a division. Twenty-four voted in the affirmative and six in the negative, no quorum voting, and Mr. Gray withdrew his motion. The senate then went into executive session, after which it adjourned.

The House Received It Quietly.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The Voorhees repeal bill was reported to the house from the senate. It was received quietly, and then the debate proceeded.

After about an hour Mr. Livingston of Georgia suggested that the silver repeal bill be taken up at once for immediate consideration. Mr. Bland and other silver men promptly objected, and the bill went over until tonight.

The bill to remit the duties on the ammunition imported for the use of the navy during the trouble between the United States and Chili was passed.

A New House Chaplain Selected.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The Democrats of the house held a caucus to select a successor to the late Rev. Samuel W. Haddaway, the house chaplain. On the third ballot the Rev. Edward B. Bagley, pastor of the Christian church of this city, was selected. Rev. Bagley is a smooth faced, rosy cheeked young man of 28. He is a native of Virginia and a graduate of the University of Kentucky and the theological seminary of Yale university.

Congressmen Cumming Ill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Representative Amos Cummings of New York was taken suddenly ill while in the bathroom in the basement of the capitol shortly after the house adjourned. He had three emergetic chills. He was conducted to his room at a hotel adjoining the capitol. A physician was summoned, but Mr. Cummings recovered rapidly and his last accounts was reported as resting easily.

President Wrote to Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Secretary Carlisle's private secretary, in looking over Mr. Carlisle's mail, found a postal card signed by President Eliphalet Pendergast, the mormon of Mayor Harrison of Chicago, giving advice on financial questions.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

Much Gold Being Coined.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—The coinage of gold at the mint in this city during the month of October was the largest in the history of the institution. The total coinage was $15,000,000 in gold before the 1st of December. Every man in the mint is working overtime, and the present force have been going both day and night. Given fair will the $15,000,000 ordered has been turned out.

A Railroad Tied Up.

ROSLERVILLE, Ind., Nov. 1.—The Chicago and Southern railroad is tied up. Hundreds of men and no end—not a wheel is moving along the entire length of the line. The receiver's office at the end of the road here in Rosslerville is in charge of Deputy Sheriff Lehmer. There are five trains on the track in the same place and one at Anderson.

Will Take an Evening Vacation.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 1.—The Iron and Steel Sheet manufacturers' association has decided to insist upon the 10 per cent reduction demanded by the Amalgamated association. Not workmen will be given employment the end, and if they refuse the plants will be operated with nonunion men.

Johnson Makes New Bicycle Records.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Nov. 1.—Johnson, the bicyclist, made three more records in this city today. He rode a mile standing start, 2½ seconds; quarter mile standing start, 36 seconds; quarter mile flying start, 23½ seconds.

Killed by a Bomb.

PATERSON, Nov. 1.—This afternoon a bomb at a Tammany ratification meeting at Second avenue and Fourteenth street caused considerable damage to property and seriously injured three persons.

Held Up by Three Robbers.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—James Lynch, a vagrant, and two young confederates tried to hold up John Kenny and two laborers as they were driving into Wallace Lynch.

The Crisis Is Ended.

VIENNA, Nov. 1.—The king of Servia accepted the resignation of the cabinet. A crisis is also threatened in Hungary on the civil marriage bill.

Barango, Wis., Nov. 1.—The Barango

CHICAGO'S FUNERAL DAY

The Whole City Honors the Memory of Its Dead Mayor.

THOUSANDS IN THE PROCESSION.

From the Crib Used in the Hall Above the Armory, Where the Deceased Executive of the Windy City Began—The Military Preceding the Hearse Moving.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Today Chicago paid its last honor to the dead mayor. The funeral took place from the Church of the Epiphany, at Ashland avenue and Adams street. The public is receiving the remains were taken from the city hall to the church, where the services according to the Episcopal ritual will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Morrison. Mr. The procession will proceed from the church to Graceland cemetery. The children will be a large one. Many societies and civic organizations have applied for places in the line and have been assigned to position by Marshal Austin J. Doyle. The following will be the order of the procession:

Platoon of police, band, chief marshal and staff, United States troops, General Nelson A. Miles commanding. First Infantry, N. G. I. Second Regiment, Veteran Corps. Illinois Cadets. Second Regiment, Veteran Corps. Illinois Cadets. Second Regiment, Veteran Corps. Illinois Cadets

BRAZIL'S CIVIL WAR.

The Reported Bombardment of Five Hundred Troops Confirmed.

RIO JANEIRO, Nov. 1.—The insurgent fleet in conjunction with Fort Villegaignon daily bombards Nictheroy, Santa Cruz and San Joao, but the fire is badly directed. The firing on Oct. 29 was particularly heavy, and the magazine of the insurgents at Mocanque, containing 40 tons of powder, was hit by a shell and blown up. The city so far has not been damaged by the present firing. Nictheroy has suffered severely, though there has been no loss of life. The insurgent Admiral Mello obtains money and pays his followers regularly.

There is a strong feeling among the authorities here adverse to foreigners. President Peixoto considers that the commanders of the foreign warships showed sympathy for the insurgents because they are moved out of the line of fire. The armed steamer Urano, while leaving Rio on Oct. 15, was hit by a shell and badly damaged. She has arrived at Desterro and reports that 40 of her crew were killed. The insurgents have plenty of munitions of war. An offensive action by Admiral Mello is expected shortly. The government is mounting guns on the city batteries.

The Republica has manned the transport Rio de Janeiro, which was conveying 1,100 troops to Santos, and 300 of the troops were drowned. Admiral Mello confirms the truth of this report. He denies that he has any direct intention of restoring the empire.

He wishes to be recognized as a belligerent by the foreign powers. He expects that the warships Riachuelo and Benjamin Constant will join the insurgents. The rebel flagship Aquidaban was slightly damaged by the fire from the forts.

DANGEROUS CRANKS.

Two Murderous Lunatics Arrested—One Was a Woman.

WHEELING, Nov. 1.—Only good luck prevented a murder by a crank in this city. Mag Robinson, a negress, entered Dr. Stillyard's office and asked for treatment. The doctor turned his back a minute, and when he turned he was given a hatchet from her cloak and struck him on the head. Fortunately it was a glancing blow, and a lump like a billiard ball was the result. The doctor disarmed the woman and turned her over to the police.

She explained her act by saying that she was the spook of a woman Dr. Stillyard had poisoned two weeks ago. The doctor had never seen her before.

A week ago a dynamite cartridge was found in the city hall and but for the fact that the janitress would have blown the building sky high. The police have been looking for the dynamiter and have arrested George Hobbs, another harmless lunatic. Hobbs was fired out of the White House at Washington twice, once while trying to see Mr. Harrison and again while visiting Mr. Cleveland. Wilkin a week he has written to every city and county official, every pastor and several policemen. Rev. Dr. Swope received a letter saying he could preach one more sermon, and if it was not satisfactory the writer would blow up the church.

COULD NOT GET A JURY.

So the Sheriff Who Failed to Prevent a Lynching Will Not Be Tried.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 1.—The trial of Sheriff J. McLenden, charged with failure to perform his duty in preventing the lynching of a negro who was taken from the county jail, has ended. Out of 500 talesmen who were examined only one juror was secured. Finding it impossible to secure a jury, the state's attorney entered a nolle prosequi.

The state and public feeling was illustrated by the remark of the first juror called, Mr. M. R. Mitchell, a prominent citizen of Collierville. In answer to the usual questions Mr. Mitchell replied, "I have formed and expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant."

He was ordered aside. When leaving the stand, he said audibly and dramatically, "I would give Sheriff McLenden a gold medal for his conduct."

Judge Scruggs ordered Mitchell's arrest and assessed a $10 fine and 10 days in the county jail. Other talesmen, while informing Mitchell's sentiments, were more cautious. The case against several of the leaders of the lynch will be withdrawn, and the prisoners were released.

Fooled With a Loaded Revolver.

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., Nov. 1.—George Alwood of Paterson, who shot and killed William H. Keeley while fooling with a revolver which he did not know was loaded, has delivered himself up to the police. He and Keeley were baggagemen on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, and the shooting occurred on an express train. After Keeley's death Alwood put the revolver to his own head, intending to kill himself. The weapon was wrested from his hand by some of the trainmen.

Miss Hastings Kills Herself.

SANDUSKY, O., Nov. 1.—Miss Edith Hastings, daughter of the late Wade G. Hastings, for many years prominent in business and politics, Ohio, committed suicide in the jail in this city. Miss Hastings recently created a sensation in New York city by robbing a wax figure exhibition of a lot of valuable jewelry.

Two More Crooks Locked Up.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Superintendent Byrnes had a second made up in him or another crank, who wanted Russell Sage, which, of course, had been locked up for safe keeping several days ago. Another crank wanted to kill the Custom consul. Both were locked up.

Increasing the Siamese Army.

BANGKOK, Nov. 1.—The Siamese are increasing their army, which will shortly consist of 30,000 men raised by conscription. Large quantities of arms and munitions have arrived from Singapore.

Baltimore's Mayor Threatened.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 1.—Mayor Ferdinand C. Latrobe received an anonymous letter in which he was threatened with instant death if he failed to provide employment for the idle workingmen of the city.

Train Jumped a Switch.

NORWICH, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Train No. 7 on the Ontario and Western railroad from Oswego jumped a switch when entering the freight yard in this city. Several passengers were injured, but not fatally.

A Big Bequest to Protect Animals.

QUINCY, Ills., Nov. 1.—The will of Mrs. Charles Brown leaves $200,000 to public charity, and two-thirds of it goes to local and state societies for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Andrews' Sanity to Be Tested.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Andrews, the crank, who wanted Edwin Gould to give him $2,000, will be examined as to his sanity at Bellevue today.

PEIXOTO'S NEW NAVY.

The President of Brazil Buys Five More Ships.

FAST YACHTS FOR TORPEDO BOATS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—President Peixoto's new Brazilian navy grows daily with tropical luxuriance. Five more boats—those of the United States and Brazilian Steamship company, which suspended operations in February last, when libels were filed against four of the fleet—have passed under the control of the firm of Flint & Co.

The boats are in the Erie basin, not far from El Cid, where they have been lying for months. They are stanch boats, and it is thought that, while they are not as fast as they will be found for war purposes as El Cid, with a proper armament they could cope with any of the insurgent Admiral Mello's warships, with the exception of the Aquidaban.

Charles M. Pratt of 26 Broadway, who, like John D. Rockefeller, is one of the principal owners of the line boats, confirmed the report that the Flints had an option on the five boats. Further investigation showed that they have passed under the control of Flint & Co.

Gould's Yacht Not Sold.

It was also learned that no move had been made toward buying the swift steam yacht Atalanta, formerly Jay Gould's pride and joy. It had been reported that to sell its swift freighter, El Rio. It is known, though, that the Flints want to get a boat somewhat similar in size, adaptability and speed to the Atalanta. Mr. Charles R. Flint is very chary in talking about what his firm is doing or what it is going to do.

Banker Hugh R. Baxter of 568 Fifth avenue said that Thomas Manning of Manning's yacht agency had an offer—he believed it came from Admiral Mello—for the swift steam yacht Nada, built by Gardner & Mosher last spring. She is 85 feet long, 11 feet 9 inches beam and has a speed of about 20 knots.

Mr. Baxter declined to sell because the offer was not satisfactory. In addition to the attempt to buy the Nada, the advisability of buying Thomas L. Morris's Norwood was considered, but Mr. Munro's price was too high. It is said that the McBride Brothers' Yankee Doodle of Philadelphia was also thought of.

There is quite a possibility that if the exigencies of the fight against Admiral Mello demand it Mr. Clyde's swift Javelin will be pressed into the service of the Brazilian government as a torpedo boat.

Fitting El Cid For War.

Work on El Cid is being rushed. She entered the drydock in the Erie basin yesterday, and at once a gang of men went to scraping her hull. She has made only a few trips, and the hull was quite clean. As soon as she is painted she will leave the dock, probably late this afternoon, and be towed to the Morgan iron works at the foot of East Ninth street. A larger force than on the previous days were at work cutting through her steel hatches and steel beams to make place for the 43 ton dynamite gun.

Men also began cutting holes in her steel sides aft, through which some of her lighter guns will be trained. Captain Baker was on deck, and a busy, silent man he is.

Former Chief Engineer Miller announced that he was not going to Brazil with El Cid. It is understood that he desired a fuller complement of engineers, firemen and assistants than the managers of the enterprise would allow him. Engineer Vanderbeckstein, who had charge of John Roach's cruisers on their trial trips, is now chief engineer.

There was a rumor in this city that Dom Augusto, a son of the Princess Leopoldina, the second daughter of Dom Pedro II, was now on his way to Brazil, and that if Admiral Mello succeeded a prince of the house of Braganza would be re-established on the throne of Brazil. Princess Isabella, the wife of the Comte d'Eu and Dom Pedro's heir, is very unpopular, and if Admiral Mello made an attempt to restore the Braganza dynasty it is probable that he would seat either one of the two sons of Princess Isabella or else Dom Augusto, who is very popular with all classes. The Portuguese government has sent a man-of-war to Rio.

Boarders Jumped Through the Windows.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 1.—A small fire in a boarding house kept by Mrs. Mary Magee, on Walnut street, caused a panic among the boarders. Almost all present jumped from a window and was fatally hurt. Mrs. Magee leaped from the second story window to a woodshed with her baby in her arms. They escaped with slight injuries. Owen Mawanney made a leap through the glass and came away with his head. He was badly cut and bruised.

Struck a Streak of Gold.

SANTA FE, Nov. 1.—There has just been discovered, 1,200 feet under ground, a strong lode of solid quartz, with a pay streak 30 inches wide, that will run $150 per ton in gold. The new find is located at Montezuma rock, nine miles up the river from this city.

Russian Warships in Collision.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 1.—The report of an accident to the Russian squadron in the neighborhood of Toulon is confirmed in official quarters. The Russian warship Pamyat Azova collided with the Admiral Nachimoff.

SPANIARDS SURROUNDED.

They Are Outnumbered 4 Infinite Beauty, Three to One.

MADRID, Nov. 1.—General Martine holds Melilla with 12,000 men. It is feared that 4,000 more will be required to force of artillery and cavalry. Reinforcements for the Spaniards are the only hope against 50,000 Arabs. Many wounded Spanish soldiers have arrived at Malaga from Melilla. The hospitals are overcrowded, so the patients were brought ashore. Thousands of persons of all classes were gathered about the landing place, and the crowd set about the carriages in which the sick men were conveyed to the hospital. The newspapers of Madrid declare that the time has come for the government to take more vigorous measures for reparation from the sultan of Morocco.

The Spanish squadron at Algeciras is awaiting orders to sail. General Marzolo reports that Melilla is now secure against attack and advises that the shipment of reinforcements be suspended until additional heights commanding the position are occupied. Sixty Moors have been captured by the Spanish forces, and many of them were killed in the last engagement. There is great rejoicing in Madrid over the news from Melilla.

The fact that Prince Ferdinand of Bourbon has been missing since the Spanish attack on the Moors last Friday has caused the Infanta Isabel much anxiety. The prince was last seen close to his battery outside of Fort Cabrerizo, and it was supposed that he had succeeded in reaching one of the blockaded forts which had just been relieved. The ministry of war has ordered that inquiries be made in regard to the prince.

HACKED HER TO DEATH.

WATERVILLE, Wash., Nov. 1.—John Dougherty, a farmer, aged 60, living near here, hacked his wife to death with a butcher knife. He then dragged his victim by the feet between two stacks of wheat and partly concealed the body with straw. Later he was discovered in a vacant house, dying from exposure and hunger. Dougherty has made a full confession.

He says his wife poisoned his tea and threatened to dance over his grave within a week. About a year ago he inserted an advertisement in a matrimonial journal paper, and the murdered woman, Mrs. Mary E. Phillips of Cedar Rapids, Ia., soon answered. They corresponded, and she came out and married him. Since then they lived a cat and dog life.

HOUSEKEEPERS GIVE HEED.

YOU CAN GATHER MUCH VALUABLE INFORMATION HERE.

The Season for Spring Housecleaning is Upon Us—We will Give You Many Helpful Hints, so That Your Burden May be Lightened.

To prevent smoky wicks in lamps soak the wicks in strong vinegar when they are new and dry before use the first time.

If lamp chimneys get burnt or too much smoked, dissolve a lump of soda about the size of a small egg in a pint of hot water; add to it about a teaspoonful of the oil of vitrol. Let the lamp chimney soak in it for an hour, turning if needed. Rinse in clear water and wipe dry with a soft cloth. Be very careful in handling oil of vitrol, as it burns everything with which it comes in contact.

To prevent lamp chimneys, tumblers, etc., from breaking easily, place them in a pot of cold, salted water, place over the fire and bring to a boil. Let cool gradually, then take out and wash.

WHOLESOME WHITEWASH.

How the Walls and the Wash Should Be Prepared.

When the spring comes there is always whitewashing, and often kalsomining to be done. The first thing to be done is to inspect the walls and see if they will bear another coat over the one which has already been put on. If the wall has been whitewashed and has begun to chip off, it must be scraped before another coat is put on, and this is quite a serious undertaking. It means the removal of the old coats that have been put on the wall. We believe there are scrapers that come especially for this purpose. It is better to remove everything, furniture and all, out of the room to be scraped, as the fine dust of the old lime penetrates through everything. After the room has been thoroughly scraped, the new whitewash can be applied, though it is best to fill in or mend any holes in the wall with plaster of paris, wet with paste or water. It seems as if the very best and sweetest whitewash is made by mixing ordinary slack-lime in water, adding simply salt enough to make it cling to the wall, and binding enough to give it a pearl-white tint. Ordinary laundry bluing will not do for this purpose. What is known as Mason's bluing is the very best to use, as it will go further, and do better work and give better effect than anything else.

The United States government formula for whitewash, when properly made and applied, gives a white that does not easily wash or rub off. To ten parts of slacked lime add one part best hydraulic cement. Mix well with salt water and apply quite thin.

TO PRESERVE EGGS.

Not long since a railroad float loaded with freight carsontaining a vast quantity of fresh eggs was sunk in the salt waters of the upper New York bay, off the Battery. Working upon this subject, a witty paragraphist stitched to a New York newspaper, remarked that, although immersed in salt water, the eggs would, undoubtedly, be sold for fresh.

Whether he knew that his statement was correct or not cannot be ascertained, but the fact remains the same that the eggs were unimpaired when the float was raised, and were, undoubtedly, put on the market as such.

Speaking of the occurrence, a wholesale dealer in eggs gives the following recipe for preserving them fresh for an indefinite period. It is as follows:

To each gal ful of water add two pints of fresh slacked lime and one pint of common table salt. This should be well mixed and poured into a barrel until it is half full of the fluid. The eggs to be preserved should be put down in the mixture. It is said that they will remain fresh for two years or longer, if desired, care being taken to keep them well covered and to replenish the fluid if it should be depleted by evaporation.

An Orange Mould.

Dissolve half a pound of loaf sugar in a tea cupful of cold water, placed in an enameled saucepan, and boil it to a candy. In the meantime peel half a dozen oranges, and divide them into sections without breaking the skins; remove as much of the white pith as possible; turn each piece of orange in the boilings, arrange them round a mould previously rubbed with salad oil, leaving the bottom compact in the middle. When the sugar is turned out it stands up like spring. From the pieces of orange together in layers, and set the mould aside in a cold dry place.

To Remove Egg Stains.

In washing table linen or any cloth stained with egg, avoid putting it in boiling water, which will set the stain till it will be almost permanent. Soak the cloth first in cold water and the stain may be easily removed. The same rule applies to eggcups and any dishes stained with eggs, if they are thrown with the other china into hot dish-water the stain hardens on the plate or glass, and it requires considerable patience to remove it; but it comes off easily in cold water.

To Destroy the Buffalo Moth.

There is nothing but benzine or naphtha which is of the slightest use in destroying the Buffalo moth. Steaming is of doubtful value. He revels in tobacco. Camphor is food for him. He enjoys a salt bath. And he will eat through any obstacle placed in his way, whether mutton or your boots. The grub is a little baby creature, so small that it easily hides in the fuzz of the carpet.

To Clean Bottoms Smoothly.

To clean gilt frames, dust the gilt lightly with a soft brush, then wash quickly with warm water, in which an onion has been boiled. Dry with soft cloths. Only gilding of good quality will bear this treatment.

Cloths as Good as New.

To lighten soap suet cloths, turn up the cloth-bottom and wash the same work thoroughly with soapy water and a soft cloth. Let it dry in the air, and it will be thin as when new, provided the cut has not been broken.

To clean a white or light colored paint, dissolve a piece of ammonia the size of a walnut in a pail of water, and rub the paint gently with a sponge. Dry with soft cloths.

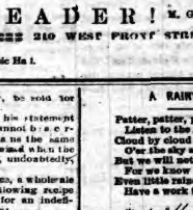
A RAINY DAY.

Patter, patter, patter!
Listen to the rain—
Cloud by cloud comes stealing
O'er the sky again;
But we will not grumble,
For we know 'tis true
Even little raindrops
Have a work to do.



So we'll all be happy,
Chasing frowns away,
Reading some sweet story,
Starting some fresh play,
Singing, working, sketching,
Or in loving chat,
While the rain is falling
Pitter—pitter—pat!

A Little Girl's Story.

Sarah Simonds sought some Sunday school picture. "Scholars seldom sit still," said she, so she selected six straightforward, sober, steady, serious souls save Stella Stark's small sister Susan. Susan showed stubborn, sullen Stella started scolding. Seeing she seemed sorry, she soon stopped—said sweet, soothing sentences.

Soon she seemed satisfied, serene. So Stella spun some startling stories. She said she saw seven ships sailing southward Sunday.

Suddenly she saw some ships slowly sinking. She screamed several seconds. Strangely she saw six sailors swim swiftly, shouting, seeking shores. Sad scene! Six sole survivors! She simply said, "Sabbath breaking!"

Susan sighed.—St. Nicholas.

YOUNG MEN'S ALPHABET.

Acts form the strongest language.
Better to lose your money than your manhood.
Count no real effort toward good as lost.
Demand no more than your are willing to give others.
Envy is a bad companion.
Fair words are so easily uttered as read.
Gentlemen is never mistaken for weakness.
Have the courage to meet vulgar insults with silence.
In case of doubt defer your decision for a day.
Judge of the worth of a brother-man by something other than his coat.
Knavery is sure to fail loose in the long run and so lose the race.
Love is a sacrifice—not an intelligence.
Master your ownself and then command obedience.
No man that fears the sea of failure will reach the shore of success.
Obey your conscience and be happy.
Pull with a will upon the cars of honest endeavor.
Quit habits of evil while yet you blush at their committal.
Refrain from any act you would not have made public.

A NEW GAME.

When Jack and Jim together played
They made, oh, such a noise;
In fact, I think I never knew
Such very noisy boys.
But one day Baby Sis fell sick,
And nurse said they must keep
As quiet as they could, because
The baby was asleep.

They soon found out a splendid game
That never she played before:
Jack was to be a fisherman,
The sea—the nursery floor.
While Jim was fishy. And so they played
At fishing, all the while
Their baby sister slept, until
She woke up with a smile.

How One Boy Got "Up Head."

Excellence is after all a matter of comparison. A boy of six years, who attends a private school, where prizes are given on all sorts of provocation, but who as yet had never earned a prize, came home one afternoon and exhibited proudly one of these rewards of merit.

"Good!" said his mother, "but how did you get it?"

"I was first in natural history," said the boy.

"Natural history, at your age! How did it happen?"

"Oh, they asked me how many legs a horse had."

"And what did you say?"

"I said five."

"But a horse hasn't five legs, child!"

"I know it, but all the other fellows said six."—Philadelphia Record.

A Few Facts.

If a musket ball be fired into the water it will not only rebound, but be flattened; if fired through a pane of glass it will make a hole the size of the ball without cracking the glass. Cork, if sunk 200 feet in the ocean, will not rise, on account of the pressure of the water. In the Arctic regions, when the thermometer is below zero, persons can converse more than a mile distant.

PRACTICING SONG.

Ai tum tiddy-iddy, ri tum tum!
Here I must sit for an hour and strum.
Practice is the thing for a good little girl—
It makes her nose straight and it makes her hair curl.

Ri tum tiddy-iddy, ri tum til!
Bang on the low notes and twiddle on the high.
Whether it's a jig or the "Dead March in Saul,"
I sometimes feel as if I didn't care at all.

Ri tum tiddy-iddy, ri tum tee!
I don't mind the whole or the half note, you see;
It's the sixteenth and quarter that confuse my mother's daughter,
And a thirty-second really is too dreadful to be bought her.

But ri tum tiddy-iddy, ri tum tum!
Still I work away with my drum, drum, drum;
For practicing is good for a good little girl—

—Treasure Trove.

A NEW PARLOR GAME.

A new parlor game is dignified by the name of "Book Reviews." It is upon the same plan as the old game of "Consequences," and is more interesting by way of change than the old one.

Sheets of paper and pencil are passed around to each member of the party. Each one is told to write the title of a book at the head of the page. The paper is then doubled over, and it is passed on to the next person, who writes a sub-title. The paper is then doubled over and passed along to the next person, who adds a line descriptive of the book. The fourth person writes down the name of an author. The fifth one gives a brief review of the book. The sixth one adds another review, the seventh gives the names of two characters in the book, etc.

When the whole is read aloud the combinations are often very inappropriate and very funny. For example, a paper when unfolded and read will run as follows:

"Daniel Deronda; or, A Story of the Wild, Wild West." A Tale Calculated to Keep a Man Away from His Dinner. By Mark Twain. Exciting, stirring and deep." "Touches upon the sunny side of life." Principal characters, Mr. Flatwish, Ophelia, etc., etc.

Friendship.

Did you ever try sitting or walking for an hour in the company of any man or woman without speaking a word to him? If you can do that and not weary, the friendship is true.

Nonsense Rhymes.

There was a young man of Dundee,
Who went for a sail on the sea;
When he felt very sick,
He said "Home again quick!"
That wise young man of Dundee.

What Did He Do It For?

A very disagreeable looking figure in the shape of a man lately applied for admission to the private office of a wealthy gentleman. The gentleman was a "self made man," though not particularly proud of the job. But when the dirty, whisky smelling and disagreeable looking creature wished to see the gentleman he was not admitted. Thereupon he went away, his breast swelling with bitter anarchistic feelings, declaring that his old friend, whom he had known familiarly in youth, had become a bloated aristocrat, and had "surrounded himself with a cordon of flunkys," refusing longer to see plain men.

The fact that the plain man in this case was now a common tramp, who only wanted to see the successful man in order to beg from him, was a view of the case that did not occur to the fellow who had wasted splendid natural gifts in degradation. The world was just as wide and fair to him as it had been to the rich man when they two started.

A pathetic poem has been much copied lately describing how a wealthy lady of title passed by in her carriage without recognition:

Your old time love in sad disguise,
The tramp,
That followed you with longing eyes.

What did he go and be a tramp for?

RAN OVER A "DUMMY."

TROLLEY CAR MOTORMAN TAYLOR'S AWFUL SCARE.

Hoodlums Ran Riot on All-Hallow'een and the Street Railway Men Were the Victims.—Sandbagged, Flour Sprinkled and Maltreated in all Sorts of Ways.

OOLING on Hallow'een is an old custom but if it was carried to such extreme, often as it was last night, the police force would have to be doubled to catch the miscreants.

Joseph Taylor is a new man in the employ of the Street Railway Company and is at night motorman on car No. 3.

Last night, on Monroe avenue between eight and nine o'clock, when he had the car going along pretty lively, he saw, directly ahead, a group of young men, apparently frolicing. They were scuffling and yelling. Suddenly a plaid shawl sang out; a scream from a boy, "My God, I'm killed," and the motor-man, with inexpressible horror and terror, saw, as he thought, the figure of a man fall across the track. With fierce strength he wrenched at the brake, but the car slid on and ran over the recumbent form. The group of young men disappeared.

The motor man and conductor got off when the car stopped. They could hardly stand, their fright was so intense when they saw, protruding from under the car, a pair of boot encased legs. The body was so wedged in the car trucks that it took some time to get it out. The "dummy," for that is what it proved to be, was so well made, that, over an hour later, the motor-man and conductor could not be convinced that they had not run over a man. They were absolutely sick.

Examination showed that the car-tracks had been greased for about twenty feet, so that the car would slide on in spite of all efforts to stop it. The "joke" had been carefully planned, and, to the perpetrators, must have seemed a huge success.

Such "jokes," however, need one addition to be perfection—a prolonged rest for the jokers at the expense of the State.

A Motor-Man Sandbagged.

Possibly the same gang that played the "dummy" trick on Motorman Taylor, completely paralyzed motorman Wallace. He was hit with a sand-bag, and, for about ten minutes, was so dazed as to be not only unfit, but unable, to perform his duty. The conductor had to run the car.

Conductor Wilson Knocked Down.

The trolley on Conductor Wilson's car was pulled off the wire by another gang, and, for a long time, his attempts to get it replaced were frustrated by organized assaults. Finally, he dashed at his tormentors. One fellow got in front of him and flung a tomato can at his head, another struck him with a bag stuffed with leaves and knocked him down. Then he was kicked and cuffed with a liberality that proclaimed the touch. He tried to bluff them with his pistol, pretending it was a revolver but the bluff did not work. Eventually they tired of the "sport" and he was let go.

Conductor Nolan's Fortunate Escape.

A weighty stone or stick was hurled at Conductor Nolan's car No. 6. Fortunately, it missed him and struck the door, which was broken. The size and force of the projectile may be realized from its work.

Covered With Flour.

Flour was thrown at Mr. Hartpence, another employe of the Railway Company, in such quantities, and with such precision that he looked like a snow man. He was compelled to get inside the car several times to escape being blinded.

All the motormen and conductors were more or less hit with handfuls of flour, but none quite so much as Mr. Hartpence.

A Hallow-E'en Party.

A Hallow E'en party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace [Martin, on Jackson avenue, last night. Games peculiar to that evening were indulged in. The refreshments were the most enjoyed of all. Charlotte Russe made of soap and cake with pepper in it were given to the guests to eat.

Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Steiner, Mr. and Mrs. E. Messerschmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. George Chickner, Miss Allie Townsend, Miss Doremus, the Misses Wendell, Miss Nettie Durfee, William Townsend and Mr. J. C. Martin.

500,000 Valves for Bicycle Tires.

Five hundred thousand valves for pneumatic bicycle tires are being made by Mr. Fred Chase at his North avenue factory. The contract was recently closed with the owner of the patent and work will be pushed on them at once. The valve is made of brass and aluminum and contains no springs nor rubbers, and it is claimed that it can neither wear out nor leak. Mr. Chase is also working on some new ideas in bicycle propulsion and expects to place some of his machines on the market soon. He is also making the important parts for the newly invented machine of Mr. Drake of New Market, an account of which appeared in The News a few weeks ago.

COMMISSIONERS MEET.

TO HEAR MADISON AVENUE PROPERTY OWNERS.

Only Messrs. James W. Jackson and Edward B Ryder Represented the Property Owners—Mr. Jackson Sets His Price.

Messrs. J. Fred MacDonald, Edward C. Mulford and Wm. M. Sandford, the commissioners appointed to assess the damages and benefits for the widening of Madison avenue, met last night in the Council Chamber on Park avenue. The commissioners organized by electing Mr. MacDonald chairman and Mr. Mulford secretary.

Only two property owners were present—Messrs. James W. Jackson and Edward B. Ryder. The latter appeared in behalf of the Gillies estate.

Mr. Jackson asked how much the proposed widening would take off his lot, which is at the corner of Front street.

Mr. MacDonald replied that as yet he could not tell him until the city map could be gotten. Mr. MacDonald apologized to the property owners for the delay, but said it was owing to the stupidity of the City Clerk in not having the map there.

Mr. Ryder said he would have to set the number of feet of land to be taken off the Gillies estate and submit it to the heirs before he could inform the commissioners the amount of their damages.

The map was secured and it was found that the strip to be taken from Mr. Jackson's lot was about eight feet wide. This would cut through the house. Mr. Jackson said he was going to tear the house down anyhow and he would take $200 per foot for the land.

The proposed widening will cut about eight feet off Mrs. Dreier's property on the corner of Front street, and four feet off the Gillies property.

This difference is occasioned by the irregularity of the street line.

A communication was read from Mrs. Holmes placing the damages to her property, along the railroad, at $600, and the moving of the coal bins, etc., at $400.

CHRYSANTHEMUM CIRCLE RECEPTION.

A Jolly Party at the Home of Miss Flanigan.

ECENTLY the Chrysanthemum Circle was organized by a number of Plainfield young ladies. The first reception of the circle was held last night at the home of the president, Miss May Flanigan, on East Fifth street. The house was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums. Music for dancing was furnished by Mrs. Buckley. Those present were: The Misses Carney, Miss Fannie Rafferty, the Misses Casey, the Misses Madden, Miss Julia Fields, Miss Frances Rafferty, Miss Kittie Daly, Miss Mary Glass, Miss Flynn, Miss Mary Galbraith, the Misses Keely, the Misses Flanigan, and Messrs. James Keely, John Hibbins, William Kiely, John Traynor, M. Mack, M. Whalen, M. Winn, J. Flynn, M. Flynn, Charles and James Daley, John Powers, J. Gallagher, Charles Ward, M. Cashin, Casper Waglow and John Keely.

There was a donkey party before dancing began. John Gallagher got the first prize, and William Kiely the booby prize.

THE SPEAKERS AT THE MASS MEETING.

A Rousing Meeting Expected in Which all Political Parties will Join.

The following letter from Mr. E. V. Lindabury, regarding the mass meeting in Music Hall Thursday night, explains itself:

Corner Front and Somerset Sts.

"William M. Oldham, Esq., Plainfield, N. J.

My Dear Sir:—Mr. Tyler called to see me this morning on the telephone and asked me to arrange for speakers for your Thursday night meeting. And I have gotten the consent of William M. Corbin, Esq., of Elizabeth; Rev. H. H. Oberly, of Elizabeth and Thomas R. Adams, Esq., of Newark, to be present and address the meeting. These gentlemen have developed into the very best speakers we have in our campaign and you ought to take special pains to get the people out to hear them. I had not expected to send anybody except Mr. Corbin, but Mr. Tyler requested these and I have gotten them, and as they are men of such ability I do hope that you may have a rousing meeting. Yours truly,

E. V. LINDABURY."

If you could find a man to be a prominent Democrat to preside I think it would be well.

Yours truly,

E. V. LINDABURY."

A LUCKY ITALIAN.

Antonio Lazzi Falls Heir to $12,000.

Antonio Lazzi, who lives in Dunellen, and worked at stone cutting in this city, has received word from Italy that he is heir to about $12,000, through the death of his father. Lazzi has lived in Dunellen for a number of years and is a hard working man. He will shortly leave for Italy to claim his money.

ALL HALLOWE'EN GAMES

YOUNG FOLKS ROMP AND PLAY TRICKS EVERYWHERE.

The Greatest Night of the Year for Innocent Pleasure and Peeps Into the Future.—The Police Watch out for Bad Boys and They to Turn.

N THESE days of enlightenment and general education many of the observances of old customs which had their origin in simple, hearted innocence are passing away; but old superstitions die hard in spite of the advances of a higher civilization, and it will be long before Ancient and Hallowe'en will become a thing of the past. As long as the human heart loves and hates, as long as it needs props for its hopes, and relief for its pains, just so long will it strive to peer into the unknown and seek the aid of some hoped-for power. Many girls, educated and up to the times, who would indignantly deny the charge of being superstitious, tried somelittle charm last night "just for fun" and few were strong enough to prevent a lightness or depression of the heart according to the result of the oracle.

The observance of All Hallow'en dates farther back than man can trace. Long before the people of ancient Britain embraced Christianity the Druids regarded the evening of October 31 as a time when the powers of evil were abroad and believed that supernatural agencies could act within the range of humanity at that time. Fires were lit in the forests and around the bases of the hills and rites performed to the true God in order to ward off evil spirits. Later on, when All Hallow'eve became a Christian observance, new rites and superstitions were added to the old, and any little floating superstition that could not be located elsewhere was attached to this date, until the night became the high carnival of concentrated superstition.

The true spirit of the festival, however, is gradually dying out, and it is only in the remote country parts, far away from the influence of city life, that the "youngsters" keep up this yearly observance.

In this city there were gatherings of girls and boys in nearly every neighborhood, each clique entering heartily into the games, indoor and outdoor, appropriate for the occasion.

The weather was perfect, being clear *and frosty, and that it was fully appre*ciated was proved by the shouts and peals of laughter which were frequently heard.

Many citizens, remembering their own young days, took care that their gates were lifted from the hinges and put in places of safety, but many who failed to do so had every scarcher this morning for that useful article. Gates were found on the roofs of outhouses several blocks away and in one or two cases gates had been placed high among the branches of trees.

Some of the mischievous tricks were tying strings across the sidewalk so as to knock off the hats of unsuspecting pedestrians, placing pails of water in doors, thus greatly frightening timid inmates, greasing door-knobs etc.

Indoor games were generally carried on in the kitchen. From the ceiling a long string was hung, to which a skewer or fork was tied. On the end of the skewer was a lighted candle, on the other an apple. To catch the apple between one's teeth, at the same time avoiding possible singeing or tallow sprinkling from the candle, was the triumph and fun of this sport. The bobbing for apples, *made by fellow splashes, and young and ten*derly nourished moustaches of six months growth singed, but no one thinks of such mishaps in the gale of fun that the game inspires.

Corner Front and Somerset Sts.

The girls did not take part in this game, not caring to risk their pretty faces, but as the position in life of the future husband is always a burning question to the feminine mind, the girls were soon putting to the test a time-honored riddle of the room they drew a tub filled with water, into which each dropped some melted lead. This lead was supposed to take a shape symbolic of the occupation of the future legal lord of creation. Many other games depended very much on the imagination and wishes of the participants.

Another jolly game was "bobbing for apples," which consisted of ducking the head into a tub full of water, and a grappling for apples with the teeth.

When the hour of twelve had been tolled, all who had not been too badly frightened started to run around the block. Each had a mouthful of water and a handful of salt, which, according to ancient superstition, would drive away the evil spirits. Before reaching the home of the bridge for spanning the brook, in a mysterious way, to have a peep into the future.

These, and many other observances were followed last night.

A Lamp Explosion Calls Out the Firemen.

A lamp exploded in the store at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place shortly after eight o'clock last night, and set fire to a curtain. An alarm was sent in and Washington Company responded. Mr. Horace Adams pinched the blazing lamp into the street. A line of hose laid was not needed. The damage was slight.

ABOUT JOHN WESLEY.

HIS LIFE, PIETY AND LOVE FOR HUMANITY.

The First Lecture in the Afternoon Course, at All Souls' Church, under the Auspices of Unitarian Women.

The first afternoon lecture in the course to be given under the auspices of Unitarian women was delivered yesterday afternoon by Mrs. F. F. Waller of Yonkers, in All Souls' church. Her subject was "John Wesley: His Liberality, Piety and Love for Humanity."

Mrs. Waller began by telling of John Wesley's childhood. He lived until he was eleven years old at Epworth. He said he lived until he was that age without sin. At seventeen years of age Wesley entered Oxford. Here he distanced himself by running into debt. At 23 he resolved to devote his life to God. Then, with a few companions, he became known as a leader of a band of Methodists. From the time Wesley was 25 to 30 years of evangelistic labor was continuous.

His mother was a Unitarian until her husband converted her over to Methodism. From Wesley inherited his rationalism. He was the greatest rationalist of his time.

When Wesley began to preach he had to use the fields for a church. He never preached until the churches were out.

In 1790 there were 541 preachers and 135,000 members of the Methodist faith.

A BARN DANCE.

The Younger Set in Washington Park Society Enjoy Themselves.

The younger set in Washington Park society held a very enjoyable and most successful dance in the barn on Washington avenue belonging to Mr. B. A. Hegeman, Jr. The barn was beautifully decorated with bunting, lanterns, etc., by the Misses Gesse and Alice Barlow and Messrs. Carl Brown and Henry Wells.

The patronesses were: Mrs. E.S. Brown, Mrs. J. J. Henderson, Mrs. Charles A. Reed and Mrs. R. A. Hegeman, Jr.

Those present were: Miss Marion Henderson, Miss Camelia Faber, the Misses Kate and Blanche Miller, Miss Hallie Vandeventer, Miss Alice Thompson, Miss Dottie and Emma Haviland, Miss Edith Clapp, Miss May Shreve, the Misses Alice and Grace Barlow, Miss May Godwin of New York, Miss Kita Inman of Astoria, L. I., Miss Helen Hasbrouck, Miss Mattie Vandeventer, and Miss Grace T. Brown, and Messrs. Frank Thompson, William and Charles Faber, Edmund Rushmore, Howard Turrill, Charles Cook, Charles Gesse, Carl Brown, Henry Brown, and Philip Jacques of New York.

BREVITIES.

—The Borough Council will meet Friday night.

—Only one game was bowled in C. Y. M. I. individual tournament, last night as follows: W. Kiely 168 vs. Galbraith, 156.

—Special Policeman Allaband, who was detailed to guard the Ackerman vault, states he is not going for a week, on business, with the full intention of not coming back.

—The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city has received an invitation to attend the reception of the Catholic Young Men's Literary Association of New Brunswick, on Thanksgiving night.

—The Climax Bottle Stopper Factory will start up in about two weeks in the lower factory of Weidmann and Bauer, East Fourth street. The company's boiler and engine have been removed.

—A horse belonging to Tobin & Addis became frightened at an electric car on Somerset street, about eight o'clock this evening, and, in starting, it slipped and fell in the street. The car was delayed a few minutes. No damage was done except some broken harness.

—Edsall says his buyer has recently made some very advantageous purchases in the line of dress goods, especially one of the features of importance is that the principle of his house is to give the benefit of the same to their patrons. Hence at the present time he says he is about to offer the best bargains ever offered in this community, as on some other time, he will say to the same class of buyers to-morrow, that as it is now, he will offer Over thirty special items at extra low figures are mentioned in his new advertisement in to-days News.

—Westervelt avenue from East Front street to "the brook" is one of Plainfield's most beautiful streets, and one of the city may be proud of. The roadbed is well macadamized and the neighborhood is well built up with modern houses averaging in value about $3,000. The people of the locality are thrifty and take great pride in their street, keeping it free from rubbish and leaves. The new bridge for spanning the brook, which was to have been finished October 15th, has not progressed further than the foundations. The cause of delay is that the iron girders were made too short, consequently the taxpayers must do without for many more months, and justly feel fault.

The Jury Disagreed.

The case to try right of property, was tried before Justice Mosher and a jury this morning. The property in question was claimed to belong to Mr. Nolan, but was claimed by Mrs. Nolan when an attachment was secured against Nolan by Mr. Westphal. The jury disagreed.

J. Fred MacDonald, whom every Plainfielder knows, has been making some very successful ventures in real estate recently, and finds that occupation more lucrative even than the grocery business. His territory is boundless in his new line, and his latest field of operation is Hackensack, N. J., which he says is a great place. He is Associated with Mr. Wm. E. Taylor of that city and last Saturday purchased twenty acres of land so far from the heart of the town. Within three weeks there will be a big boom. Since September 20, Mr. MacDonald and his partner have sold $80,000 worth of property.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

A Plainfielder's Experience in New York.

Mr. Richard Tolles of East Front street is said to have been drugged and robbed in New York Monday. He went to the city to buy merchandize. While there he decided to have a tooth pulled. To brace himself for the order he ordered a saloonist to take a horn of whiskey. This was early in the afternoon. That was the last he remembered until 12 o'clock at night, he was then walking up Broadway. His overcoat and watch were gone. It is supposed he was drugged, and afterwards robbed.

He denies the story.

Tribute to the Late Hon. Nathan Harper.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, desire to put on record, this action, on the occasion of the death of the Hon. Nathan Harper, Esq. The hospital was one of the many works of benevolence, of our city, to which he was ready and glad to give aid and encouragement, and in which he was deeply interested.

He was for several years in the early part of its history a member of this Board, cheerfully giving his time and counsel to the furtherance of its work. The excellence of his perceptions and the calmness of his judgement, were found to be of great value to our deliberations, while his well known character in this community, as an honest and wise man, was of great assistance in the laying of the foundation upon which the institution is built and to which it has attained its present high standing as one of the instruments of much great usefulness, to every many of our needy and suffering fellowmen.

Women Cannot Vote in New York.

The Constitution of the State of New York stands in the way of female suffrage. By a law passed last year women, as in New Jersey, were permitted to vote for candidates for School Commissioners in the rural districts. In a decision handed down at Syracuse recently Judge Williams held that these offices being elective are within the rule of the Constitution which restricts the right of suffrage to male citizens. Consequently he has ordered the names of women removed from the registry list, and the march of the sex toward political equality gets another set-back. In remaining to the rule of the Constitution of [illegible] cannot vote for school officers the women will prize the privilege more than they did while so few of them were taking any advantage of it.—Newark News.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Dana on Journalism.

To young people who intend to enter the newspaper field Charles A. Dana's noble address on journalism offers inspiration as well as no end of useful information.

Mr. Dana's lecture was given at Cornell college. Perhaps since he was speaking to students he gave a little too much importance to the study of the dead languages. Certainly if we have not time to learn both Greek and German it will be better in these times for us to take the German.

Would you be a journalist? says Mr. Dana. Study the constitution and political history of America. Add also an acquaintance with the constitutions of the various states and territories. Do not merely commit them to memory, parrotlike, but think about them and compare them. The real journalist takes a natural interest in politics:

In order to be of importance in the affairs of this world the newspaper profession, you must be a politician, and you must know not merely the theories and doctrines of parties, but you must know practical politics, the history, the men, the individuals, their ideas, their purposes, their weak points. Then, if you can either really are, not as the blind and the prejudiced may imagine them to be.

The journalist must learn not only the history of his own country, but likewise that of every European country—first of all, the history of England. "The course of history offers a safe guide for human action, and especially for political action." We must look beneath the mere events of political history and action and search out the principles and the motives that underlie them.

Close to this is that this leader lays such intense stress on accuracy. The worst sin of reporters, correspondents and editors today is their lack of care to get at the exact facts. "The faculty of seeing a thing as it is, of knowing, for instance, that it is 2½, and not 2¾—this is one of the first and most precious ends of a good education." Both for literature and for research into human nature the Bible and Shakespeare are the books that will be most helpful to the journalist, says Dana.

Horace Greeley was the lecturer's exemplar in journalism, though in his judgment even this great newspaper man was deficient in the critical faculty. Mr. Dana gives the reporter his due meed of praise, which he does not always get. Says he:

A truthful reporter who can write with some degree of imagination and humor contributes at least one of the lion's shares to the making of a successful newspaper.

Next to the reporter one of the important makers of the paper is the exchange reader. He must go over a whole roomful of papers more or less every day and select from them, for copying, paragraphs and articles that are pathetic, witty or that give information. On his judgment it depends greatly whether the paper shall furnish attractive reading or whether it shall be heavy as lead. One of the leading functionaries in a newspaper office in this age is the scientific man, too—the individual who is up in electricity, chemistry and mechanics. It is typical of our particular age that this is the case.

This sentence is golden. "An American who thinks another country is better than this should not go into journalism." Best of all perhaps is this:

Yet at the bottom of it all it is always a question of character as well as of talent. A fellow that is not honest, that is not pure, that has little white, but he cannot last long. The man who stays is the man who has the right stuff in him, and the right stuff in a newspaper man is factual—it is moral. It is in the character of the people believing in him before he is known, and does not mean in any way that is flat or

The millionaires have succeeded in getting over the real estate trust the shrewd expedient of not owning much real estate in localities where the tax on such property is highest. Nobody can blame them really. Why should one exactly the same thing ourselves if we were millionaires, you know. But the congressional wind now seems to be blowing in the direction of an income tax. Congressmen who are not millionaires will argue that men who have made large fortunes under the great and glorious government should now come forward, and should be made to come forward whether they will or not, and pay an income tax to help support that government when the import duties no longer suffice to do so. That newly baptized Populist, Representative Bryan of Nebraska, says he has been studying the subject with a view to preparing an income tax bill.

Consolation—Says Matthew Marshall in the New York Sun: "This wintry financial weather which now prevails must as certainly, sooner or later, yield first to spring and then to summer as the earth revolves around the sun. Unless the whole system of the universe changes we shall in a comparatively brief period be again in the full tide of returning prosperity."

Instead of cursing the Jones for the new national library building at Washington with pure gold dome, we wish gold is so cheap—why even the authorities have it covered with the metal of the future—the pure, dazzling white aluminium? It would shine like the stars in glory for a generation, without a breath of tarnish or need of being refurnished.

HOUSE TAKES ITS TURN

The Repeal Bill to Be Brought Up Today.

CLOSURE FOR THE FILIBUSTERS.

Bland Will Not Be Satisfied Unless He Can Force Free Coinage.

Passes the New York and New Jersey Bridge Bill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The silver men in the house will, it is said, insist that the repeal bill be put through by force and without any agreement on their part as to time when debate shall end or anything else. They say they mean to be forced into submission.

The mode of procedure in the house today will probably be that as soon as the journal is read Speaker Crisp will move the house go into committee of the whole, when Wilson of West Virginia will move that the house resolve itself in the senate amendments, and doubtless he will demand the previous question. Then some one will suggest that time be given for debate. Mr. Wilson will ask how much time is desired and will endeavor to get an agreement. The silver men, if they do not change their minds, will not agree to anything. Mr. Wilson will then insist upon the previous question. Then will follow a filibustering fight.

It is doubtful how much strength the silver men will have. A number of those who have always voted for free coinage and will vote against concurring in the senate amendment will not join the filibustering fight. There is little doubt that their men will have sufficient strength to call the yeas and nays, and that will force the committee on rules to report a closure rule. This will be done if the filibustering begins.

Bland Will Obstruct It.

The repealers have been worried all the time about a quorum and can count but 165 members in the city who voted against all amendments when the bill was pending in the house before being sent to the senate. All other members—about 130—who are here and who supported silver in some form or another should refuse to vote on various motions, it would leave the house without a quorum. But it is understood that they will not do this. It is generally understood that Mr. Bland weakened his case very much when he objected to Mr. Livingston's motion to take up and consider the bill until tonight, when a vote should be taken.

Mr. Bland wants an opportunity to vote on a free coinage proposition, and if the rules will give him the privilege he will offer an amendment to the repeal bill that will be most helpful to the journalist, says Dana.

Mr. Bland will be given an opportunity to move to commit the bill to his committee on coinage, weights and measures, as such a motion is privileged under the rules. The clause in the Voorhees' bill which declares the intention of this government to maintain the parity of all money and in favor of bimetallism colnage gives the coinage committee the right to the bill should it be referred to a committee so favorable to silver. Then will come the privilege of making such a motion. It would of course be voted down. It is probable that the rules committee will fix the time for taking the bill at some time this evening—perhaps about 5 o'clock.

The Senate's Programme.

The senate will in all probability be occupied today with the bill extending the time for the monthly call which pioneer laborers can register under the Geary law. Senator White of California has arrived. He said this morning that he would insist upon the question, as do also Senators Hoar and Davis, but it is not probable that these will be any factious opposition to the bill. There are some features of the measure that Messrs. White and Perkins do not entirely approve of, but as it recognizes the principle that the Chinese can be excluded from this country by legislative enactment they will probably content themselves by explaining California's attitude upon the question.

Messrs. Hoar and Davis will probably make objection to this doctrine. There is a general understanding that there will be no objection to taking up the bill this morning.

Senator Blackburn says it is his purpose, as chairman of the committee on rules, to report a resolution limiting debate on the revision of the rules of the senate as authorized by the resolution introduced by him, and passed by the senate as soon as the convening of the regular session may be practical. He says that the experience of the past three months has sufficed to convince him of the necessity for a change of the rules which would give the majority of the senate the power to do business and to reach a vote upon a reasonable debate on any proposition before it, and that as chairman of the committee he would do all in his power to put the senate upon this footing.

Senate Passes the Bridge Bill.

The New York and New Jersey bridge bill was taken up in the senate on motion of Mr. Hill, and the amendments of the committee on commerce were agreed to.

Mr. McPherson said the effect seemed to be to destroy the harbor of New York, and he could not consistently, in view of the opposition of the people of the bridge on the New Jersey side should be permitted and approved by the board of chosen freeholders of the county of Hudson.

Mr. Vest opposed the amendment of Mr. McPherson. The construction of the bridge would relieve commerce from the expense of crossing the river by ferry. It was not a local measure. The people of the entire country were interested. He should like to see the bridge erected of iron if one did not obstruct the navigation of the river. Competition would necessarily cheapen transportation.

Mr. Vest said that, rather than that the bridge should be built, he had agreed to the pending bill as a compromise. Mr. McPherson then withdrew his amendment and offered another requiring that the bridge should be constructed with a single span over the entire river between abutments and perched home in either state, and that no other obstruction to navigation of a temporary or permanent character should be constructed in the river between such places or towers. The bill as reported provides for a span of not less than 500 feet.

Mr. Hill said the question was a most important one, and one that had been carefully considered by the committee on commerce. The evidence before it should determine absolutely that there should be no pier whatever in the river. In his judgment the bridge might be constructed so that there should be no bridge. It was a disputed point how among bridge builders and engineers the best form of bridge could be constructed. The bridge was to be a span of 2,000 feet, except for the channel, which was to be 1,000 feet. Accordingly the committee on commerce had decided that the 2,000 feet was the best. It would involve a large amount of money.

An Immense Span Proposed.

"About how much?" asked Mr. George.

"Two or three millions," replied Mr. Hill.

"Would it require an expenditure of that much money in addition to what a bridge with a 1,000 foot span would cost?" asked Mr. George.

Mr. Hill did not know how much more such a bridge would cost as compared with a bridge with a 1,000 foot span, not did General Casey, chief of engineers.

The bill provided for a span of not less than 2,000 feet, and there was no such span in the world. It must be assumed that it was possible to construct such a bridge. If the secretary of war, acting in compliance with the purpose of congress, should conclude, said Mr. Hill, that a greater span could be built and that there ought not to be a pier in the river at the 1,000 foot span, he would have no power to act. BRAZIL'S CIVIL WAR.

The Reported Bombarding of Five Hundred Foreign Corpses Confirmed.

RIO JANEIRO, Nov. 1.—The insurgent fleet in conjunction with the Villagagnon daily bombards Nictheroy, Santa Cruz and Rio Janeiro, the fire being briefly directed. The firing on Oct. 29 was particularly heavy, and the magazine of the insurgents at Mocanque, containing 40 tons of powder, was hit by a shell and blown up. The city so far has not been damaged by the present firing. Nictheroy has suffered severely, though there has been no loss of life. The insurgent Admiral Mello obtains money and pays his followers regularly.

There is a strong feeling among the authorities here adverse to foreigners. President Peixoto considers that the commanders of the foreign warships showed sympathy for the insurgents because they removed out of the line of fire. The armed steamer Urano, while leaving Rio on Oct. 15, was hit by a shell and badly damaged. She has arrived at Desterro and reports that 40 of her crew were killed. The insurgents have plenty of munitions of war. Declarative action by Admiral Mello is expected shortly. The government is mounting guns on the city batteries.

The English steamer of the transport Rio de Janeiro, which was conveying 1,100 troops to Santos, and 300 of the troops were drowned. Admiral Mello confirms the truth of this report. He denies that he has any direct intention of restoring the empire.

He wishes to be recognized as a belligerent by the foreign powers. He expects that the warships Riachuelo and Benjamin Constant will join the insurgents. The rebel flagship Aquidaban was slightly damaged by the fire from the forts.

DANGEROUS CRANKS.

Two Murderous Lunatics Arrested—One Was a Woman.

WHEELING, Nov. 1.—Only good luck prevented a murder by a crank in this city. A Mr. Schleiner, of Bellaire, entered Dr. Stillyard's office and asked for treatment. The doctor turned his back a minute, whereupon the woman drew a hatchet from her cloak and struck him on the head. Fortunately it was a glancing blow, and a lump like a billiard ball was the result. The doctor disarmed the woman and turned her over to the police, evidently insane.

She explained her act by saying that she was the spook of a woman Dr. Stillyard had poisoned two weeks ago. The doctor had never seen her before.

A week ago a dynamite cartridge was found in the city hall and but for the forethought of the janitress would have blown the building sky high. The police have been looking for the dynamiter and have arrested George Hoehle, another harmless lunatic. Hoehle was fired out of the White House at Washington twice, once while trying to see Mr. Harrison and again while hunting Mr. Cleveland. Within a week he has written to every city and county official, every pastor and several policemen. Rev. Dr. Swope received a letter saying he could preach one more sermon, and if it was not satisfactory the writer would blow up the church.

COULD NOT GET A JURY.

So the Sheriff, Who Failed to Prevent a Lynching, Will Not Be Tried.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 1.—The trial of Sheriff J. McLendon, charged with failure to perform his duty in preventing the lynching of a negro who was taken from the county jail, has ended. Out of 500 talesmen who were examined only one juror was secured. Finding it impossible to secure a jury, the state's attorney entered a nolle prosequi.

The state and public feeling was illustrated by the examination of the first juror called, Mr. M. Mitchell, a prominent citizen of Collierville. In answer to the usual questions Mr. Mitchell replied, "I have formed and expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant."

He was ordered aside. When leaving the stand, he said audibly and dramatically, "I would give Sheriff McLendon a gold medal for his conduct."

Judge Scruggs ordered Mitchell's arrest and assessed a $10 fine and 10 days in the county jail. Other talesmen while informing Mitchell's sentiments, were more cautious. The case against several of the leaders of the mob was also withdrawn, and the prisoners were released.

Feuded With a Loaded Revolver.

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., Nov. 1.—George Alwood of Paterson, who shot and killed William H. Keeley while fooling with a revolver which he did not know was loaded, has delivered himself up to the police. Alwood and Keeley were baggagemen on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, and the shooting occurred on an express train. After Keeley's death Alwood pulled the revolver to his own head, intending to kill himself. The weapon was wrenched from his hand by some of the trainmen.

Miss Hastings Kills Herself.

SANDUSKY, O., Nov. 1.—Miss Edith Hastings, daughter of the late Wade H. Hastings, for many years prominent in business and politics in Ohio, committed suicide in the jail on this city. Miss Hastings recently created a sensation in New York city by robbing some lady acquaintances of a lot of valuable jewelry.

Two More Cranks Locked Up.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Superintendent Byrnes had a demand made upon him by another crank, Wm. Daniel Sheldon, who lives at Amherst, and here pleaded for him for keeping several years ago. Another crank wanted to kill the Union consul. Both were locked up.

Increasing the Siamese Army.

BANGKOK, Nov. 1.—The Siamese are increasing their army, which will shortly consist of 30,000 men raised by conscription. Large quantities of arms and munitions have arrived from Singapore.

Baltimore's Mayor Threatened.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 1.—Mayor Ferdinand C. Latrobe received an anonymous letter in which he was threatened with instant death if he failed to provide employment for the idle workingmen of the city.

Train Jumped a Switch.

NORWICH, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Train No. 7 on the Ontario and Western railroad from Oswego jumped a switch when entering the freight yard in this city. Several passengers were injured, but not fatally.

A Big Bequest to Protect Animals.

QUINCY, Ills., Nov. 1.—The will of Mrs. Charles Brown leaves $800,000 to public charity, and two-thirds of it goes to local and state Societies for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Andrews' Sanity to Be Tested.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Andrews, the crank, who wanted Edwin Gould to give him $2,000, will be examined as to his sanity at Bellevue today.

PEIXOTO'S NEW NAVY.

FAST YACHTS FOR TORPEDO BOATS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—President Peixoto's new Brazilian navy grows daily with tropical luxuriance. Five more boats—those of the United States and Brazilian Steamship company, which suspended operations in February last, when liens were filed against four of the fleet—have passed under the control of the firm of Flint & Co. The boats are in the Erie basin, just far from El Cid, where they have been lying for months. They are staunch boats, and it is thought that, while they are not as fast or as well adapted for war purposes as El Cid, with a proper armament they could cope with any of the insurgent Admiral Mello's warships, with the exception of the Aquidaban.

Charles M. Pratt of 26 Broadway, who, like John D. Rockefeller, is one of the principal owners of the line boats, confirmed the report that the Flints had an option on the five boats. Further investigation showed that they have passed under the control of Flint & Co.

General Peixoto Not Sold.

It was also learned that no move had been made toward buying the swift steam yacht Atalanta, formerly Jay Gould's pride, and that the Morgan line will not sell its swift freighter El Rio. It is known, though, that the Flints want to get a boat somewhat similar in size, adapted for passenger service, to the Atalanta. Mr. Charles R. Flint is very chary in talking about what his firm is doing or what it is going to do.

Thomas Booth H. Baxter of 568 Fifth avenue said that Thomas Manning of Manning's yacht agency had an offer—in behalf of the Flints, he thought—for his swift steam yacht Vedette, built by Gardner & Mosher last spring. She is 85 feet long, 11 feet 9 inches beam and has a speed of about 20 knots.

Mr. Baxter declined to sell because the offer was not satisfactory. In addition to the attempt to buy the Nota, the advisability of buying Norman L. Munro's Norwood was considered, but Mr. Munro's price was too high. It is said that the McBride Brothers' Yankee Doodle of Philadelphia was also thought of.

There is quite a possibility that if the exigencies of the fight against Admiral Mello demand it Mr. Flint's own swift Javelin will be pressed into the service of the Brazilian government as a torpedo boat.

Fitting El Cid For War.

Work on El Cid is being rushed. She entered the drydock in the Erie basin yesterday, and at once a gang of men went to scraping her hull. She has made only a few trips, and the hull was quite clean. As soon as she is painted she will leave the dock, probably late this afternoon, and be towed to the Morgan iron works at the foot of East Ninth street. A larger force than on the previous days were at work cutting through her steel hatches and steel beams to make place for the 40 ton dynamite gun.

Men who began cutting holes in her steel sides aft, through which some of her lighter guns will be trained. Captain Baker was on deck, and a busy, silent man he is.

Former Chief Engineer Miller announced that he was not going to Brazil with El Cid. It is understood that he desired a fuller employment of engineers, firemen and assistants than the managers of the enterprise would allow him. Engineer Van Idenstein, who had charge of John Roach's cruisers on their trial trips, is now chief engineer.

There was a rumor in this city that Dom Antonio, a son of the Princess Leopoldina, the second daughter of Dom Pedro II, was now on his way to Brazil, and that if Admiral Mello succeeded a prince of the house of Braganza would be established on the throne of Brazil. Princess Isabella, the wife of the Comte d'Eu and Dom Pedro's heir, is very unpopular, and if Admiral Mello made an attempt to restore the Braganza dynasty it is probable that he would seat either one of the two sons of Princess Isabella or else Dom Augusto, who is very popular with all classes. The Portugese government has sent a man-of-war to Rio.

Boarders Jumped Through the Windows.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 1.—A small fire in a boarding house kept by Mrs. Mary Magee, on Walnut street, caused a panic among the boarders. Peter McDermott jumped from a window and was fatally hurt. Mrs. Magee leaped from the second story window to a woodshed with her baby in her arms. They escaped with slight injuries. Owen Mooney, rushing into the burning house and issuing down with his clothes on fire, was badly cut and bruised.

Struck a Streak of Gold.

SANTA FE, Nov. 1.—There has just been discovered, 1,200 feet under ground, a strong lode of solid quartz, with a pay streak 18 inches wide, that will run $150 per ton in gold. The new find is located at Monument rock, nine miles up the river from this city.

SPANIARDS SURROUNDED.

They Are Outnumbered 3 Moors Nearly Three to One.

MADRID, Nov. 1.—General Margas holds Melilla with 12,000 men. It is reported that 8,000 Moors have come down to attack the Spanish lines. The Spaniards have the advantage of artillery against 20,000 Arabs. Many wounded Spanish soldiers have arrived at Malaga from Melilla. Many of the wounded are on the patients were brought ashore. Thousands of persons of all classes were gathered about the landing stages and crowded about the carriages in which the sick men were conveyed to the hospital. The newspapers of Madrid declare that the time has come for the government to take more vigorously for expansion from the sultan of Morocco.

The Spanish squadron at Algeciras is awaiting orders to sail. General Macias reports that Melilla is not yet strictly on the attack and advises that the shipment of provisions to be suspended until Melilla's defenses are completed. The garrison is provided. Sixty Moors have been captured by the Spanish forces, and many of them were killed in the last engagement. There is great rejoicing in Madrid over the news from Morocco.

The fact that Prince Ferdinand of Bourbon has been missing since the Spanish attack on the Moors last Friday has caused much uneasiness in Madrid. The prince was last seen close to his battery outside of Fort Cabrerizas, and it was supposed that he had succeeded in reaching one of the blockaded forts which had been relieved. The ministry of war has ordered that inquiries be made in regard to the prince.

HACKED HER TO DEATH.

WATERVILLE, Wash., Nov. 1.—John Dougherty, aged 60, living near here, hacked his wife to death with a butcher knife. He then dragged his victim by the feet between two stacks of wheat and there concealed the body with straw. Later he was discovered in a vacant house, dying from exposure and hunger. Dougherty has made a full confession.

He says he murdered his wife because she had poisoned his son and threatened to dance over his grave within a week. About a year ago he inserted an advertisement in Chicago matrimonial paper, and the murdered woman, Mrs. Mary E. Phillips of Cedar Rapids, Ia., made answer. They corresponded, and she came out and married him. Since then they lived a cat and dog life.

RAN OVER A "DUMMY."

TROLLEY CAR MOTORMAN TAYLOR'S AWFUL SCARE.

Hoodlums Run Riot on All-Hallow'een and the Street Railway Men Were the Victims.—Sandbagged, Flour Sprinkled and Maltreated in all Sorts of Ways.

OOLING on Hallow'een is an old custom but if it was carried to such extreme as it was last night, the police force would have to be doubled to catch the miscreants.

Last night, on Monroe avenue between eight and nine o'clock, when he had the car going about pretty lively, he saw, directly ahead, a group of young men, apparently fighting. They were scuffling and yelling. Suddenly a pistol shot rang out; a scream from a boy, "My God, I'm killed," and the motor man, with inexpressible horror and terror, saw, as he thought, the figure of a man fall across the track. With fierce strength he wrenched at the brake, but the car slid on and ran over the recumbent form. The group of young men disappeared.

The motor man and conductor got off when the car stopped. They could hardly stand, their fright was so intense, when they saw, protuding from under the car, a pair of boot encased legs. The body was so wedged in the car trucks that it took some time to get it out. The "dummy," for that is what it proved to be, was so well made, that, over an hour later, the motor man and conductor could not be convinced that they had not run over a man. They were absolutely sick.

Examination showed that the car-tracks had been greased for about twenty feet, so that the car would slide on in spite of all efforts to stop it. The "joke" had been carefully planned, and, as the perpetrators, must have seemed a huge success.

Such "jokes," however, need one addition to be perfection—a prolonged rest for the jokers at the expense of the state.

A Motor-Man Sandbagged.

Possibly the same gang that played the "dummy" joke on motorman Taylor, completely paralyzed motorman Wallace. He was hit with a sand-bag, and, for about ten minutes, was so dazed as to be not only unfit, but unable, to perform his duty. The conductor had to run the car.

Conductor Wilson Knocked Down.

The trolley on Conductor Wilson's car was pulled off the wire by another gang, and, for a long time, his attempts to get it replaced were frustrated by organized assaults. Finally, he dashed at his tormentors. One fellow got in front of him and flung a tomato on at his head, another struck him with a bag stuffed with leaves and knocked him down. Then he was kicked and cuffed with a liberality that proclaimed the tough. He tried to bluff them with his pouch, pretending it was a revolver but the bluff did not work. Eventually they tired of the "sport" and he line to go.

Conductor Nolan's Fortunate Escape.

A weighty stone or stick was hurled at Conductor Nolan on car No. 4. Fortunately, it missed him and struck the door, which was broken. The size and force of the projectile may be realized from its work.

Covered With Flour.

Flour was thrown at Mr. Harlpence, another employe of the Railway Company, in such quantities, and with such precision that he locked like a ghost man. He was compelled to get inside the car several times to escape being blinded.

All the motormen and conductors were more or less hit with handfuls of flour, but none quite so much as Mr. Harlpence.

A Hallow-E'en Party.

A Hallow E'en party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Martin, on Jackson avenue, last night. Games peculiar to that evening were indulged in. The refreshments were the most enjoyed of all. Charlotte Rosse made of soap and cake with pepper in it were given to the guests to eat.

Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Steiner, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Moorehouse, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. George Clickner, Miss Allie Townsend, Miss Dorrance, the Misses Wendell, Miss Nettie Florio, Mr. William Townsend and Mr. J. C. Martin.

500,000 Valves for Bicycle Tires.

Five hundred thousand valves for pneumatic bicycle tires are being made by Mr. Lloyd Chase at his North avenue factory. The contract was recently closed with the owner of the patent and work will be pushed to completion. The valve is made of brass and aluminum and contains no springs nor rubbers, and it is claimed that it can neither wear out nor leak. Mr. Chase is also working on some new idea in bicycle propulsion and expects to place some of his machines on the market soon. He is also making the important parts for the newly invented machine of Mr. Lewis of New Market, an account of which appeared in THE NEWS a few weeks ago.

COMMISSIONERS MEET.

TO HEAR MADISON AVENUE PROPERTY OWNERS.

Messrs. J. Fred MacDonald, Edward C. Mulford and Wm. M. Sandford, the commissioners appointed to assess the damages and benefits for the widening of Madison avenue, met last night in the Council Chamber on Park avenue. The commissioners organized by electing Mr. MacDonald chairman and Mr. Mulford secretary.

Only two property owners were present—Messrs. James W. Jackson and Edward B. Ryder. The latter appeared in behalf of the Gillies estate.

Mr. Jackson asked how much the proposed widening would take off his lot, which is at the corner of Front street. Mr. MacDonald replied that he could not tell him until the city map could be gotten. Mr. MacDonald apologized to the property owners for the delay, but said it was owing to the stupidity of the City Clerk in not having the map there.

Mr. Ryder said he would have to get the number of feet of land to be taken off the Gillies estate and submit it to the heirs before he could inform the commissioners the amount of their damages.

The map was secured and it was found that the strip to be taken from Mr. Jackson's lot was about eight feet wide. This would cut through the house. Mr. Jackson said he was not sure but the house is down anyhow and he would take $200 per foot for the land.

The proposed widening will cut about eight feet off Mrs. Dreier's property on the corner of Front street, and four feet off the Gillies property.

This difference is occasioned by the irregularity of the street line.

A communication was read from Mrs. Holmes placing the damages to her property, along the railroad, at $600, and the moving of the coal bins, etc., at $400.

CHRYSANTHEMUM CIRCLE RECEPTION.

A Jolly Party at the Home of Miss Flannigan.

RECENTLY the Chrysanthemum Circle was organized by a number of Plainfield young ladies. The first reception of the circle was held last night at the home of the president, Miss May Flannigan, on East Fifth street. The house was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums. Music for dancing was furnished by Mrs. Buckley. Those present were: The Misses Carney, Miss Fannie Rafferty, the Misses Casey, the Misses Madden, Miss Julia Fields, Miss Fannie Hegarty, Miss Kittie Daly, Miss Mary Giese, Miss Flynn, Miss Mary Galbraith, the Misses Keely, the Misses Flannigan, and Messrs. James Casey, John Hibbits, William Kiely, John Traynor, M. Mack, M. Whalen, M. Winn, J. Flynn, M. Flynn, Charles and James Hegarty, John Powers, Wm. Gallagher, Charles Ward, M. Cashin, Caspar Waglow and John Keely.

There was a donkey party before dancing began. John Gallagher got the first prize, and William Kiely the booby prize.

THE SPEAKERS AT THE MASS MEETING.

A Rousing Meeting Expected in Which all Political Parties will Join.

The following letter from Mr. R. V. Lindabury, regarding the mass meeting in Music Hall Thursday night, explains itself:

Octoman Star, 1893.

"William M. Gallagher, Esq., Plainfield, N. J.

MY DEAR SIR—Mr. Ryerson called me up this morning on the telephone and asked me to arrange for speakers for your Thursday night meeting, and I have gotten the consent of William H. Corbin, Esq., of Elizabeth; Hon. E. H. Oberly, of Elizabeth and Thomas R. Adams, Esq., of Summit, to be present and address the meeting. These gentlemen have developed into the very best speakers we have in our campaigns and you ought to take special pains to get the people out to hear them. I had not expected to send anybody except Mr. Corbin, but Mr. Ryerson insisted that I send for the others and as they are men of such ability I do hope that you may have a rousing meeting of it. If you could find a man who is a prominent Democrat to preside I think it would be well.

Yours truly,
R. V. LINDABURY."

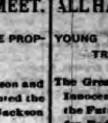
ALL HALLOWE'EN GAMES

YOUNG FOLKS ROMP AND PLAY TRICKS EVERYWHERE.

The Greatest Night of the Year for Innocent Pleasures and Peeps Into the Future.—The Police Watch out for Bad Boys, and They, in Turn, Watch the Policemen.



N THESE days of enlightenment and general education many of the observances of old customs which had their root in simple, perverted ignorance are passing away; but old superstitions die hard in spite of the advance of a higher civilization, and it will be long before the keeping of Hallowe'en will become a thing of the past. As long as the human heart loves and hates, as long as it needs props for its hopes, and relief for its pains, and so long will it be a peer into the unknown and seek the aid of some hoped-for power. Many girls, educated and up to the times, who would indignantly deny the charge of being superstitious, tried some little charm last night "just for fun," and few were strong enough to prevent a lightness or depression of the heart according to the result of the oracle.

The observance of All Hallowe'en dates farther back than man can trace. Long before the people of ancient Britain embraced Christianity the Druids recorded the evening of October 31 as a time when the powers of evil were abroad and believed that supernatural agencies could act within the range of humanity at that time. Fires were lit in the forests and around the bases of the hills and rites performed to the true God in order to ward off evil spirits. Later on, when All Hallow'een became a Christian observance, new rites and superstitions were added to the old, and any little floating superstition that could not be located elsewhere was attached to this season, until the night became the high carnival of concentrated superstition.

The true spirit of the festival, however, is gradually dying out, and it is only in the remote country parts, far away from the influence of city life, that the "youngsters" keep up this yearly observance.

In the city there were gatherings of girls and boys in nearly every neighborhood, each clique entering heartily into the games, indoor and outdoor, appropriate for the occasion.

The weather was perfect, being clear and frosty, and that it was fully appreciated was proved by the whoops and peals of laughter which were frequently heard.

Many citizens, remembering their own young days, took care that their gates were lifted from the hinges and put in places of safety, but many who failed to do so had weary searches this morning for that useful article. Gates were found on the roofs of outhouses several blocks away and in one or two cases gates had been placed high among the branches of trees.

Some of the mischievous tricks were tying strings across the sidewalk so as to knock off the hats of unsuspecting pedestrians, playing tick-tack on windows, thus greatly frightening timid inmates, greasing door-knobs, etc.

Indoor games were generally carried on in the kitchen. From the ceiling a long string was hung, to which a skewer was attached. On one end of the skewer was a flaming candle, on the other an apple. To catch the apple between one's teeth is the game and a striking possible situation of yellow sprinkling from the candle, was the triumph and fun of this sport. The best coats were ruined by rather splashes, and young and tender-hearted parents and guardians of the growth stayed, but no one, that I know of, such mishaps in the gale of fun that the game engenders.

The girls did not take part in this game, not caring to risk their pretty faces, but as the position in life of the future lawyer is dependent upon the success of the feminine mind, the girls were soon putting this to the test. Into the middle of the room they drew a tub filled with water, into which each dropped some nutshell bits. The nut was supposed to take a shape symbolic of the occupation of the future lover lord of the fair dropper. The shapes depended very much on the imagination and wishes of the participants.

Another jolly game was "bobbing for apples," which consisted of ducking the head into a tub full of water, and of grasping floating apples with the teeth.

When the hour of twelve had been tolled, all who had not been too badly frightened started to run around the block. Each, a saucepan full of water, and a handful of salt, which, according to ancient superstition, would drive away the evil spirits. Before reaching the house again each was in some mysterious way, to have a peep into the future.

These, and many other observances were followed last night.

A Lamp Explosion Calls Out the Firemen.

A lamp exploded in the store at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place shortly after eight o'clock last night, and set fire to a curtain. An alarm was sent in and Warren Engine Company responded. Mr. Horace Adams pitched the blazing lamp into the street. A line of hose laid was not needed. The damage was slight.

ABOUT JOHN WESLEY.

HIS LIFE, PIETY AND LOVE FOR HUMANITY.

The First Lecture in the Afternoon Course, at All Souls' Church, under the Auspices of Unitarian Women.

The first afternoon lecture in this course to be given under the auspices of Unitarian women was delivered yesterday afternoon by Mrs. J. P. Waller of Yonkers, in All Souls' church. Her subject was "John Wesley: His Liberality, Piety and Love for Humanity."

Mrs. Waller began by telling of John Wesley's childhood. He lived until he was eleven years old at Epworth. He said he lived until he was that age without sin. At seventeen years of age Wesley entered Oxford. Here he distressed himself by running into debt. At 23 he resolved to devote his life to God. Then, with a few companions, he became known as a leader of a band of Methodists. From the time Wesley was 25 his 50 years of evangelistic labor was continuous.

His mother was a Unitarian until her husband converted her over to Methodism. From her Wesley inherited his rationalism. He was the greatest rationalist of his time.

When Wesley began to preach he had to use the fields for a church. He never preached until the churches were out.

In 1739 there were 541 preachers and 182,000 members of the Methodist faith.

A BARN DANCE.

The Younger Set in Washington Park Society Enjoy Themselves.

The younger set in Washington Park society held a very enjoyable and most successful dance in the barn on Washington avenue belonging to Mr. B. A. Hegeman, Jr. The barn was beautifully decorated with banting, lanterns, etc., by the Misses Grace and Alice Barlow and Messrs. Carl Brown and Henry Wells.

The patronesses were: Mrs. E.S. Brown, Mrs. J. F. Henderson, Mrs. Charles A. Reed and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr.

Those present were: Miss Marion Henderson, Miss Cornelia Faber, the Misses Kate and Blanche Miller, Miss Hallie Vandeventer, Miss Alice Thompson, Miss Dottie and Emma Haviland, Miss Edith Capp, Miss May Shreve, the Misses Alice and Grace Barlow, Miss May Godwin of New York, Miss Etta Rodman of Astoria, R. I., Miss Helen Rasbmore, Miss Mable Vandeventer, and Miss Grace T. Brown, and Messrs. Frank Thompson, William and Charles Faber, Edmund Rasbmore, Howard Terrill, Charles Cook, Charles Case, Henry Wells, Carl Brown, and Philip Jacques of New York.

BREVITIES.

—The Borough Council will meet Friday night.

—Only one game was bowled in C. Y. M. L. individual tournament, last night as follows: W. Kiely 181 vs. Galbraith, 158.

—Special Policeman Allaband, who was detailed to guard the Ackerman vault, states he is on duty for a week; on business, with the full knowledge and consent of his employer.

—The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city has received an invitation to attend the reception of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of Perth Amboy, New Brunswick, on Thanksgiving night.

—The Climax Bottle Stopper Factory will start up in about two weeks at its new factory, corner of Washington and Fifth Fourth street. The company's boiler had off-side taken been repaired.

—A horse belonging to Tobin & Addis became frightened at an electric car on Somerset street, above Fourth street this morning, and, in starting to run, slipped and fell on the street. The run was delayed a few minutes. No damage was done except some broken harness.

—Edwin Lyon has recently recently made some 1893 Republican fair chance in fine and spotless goods on account of not knowing it opening and that the principle of the goods is to give the benefit of the sales to their patrons. Remember this and you may be in position to enjoy the benefit of the same. Mr. Lyon has brought to this city, and he feels sure that it will be to the interest of buyers to call on early that he may show. Over thirty special lines at extra low prices are represented in his new advertisement to be days News.

—Westervelt avenue from East Front street to "the brook" is one of Plainfield's newest streets, and one that the city may be proud of. The roadbed is well macadamized and the neighborhood will soon be built up with handsome houses averaging in value about $5,000. The people of the locality are thrifty and take great pride in their street, keeping it free from rubbish and weeds. The new bridge for spanning the brook, which was to have been finished October 15th, is not progressing further than the foundations. The cause of delay is that the iron girders were made two inches too short, consequently the latter must do without it for many more months, and justly feel fault.

The Jury Disagreed.

The case to try right of property to two or three cows was on trial in Justice Hall this morning. The property in question was thought to belong to Mr. Nolan, but was claimed by Mrs. Nolan when on an attachment was secured against Nolan by Mr. Westphal. The jury disagreed.

Mr. J. Fred MacDonald, whom every Plainfielder knows, has been making some very successful ventures in real estate recently, and finds that occupation more lucrative even than the grocery business. His territory is boundless to his new line, and his latest field of operation is Hackensack, N. J., which he says is a great place. He is associated with Mr. Wm. B. Taylor of that city and last Saturday purchased twenty acres of land not far from the heart of the town. Within three weeks there will be a big boom. Since September 20, Mrs. Hoagland and his partner have sold $20,000 worth of property.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

A Plainfielder's Experience in New York.

Mr. Richard Tolles of East Front street is said to have been drugged and robbed in New York Monday. He went to the city to buy merchandise. While there he decided to have a tooth pulled. The brass blanket for the order he answered a saloon and took a horn of whiskey. That was early in the afternoon. That was the last he remembered until 12 o'clock at night, he was then walking up Broadway. His overcoat and watch were gone. He is recovered, he was drugged, and afterwards robbed.

He denies the story.

Tribute to the Late Hon. Nathan Harper.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, desiring to put on record, this minute, on the occasion of the death of the Hon. Nathan Harper. This hospital was one of the many works of benevolence, of our city, to which he was very ready and able to give aid and encouragement.

He was for several years to the early part of its history a member of this Board, cheerfully giving his time and counsel to the furtherance of its work.

The Christian principles, and the calmness of his judgment, were found to be at great value in our deliberations, while his well known character in this community, as an honest and wise man, was of great assistance in the labors of the Committee upon which the Institution is built, and to which it has met with so much success, and been the instrument of such great usefulness, to very many of our needy and suffering fellowmen.

Women Cannot Vote in New York.

The Constitution of the State of New York speaks in the way of female suffrage. By a decision rendered by courts as in New Jersey, were permitted to vote for candidates for School Commissioners in the rural districts. In a decision handed down at Syracuse recently Judge Williams held that these offices being elective were within the rule of the Constitution which restricts the right of suffrage to male citizens. Consequently he has ordered the names of women removed from the registry list, and the march of the sex toward political equality suffers a decided check. It remains to be seen whether or not men will find the contest vote for school officers the women will prize the privilege more than they did while so few of them were making any advantage of it.—Newark Sun.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Dana on Journalism.

To young people who intend to enter the newspaper field Charles A. Dana's noble address on journalism offers both opinion as well as no end of useful information.

Mr. Dana's lecture was given at Union college. Perhaps since he was speaking to students he gave a little too much importance to the study of the dead languages. Certainly if we have not time to learn both Greek and German it will be better in these times for us to take the German.

Would you be a journalist says Mr. Dana. Study the constitution and political history of America. Add also an acquaintance with the constitutions of the various states and territories. Do not merely commit them to memory, parrotlike, but think about them and compare them. The real journalist takes a natural interest in politics:

In order to keep thoroughly in the affairs of this world of the present generation, you must be a politician and you must know not merely the theories and principles of parties, but you must know practical politics, the history, the motives, the habits, the tricks, their purposes and their deeds; know them if you can as they really are, not as the blind and the prejudiced and the hostile paint them to be.

The journalist must know not only the history of his own country, but likewise that of every European country—first of all, the history of England. "The course of history offers a safe guide for human action, and especially for political action. You must look beneath the mere events of political history and action and search out the principles and the motives that underlie them.

One is glad to see that this leader lays such intense stress on accuracy. The worst sin of reporters, correspondents and editors today is their lack of care to get at the exact facts. "The faculty of seeing a thing as it is, of knowing, for instance, that it is 3, and not 2—this is one of the first and most precious ends of a good education." Both for literature and for research into human nature the Bible and Shakespeare are the books that will be most helpful to the journalist, says Dana.

Horace Greeley was the lecturer's exemplar in journalism, though in his judgment even this newspaper man was deficient in the critical faculty. Mr. Dana gives the reporter his due meed of praise, which he does not always get by any means. A truthful reporter who can write with some degree of imagination and humor contributes at least one of the lion's shares to the making of a successful newspaper.

Next to the reporter one of the important makers of the paper is the exchange reader. He must go over a whole room-ful of papers more or less every day and select from them, for copying, paragraphs and articles that are pathetic, witty or that give information. On his judgment it depends greatly whether the paper shall furnish attractive reading or whether it shall be heavy as lead. One of the leading functionaries in a newspaper office is this ugly little scientific man, too—the individual who is up in electricity, chemistry and mechanics. It is typical of our particular age that this is the case.

This sentence is golden, "An American who thinks another country is better than this should not go into journalism." Best of all perhaps is this:

Yet at the bottom of it all it is always question of character whether it be there. Whether that is practicing arts of deception may last a little while, but he cannot last long. The man who lies is the man who dies. Character is power, and the staying power is not merely intellectual power. It is in the character, and people believe in him because they believe he does not lie, and they say that is not so.

The millionaires have a great deal of getting over the real estate craze. The shrewd expedient of not owning much real estate in localities where the rise in such property is highest. Nobody can blame them really. We would do exactly the same thing ourselves if we were multimillionaires, you know. But the congressional wind now seems to be blowing in the direction of an income tax. Congressmen who are not millionaires will argue that men who have made their fortunes amidst the forms and glorious government should now come forward, and should be made to come forward whether they will or not, and pay an income tax to help support that government when the import duties no longer suffice to do so. That newly baptized Populist, Representative Bryan of Nebraska, says he has been studying the subject with a view to preparing an income tax bill.

Consolation—Says Matthew Marshall in the New York Sun: "This wintry financial weather which now prevails must as certainly, sooner or later, yield first to spring and then to summer as the earth revolves around the sun. Unless the whole system of the universe changes we shall in a comparatively brief period be again in the full tide of returning prosperity."

Instead of ordering the doors of the new national library building at Washington with pure gold ceiling, why, when gold is so common, why not use the aluminum ores here discovered in the state of Georgia? Why not, in the spirit of the future—the poet dreaming always of aluminum? It would shine like the stars in glory for a generation, without a breath of tarnish or cost of being repurnished.

HOUSE TAKES ITS TURN

The Repeal Bill to Be Brought Up Today.

CLOSURE FOR THE FILIBUSTERS.

Repeal Will Not Be Reached Before Its Opponents Have Had Their Say.

Passes the New York and New Jersey Bridge Bill.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The silver men, or the free coinage advocates, as they choose to call it, said, insist that the repeal bill be put through by force and without any agreement on their part as to time when debate shall end or anything else. They say they mean to be forced into submission.

The mode of procedure in the house today will probably be that as soon as the speaker lays the bill before the house Mr. Wilson of West Virginia will move that the house go into a committee of the whole and thereupon he will demand the previous question. Then some one will suggest that time be given for debate. Mr. Wilson will not say how much time is desired, and will endeavor to get an agreement. The silver men, if they do not change their minds, will not agree to anything. Mr. Wilson will then instruct the clerk to read the bill. Then the filibustering will begin.

It is doubtful how much strength the silver men will have. A number of those who have always voted for free coinage and will vote against concurring in the senate amendment will not join the filibusters. But there is little doubt that their men will have sufficient strength to call the yeas and nays, and that will force the consideration of the report of a closure resolution. Talk will be done if the filibustering begins.

Bland Will Obstruct It.

The repealers have been worsted all the time about a quorum and can count but 165 members in the city who voted against the amendments when the bill was pending in the house before being sent to the senate. If all the other members—about 130—who are here and who supported silver in those votes or sent their refuse to vote on various motions, it would leave the house without a quorum. But it is understood that they will not do this. It is generally understood that Mr. Bland will make his case very much when he objected to Mr. Livingston's motion to take up and consider the bill until tonight, when a vote should be taken.

Mr. Bland wants an opportunity to vote on a free coinage proposition, and if the rules will give him the privilege he will offer as an amendment to the repeal bill the coinage act of 1837.

The house was still compromises," he said to a reporter, "and want nothing but free coinage. I will not offer the Bland-Allison law, even if I am given an opportunity. I want free coinage and nothing else."

Mr. Bland will be given an opportunity to move to commit the bill to his committee on coinage, weights and measures as such a motion is privileged under the rules. The clause in the Voorhees' bill which declares the intention of this government to maintain the parity of all money and in favor of bimetallic coinage gives the coinage committee the right to report bills touching any matter connected therewith, and consequently Mr. Bland has the privilege of making such a motion. It would of course bring down. It is probable that the rules committee will fix the time for voting on the bill at some time this evening—perhaps about 5 o'clock.

The Senate's Programme.

The senate will be probably ready to proceed today with the bill extending the time for six months in which Chinese laborers can register under the Geary law. Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire arrived. He and Senator Perkins expect to speak upon the question, as do also Senators Hoar and Davis, but it is not probable that there will be any business done in the senate. There are some features of the measure that Messrs. White and Perkins do not entirely approve of, but they recognize the principle that the Chinese can be excluded from the country by legislative enactment they will probably content themselves by explaining California's attitude upon the question.

Messrs. Hoar and Davis will probably make objection to this doctrine. There is a general understanding that there will be no objection to taking up the bill this morning.

Senator Blackburn says it is his purpose, as chairman of the committee on rules, to take up the silver of the amendment and resolution of the duke of the senate as soon as the Chinese bill is disposed of. He will then call up the bill and pass by the senate as soon after the convening of the regular session as may be practical. He says that the experience of the last week in the senate has satisfied him of the necessity for a change of the rules which would give the majority power to act. He would do exactly the same thing ourselves if we were multimillionaires, you know. But the congressional wind now seems to be blowing in the direction of an income tax. Congressmen who are not millionaires will argue that men who have made their fortunes amidst the forms and glorious government should now come forward, and should be made to come forward whether they will or not, and pay an income tax to help support that government when the import duties no longer suffice to do so. That newly baptized Populist, Representative Bryan of Nebraska, says he has been studying the subject with a view to preparing an income tax bill.

CHICAGO'S FUNERAL DAY

The White City Honors the Memory of Its Dead Mayor.

THOUSANDS IN THE PROCESSION.

From the Criminals' Jail to the Hall Where the Assembly Transacted the Business of the People—The City Begins—The Mighty Procession—Is Now Over.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Today Chicago buries its dead mayor. The funeral takes place at the Church of the Epiphany, at Ashland boulevard and Adams street. The handsome edifice was taken from the city hall to the church, where the services according to the Episcopal ritual will be conducted by Rev. C. W. Morrison, Jr., assisted by Rev. Theodore Sedgwick, of the Church of Our Saviour, Englewood. The pallbearers will be a large one. Many soldiers, civil and military, have applied for places at the funeral, but have assigned to positions by Major Austin J. Doyle. The following will be the order of the parade:

Platoon of police, chief marshal and staff, United States troops, General Nelson A. Miles commanding. First brigade, L. N. G., Brigadier General Charles Fitzsimmons commanding; Second brigade, Royal Scots, Ninth battalion, Department of police, fire department, Chicago Fire department, Illinois National guard, Chicago active militia, relatives in carriages, members of the city council, ex-members of the city council, members of the board of aldermen, Cook county officials, members of the county board, members of the board of trade, members and ex-members of the judiciary, Chicago Bar association, members of the drainage board, United States officials, Illinois officials, officials of the Columbian Exposition, Columbian Guards, Veteran Firemen's association, Commercial Travelers' association, letter carriers, city employes, political organizations, German societies, Irish societies, Scandinavian societies, Bohemian societies, Hibernian societies, Caledonian societies, J. O. Parnell commanding; Irish societies, P. F. Ryan, Chicago Caledonian club, Scottish societies, Odd Fellows, Italian societies, citizens on foot, Knights of Pythias, Masonic societies.

The scene within the body was lying in state in the city hall was impressive.

The quarters stationed upon seat the bier upon the first floor of the hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light." Grimy little bootblacks, with their kits upon their shoulders and their ragged hats in their dirty hands, tiptoed by and paused a moment to look upon the face of the man they knew in life. Old city employes brushed away a tear as they went by. There were many women in the procession. Mothers carried their children. It was not a crowd of notables, not a crowd of mere curiosity seekers, but evidently a crowd of people who wanted a last look at the face of a man they all admired. The coffin rested in the center of a raised platform on the first floor.

The latter was draped and walled in on either side with black. An arched roof of black added to the somberness of the scene. All of the entrances to the building and all the windows in the building were draped with black, and all of the offices except those that it is absolutely necessary to keep open were closed.

The public schools are closed today for the funeral. The board of trade, banks and other places of business are also deserted.

President Cleveland's brother of Mr. Harrison, is having a rough time in jail. The other prisoners have taken to seizing every opportunity to jeer at the wretch and heckling him. Yesterday, so that exercise outside his cell has been made practically an impossibility. While the mayor's body lay in state in the city hall, with thousands reverently passing by, the assassin seemed for the first time forced to realize his position.

The terrible fate of his fellow prisoners affected him strangely. All along he had apparently labored under the delusion that his companions in crime would look up to him as a hero. But when he saw how the awful fiendishness of his deed disgusted them, and how they sneered at him, he became bitterly that he was abhorred even by hardened criminals as a cowardly assassin.

The Fair Beauties Up.

At the World's fair the exhibitors are not scrambling to get away. Preparations are going on in all buildings preparatory to closing, but so quietly that visitors are not informed. For the last week exhibits will stand in place until everything is in readiness to move them out. The track was laid to the Transportation building, and the locomotives, cars and heavy exhibits of that department will begin to roll out on the 8th—not before next week.

Buffalo Bill's wonderful show go back to their home on the Pine Ridge agency today. His cowboys will ride broncbos and throw their lariats in the old fashion. His Indians will return to their reservation. He is going to take a trip through the south, and as the guest of General Miles, and Major Burke, the general manager of the big show, will shortly leave for the eastern countries to arrange so will men receive Buffalo Bill's show has played to nearly 3,000,000 people.

The women of the fair held their closing exercises in the Woman's building, all the distinguished ladies identified with the enterprise being present. Mrs. Potter Palmer presided.

The old Liberty bell was started back to Philadelphia in charge of an escort. Behind lay the grounds it was intended to adorn. The Liberty bell had been the magnet of both years visited by a score of American silk. Those they were both wounded, to unless.

Today's closing of a new lease of life is shattered. It is closed absolutely. The executive committee of the fair offered it to the city, the director general pronounced the order. And then, perhaps the World's fair grounds proper will be open but Midway never again.

BRAZIL'S CIVIL WAR.

The Reported Revolution of Three Hundred Troops Confirmed.

RIO JANEIRO, Nov. 1.—The insurgent fleet in conjunction with the Villegagnon daily bombards Nictheroy, Santa Cruz and San Joao, but the fire is badly directed. The firing on Oct. 29 was particularly heavy, and the magazine of the insurgents at Mocanguy, containing 40 tons of powder, was hit by a shell and blown up. The city so far has not been damaged by the present firing. Nictheroy has suffered severely, though there has been no loss of life. The insurgent Admiral Mello obtains money and pays his followers regularly.

There is a strong feeling among the authorities here adverse to foreigners. President Peixoto considers that the commanders of the foreign warships showed sympathy for the insurgents because they are moved out of the line of fire. The armed steamer Urano, while leaving Rio on Oct. 15, was hit by a shell and badly damaged. She has arrived at Desterro and reports that 40 of her crew were killed. The insurgents have plenty of munitions of war. Decisive action by Admiral Mello is expected shortly. The government is mounting guns on the city batteries.

The Republica rammed the transport Rio de Janeiro, which was conveying 1,100 troops to Santos, and 400 of the troops were drowned. Admiral Mello confirms the truth of this report. He denies that he has any direct intention of restoring the empire.

He wishes to be recognized as a belligerent by the foreign powers. He expects that the warships Riachuelo and Benjamin Constant will join the insurgents. The rebel flagship Aquidaban was slightly damaged by the fire from the forts.

DANGEROUS CRANKS.

Two Murderous Lunatics Arrested—One Gets a Verdict.

WHEELING, Nov. 1.—Only good luck prevented a murder by a crank in this city. Mag Robinson, a negress, entered Dr. Stillyard's office and asked for treatment. The doctor turned his back a minute, whereupon the woman drew a hatchet from her cloak and struck him on the head. Fortunately it was a glancing blow, and a lump like a goose egg was all the result. The doctor disarmed the woman and turned her over to the police.

She explained her act by saying that she was the second coming of Christ. Dr. Stillyard had poisoned two weeks ago. The doctor had never seen her before.

A week ago a dynamite cartridge was found in the city hall and but for the forethought of the janitress would have blown the building sky high. The police have been looking for the dynamiter and have arrested George Hoehle, another harmless lunatic. Hoehle was fired out of the White House at Washington twice, once while trying to see Mr. Harrison and again while hunting Mr. Cleveland. Within a week he has written to every city and county official, every pastor and several policemen. Rev. Dr. Swope received a letter saying he could preach one more sermon, and if it was not satisfactory the writer would blow up the church.

COULD NOT GET A JURY.

So the Sheriff, Who Failed to Prevent a Lynching, Will Not Be Tried.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 1.—The trial of Sheriff J. McLenden, charged with failure to perform his duty in preventing the lynching of a negro who was taken from the county jail, has ended. Out of 500 talesmen who were examined only one juror was secured. Finding it impossible to secure a jury, the the state's attorney entered a nolle prosequi.

The state and public feeling was illustrated by the examination of the first juror called, Mr. M. R. Mitchell, a prominent citizen of Collierville. In answer to the usual questions Mr. Mitchell replied, "I have formed and expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant."

He was ordered aside. When leaving the stand, he said audibly and dramatically, "I would give Sheriff McLenden a gold medal for his conduct."

Judge Swiggart ordered Mitchell's arrest and assessed a $10 fine and 10 days in the county jail. Other talesmen, while inforcing Mitchell's sentiments, were more cautious. The case against several of the leaders of the mob was also withdrawn, and the prisoners were released.

Fooled With a Loaded Revolver.

HACKETTSTOWN, N. J., Nov. 1.—George Atwood of Paterson, who shot and killed William Cole of this town, while with a revolver which he did not know was loaded, has delivered himself up to the police. He and Keeley were baggagemen on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, and the shooting occurred on an express train. After Keeley's death Atwood put the revolver to his own head and snapped it till himself. The weapon was wrenched from his hand by some of the trainmen.

Miss Hastings Kills Herself.

SANDUSKY, O., Nov. 1.—Miss Edith Hastings, daughter of the late Wade G. Hastings, for many years prominent in business and politics in Ohio, committed suicide in the jail at this city. Miss Hastings recently created a sensation in New York city by suddenly disappearing. Symptoms of a lost mind are reported.

Two More Cranks Locked Up.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Bowery resident Byrnes had a demand made upon him by another crank, who wanted $100 at once, or answered, had been locked in by his sad sleeping wife, aged 40. Anoth. Prank wanted to kill the Union consul. Both were locked up.

Surrender of the Siamese Army.

BANGKOK, Nov. 1.—The Siamese are increasing their army, which will shortly number 30,000 men raised by conscription. Large quantities of arms and munitions have arrived from Singapore.

Baltimore's Mayor Threatened.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 1.—Mayor Ferdinand C. Latrobe received an anonymous letter in which he was threatened with instant death if he failed to provide employment for the idle workingmen of the city.

Train Jumped a Switch.

NORWICH, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Train No. 7 on the Ontario and Western railroad from Oswego jumped a switch when entering the freight yard in this city. Several passengers were injured, but not fatally.

A Big Bequest to Protect Animals.

QUINCY, Ills., Nov. 1.—The will of Mrs. Charles Brown leaves $200,000 to public charity, of which two-thirds of it goes to local and state Societies for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Andrews' Sanity to Be Tested.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Andrews, the crank, who wanted Edwin Gould to give him $2,000, will be examined as to his sanity as Believue today.

PEIXOTO'S NEW NAVY.

The President of Brazil Gets Five More Ships.

FAST YACHTS FOR TORPEDO BOATS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—President Peixoto's new Brazilian navy grows daily with tropical luxuriance. Five more boats—those of the United States and Brazilian Steamship company, which suspended operations in February last, when Rhods were filed against four of the fleet—have passed under the control of the firm of Flint & Co.

The boats are in the Erie basin, not far from El Cid, where they have been lying for months. They are staunch boats, and it is thought that, while they are not as fast or as well adapted for war purposes as El Cid, with a proper armament they could cope with any of the insurgent Admiral Mello's warships, with the exception of the Aquidaban.

Charles M. Pratt of 28 Broadway, who, like John D. Rockefeller, is one of the principal owners of the line boats, confirmed the report that the Flints had an option on the five boats. Further investigation showed that they have passed under the control of Flint & Co.

Gould's Yacht Not Sold.

It was also learned that no more had been sold by Flint & Co. of the steam yacht Atalanta, formerly Jay Gould's pride, and that the Morgan line will not sell its swift freighter, El Rio. It is known, though, that the Flints want to get a boat somewhat similar in size, adaptability and speed to the Atalanta. Mr. Charles R. Flint is very chary in talking about what his firm is doing or what it is going to do.

Banker Hugh H. Baxter of 368 Fifth avenue said that Thomas Manning's private agency had an office in the interest of the Flints, he thought—for his swift steam yacht Nada, built by Gardner & Mosher last spring. She is 85 feet long, 11 feet 9 inches beam and has a speed of about 20 knots.

Mr. Baxter declined to sell because the offer was not satisfactory. In addition to the attempts to buy Nada, the advisability of buying Norman L. Munro's Norwood was considered, but Mr. Munro's price was too high. It is said that the McBride Brothers' Yankee Doodle of Philadelphia was also thought of.

There is quite a possibility that if the exigencies of the fight against Admiral Mello demand it Mr. Flint's own swift Javelin will be pressed into the service of the Brazilian government as a torpedo boat.

Fitting El Cid For War.

Work on El Cid is being rushed. She entered the drydock in the Erie basin yesterday, and at once a gang of men went to scraping her bull. She has made only a few trips, and the hull was quite clean. As soon as she is painted she will leave the dock, probably late this afternoon, and be towed to the Morgan iron works at the foot of East Ninth street. A larger force than on the previous days were at work cutting through her steel hatches and steel beams to make place for the 63 ton dynamite gun.

Men also began cutting holes in her steel sides aft, through which some of her lighter guns will be trained. Captain Baker was on deck, and a busy, silent man he is.

Former Chief Engineer Miller announced that he was not going to Brazil with El Cid. It is understood that he desired a fuller complement of engineers, firemen and assistants than the managers of the enterprise would allow him. Engineer Van Idenstein, who had charge of John Roach's crushers on their trial trips, is now chief engineer.

There was a rumor in this city that Dom Augusto, a son of the Princess Leopoldina, the second daughter of Dom Pedro II, was now on his way to Brazil, and that if Admiral Mello succeeded a prince of the house of Braganza would be re-established on the throne of Brazil. Princess Isabella the wife of the Comte d'Eu and Dom Pedro's heir, is very unpopular, and if Admiral Mello made an attempt to restore the Braganzas it is probable that he would seat either one of the two sons of Princess Isabella or else Dom Augusto, who is very popular with all classes. The Portuguese government has sent a man-of-war to Rio.

Boarders Jumped Through the Windows.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 1.—A small fire in a boarding house kept by Mrs. Mary Magee, on Walnut street, caused a panic among the boarders. Peter McDermott jumped from a window and was fatally hurt. Mrs. Magee leaped from the second story window to the ground with her baby in her arms. They escaped with slight injuries. Owen Mewmeet made a leap through the glass door. Miss Mary Smith, the fat lady, who was badly cut and bruised.

Struck a Streak of Gold.

SANTA FE, Nov. 1.—There has just been discovered, 1,500 feet from the grounds, a strong lode of solid quartz, with a pay streak 20 inches wide, that will run $180 per ton in gold. The new find is located in Mendenhall rock, nine miles up the river from this city.

Russian Warships In Collision.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 1.—The report of an accident to the Russian squadron in the neighborhood of Toulon is confirmed in official quarters. The Russian vessels Pamyat Azova collided with the Admiral Nachimoff.

Mail Coach Robbed.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 1.—A highway took upon a mail coach, ending in the killing of a passenger and the wounding of the mail carrier, took place on Plantation road near Burnside, Ascension parish.

Coal Miners Decide Not to Strike.

SPANIARDS SURROUNDED.

They Are Outnumbered 4 Rebels Nearly Three to One.

MADRID, Nov. 1.—General Martinez Campos has left Melilla with 8,000 men. It is reported that 4,000 Riffians have been driven from artillery positions which they occupied before the Spanish lines. The Riffians now number 20,000 Arabs.

Patrick Sullivan, brother of Timothy Sullivan, the well known New York politician, has arrived at Malaga from Melilla. There were nothing serious on the patients were brought within a thousand yards of the lines. Soldiers were gathered about the landing stations and crowded about the carriages in which the sick ones were conveyed to the hospitals. The number of wounded more than the time has come when the government shall house more vigorously its opposition from the sullens of Mussulmen.

The Spanish squadron at Algeciras is awaiting orders to sail. General Marcelo reports that Melilla is now secured against attack and advises that the shipment of provisions be stopped until the additional hospital accommodations have been provided. Sixty Moors have been captured by the Spanish forces, and many of them will be executed. The mutilation of the dead is a great rejoicing in Madrid over the news from Morocco.

The fact that Prince Ferdinand of Bourbon has been missing since the Spanish attack on the Moors last Friday has caused the Infanta Isabel much anxiety. The prince was last seen by his friends on the outside of Fort Cabrerizas, and it was supposed that he had succeeded in reaching one of the blockaded forts which had just been relieved. The mistake of which he was the victim by the feet between two stacks of wheat and partly concealed the body with straw. Later he was discovered. It is said that poison to be shielded and hid out in Madison avenue. The last quarter of a mile of West road nearest to the northwestern line of the road is on a low fill from 6 to 8 feet above the surrounding country. The excavation proposed to be made is to widen said Madison avenue on the north side to 66 feet, and to make a width of twenty-five feet on each side of the centre line thereof, which centre line is the present centre line of the road as shown on map on file in the office of the City Clerk entitled, "Surveyed map for the widening of Madison avenue from West Front street to the Central Railroad of New Jersey, City of Plainfield, Union county, N. J.," made by D. Ecrement, civil engineer.

The said land and real estate intended to be taken for such purpose are all that certain within twenty-five feet of either side of said centre line between the southeasterly side line of West Front street, and the northwesterly line of the right of way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, as shown by said map and said dimensions, a copy of which map is hereby made for more certainty description.

HOUSEKEEPERS GIVE HEED.

YOU CAN GATHER MUCH VALUABLE INFORMATION HERE.

The Season for Spring Housecleaning is Upon Us—We will Give You Many Helpful Hints, so That Your Burden May be Lightened.

To prevent smoky wicks in lamps soak the wicks in strong vinegar when they are new and dry before the first.

If lamp chimneys get burnt or too much smoked, dissolve a lump of soda about the size of a small egg in a pint of hot water; add to it about a teaspoonful of the oil of vitrol. Let the lamp chimney soak in it for an hour, turning if needed. Rinse in clear water and wipe dry with a soft cloth. Be very careful in handling oil of vitrol, as it burns everything with which it comes in contact.

To prevent lamp chimneys, tumblers, etc., from breaking easily, place them in a pot of cold, salted water, place over the fire and bring to a boil. Let cool gradually, then take out and wash.

WHOLESOME WHITEWASH.

How the Walls and the Wash Should Be Prepared.

When the spring comes there is always whitewashing, and often kalsomining to be done. The first thing to be done is to inspect the walls and see if they will bear another coat over the one which has already been put on. If the wall has been whitewashed and has begun to chip off, it must be scraped before another coat is put on, and this is quite a serious undertaking. It means the removal of the old coats that have been put on the wall. We believe there are scrapers that come especially for this purpose. It is better to remove everything, furniture and all, out of the room to be scraped, as the fine dust of the old lime penetrates through everything. After the room has been thoroughly scraped, the new whitewash can be applied, though it is best to fill in or mend any holes in the wall with plaster of paris, wet with paste or water. It seems to us that the very best and sweetest whitewash is made by mixing ordinary slack-lime in water, adding simply salt enough to make it cling to the wall, and bluing enough to give it a pearl-white tint. Ordinary laundry bluing will not do for this purpose. What is known as Mason's bluing is the very best to use, as it will go further, and do better work and give better effect than anything else.

The United States government formula for whitewash, when properly made and applied, gives a white that does not easily wash or rub off. To ten parts of slacked lime add one part best hydraulic cement. Mix well with salt water and apply quite thin.

TO PRESERVE EGGS.

Not long since a railroad float loaded with freight cars containing a vast quantity of fresh eggs was sunk in the salt waters of the upper New York bay, off the Battery. Writing upon this subject, a witty paragraphist attached to a New York newspaper, remarked that, although immersed in salt water, the eggs would, undoubtedly, be sold for fresh.

Whether he knew that his statement was correct of truth or not cannot be determined, but the fact remains the same that the eggs were unimpaired when the dust was raised, and were, undoubtedly, put on the market as such.

Speaking of the occurrence, a wholesale dealer in eggs gives the following recipe for preserving them fresh for an indefinite period. It is as follows:

To each pail full of water add two pints of fresh slacked lime and one pint of common table salt. This should be well mixed and poured into a barrel until it is half full of the fluid. The eggs to be preserved should be put down in the mixture. It is said that they will remain fresh for two years or longer, if desired, care being taken to keep them well covered and to replenish the fluid if it should be depleted by evaporation.

An Orange Mould.

Dissolve half a pound of loaf sugar in a tea cupful of cold water, placed in an enameled tin saucepan, and boil it to a candy. In the meantime peel half a dozen oranges, and divide them into sections without breaking the skins; remove as much of the white pith as possible; turn each piece of orange in the boilings, arrange them round a mould previously rubbed with salad oil, leaving the bottom free for the last layer. When the candy is turned out it stands up like icing. Press the pieces of orange together in layers, and set the mould aside in a cold dry place.

To Remove Egg Stains.

In washing table linen or any cloth stained with egg, avoid putting it in boiling water, which will set the stain till it will be almost permanent. Soak the cloth first in cold water and the stain may be easily removed. The same rule applies to eggcups and any dishes stained with eggs. If they are thrown with the other china into hot dish-water the stain hardens on the plate or glass, and it requires considerable patience to remove it; but it comes off easily in cold water.

To Destroy the Buffalo Moth.

There is nothing but benzine or naphtha which is of the slightest use in destroying the Buffalo moth. Steaming is of doubtful value. He revels in tobacco. Camphor is food for him. He enjoys a salt bath. And he will eat through any obstacle placed in his way, whether cotton or your books. The grub is a little baby caterpillar, so small that it easily hides in the fuss of the carpet.

To Clean Delicate Gardens.

To clean gilt frames, dust the gilt lightly with a soft brush, then wash quickly with warm water, in which an onion has been boiled. Dry with soft cloths. Only gilding of good quality will bear this treatment.

Seats as Good as New.

To lighten cane seat chairs, turn up the chair bottom and wash the other work thoroughly with soapy water and a soft cloth. Let it dry in the air, and it will be firm as when new, provided the cane has not been broken.

To clean a white or light colored paint, dissolve a piece of potash the size of a walnut in a pail of water, and rub the paint gently with a sponge. Dry with soft clothes.

A RAINY DAY.

Patter, patter, patter!
Listen to the rain—
Cloud by cloud comes stealing
Over the sky again;
But we will not grumble,
For we know 'tis true
Even little raindrops
Have a work to do.

So we'll all be happy,
Chasing care frowns away,
Reading some sweet story,
Starting some fresh play,
Singing, working, sketching,
Or in the study pore;
While the rain is falling
Pitter—pitter—pat!

A Little Girl's Story.

Sarah Simonds sought some Sunday school children.

"Scholars seldom sit still," said she, so she selected six straightforward, sober, steady, serious souls save Stella Stark's small sister Stella. Seven seemed stubborn, so Stella started scolding. Seeing she seemed sorry, she soon stopped—said sweet, soothing sentences.

Soon she was satisfied, serene. So Stella spun some startling stories. She said she saw seven ships sailing southward Sunday.

Suddenly she saw some ships slowly sinking. She screamed several seconds. Strangely she saw six sailors swim swiftly. Six sailors shouted shipwreck. Sad sweet! Six sole survivors! She simply said, "Sabbath breaking!"

Susan sighed.—St. Nicholas.

YOUNG MEN'S ALPHABET.

Acts form the strongest language.

Belief to lose your money then your manhood.

Folk words are as easily uttered as foul.

Gentleness is never mistaken for weakness.

Have the courage to meet vulgar taunts with silence.

Knavery is sure to fall lame in the long run and so lose the race.

Love is a sacrifice—not an intelligence.

Master your ownself and then command others.

No man that fears the sea of failure will reach the shore of success.

Obey your conscience and be happy.

Pull with a will upon the oars of honest endeavor.

Refrain from any act you would not have made public.

Stop by the bottle; highter are alcohol.

Think time to go out of your way for a truly friend.

Unsavory parties society cannot well be disregarded.

A NEW GAME.

When Jack and Jim together played
They made no, oh, such a noise;
In fact, I think I never knew
Such very noisy boys.
But one day Baby Sis fell sick,
And hurried call they sent Ikey
As quiet as they could, because
The baby was asleep.

They soon found out a splendid game
They never had played before:
Jack was to be a fisherman,
The sea—the nursery floor.
While Jim was fish! And so they played
At fishing, all the day;
Their baby sister slept, until
She woke up with a smile.

How One Boy Got "Up Head."

Excellence is after all a matter of comparison. A boy of six years, who attends a private school, where prizes are given on all sorts of provocation, but who as yet had never earned a prize, came home one afternoon and exhibited proudly one of these rewards of merit.

"Good!" said his mother, "but how did you get it?"

"I was first in natural history," said the boy.

"Natural history, at your age! How did it happen?"

"Oh, they asked me how many legs a horse had."

"And what did you say?"

"I said five."

"But a horse hasn't five legs, child!"

"I know it, but all the other fellows said six."—Philadelphia Record.

A Few Feets.

If a musket ball be fired into the water it will not only rebound, but is flattened; if fired through a pane of glass it will make a hole the size of the ball without cracking the glass. Cork, if sunk 200 feet in the ocean, will not rise, on account of the pressure of the water. In the Arctic regions when the thermometer is below zero, persons can converse more than a mile distant.

A PICKANINNY LULLABY.

I see a gray coon in de corn;
Sleep, baby, sleep.
I hear de mastah blow his horn;
Sleep, baby, sleep.
I see a nigguh at de gray coon shoot,
I hear de fall of de mastah's foot,
An' I heah an owl in de wild wood hoot;
Sleep, baby, sleep.

A 'gator's grumtin' in de ole bayou—
Sleep, baby, sleep.
At a fat pig crawlishin' in de flue;
Sleep, baby, sleep—

FOR AND ABOUT BRIGHT CHILDREN.

"Oh, mamma, mayn't I go out now? It isn't raining any more; only leaking a little."

A YOUNG MIND.

"Oh, mamma," said Willie when he saw the crescent moon, "the man in the moon has turned it into a hammock."

EVIDENCE OF TASTE.

"Does your nursery like your oat?" asked Uncle Orson, on his first visit.

"No," answered Bobby; "but the cat likes the nursery, for he ate him up last week."

THE ONE-BABY.

"Our baby cries over awful little things," said Willie. "Why, even a thing so small as the point of a pin will make him holler."

A FRANK ADMISSION.

"Well, Billie," said Uncle George, "how do you stand in school these days?"

"In the corner mostly," returned Billie.

AN HONORED BROOM.

"Why don't you hang up your coat on the top of a telescope point?" asked the boss Jay.

"Because it would be too shocking," laughed the other, as he flew away.

A NOBLE SUPPORT.

"Well, Tom," said papa, "what have you been doing to-day?"

"I haven't been doing; I've been doing," said Tom.

"What is doing?" asked papa.

"Trying to please mamma," said Tom.—Harper's Young People.

PRACTICING SONG.

Si tum tiddy-iddy, ri tum tum!
Here I must sit for an hour and strum.
Practice is the thing for a good little girl—

Si tum tiddy-iddy, ri tum hi!
Bang on the low notes and twiddle on the high.
Whether it's a jig or the "Dead March in Saul,"
I sometimes feel as if I didn't care at all.

Si tum tiddy-iddy, ri tum tee!
I don't mind the whole or the half note, you see;
It's the sixteenth and quarter that confuse my mother's daughter,
And a thirty-second really is too dreadful for—

Still I work away with my drum, drum, drum;
For practicing is good for a good little girl—

—Treasure Trove.

A NEW PARLOR GAME.

A new parlor game is dignified by the name of "Book Sentences." It is upon the same plan as the old game of "Chinese puzzles," and is more interesting by way of change than the old one.

Heads of paper and pencil are passed around to each member of the party. Each one is told to write the title of a book at the head of the page. The paper is then doubled over, and lapped on to the next person, who writes a sub-title. The paper is then doubled over and passed along to the next person, who adds a line descriptive of the book. The fourth person writes down the name of an author. The fifth one gives a brief review of the book. The sixth one adds another review, and the seventh gives the names of two characters in the book, etc.

When the whole is read aloud the combinations so often are very inappropriate and very funny. For example, a paper when unfolded and read will run as follows:

"Daniel Deronda; or, A Story of the Wild, Wild West." A Tale Calculated to Keep a Man Away from His Dinner. By Mark Twain. A Thrilling, stirring and Realistic Picture of the Lumber Region of Ills." Principal characters, Mr. Pickwick, Ophelia, etc., etc.

Friendship.

Did you ever try sitting or walking for an hour in the company of any man or woman without uttering a monosyllable? If you can do that and not weary, the friendship is true.

Nonsense. Rhyme.

There was a young man of Dundee,
Whose hair he'd set on the sea;
When he felt very sick,
He said "I'll soon again quick!"
That wise young man of Dundee.

What Did He Do It For?

A very disagreeable looking figure in the shape of a man lately applied for admission to the private office of a wealthy gentleman. The gentleman was a "self made man," though not particularly proud of the job. But when the dirty, whisky smelling and disagreeable looking creature wished to see the gentleman he was not admitted. Thereupon he went away, his breast swelling with bitter anarchistic feelings, declaring that his old friend, whom he had known familiarly in youth, had become a bloated aristocrat, and had "surrounded himself with a cordon of flunkys," refusing longer to see plain men.

The fact that the plain man in this case was now a common tramp, who only wanted to see the successful man in order to beg from him, was a view of the case that did not occur to the fellow who had wasted splendid natural gifts in degradation. The world was just as wide and fair to him as it had been to the rich man when they two started.

A pathetic poem has been much copied lately describing how a wealthy lady of title passed by in her carriage without recognition:

Your old time love in sad disguise,
The tramp,
That followed you with longing eyes.
What did he go and be a tramp for?

DROWNED IN A SWAMP.

THE BODY OF LUCIUS ROCKTON FOUND YESTERDAY.

His Head was Lying in a Pool of Water—It is Supposed he Had a Fit and Fell Down.

A Frenchman named Lucius Rockton was found dead yesterday morning near his home near Jackson School House. When found the body was lying face downward.

The ground around that spot was swampy and the dead man's face was in a small pool of water. He was about 35 years old.

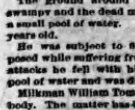
He was subject to fits and it is supposed while suffering from one of these attacks he fell with his head in the pool of water and was drowned.

Milkman William Toms discovered the body. The matter has been reported to the County Physician.

Rockton's father has lived in that vicinity for about ten years and is a gardener and florist.

20 MILE ROAD RACE.

Crescent Wheelmen Decide to Hold a Race Meet.



WHEN the Crescent Wheelmen had concluded their routine business last night, the Racing Board, composed of Messrs. J. A. Hayes, C. E. Teel and W. H. Rogers proposed that the wheelmen hold a 20-mile road race on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park, on Thanksgiving Day. The proposition was concurred in by the other members and the Racing Board was authorized to make the necessary arrangements. Every wheelman must ride a Cogdenda bicycle to be allowed to race. The prizes are to be as follows: First, Cogdenda bicycle, second, field glass; third, rifle; fourth, pair pneumatic tires, and a gold medal time prize.

Mr. H. S. Thomas resigned as secretary and Mr. C. E. Teel was elected in his stead.

FRACTURED HIS WRIST.

Serious Result of Schoolboy Amusements.

Yesterday Harry Page of Evonia was on his way home from school. He was accompanied by several companions. Boylike they were jumping and racing. One of their number vaulted over a post along the street. Page attempted to do the same. His right hand became doubled under in such a way that the bone was fractured.

BREVITIES.

—Mass meeting in Music Hall to-night.

—The case of Miller vs. Allen was adjourned again to-day to Friday, Nov. 10, by Justice Mosher.

—Madame Legem's dancing class for gentlemen and ladies will meet to-night at Shiletz's Hall, from eight to ten o'clock.

—The sidewalk on Second street by Mrs. Moffett's property is being cut down to grade. Mr. Benjamin Hall is in charge of the work.

—The Climax Gun Club will hold a big sweepstake shoot, open to all comers, at their grounds on Election Day. 50 birds have been procured for the occasion.

—Mr. Louis Sprigg, of Howard street, North Plainfield, says that yesterday afternoon a stranger called at his house, his wife, and, failing, threatened him. No arrests were made.

—An opening ball will be given to-night at Perlinor House in Washington Valley near Washington Rock. Two stageloads of persons from this city will attend, and the Eclipse Quartette Club also be present.

—An interesting class in shorthand will meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Wednesday evenings each week. The class is composed of young men studying law, preparing for commercial life and others engaged in active business. The first lesson will be taught to-night at 8.30 o'clock.

—Many complaints have been made to the police by the railroad officials about the persons stealing coal from the trains as they stop in the vicinity of Plainfield avenue. Yesterday Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely arrested four persons helping themselves to coal from a train that had just stopped.

—Two men, made bold by whiskey, attempted to play highwaymen at Westfield the other evening. They were received by the persons they stopped with expressive remarks, a board and fists. One highwayman ran and escaped. The other was captured. When searched his weapons were found to consist of only a comb and a mirror. He was sent to the Elizabeth jail.

AT THE RIDING CLUB

THE MEMBERS PRESENT IN FULL FORCE.

A Marked Improvement in the Riding Under the Excellent Leadership of Sergeant John I. Holly of Troop A., New York.

THE Plainfield Riding Club again enjoyed themselves in the Crescent Riding Academy last evening. The members, turned out in force, but their friends seemed inclined to stay at home on account of the cold. The rink, however, was heated for the first time and was very comfortable. The club was under the excellent leadership of Sergeant John I. Holly, of Troop A., New York.

Mr. Holly rode a big cavalry charger, which seemed to enter into the drills with a spirit that would make it dangerous for any one to mount him who was not a thorough equestrian. The club shows a marked improvement in the drills. Those who were present the night before last night were: Miss Corlies, Mr. Van Boskerk, Miss Van Boskerk, Mr. Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Puntz, Miss Opdyke, Mr. Ferdinand Suttman, Miss Holly, Mr. Mason, Mr. Waring, Mr. Barfield, Mr. Opdyke, Mr. Boone, Mr. Johnson and Mr. Frederick Suttman.

PERSONAL.

Messrs. S. R. Pope, Jr., and Frank Rand have returned from the World's Fair.

Mr. John Hines, a clerk in Mr. J. J. Kenney's store, is enjoying his vacation. He has gone to Pennsylvania to visit his uncle, Congressman Hines of Wilkesbarre.

A delightful Hallow E'en party was held Tuesday night at the house of Mr. J. W. Reinhart at Nonewood. It was given for his second daughter, Miss Kathryn Reinhart. Prof. P. L. Conde furnished the music.

Mr. George H. Macon, formerly a business man of this city and prominently connected with the Crescent League, returned to this city Monday for a short visit. During the past Summer season he successfully managed one of Mr. George Williams' drug stores at Asbury Park, and during the past two months has been to the World's Fair and to his home in Watertown, North Carolina. He will be in business in New York during the Winter.

Judge William A. Coddington spent yesterday gunning in the mountains in the vicinity of Mt. Horeb. He succeeded in bagging seven rabbits and five quail. The largest rabbit in all of the lot, the Judge says, he shot after almost falling upon it. He stepped upon a frosty stick, slipped, and only saved himself from falling by quickly throwing out his left hand. At that instant a rabbit bounced from cover. Judge Bird before he had entirely regained his equilibrium. His aim was true and the game was his.

Musical Conductor Wm. R. Chapman of the Meliopols, is a little man of big energy. He frequently has to furnish enough energy to stir up all the Meliopols combined. Recently, however, to New York, his energy was the cause of his getting hurt. He had been at a house, where, as he put it, "everything was perfectly lovely, money no object, etc." But his reception had been so cordial that when he left it had so much energy only because of his warm reception. Now, his natural energy caused him to walk rapidly. The closed feeling helped the energy, and his mind, evidently, as is the case sometimes of musical artists in moments of ecstasy, was "over the hills and far away" doubtless composing bright visions set to entrancing music. A prosaic and ordinary laboring man had, after erecting a barricade across the walk in front of a building in course of erection, gone home without putting up a warning lantern. Into this obstruction, Mr. Chapman's energy sent him, with, to quote him again "a depressing effect. When he arose, he had "that closed feeling," a headache in front and back and his left arm so badly strained that he feared it was broken. Fortunately, this was not the case, but he will be unable to use it for several weeks. His energy is not even phased, however, and he hisses the Meliopols with his usual cheerfulness. The music that society is practicing for the first concert is considered, by many, to surpass any yet given.

She Wanted to do the Judge's Washing.

"Maggie" Benford, an old offender, was arrested last night for drunkenness. In court this morning, she begged the Judge to excuse her "this once," and promised to do his washing for ten weeks if he would let her off. She was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail and went back to her cell praying for the Judge's soul.

On Friday evening, Nov. 3, Chapter No. 1, of the Epworth League, will meet in Vincent chapel. After the business of the League is transacted, Dr. Barnes will give the first of a series of Bible talks on the tabernacle, illustrated by a model. Every one is invited.

FOR SWEET CHARITY.

SUCCESSFUL OPENING OF THE FAIR IN THE CASINO.

It is being Held for the Benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital—Tastefully Arranged Tables Laden with Handsome Articles.

HANDSOME and elegant, as well as useful and ornamental, were the articles offered for sale at the Casino last night at the fair for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital. The tables were tastefully arranged, and this together with the beautiful flowers and plants, made a pretty sight as one entered the room.

Many articles were sold and the fair gives promise of being very successful, as it richly deserves to be. It will be continued tonight. Those in charge of the various tables are as follows:

Candy Table—Mrs. W. Scott, chairman, Mrs. W. J. Boone, Mrs. Walter Stewart, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Mrs. Timpson, and Miss Minnola Tomlinson.

Children's Table—Mrs. W. L. Saunders, chairman, Mrs. C. A. Reed, Mrs. H. B. Sleight, Mrs. R. E. Whitman and Miss Woltman.

Cushion Table—Mrs. Rankin, chairman, Mrs. Chas. Fisk, Mrs. Pitney Fisk, Mrs. Wm. Wentsworth, Mrs. Kirkland Myers and Miss Bishop of Trenton.

Odds and Ends—Miss Mary Tweedy and Miss Tweedy.

Fancy Table—Mrs. Low, chairman, Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Finch, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Timpson and Mrs. Berring.

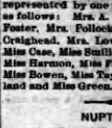
The Kings' Daughters have a table, where articles are sold which have been presented by the members of the different circles in Plainfield. The circles are represented by one member from each as follows: Mrs. A. W. Haviland, Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Pollock, Mrs. Irvin, Mrs. Craighead, Mrs. Lowrie, Miss Yerkes, Miss Case, Miss Stelle, Miss Wadsworth, Miss Harmon, Miss Force, Miss Bushnell, Miss Bowen, Miss Taylor, the Misses Haviland and Miss Green.

NUPTIALS.



McKenzie—Pierson.

THERE was a very fashionable wedding in the Crescent Avenue church last evening, when Miss Josephine Pierson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Israel G. Pierson, was married to Mr. Malcolm McKenzie, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. McKenzie.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. William E. Schenck. Miss Mabel E. Pierson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Clarence McKenzie, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man, and the Rev. G. Kennedy Nessell, Charles E. Hay, Frank Beatty, and Rollin F. Crane, Jr., were the ushers.

The bride's gown was of satin and was given by the bride's parents at seven p. m. at their house, 720 Watchung avenue. The floral decorations in the church were white chrysanthemums, and white, pink, and yellow in the house.

The guests were received by the newly wedded couple, and Assmann's orchestra furnished music. Supper was served by Mansel. A string quartet, led by E. L. Condy, furnished the music which contained principally of Boston airs. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Richards, Mrs. John D. McKenzie, Chancellor and Mrs. Henry M. MacCracken, William A. Brewer, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur MacKenzie, Mrs. Boome, Mrs. Harbaugh, Fred A. Booth, Miss Nellie M. Booth, Miss Charles E. Mead, M. Booth, Miss Sadie M. Booth, M. Theodore Peters, Miss Frances Peters, Mrs. James A. Edgar, Miss Edgar, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Edgar, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Sowdall, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Woodruff.

Plenty of Attractions.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, has an attractive home for himself as well as a church, and visitors at either place are always cordially received. At Mr. Herring's home on East Front street there are attractions for even the passer by. In the front yard is a weather vane and wind-gauge made to represent two sailboats that are attached to a pivoted iron rod, and when the winds blow the boats move and go forward merrily. The popular Gamble is also a lover of dogs, especially large ones, and owns several.

A FEW OTHER ITEMS.

THE AFTERMATH OF HALLOWE'EN.

Some Interesting Doings of the Ubiquitous Small Boy and Also Girl — Masquerading in Girls' Clothes.

It would be interesting to know just how many of the growing generation got their full allowance of sleep on All Hallowe'en last night. No doubt late columns to record all the tricks done.

Wired the Post Office Boxes.

On All Hallowe'en a gang of boys wired up the post office boxes that are distributed about the city and thereby violated a United States law, the penalty being $500 fine, or a year's imprisonment, or both. The postmen had much difficulty in getting the boxes open, and it is probable that on the evening before many persons found it impossible to put letters in the boxes. That was risky fun—for the boys.

Like Little Picanninies.

Several small boys in the neighborhood of Somerset and Emily streets had plenty of harmless fun on All Hallowe'en night. They blacked their faces and rigged up in girls' dresses and played pranks.

CALLED THE JUDGE PROFESSOR.

And Said he Met Mayor Gilbert in Chicago.

On June 21st, a warrant was issued for the arrest of Arthur Chambers, a colored waiter at the Hotel Alton, on complaint of Lizzie Totman, who charged him with calling her names and using indecent language. The colored youth skipped out when Chief Grant appeared with the warrant. Since then he has kept out of sight. He made his appearance last night and was arrested. In court this morning he pleaded guilty and was fined $5. He told the Judge that he had stopped at the same hotel in Chicago as Mayor Gilbert—he was waiter and Mayor Gilbert was a guest. Chambers held the court room be said: "I've got no fault to find, except that it was pretty cold in there (meaning his cell) last night, professor."

A Good Beginning.

The Fanwood Club alleys the opening of the Central New Jersey Bowling League contest was played last night by the Park and Crabb Clubs. The result was "first blood" for the Park. The following is the score:

Caused a Disturbance at Music Hall.

Two boys, John Benford and Charles Hardy, were arraigned in the recorder's court this morning, charged with causing a disturbance in Music Hall on Thursday night. Benford pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 20 days in the county jail. Sentence was reserved on Hardy until Saturday.

Shot Thirty-two Rabbits Yesterday.

A party of sportsmen, composed of Charles Smith, Charles Dodd, "Tim" McCarty and Warren Squires, are on a hunting trip in Hunterdon county, and a telegram received last evening said that yesterday they shot twenty-two rabbits. Eleven of them were "banged" by Mr. Smith alone.

WHAT LOUIS AGASSIZ SAYS.

The Present Demand for Practical Education Foreshadowed by Leading Minds.

[Copyrighted.]

Louis Agassiz says, in speaking of the advance of education, that "the time has come when a scientific truth must come to be the property of the few, when it must be woven into the common life of the world; for we have reached the point where the results of science touch the very problem of existence, and all men listen for the solving of the mystery. When it will come, and how, none can say; but this much at least is certain, that all our researches are leading up to that question, and mankind will never rest till it is answered. If then the results of science are of such general interest to the human race, if they are gradually interpreting the purpose of the Deity in creation, and the relation of man to all the past, then it is well that all should share in its teachings, and that it should not be kept, like the learning of the Egyptians, for an exclusive priesthood who may expound the oracle according to their own theories, but should make part of all our intellectual culture."

Special attention is called to the remark: "When it will come, and how, none can say."

We wish to show that the greatness of the purpose here spoken of does not necessarily make it such a distant goal. Louis Agassiz was one of the profoundest and liberal minded of the information which by wise application made him a power in scientific circles.

Waiting for the coming of a desirable condition does nothing toward bringing it nearer, but following the example of those who have been the lights of the world, and beginners as the A. B. C. of Nature's book we can study for ourselves the lesson she teaches. In so doing we will realize the position shadowed forth in the above quotation.

This, we are told, is the main purpose John Dalziel has in view in the establishment of his Training School, it is an humble beginning, but the purpose is an inspiring one. Parents who have the welfare of their children at heart and who hope to see their children enter into the battle of life equipped to withstand the sophistries which abound through ignorance of the commonest facts in natural science.

The work started upon by Mr. Dalziel Manual Training is only a means to an end and not the end sought. The purpose is to instil the habit of thorough investigation into every subject concerned, verifying by personal observation the statements of others. The pupils are taught to think for themselves, and to reason from cause to effect.

There can be no doubt either of the need or the value of such education, and we believe it only requires to be understood to receive the hearty support of our citizens.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Do Your Work Well.

Half the people in this life make failures of their careers because they never cultivated the habit of doing small things well. In his secret heart probably no man thinks his ability has ever been recognized at its true worth. He is employed at small tasks, working for small pay, when to his mind he ought to be doing great things, getting high wages. Nine times out of ten, perhaps, the man who thinks this neglects in consequence the small, humble task he is set to do. He despises the business that brings him bread. He gets only cheap wages; therefore he will give cheap work. He is discontented, he is unhappy, he is ready to strike, change his business or even to slight his tasks to the extent of cheating his employer as far as he dares without getting himself discharged. By and by he does get himself discharged. Then he fails at fate and rich men waste than ever.

No man ever succeeded in life who did not put his conscience into his work, whatever it was. If you agree to perform certain labor in return for certain wages, however small, you have sold your time and your ability. Do that work the best it can be done. Form the habit of putting the best of yourself into all you do. Work with enthusiasm over the small tasks that are your lot at present, always in hope that greater ones will come to you by and by. They will be sure to come. Many a time the small task, done conscientiously and with enthusiasm, itself affords the very clew to the greater task and the larger remuneration. But it is absolutely certain that no man who has not the habit of doing his best on whatever work he is engaged on will ever fill any high place whatsoever. It is not in the books that he should.

Let us always be on the lookout for grander opportunities. Life would not be worth living except for that. But let us at the same time strengthen ourselves to seize the great opportunity when it comes by making the most out of our small opportunities. It is the only way. It is the meaning of the saying: "Unto him that hath shall be given." Know this: In the grand roundup each individual comes much nearer getting just what he deserves than is generally supposed.

The Silver Fight.

Not since the war has there been engendered in this country so much bitterness of feeling as has been aroused by the silver question. Even states, families, lifelong friends are divided among themselves. The eastern states have in general little conception of how desperately in earnest the common people of the west and south are in this matter. It seems really a fight of the rural districts against the large cities, and again a contest of the west and south against the east.

While the senators of Tennessee were fighting against repeal, the business men of Memphis sent to congress a great petition asking that repeal be passed forthwith. Chicago manufacturing and commercial firms were among those petitioning for repeal. When they learned this the trades assembly of Denver resolved forthwith to boycott the firms that demanded repeal.

Even the New York newspapers said a good word for the World's fair when they were trying to boom Manhattan day. If they had done so from the beginning, they would now have the satisfaction of knowing that they helped by their influence the greatest enterprise ever undertaken under the auspices of the United States. The success of the exposition would, then, have been even grander than it was. As it is, several New York editors can only remember to the latest day of their lives that the world's greatest exposition was a success in spite of them.

Nobody will grudge to Charles W. Ferris the $200,000 clear profit which his great wheel has made at Chicago. A good share of the money will go into Ferris' own pocket, one may hope. The wheel had first to clear its own cost ($400,000), then to pay the first authorities 50 per cent of the receipts. When it is remembered that the great revolving circle has done all this and yet paid the profit mentioned, one may guess at the business it did.

Year by year the time is cut down by ocean steamers in their passage across the water. If an outsider tries to ascertain how it is done, he finds that it is all a mystery of triple expansion engines, high, low and intermediate, double ended boilers set in batteries of six, twin screws working three cranks, a steel cantern frame and smoke funnels 120 feet high and 21 feet in diameter.

THE FIGHT ENDS.

The Sherman Law Has Been Repealed at Last.

THE HOUSE ACTS PROMPTLY.

The Voorhees Bill Passed and Signed by the President.

By a Vote of 239 to 84 the House Accepted the Substitute Measure Sent by the Senate, and the Silver Purchasing Act Became a Dead Letter—The Silver Men Made a Weak Stand, and Their Attempt to Filibuster Was a Pathetic Failure. Speaker Crisp Caught Them Off Their Guard—Some Obituary Remarks by the Defeated Leaders.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Silver purchases by the government are closed. The purpose for which Mr. Cleveland called congress in extraordinary session was accomplished when he affixed his signature to the bill to repeal unconditionally the purchasing clause of the Sherman law.

The struggle in the house was short. Only 87 men could be rallied for the last stand by the silver forces—Mr. Bland and his colleagues. Mr. Bland himself, knowing that further operation was futile, postponed to sacrifice the opportunity for a few hours' debate offered by Mr. Wilson in order to avoid the necessity of failing to follow and filibustering motion with another. Speaker Crisp overwhelmed them by putting the pending motion to the previous question. It was carried with a roar.

The filibusters had been caught napping, and nothing remained for them to do except to submit. Only 10 minutes under the rule the rattle of oratory followed amid the greatest confusion and excitement. At the conclusion the vote was taken on Mr. Bland's free coinage substitute. The majority against it was 73. Then came the final vote on concurring in the senate amendments. The vote stood 193 for concurrence and 94 against. When the original bill passed the house on Aug. 28, the vote stood 301 to 105, so that, although the total vote was smaller, the proportion was practically the same.

Signed by the President.

The final vote was taken at 2:50 p. m. The bill was engrossed immediately, and 20 minutes later the formal announcement was made to the senate that its amendment had been agreed to by the house. The bill was hurriedly enrolled by Chairman Pearson of the committee on enrolled bills, and at 3:30 it was presented to Speaker Crisp for his signature. A fleet footed messenger carried it to the senate, where it was signed two minutes later by Vice President Stevenson.

Chairman Pearson, with the bill under his arm, entered a carriage waiting for him on the plaza in front of the capitol and drove rapidly to the White House. The president had been kept duly advised of the progress of events. Indeed, he manifested so much interest in the vote in the senate that he sent for the official slips with names of those who had voted for or against the concurrence as was made soon after the roll call was completed. When Mr. Pearson arrived with the bill, Secretary Carlisle, Attorney General Olney and Private Secretary Thurber were present.

After felicitating with each other for a few moments over the victory that had been achieved the president took up the engrossed copy of the bill and read it aloud. Then, picking up a quill pen, he affixed his autograph at 4:25. And thus 86 days, 4 hours and 35 minutes after the extraordinary session convened the remedy for the financial distress which Mr. Cleveland demanded in his message was applied.

The organization of the vote was as follows: 24 Democrats, 62 Republicans and 1 Populist (Cannon of California) voted for concurrence. Against concurrence, 15 Republicans and 9 Populists against the motion. The following members voted for the Bland free coinage substitute and also for concurrence: Allen, Bell, Bland, Cooper, Brookshire, Donovan, Edmunds of Virginia, Geary, Holman, Richardson, Mills, Sayers, Marshall, Turpin, Pence and Tyler, while Neill, Wheeler and Keyes, who voted for the free coinage substitute, did not vote on the final vote.

Bland Refuses to Vote.

During the half hour of debate before the vote the silver men had their last word. Mr. Bland closed his speech by declaring that the law had been passed in the interest of stock gambling in wheat and cotton, and the products of the farm had been depressed by it. [Laughter.]

"I waive," said Mr. Bryan, "that such time as would be allotted to me if I were at first the take of the measure, but I desire that the gentlemen who vote for it should do so with a clear understanding of what they are doing. We have been told upon the Democratic platform demanded the unconditional repeal of the Sherman law. No person has yet brought to a single word of the platform that we have stated this statement. Gentlemen who favor this bill may follow the leadership of John Sherman and call it Democratic, but in behalf of God, until he is converted to the true principles of finance I shall never follow him or call it a mystery of triple expansion engines, high, low and intermediate, double ended boilers set in batteries of six, twin screws working three cranks, a steel cantern frame and smoke funnels 120 feet high and 21 feet in diameter.

Mr. Bryan's sentence.

Reed was then recognized. He said: We are not the slightest desire to obstruct the business of the country. We have no desire to speak to the galleries. We have not any motive of the kind. I would like another hour to discuss this question, but I do not desire to make any request of the kind which would be refused by the majority. I only desire to say that I shall vote against the motion to concur in the senate amendments because I believe that the Democratic party disappoints it. I do not desire [laughter]—in saying this, I am not saying a word in disparagement of the motives of the gentlemen who have taken charge of this bill. I have given at length my reasons for the view which I have taken on the question which is before the house. I have nothing to add. With the last Democratic platform I am content, but not that confidence which some gentlemen have as to other platforms. I do not see less than I do. This is a very serious and important experiment in the history of the country which had to be tried in obedience to the wishes of the people. I hope it may turn out advantageously to the people in every way.

"The whole industrial system of the country is subject to change. That change is imminent and threatening. It will be found that this underlies our present condition; that it is the main cause of the misfortunes which have happened and which will happen to us in the approaching winter. However much any such will be regretted by every party adherent, I sincerely hope that they may not prove as great as those who are wiser than I anticipate." [Applause.]

Mr. Tracy of New York, who followed, expressed his gratitude to the gentlemen who had intrusted him with a certain portion of the labor of framing the details of the bill. This feeling of gratitude, he said, extended not only to the Democratic members of the committee, but to all with whom he had come in contact with while attached to those who had been opposed to the bill. It extended likewise to republicans on both sides of the question and to the republican senate. He congratulated the country that the end was about to be taken as the culminating event in a long struggle, for sound money, and the American people had finally and decidedly declared their desire that there should not be anything but an absolutely sound currency should be issued by the United States government. In the debate on the bill as opposed to this bill," said Mr. Tracy, "have claimed that we have been following the directions given us by one of the senators from Ohio (Mr. Sherman).

"I will not take issue with them as to what that gentleman's opinion may be; but, Mr. Speaker, so far as I and those on the Democratic side who have acted with me are concerned, we know that we have been following the lead of a man whom the people of this country elected by the largest majority ever received by a president—Grover Cleveland." [Applause.]

In the midst of the applause the sharp, shrill voice of Mr. Wilson of Washington yelled, "Cuckoo! Cuckoo!" and the house, amid a perfect pandemonium of mingled laughter, hisses and applause, was brought to its senses by the strong voice and sturdy rap of the speaker.

Mr. Wilson's Final Words.

Mr. Wilson of West Virginia then closed the debate. He spoke calmly and without any display of temper. "Congress," said he, "after long and deliberate consideration, has rendered its judgment upon the bill with an emphasis that cannot be misunderstood, and which can neither be strengthened nor weakened by anything which might be said at this stage of its history."

He had recognized from the beginning that there were honest and sincere differences upon the merits of the proposition, and patriotic representatives of the people. Which side was right the future alone would determine. "If the passage of the bill should bring to the country but a small part of that blessing which its friends prophesied concerning it; if it should restore confidence and bring once more prosperity to the people of the country, then the judgment of its friends would be justified, and its opponents would be branded in history as men of honest, patriotic, but mistaken judgment. If, on the other hand, it should bring one-tenth of the evil that the opponents of the bill prophesied, then the judgment of its opponents would be justified, and its friends would stand in history as honest, patriotic, but mistaken men.

"I now move the previous question, and I demand a vote upon the bill."

Mr. Bland's motion to recommit the bill, which was voted down by a vote of 194 to 103.

After the vote on the Bland substitute was announced Mr. Bryan asked unanimous consent to be allowed to make a statement in response to expressions of the conduct of the silver bill. This was objected to by Mr. Bryan, standing in a side aisle, uttered the last words of protest on behalf of the silver men. Silence reigned while he spoke.

"When the previous question was demanded," he began, "upon the bill I believed that those who favored the bill should take upon the responsibility for its passage. We believe it is fraught with infinite possibilities for good, and we believe that the bill being in this country more misery than war, pestilence and famine. We therefore felt justified in exercising every right given us by parliamentary law.

"We have seen those who believed with us in the senate protesting to the last moment against what they believed to be a crime. In the house the regular rules of majority has exhausted all resources to defeat measures, going frequently to the extreme of refusing to vote, in order to prevent or compel the friends of this bill to use every instrument to force a vote in order that no one could ever say that we had acquiesced in what we believed to be done.

Mr. Bryan Predicts Disaster.

"I was on my feet, I thought, in time to make a dilatory motion when the speaker put the motion on the demand for the previous question. But I have no criticism to make. We were too weak to call for the yeas and nays, and we could not long keep delay action in the body, for we had thought refraining from voting would have enabled us to prevent the perpetration of this crime on the people, we would have joined.

"I hope that the results of this bill will be better than we believe they will be. But if we are right and time vindicates us, when you that the day of reckoning will come. And I here register the prediction that the American people will never accept the action that you have taken. The lines of battle have already been formed, and at the next election the people will speak. They will speak in the form of home and possibly of foreign war. Then, when you realize that this country is great enough, strong enough and great enough to legislate for itself on the money question without the consent of any foreign power, or, granted or implied. A year of speculation, of inflation, of extravagance, and then will come a reaction, and the people will then demand the restoration of the money of the constitution, the money of our fathers, the money of the prosperous days, the money of Jefferson and Jackson—gold and silver by the weight of the currency fixed at the ratio of sixteen to one. This is the last act in this great financial drama."

Mr. Bryan's speech was received with applause on the democratic side, and when it was concluded Mr. Bland moved that the house adjourn sine die.

The motion was carried by a vote of 151 to 94. A ratio of more than 11 to 4 in favor of the bill followed the announcement.

With the die has been cast, Mr. Allison of Iowa, Mr. Sherman, Mr. Voorhees and Mr. Gorman have received their congratulations. Mr. Sherman has received thanks. Mr. Sherman's followers have made a noble fight and have gone down. They must make the best of it, but they have not been conquered. They shall at least have my thanks."

When he had finished, good humor was apparently restored, and the house began the business of the day, which was the final passage of the bill relative to the position of assistant surgeon in the navy.

Mr. Woodcock of Michigan presented a conference report upon the bill suspending the statute of limitations in the case of suits for the payment of $100 on all mining claims.

The bill had been amended in the senate to exempt South Dakota. The bill as it passed both houses of congress will be subject to the operation of South Dakota. Mr. Kyle of South Dakota supported the bill. Mr. Pettigrew of South Dakota opposed it by the statute on this ground. He said: "The enactment of this measure will prove a most grievous and oppressive hardship to the people of South Dakota. They may not prove as great as those who are wiser than I anticipate." [Applause.]

Mr. Tracy of New York, who followed, expressed his gratitude to the gentlemen who had intrusted him with a certain portion of the labor of framing the details of the bill. This feeling of gratitude, he said, extended not only to the Democratic members of the committee, but to all with whom he had come in contact with while attached to those who had been opposed to the bill. "When the previous question was demanded," he began, "upon the bill I believed that those who favored the bill should take upon the responsibility for its passage. We believe it is fraught with infinite possibilities for good, and we believe that the bill being in this country more misery than war, pestilence and famine. We therefore felt justified in exercising every right given us by parliamentary law.

"We have seen those who believed with us in the senate protesting to the last moment against what they believed to be a crime. In the house the regular rules of majority has exhausted all resources to defeat measures, going frequently to the extreme of refusing to vote, in order to prevent or compel the friends of this bill to use every instrument to force a vote in order that no one could ever say that we had acquiesced in what we believed to be done.

Mr. Bryan Predicts Disaster.

"I was on my feet, I thought, in time to make a dilatory motion when the speaker put the motion on the demand for the previous question. But I have no criticism to make. We were too weak to call for the yeas and nays, and we could not long keep delay action in the body, for we had thought refraining from voting would have enabled us to prevent the perpetration of this crime on the people, we would have joined.

"I hope that the results of this bill will be better than we believe they will be. But if we are right and time vindicates us, when you that the day of reckoning will come. And I here register the prediction that the American people will never accept the action that you have taken. The lines of battle have already been formed, and at the next election the people will speak. They will speak in the form of home and possibly of foreign war. Then, when you realize that this country is great enough, strong enough and great enough to legislate for itself on the money question without the consent of any foreign power, or, granted or implied. A year of speculation, of inflation, of extravagance, and then will come a reaction, and the people will then demand the restoration of the money of the constitution, the money of our fathers, the money of the prosperous days, the money of Jefferson and Jackson—gold and silver by the weight of the currency fixed at the ratio of sixteen to one. This is the last act in this great financial drama."

Mr. Bryan's sentence.

Reed was then recognized. He said: We are not the slightest desire to obstruct the business of the country. We have no desire to speak to the galleries. We have not any motive of the kind. I would like another hour to discuss this question, but I do not desire to make any request of the kind which would be refused by the majority. I only desire to say that I shall vote against the motion to concur in the senate amendments because I believe that the Democratic party disappoints it. I do not desire [laughter]—in saying this, I am not saying a word in disparagement of the motives of the gentlemen who have taken charge of this bill. I have given at length my reasons for the view which I have taken on the question which is before the house. I have nothing to add. With the last Democratic platform I am content, but not that confidence which some gentlemen have as to other platforms. I do not see less than I do. This is a very serious and important experiment in the history of the country which had to be tried in obedience to the wishes of the people. I hope it may turn out advantageously to the people in every way.

"The whole industrial system of the country is subject to change. That change is imminent and threatening. It will be found that this underlies our present condition; that it is the main cause of the misfortunes which have happened and which will happen to us in the approaching winter. However much any such will be regretted by every party adherent, I sincerely hope that they

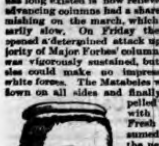
BLACKS SLAUGHTERED.

Matabele Warriors Shot Down by Machine Guns.

LOBENGULA'S FORCES ON THE RUN.

The Savage African Attacks Made a Gallant Stand, but They Were No Match For the Well Armed Forces the British Chartered Company Sent Out.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch from Fort Victoria says that the Matabeles have been routed and that the intense anxiety which has long existed is now relieved. All the advancing columns had a share in the skirmishing on the march, which was necessarily slow. On Friday the Matabeles opened a determined attack upon the majority of Major Forbes' column. The fight was vigorously sustained, but the Matabeles could make no impression on the white forces. The Matabeles were mowed down on all sides and finally were compelled to retire with heavy loss. Fresh forces resumed the attack the next day, Major Forbes and the combined columns being then within a few miles of Buluwayo. The blacks fought with bravery, as was expected of them, but in face of the machine guns and unerring rifles of the whites they could never get within striking distance.



KING LOBENGULA.

Finally the attack weakened, and the Matabeles showed signs that they were about to retreat. Then Major Forbes gave the order to charge. The Maxim guns were played upon the dense masses of natives, and the whites instantly afterward rushed upon the wavering warriors. Only the Royal Imbizo regiment attempted to stand their ground, but over half of them were shot down, and the remainder fled back to Buluwayo.

This Ends Lobengula.

It may be said that this practically was the decisive battle of the campaign. King Lobengula commanded the Matabeles in person. He directed the movements of his head men, and he retreated to Buluwayo after the battle. The white forces decided to make a forward movement at once before the blacks could have time to rally. The combined columns opened the attack upon Buluwayo, but there was little fight left in the Matabeles, and they fled in a northwesterly direction, King Lobengula with them. A flying column was at once made up to pursue and harass them, though both Administrator Jameson and Major Forbes believe that the Matabeles have been thoroughly beaten and cowed and that Lobengula's power is completely gone.

The loss to the Chartered company's forces was only slight and was mainly confined to the column commanded by Major Forbes. The Matabele loss is reported to exceed 3,000 killed and wounded. The imperial forces under Goold-Adams reached Buluwayo the day following the occupation by the settlers, hoping that the Matabeles could be driven beyond Zambesi before the rainy season sets in, so as to avoid further fighting in the spring.

A dispatch from Fort Charter says that it is reported that Lobengula has gone to the Matoppo hills with the remainder of his forces. In this retreat, he will be completely trapped. It is more likely, however, that he has retreated toward the Zambesi. It is possible that the remainder of the blacks may kill Lobengula. Administrator Jameson will remain at Buluwayo as administrator.

TRIPOLI, Nov. 2.—A detachment of French troops is reported to have entered the disputed territory of Tripoli on the Algerian frontier. A corps of 1,500 Turkish troops has arrived here from Constantinople in order to re-enforce the garrison.

There has been a heavy fighting in the Soudan. Rabak, the ex-slave of Zobeir Pasha, recently revolted against the sultan of Wadday, but was defeated. He rallied his forces and has been making fierce war upon the people of Bornou. He has already captured several towns about Lake Chad. The latest reports received from the Soudan announce that Rabak has burned and pillaged Bochirmi, the capital, and other towns in that district.

The inhabitants have fled to Bornou, to which territory the sultan has dispatched soldiers to co-operate with the 25,000 sent by the sultan of Wadday to attack Lagun, which place Rabak has occupied.

As this news was dispatched from the Soudan a battle was anticipated between the forces commanded by Rabak and those sent against him by the two sultans. The warfare now in progress has caused all the caravan routes to be closed.

Must Keep Her Powder Dry.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—The Cologne Gazette has an article upon the Franco-Russian fetes in France headed "Warlike Peace Celebrations." The article says that France was only peace loving hitherto through fear of another defeat, but the czar dispelled her fears at Cronstadt and Toulon and created a new situation which Germany must be prepared to meet. It behooves Germany, the article adds, to keep her powder dry and her sword keen.

Trouble in the German Settlements.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—A dispatch from Cape Town gives alarming reports of the condition of affairs in German southwest Africa. It is stated that Chief Witbooi and his followers have had a fight with the colonial troops near Hornkrans, and that several Germans, including Lieutenant Francois, have been killed and the German settlements burned. The reports have not been confirmed.

No Further Fighting at Melilla.

MADRID, Nov. 2.—There has been no actual fighting at Melilla since Monday. The cruiser Alfonso, while cruising along Cape Agnas, fired upon and shelled the Moorish dwellings. The loss to the Spaniards in the recent engagement was 4 officers and 18 men killed and 15 officers and 70 men wounded.

Hard Lines For a German Editor.

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—Herr Harich, the responsible editor of The Volksblatt, who was recently shot at by General von Kirchof, was sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment for an insult to an official of Silesia and to 40 marks' fine for refusing to publish a correction of the insult referred to.

American Cricketers Appreciated.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Lord Hawke has suggested to the Philadelphia cricket team that after their performances against the Australians they should visit Great Britain.

HARD TIMES OVER.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 2.—There is increased activity among the mills over last week, and it is asserted that fully 15,000 more men are at work in the various factories of Allegheny county than were engaged in wage earning on Oct. 1. There is not an idle mill along the south side river front at present, for the first time in six months.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 2.—Orders were received here for the re-employment of the 100 men suspended in the car department of the Lehigh Valley railroad shops at South Easton. There is much rejoicing among the men over the bright prospect for a full resumption of work in the shops, which, before the deal with the Reading road, gave employment to 700 men.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 2.—The Johnson Iron company, which has been running all summer on about half time, has resumed operations on double time. The company employs from 1,500 to 2,000 men. The resumption practically means a marked revival of business at the Cambria iron works, which depend on the Johnson company for its orders for steel. When running full turn, the company employs from 7,000 to 8,000 men. The resumption at the Johnson works gives encouragement to the hope that the panic is actually ended here so far as industrial depression is concerned.

SWINDLED TWO BANKS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The perpetrators of a scheme of forgery—daring, bold, ingenious and even successful—are now locked up at police headquarters. Five men are implicated. Three are ex-convicts, the fourth is a lad of 19, and the fifth is a physician who has figured heretofore in police reports.

The five prisoners are John T. Brush, alias Charles H. Jansen, 52, professional forger; Harry D. Garret, alias Loper, alias O'Connell; Frank S. Buchanan; Dr. Selden W. Crowe, alias C. W. Selden, and Joseph O. Hayes, the boy. Garret and Buchanan are both lawyers, but both have long since adopted crime as a profession.

The quintet got $8,000 through forgeries. The Garfield National bank, the Bank of the Manhattan company of 10 Wall street and Coffin & Stanton, brokers of 73 Broad street, are the losers.

MAY FIGHT OFF THE HOOK

Mello Intends to Intercept Peixoto's New Fleet.

A NAVAL BATTLE IS EXPECTED.

The Insurgent Brazilian Admiral Will Send the Republican Squadron to Sea, to Meet and Destroy Peixoto's Boats Outside the Three Mile Limit Of Sandy Hook.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—There are all sorts of rumors afloat in the mercantile circles in the southern part of the city which have developed with Brazilian affairs as the basis.

The Brazilian scrape. The most sensational story is in regard to the departure of the new Brazilian fleet from this port. It is to the effect that Admiral Mello would send the cruiser Republica up here to intercept El Cid and the rest of the new fleet of Peixoto as soon as it got off the shore beyond the three mile limit.

Admiral Mello has an agent in this city and is kept informed of all that is going on here. If he thinks it necessary, he will send another man-of-war along with the Republica.

It was also rumored that the cruiser New York would now sell for Brazil until El Cid sailed and would convoy her at least as far as the three mile limit off shore. What the New York would do in case the Republica tried to stop El Cid and the rest of the fleet is known only to the secret hearts of the navy and state departments, but President Peixoto's partisans are confident that, as the rebel government established by Mello had not been recognized as a belligerent power, the presence of a ship on the high seas under the ordinary regulations would not be interfering or attempting to commit depredations on the vessels of a friendly power would be resented by the New York and the Yosemite.

Prospects of a Fight.

If all these flying rumors are true, there is a good prospect of a naval fight outside Sandy Hook.

It was rumored that an agent of Admiral Mello had been negotiating for fast and powerful tugs in this port to be used as gunboats in the Rio fleet as soon as it got outside of the three mile limit. It was said that two boats had been bought from the firm of Mr. Morgan, 12 South street. This was denied, either of the firm, but Mr. Morgan refused to say whether any one had approached him on the subject of such a purchase.

The Republica has been at Montevideo blockading the loyal warship Tiradentes. The Republica appeared before the harbor of Montevideo on Oct. 29, and demanded the surrender of the Tiradentes to come out and fight. This was declined, and the last advices the invitation was accepted. The crew of the Tiradentes is said to favor the cause of Admiral Mello, but are kept loyal to Peixoto by the officers. The Republica is a modern protected cruiser, and, like the Tiradentes, was built at the international naval review last spring.

A Difficulty For Peixoto.

Another difficulty in the way of fitting out the fleet for Peixoto has arisen from the fact that the attention of the proper authorities has been called to the "foreign enlistment act," and the proper officials are now looking out that it is not violated. The so called "foreign enlistment act" is section 2282 of title LXVII of the Revised Statutes of the United States and reads as follows:

Every person who, within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States, enlists or enters himself or hires or retains another to enlist or enter himself or to go beyond the limits or jurisdiction of the United States, with intent to be enlisted or entered in the service of any foreign prince, state, colony, district or people as a soldier or as a marine, or seaman on board of any vessel of war, letter of marque or privateer, shall be deemed guilty of high misdemeanor, and shall be fined not more than $1,000 and imprisoned not more than three years.

It is absolutely necessary that trained and skillful men should have the handling of the dynamite gun on El Cid, and such men cannot be procured in Brazil, for the most part, except by the engaging of them to enlist in the service of Brazil on the vessels of the new fleet or to be enlisted upon their arrival in Brazil would be a violation of the act above quoted.

WOMAN AND HOME.

FEATHERWEIGHT TYRANNY MAY BE CRUSHING IN ITS EFFECTS.

Responsibility of Parents—Nous In China. Empty Lives — How Women Increase Care—Things She Hates—Make Home Happy—Furnish the Halls.

All tyrants do not go about menacing their victims with clubs and alarming them with the clank of chains and click of the bolt in the dungeon door. There are tyrants with sweet faces and soft voices, with eyes that laugh, and lips that woo, and fingers that caress. Their tyranny is very gentle, but withal it is as difficult to resist as the soft, steady, blanketlike pressure of the fog when it comes stealing in from the sea or creeping up from the valley. Who does not feel the tyranny that is harder to escape than any other, because it wears the guise and uses the vocabulary of love?

Such despotism is sometimes exercised by a wife, who, caring only for material advantage, stifles day by day and little by little the her husband's aspirations after better things, so he becomes, as Rosamund to Lord Eustace, her husband's best plant—a plant traditionally supposed to thrive on the brains of murdered men. Pink and white tyranny Mrs. Stowe characterized this kind of despotism, exercised by a beautiful, frivolous and selfish woman over a large hearted and noble but in her hands baffled and helpless man.

This featherweight tyranny is sometimes found in a family where one or the other parent refuses to allow the growing young people in the house the right to develop along the lines nature intended and in their own way. Who has not seen the child in whom dwelt no love and no aptitude for music compelled to waste years in an endless, profitless strumming at a keyboard, while another child whom art invited and solicited was condemned to drudgery of another order? The man of business who is resolved to make a business man of his son, when the latter prefers to be a sailor or a soldier; the professional man who insists that his boy shall adopt his vocation, when art or landscape gardening or mechanics are the boy's avocation—each of these is, though his very love, exercising a featherweight tyranny, which may be crushing in its effects.

Women are, it must be admitted, more prone to this defect than men. A woman's methods are more subtle. She uses finesse. Where a man goes crashing on with ax and hammer, she puts aside an obstacle or interposes one with gentle deliberation. Here is the habit of featherweight tyranny rather than his. It is like death to her sometimes, the discovery that some in the course of events that her sons and daughters have independent ideas of their own; that they, not she, must work out their individual problems.

The mother of this type is capable of heroic sacrifices, of marvelous self denials, of unstinted generosity, but she demands in return what is to her highest. Her children, to her thought, are never grown up. They must adopt her standards, accept her views—in everything, small and great, conform to her measuring line. Naturally they rebel, and then come troubles and heartaches, for featherweight tyranny can bear no parity and hold its own against odds as stubbornly as any other tyranny in this strange world.—Harper's Bazar.

childhood has very much changed. People are no longer willing to allow stern or cold to their offspring. We have come to realize that a child is an innocent, tender being intrusted to our care, and that it is not only our duty to feed and clothe him, but also to render him as happy as possible. There is no greater sweetener of life and character than a happy childhood and the memory of tender, loving parents.

But in giving our children this heritage it is dangerous to mistake indulgence for tenderness. Children, it is true, cannot all be treated alike, because they are of such widely different temperaments, but every wise mother will allow that the groundwork of the relation of the child to its parents must be unquestioning obedience. This habit once formed, the rest is easy, for the child who is taught to obey will also respect his elders.

The habit of obedience must be formed during the very earliest days of infancy. It is amazing how soon the little creatures learn whether they may work their own will or not. A baby of 6 or 7 months makes a pretty fair tyrant if he has not been properly trained from its birth, and the same child, after the age of 3 years, if the previous treatment is continued, will be an unnamed tragedy—perhaps subjected after to much unnecessary harshness, because she is he becomes "old enough to mind" there is likely to be open battle between parents and child as to which shall conquer. The strong arm of the former—in other words, brute force—may prevail, but what will be the fitness of the child for the future of such a child?—Yankee Blade.

Nuns in China.

There are nuns in China. They have a somewhat ruder time than nuns in European and American convents do. They belong chiefly to the lower classes, the poorer parents being willing to sell their daughters to the service of the convent. The children thus grow up in the ascetic atmosphere and eventually join the order. Poor widows also frequently solve the self supporting problem by entering a convent.

When the women are merely novices, the fronts of their heads are shaved. When the novitiate is completed—which cannot be until the end of the candidate's sixteenth year—their entire head is shaved. The nuns vows to lead a chaste and ascetic life. Her diet is purely vegetable. Meats and liquors she must avoid. She must hold no interest in this world and must take no interest in worldly affairs. Her religious duties, which she promises faithfully to perform, are mainly prayer, ceremonies and the care of the altar, on which the vestal fire must not die out.

But the Chinese nun enjoys a good deal of freedom. She may walk all about the town. Her spare time is spent in tending the sick. And as the Buddhist priests have very little intercourse with Chinese women the nuns are the religious instructors of the feminine part of the community and thus exercise a great influence.—Hong Kong Letter.

Empty Lives.

It is most surprising the way some women of means waste their time and money. Their dresses are made to order, so are their hats and wraps. They send their washing to other people and their gloves and laces to the cleaners. The maid who does the bedroom work darns the stockings and sews on buttons. Once a week a manicure comes by appointment and spends two hours treating fingers and feet. Another specialist is engaged by the month and calls at least once a week to shampoo and dress the hair. Now, this is what might be regarded as the luxury of living from the standpoint of a busy woman, overburdened with the cares of domestic or professional life. Such caretaking should leave ample time for some great work. Instead of that it does little more than give industrious women the means of a livelihood.

The waking hours of these childless women are filled away in novel reading, gossiping visits, manicuring or lounging. No attention whatever is given to study or the uplifting of the helpless classes. The number who lead these empty lives is on the increase, as every one knows who is familiar with hotel or boarding house life.—New York World.

How Women Increase Care.

Oh, women, if you will have carpets, somebody must propel the sweeper; if you must have stuffy curtains and hangings, some one must fight the invading moth; if you will make your house an art gallery, a museum of modern curios, a fashion warehouse, a china emporium, a toyshop and a world's fair in miniature—why, you do make it a dimple of loveliness, but know that it is pretty dear, and you are the price. She that increaseth bric-a-brac increaseth care, and much bijouterie is a weariness of the flesh.

Now all this is your own doing. Wherefore, do not come around the den of the man, wailing that woman's work is never done; that you are tired to death, and that you have no time to read or improve yourself. Go to your mirror and make faces at the responsible party. Of course the mother enjoys all these things—the exquisite taste and the art and the loveliness in his home. He enjoys the toothsome breakfast and the tasty dinner, the elaborate luncheon and the great dinner. But he doesn't really need so much, and I doubt very much if it is good for him. He is always apt to grow more than is good for him.—Robert J. Burdette in Ladies' Home Journal.

Things She Hates.

I hate a man who makes love to his wife before folks, and the house too hot to hold her after they have gone; who says "dear" and "honey" and "darling" and "duffey" in public and abuses her when he gets her home.

I hate a woman who, when her husband comes home at night, tired and discouraged perhaps, with his day's labor and trials, insists upon dragging him out to party or opera, when the lounge or bed appears the only comfort to the exhausted man, and I hate him if he is spineless enough to dress and accompany her because she cries.

I hate the man who spends money with horses, and cannot afford his wife a decent wardrobe, and I hate the woman who doesn't make a fuss about it.

I hate the man who is always ready to do a good turn for a neighbor and obstinately refuses to do anything at home; who gives freely of his time and money to outsiders and neglects to provide for his wife and children.

I hate a woman who is so bent upon "improving her mind" that she allows her little ones to run half dirty and ragged and her husband's clothes tattered and buttonless, and I hate the man who doesn't put a stop to such nonsense.—New York Ledger.

Make Home Happy.

The home life is the basis of all life, and a happy home is essential to a good outcome in any department of life. One socially a man or woman is wrong enough and sufficiently self contained to endure disquiet and unhappiness at home without fleeching at any point of duty. But the majority are not so. They become discouraged, lose heart and at last break down. Many of the sudden and successful losses

Tired from Head to Foot.

FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

That's what's the matter with the most of us. We're tired out, exhausted, all over to the blood. The misery! The neglect of the feet! We have known scores of people whose feet were in such a condition that they could not go to church, or to a social party, for days at a time, on account of the pain. Such feet are caused by Tight Boots, Sweating, Chilblains, Corns, Bunions, Callous Growths, Ingrowing Nails, Frost Bites, Etc. All these troubles are relieved instantly by a bath in Pyramid Pile Cure. Ten cents a package. Sold by druggists. Pyramid Drug Co., Albion, Mich.

numerous in the center of Paris. In the vicinity of the Seine, than on higher ground. In every house, considered separately, the air of the upper stories is incontestably purer and freer from microbes than that of the lower stories.—Washington Post.

A Happy Disposition.

"I shall never say I don't have good times again," said the woman in the new gown. "The other night I met a woman I know who has to stay at home all the time with her sick old father. She was radiant. She said it was the second time she had been away from home in a year. She had been out in one of the suburbs. Her face was beaming. She had been to Danvers to see a relative in the insane asylum. She took me in the gardens there are beautiful. She was carrying a big bunch of flowers, and where do you think she was going? To put them on her brother's grave! There was no one feeling sorry for that woman, but I did, though she said she was perfectly happy to get out of the house once more."—Boston Transcript.

The Baby's Bed.

For a young baby's bed nothing is prettier than the clothes basket, trimmed with muslin and lace and with a canopy to match. However, the muslin adornments soon lose their crispness, and it is better to purchase a rattan or iron crib which can be used until the child is no longer a baby. These can be obtained with a frame or rod from which are suspended curtains of China silk or some pretty washing material, held in place with bows of ribbon to match the color of the room. Iron cribs, painted in white and gold, or white with brass knobs and finishings, are very effective.—Elizabeth Robinson Scovil.

A Pretty Shoebox.

A pretty shoebox is made by choosing a plain pine box with a hinged cover and having it divided into compartments. Cover the sides with plaited cretonne and finish around the bottom with a cretonne fringe. The top is covered with the cretonne, plaited all around the edge, and the racks being covered by a heavy cord to match the fringe. The cretonne is drawn in full to the center and finished with a rosette of the same. Have a full plaited ruffling piece of the cretonne may be festooned around the sides of the box if one desires to add to the fanciful effect.

Shakespeare's Women.

Observe among all the principal figures in Shakespeare's plays there is only one weak woman, Ophelia, and it is for her the fatal Hamlet at the critical moment, and cannot in her misery be a guide to him whose fate is to be a leader and who is to bring catastrophe to these. And though there are three wicked women among the principal figures, Lady Macbeth, Regan and Goneril, they are not at all weak, but are frightful exceptions to the ordinary laws of life—fatal in their influence in proportion to the power for good they might command.—Quarterly Review.

Rolled Bread.

To butter and roll bread out of all the crust of a loaf of fresh bread. Spread a thin layer of butter the size of the loaf. Cut off the buttered end in as thin a slice as possible. Roll up the slice, having the buttered side inward, and lay it on a tin. Continue buttering and making the rolls until nearly all the loaf has been used. Draw the napkin firmly around the rolled bread and put it in a cold place for several hours. Rolled bread is nice to serve with raw oysters, or as a supper or luncheon dish.—Buffalo News.

A remarkable feat of mechanics was recently accomplished at Hamburg. Two of the great iron steamers of the Lloyd company were sawed in two amidships, and actually pieced out to give them additional passenger room and tonnage. Fifty feet of heavy iron and woodwork were spliced upon the separate ends, then they were put in place again as neatly and securely as they had been at first.

A prominent New York city paper has become so English that it headed a recent dispatch "Lifts For the Queen" instead of using the customary Yankee word "elevator." Perhaps it will be making its clothing advertisers say "top coat" instead of overcoat next. The New York dudes already call it "topcoat."

TIGHTENING THE LINE AROUND THE NECK OF RACE TRACK GAMBLING.

Mass Meeting in Music Hall of the Plainfield Branch of the State Citizens' League.—Address Made by Mr. W. H. Corbin, Rev. H. H. Oberly, and Mr. Thomas R. Adams.

NONE point at least Republicans and Democrats, who are interested in the welfare of the State of New Jersey, are united, and that is the putting down of the race track element. The Plainfield Branch of the Citizens' League held a mass meeting in Music Hall last night, presided over by Vice President Rev. William R. Richards.

Addresses were made by Mr. William H. Corbin and the Rev. H. H. Oberly of Elizabeth, and Mr. Thomas R. Adams of Summit. The latter was the first speaker.

Mr. Corbin was the first speaker. He said in part: "When the Legislature last Winter passed the race track bills, the common law of the State was repealed, for the first time in history. In order to make themselves safe the gamblers had to state in several instances in their new laws that "the common law is hereby repealed." This common law made it an offense to gamble and all conviction for gambling was called keeping a disorderly house. "Duke" Thompson, whose hirelings passed those bills, was convicted thirteen times of keeping a disorderly house. This is the reason he wanted those bills passed.

"The man with the above record is the man who is asking the people to send him to Washington as a United States Senator. It is a shameful, shameful record.

"This act of repealing the common law will not stop at race track gambling. That is only the beginning. Shortly days after the passage of these laws, another bill was passed allowing the selling of liquor on Sunday, and that shameful act now stands.

"The question is, what is to be done? Why don't we put them out? The gambling party is run by 50 persons, the overflow from Pennsylvania and New York. If every voter will cast his vote conscientously the gamblers can be easily ousted. This is not a time to stand out for the party line. To drive out the gamblers I would vote for a Prohibitionist if he was the only man pledged to vote against race track laws. Every man in the State must rise and help put this iniquity down."

Unsafe for Ladies on Elizabeth's Streets.

The Rev. Mr. Oberly was next introduced, who said, among other things: "These race track people don't care a straw for our State. It is only their love of money that prompts them to have their men elected. It is the duty of every voter to vote against them. Every man who does not cast a vote against the gamblers is a traitor, and he hasn't got one spark of patriotism left. I don't suppose the residents of the beautiful city of Plainfield realize the condition of a race-track locality. In Elizabeth it is not safe for a lady to pass along the street in the evening for fear of insult from this element who loiter about our streets. I will not mention any party candidates. We have taken up a Cross, and we will bear it through. We are going to fly high a Kyte for common law and morality, the tail of which will fly around Union county."

What a Democrat Says.

The last speaker, Mr. Thomas R. Adams, a Democrat, stated that he had just received an appeal from the State Citizens' League to vote for their men. He said: "As a member of the Anti-Race Track League I will vote for their men," he said, "whether they be Democrats or Republicans. We must forget for awhile our party, and vote for what is right. I was one of the Summit delegates to the assembly convention at Elizabeth. I represented the plank of that place. At our primary we adopted resolutions condemning race track gambling. I asked to have those adopted at the convention, but only succeeded in having them read. Those were not the representatives of the Democratic party, but a few pirates sailing under false colors. They were only the kindlings of a few bonfires. I can now follow the flag I am proud of—Dr. Kempshall. The whole State is aroused on this question. It we feel that our first duty is to God, second to our families, third to our State and third to our party, the State must be redeemed."

To the Voters.

A reception will be given to the Republican candidates of Union county and the Republican Association rooms over the City National Bank on Saturday evening, Nov. 4th, from 7.30 to 8.45 o'clock.

Speeches will be made by the several candidates and others.

All voters of whatever party are invited to attend and talk with them.

Close of the Muhlenberg Hospital Fair.

The Muhlenberg Hospital fair at the Casino closed last night. It was very successful, and it is estimated that $1,500 was made. Mrs. John Gray Foster was chairman of the Kings' Daughters table. $130 was cleared at this table.

A SHREWD METHOD OF SHUTTING OUT ADJOINING REAL ESTATE.

There are Ways and Means of Overcoming Obstacles and Mr. Charles Hand Has One Way that Surprised a Jersey Farmer and is also Used in the Somerset Street Plot Now Being Opened.

Very few persons know of a little idea in real estate dealing whereby a few inches of ground is so complete a block to adjoining property as a stone wall would be.

Recently Mr. Charles Hand, who is known as a hustler in real estate business on a large scale, purchased about three acres of farm land, not far from Plainfield, and opened it into city lots.

A farmer owned an adjoining plot of about the same extent. This farmer was requested by Mr. Hand to join him in opening a street on the line of their respective properties. He refused, and in a way that put Mr. Hand's "mad up," as he expresses it.

Nothing further was said about the matter, but Mr. Hand quietly altered his plans, and, when the street was cut through, a piece of ground only nine inches wide divided the street from the adjoining property owned by the farmer. This strip extended along the entire length of the street.

In a few days Mr. Hand had a visitor. It was the farmer. Said he: "How much do you want for that bit of ground?"

"Um, I dun'no. Hadn't thought of it. I'm poor, $5,000.

"You do, do you! well I want just $5,000 for that nine inches of land, and don't you forget it."

That settled it. Mr. Hand says he will hold that nine inches and if he does not sell it he will leave a clause in his will to the effect that $5,000 must be paid for it.

Mr. A. D. Thompson's purchase of the Allen estate on Somerset street, a full account of which appeared in Tuesday's News, brings out Mr. Hand again. Mr. Thompson is the long headed purchaser, Mr. H. E Rider is his inside manager and Mr. Hand the outside "hustler" A good trio. The same little nine inches block-ade is worked here on the northern side of the plot also. The reason for this is that the owners of any adjoining land wish to be benefitted, the energetic and original improvers believe that they should pay for it.

Mr. Thompson expects to have the plot of ground on sale in about 100 city lots. There will be three streets dividing it. The purchase price of the entire plot was in the neighborhood of $25,000.

The plan is to have all houses on a line, and no fences, so as to give a park-like appearance.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Thomas Burns of Central avenue, after a severe illness is able to be out again.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson will address the Y. M. C. A. meeting on Sunday, at 4.15 p. m.

Miss Irene Van Sickle of High Bridge, N. J. is the guest of Mrs. Charles H. Randolph of West Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. Siebricht of New Rochelle returned home yesterday after a visit at the home of Mrs. Siebricht's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Titsworth of Madison avenue.

The Rev. Dr. Pise, a noted New York divine, will occupy the pulpit in the Church of the Heavenly Rest next Sunday morning. Services will be held at eleven o'clock.

Mr. Nicholas Messerschmidt of Jackson avenue has recovered from the serious illness with which he was afflicted several weeks ago while visiting relatives in Maryland.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue chapel will tender a reception to their pastor, the Rev. Herbert Hunting, on Friday night. It will be held in the chapel.

Last night was ladies night at the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum. Good bowling scores were made by several of the fair sex, who attended. The highest score was made by Miss Josie Butcher, who rolled 127.

Mr. Peter E. Bee of Somerset street is a checker-player of considerable ability. He has played the game for over thirty years and to that time has defeated many checker players of local renown. The game is Mr. Bee's favorite pastime.

Mr. John R. Townsend, proprietor of the marble and granite works on Somerset street, owns a cosy home on Evans terrace. He has as pretty a piece of property as there is in that vicinity. Yesterday he added to it by buying another adjoining lot.

Mr. Charles Dressell, Sr., of Steiner place, father of Mr. Charles Dressell, Jr., president of the Saengar and Tanning Society, died at nine o'clock this morning, after a lingering illness of several years. For the past two weeks he had been confined to his bed.

Not on the Programme.

At the Hope chapel entertainment last night in the farce Mr. Carney (the shoe maker) was to have bartered a long while with Mr. Newcorn (the butcher) over a bill. One act was cut short by an unforseen occurrence. As the shoemaker went to sit down in a chair he struck the sharp point of a tack he had lying there when the butcher entered. The shoemaker said "that settles it" and the act was over.

ENTERTAINMENT AT HOPE CHAPEL.

For the Benefit of the Ladies Aid Society.

ON THE benefit of the Ladies Aid Society of the Hope chapel the Tom Dramatic Society gave an entertainment in the chapel last night. The programme was very interesting and created much applause. It was as follows:

At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments were served by the ladies of the chapel.

REPUBLICAN MEETING TO-NIGHT.

Union County Candidates Expected to be Present and Make Addresses.

There will be a Republican meeting to-night at T. A. B. Hall, on West Sixth street, near Liberty, under the auspices of the Fourth Ward Republican Club. It is expected that candidate for Senator Mr. Voorhees, Candidate for Sheriff George Kyte, and Candidate for Assemblyman Charles N. Codding will be present and make addresses.

The Plainfield Cornet Band will furnish the music. Clam chowder party after the meeting. The committee of arrangements is composed of Councilman H. A. Weber, chairman; W. Titsworth, J. H. Martin, Charles Foster, Charles Van Winkle, Councilman Millington, A. Augleman, H. W. Force, C. Rote, J. Dixon, A. P. Gray and William Ayers.

BREVITIES.

—Colds are coming in fashion again.

—St. Mary's church choir is rehearsing Christmas music.

—Trigonometry this evening at the Y. M. C. A. at seven and vocal music at eight.

—Ellsner & Bonte's Bed Stopper Co. has had a new trestle built in the rear of their factory, near the Washington street bridge.

—On Sunday the Diocesan Union will hold a meeting in the C. Y. M. L. club house. A schedule for a bowling tournament will be arranged.

—John Gardner of Newark, who was run over by an electric car, got a verdict of $7,500 against the New Jersey Traction Company yesterday.

—The report of the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, shows that over $600,000 will be needed for improvements of Conway's Ferry and harbors during the coming year.

—The I. P. S. C. E. of the Park avenue Baptist church will hold its regular weekly prayer meeting this evening, at eight o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

—The New Jersey Traction Company secured a verdict yesterday from the Union County Board of Freeholders for a scaller road connecting lines in Elizabeth and Newark.

—Calvarly, the wire rope walker, who fell eighty feet at the Inter-State Fair, is recovering rapidly at St. Francis Hospital and is thinking of resuming his daring feats next Spring.

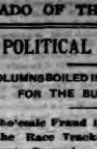
—At the Baptist State Convention, held at New Brunswick Tuesday and Wednesday night, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes and the Rev. J. W. Richardson of this city, were appointed on the committee of arrangements. The next Convention will be held in the First Baptist church, in this city.

—The funeral of William Crevelling took place at the home of his parents, on West Front street yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Corwin Genung officiated. The pall bearers were Monroe Henry Reader, Frank Woodruff, Harry Wood and F. C. Smith. About twenty members of the Warren Chapel Young People's Society were present.

POLITICAL NUGGETS.

COLUMNS BOILED INTO PARAGRAPHS FOR THE BUSY READER.

Who'esale Fraud in the Vicinity of the Race Tracks. Honest Democrats Preparing to Vote with Republicans.—The Regi-try in this Neighborhood.



POLITICIANS of both parties are now busy at work. The race track gamblers and black legs of all descriptions have joined hands so that the respectable Democracy stands out their holding off, but are realizing that it is time the State was released from misrule and the indications are that many Democrats will either vote with the Republicans against the Race-track candidates, or not vote at all.

HOW THE GAMBLING POLITICIANS WORK.

In the race-track precinct of Camden county 1,150 names have been registered, and all the stable boys, jockeys and race track employes will vote for the Democratic candidates who were nominated at the dictation of W. J. Thompson, owner of the race-track. The D-mocrats are naturalizing foreigners by the wholesale. The Naturalization Court sat until after dark last evening, and over 400 citizenship papers have been issued. A system of withholding these papers until election day has been adopted by the Democratic workers in order to insure the newly-made citizen voting their ticket.

THE REGISTRY IN UNION AND OTHER COUNTIES.

The registry at Elizabeth is 900 less than last year.

The total registry of votes throughout the county last year was 18,232. This year it is 18, 977, or a loss of 255.

In this city the registration amounted to 3,207, or 20 less than last year. The most activity was displayed in the Second District of the Fourth Ward, which includes Pond Tool Works, where thirty-six names were added to the list while the least was in the Second District of the Second Ward, which is located at Netherwood.

The registration in other townships was as follows:

Rahway —1,994; last year, 2,027; decrease, 33.

Westfield—767; last year, 760; gain 5.
Summit—682; last year, 632; gain, 52.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Life With a Purpose.

Mankind are mostly divided into two classes—those who strive to gain riches and those who stick where they fall, like a lump of putty, without striving for anything. But scattered about like lost lambs among the putty people and the money grabbers is a third class, so small as not be recognized as a class at all, and only known as individual cranks. These are the people who hold to the fixed purpose of making the world better and happier. They have splendid dreams of a perfected race in which all shall be free, healthy, honest, wise and beautiful, and there shall be no more poverty or vice. They believe that nobody serves to live unless during his life he does what he can to bring about this higher development of the race.

These cranks choose for themselves some line of work which they make their own—the one best adapted to their cast of mind. Never losing sight of this, they toil toward the one end with might and main. They have their living to earn, but outside of that they put the best of their powers to helping on human progress. They may not be known or honored much at first; they are often laughed at; sometimes mobbed; again, martyred. After they die they are reverenced above all the rest and grow into perennial fame. Such a person was the late Lucy Stone, who worked all her life for a moral purpose which she conceived to be one of the most important. And so strong, so true and kindly was her life that at its close, behold! it suddenly became manifest that she was one of the famous women of her day, and even those who thought her purpose a mistaken one had good words for Lucy Stone.

Rascals.

The defenseless citizen who falls into the hands of some of the western land boomers needs the help of heaven. A colony of honest western settlers in California has recently been irrevocably ruined by buying land on the representations of the company of boarding land agents, who described them and laughed at them. This colony lost all it possessed through being bitten in the purchase of alkali land. Of all the worthless lands in the west, this alkali soil is the most deceptious. In California it is heavy and black, like the richest loam in the prairie states.

The land agents have it plowed up to show how rich and black it is. At the same time they exhibit a bewildering array of fruits, grains and vegetables brought from some other place, as the product of the alkali ground. The home buyer says them. He sees also the black soil that looks so fat. He buys and is ruined. The alkali soil will in time produce great crops, it is true, but first millions of dollars will be required to pay for the expensive land plaster and the drainage necessary to reclaim it.

The irresponsible land agents are a serious detriment to many parts of the west. The settler is sure to be swindled unless he has the word of some person on whom he can rely positively, and that one is rarely found among the land boomers. As long as one cannot tell the honest ones from the dishonest, and as long as they thus prove alike in particular gains to distinguish between the two classes, it behooves a settler to look out for them all.

The difference between the Swiss initiative and referendum is this: Under authority of the referendum the government can lay any measure before the whole people and ask them to vote yes or no on it. Under the authority of the initiative a specified number of private citizens can by petition compel the government to submit to a vote of the whole people any question the citizens desire to see thus voted on. It is odd enough that the first application of the initiative was made to the Jewish way of slaughtering food animals. That method, in the petitioners' view, was cruel, and so the citizens demanded that the government should submit to the people the question whether the method should be abolished. The vote went affirmative by a small majority. It was odd again that the French Swiss voted to let the Jews go on and slaughter in the way they liked, while the German Swiss voted that they should not, and as the German blood was in the majority it carried the day.

Four thousand dollars worth of gold dust apiece is not bad pay for one season for the 17 miners who have just returned to San Francisco from Alaska. They were merely common miners, with no machinery and nothing except the ordinary appliances of the digger who works by hand, yet they got the above named sum from the Yukon river sands. Next season doubtless there will be something of a rush to the Yukon diggings. The difficulty of reaching them is one of the worst obstacles in the way.

If the planters of the south would raise less cotton and more peanuts, there would not now be the threats made of burning cotton gins. The demand for peanuts has doubled within the last few years, and there are not enough raised, even with 2,000,000 bushels to supply the call.

Joe Howard says there are no great American orators in public life now because there are no great themes to stir them up.

BAR TO ADJOURNMENT.

Some Successful Filibustering Done In the House.

THE SESSION MAY BE PROLONGED.

The Closing Tariff Fight in the House is Foreshadowed by a Scene In That Body. The Sergeant-at-arms Sent Out for Drunk Up a Quorum.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The first skirmish over the tariff in the fifty-third congress occurred in the house, and after a deadlock lasting until 6:30 in the evening it resulted in a draw. The senate amendment to the urgency deficiency bill providing pay for senate employes during the recess and the fifty-first congress is now the only bar to final adjournment today. The senators on the conference committee believe they will never recede, and the house seems equally determined not to accept the amendment.

A resolution to adjourn Friday was reported by Mr. Catchings of Mississippi from the committee on rules, and the previous question was joyfully and vociferously demanded. A lively debate followed, in which Representatives Terry of Arkansas and Clark of Missouri opposed any protracted recess or adjournment.

Resolved to Stay Here.

The yeas and nays on the adjournment resolution were called for and resulted in its passage by an affirmative vote of 134 to 80 in the negative.

The tieup which followed was occasioned by the fact that the house passed the adjournment resolution before Mr. Wilson put in his resolution to authorize his committee to sit during the approaching recess, and it was upon that resolution that the contest took place in the house. The adjournment resolution in the senate was referred to the committee on appropriations, so that there is good prospect of defeating adjournment.

A resolution was adopted revoking leaves of absence and instructing the sergeant-at-arms to arrest absentees.

For three hours the members of the house waited patiently for the appearance of the absentees. Meantime the deputies of the sergeant-at-arms were scouring the city with subpenas for absent members.

At 7:30 Mr. Wilson moved to dispense with further proceedings under the call. This forced the yeas and nays, resulting whether or not the Democrats had a quorum of their own present, the Democrats themselves voting against the motion. The vote resulted 9 to 130. Upon the announcement Mr. Reed arose and offered to compromise.

It being apparent, he said, that no quorum was present on the Democratic side, and if one were to be obtained the siege would be much protracted, he offered that the size of the transaction did not warrant a protracted fight, a counter proposition to amend the resolution giving the ways and means committee permission to sit during the recess so as to permit the chairman to file the tariff bill, with the understanding that the reports thereon shall be filed not less than 10 days later.

This proposition Mr. Wilson accepted, provided the word "until" before bill be changed to "by." The conference report on the urgency deficiency bill, and asked that the house insist on its disagreement to the senate amendment to pay $37,000 to senate employes for work done during the recess of the fifty-first congress. He explained that the money should be taken out of the contingent fund of the senate and that the last congress had refused to pay it. The house, by a vote of 130 to 4, decided to insist upon its position. Then at 8:20 the house adjourned.

In the Senate.

The house joint resolution allowing the Columbian museum of Chicago to accept or purchase articles for its own exhibit use free from customs duties was passed by the senate, all other portions of the resolution being struck out. A conference has been asked on the disagreeing votes.

The senate bill to grant right of way to the Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern Railroad company through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma territory was reported from the committee on Indian affairs and passed.

The house bill providing for constructing a steam revenue cutter for service on the great lakes got to exceed $175,000 was reported and passed.

The senate dismissed the cyclone relief resolution, and a strong argument was made in favor of it by Mr. Call. Mr. Stewart introduced another free coinage silver bill.

Mr. Hoar made an effort to obtain action on the bill for the relief of the sufferers from the cyclone on the sea islands and along the coast of South Carolina and Georgia. The third reading of the bill was objected to by Mr. Cockrell, and the vice president ruled that under the rules it could not have its third reading just then.

Then a motion was made by Mr. Gorman to refer the bill to the committee on appropriations.

That motion was discussed until 3 o'clock, when the bill went over without action, and the Chinese bill was taken up as unfinished business. The Chinese bill progressed without division.

The Chinese bill is the house bill as amended. It extends for six months the time under which Chinese can register under the Geary law and for the deportation of those who fail to register. It is kept found in the United States without a certificate of registration. It provides that the word laborer shall be construed as including skilled and unskilled laborers, while a Chinese merchant shall be a Chinaman detected exclusively in such mercantile pursuits and not engaged as a laborer at all.

It changes the provisions of the Geary law concerning witnesses in that instead of requiring a white witness it requires that the witness shall be other than a Chinaman. Pending the order of deportation the Chinaman is to be deported cannot be bailed. Certificates of registration are to contain the photograph of the applicant.

Tariff Bill Not Yet Reported.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—The committee on ways and means, having charge of the tariff bill, have not yet reported their measure to the house, and it is said until congress is adjourned they will probably not do so.

PARIS, Nov. 3.—A dispatch to the Herald from Berlin says: Advices from Paris state that the Rothschilds have refused to advance the $40,000,000 loan which the Russian government has been trying to negotiate with them. The refusal is said to be due to the fact that the Rothschilds have been unable to secure the co-operation of the Paris Bourse in the matter.

The Rothschilds have also refused to advance the $40,000,000 loan which the Russian government has been trying to negotiate with them. The refusal is said to be due to the fact that the Rothschilds have been unable to secure the co-operation of the Paris Bourse in the matter.

Fire Destroys Another Mill.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 3.—About 10 o'clock this morning fire was discovered in the Raritan Paper mill.

Sailed for Nassau.

The men met there this morning and after a short session adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon, when they will take up and attend to the business of the season. The company's new steamer Nassau will sail from this port on Saturday. The company's new steamer will sail from this port on Saturday. The company's new steamer will sail from this port on Saturday.

Fatal Fight Among Miners.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Nov. 3.—Peter Kelly, a miner, was shot and killed by Michael Reilly, one of the men, says he was imprisoned for 30 days because he complained of disease meat given to him to eat. After dispatching Kelly Reilly is said to have put both barrels of the gun into his own head, each holding two tons. A rope was put around a man's neck, and assisted by three of his fellow laborers he had to drag the struggling cur a distance of two miles to the stable. When the men could not perform all of the heavy task set them, they were docked a half day's pay or put in irons. Frequently prisoners were strapped face downward to a heavy log.

The men suffered from thirst. The water they were given to drink was rainwater. Often it was two months old. They had to pay for bedding, clothing and tobacco at the company store. Recently a number of the company's officers went about heavily armed to intimidate the workmen.

A petition was signed by a number of officials and presented to President Cleveland, but never received an answer.

The men at Perth Amboy allege that in 1891 they were tempted to the old Exchange Baltimore were so ill that a riot broke out. The United States warship Kearsarge was sent to Nassau to suppress it. Some of the men are in great distress and have been cared for by charitable people here. They say the Albemarle is nothing less than a slave ship, and they have consulted a local lawyer about placing an embargo upon it. President Crawford of the Third National bank in Baltimore is said to be president of the Albemarle company. The Albemarle's officers deny that any of the men were ill treated.

Some Little Fires.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 3.—The North Braddock public school building, a large brick structure in Braddock, Pa., was entirely destroyed by fire.

PARKER, Pa., Nov. 3.—Fire destroyed almost an entire business block on River avenue, including the old Old Exchange building, postoffice and the Western Union Telegraph company's building.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 3.—The stables, lumber yard and stage building belonging to Jacob F. Kail, lumber dealer, Sharpsburg, were totally destroyed by fire. Four horses were burned.

Fiendish Burglars.

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 3.—Three masked burglars entered the house of the venerable Bartholomew Crowley in Harbor Creek township. They beat and choked the old man terribly. They then poured oil over him and his bed, and threatened to burn him if he did not give them his money. The old man's daughter, Mrs. Carey, jumped from her window and escaped. This alarmed the burglars, and they left.

A Spanked Masquerader Brings Suit.

NEWTONVILLE, Mass., Nov. 3.—The young lady who masqueraded in male attire on Halloween night, and who was caught and spanked by Mr. Fred Hollis, whom she and her companions were annoying, has caused the matter to be brought to the courts. George S. Eddy, the farmer in question, has been arrested, charged with assault.

A Heartless Joker in Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—Some one inserted an advertisement in the papers stating that a number of men were wanted to work upon the new Union depot. Hundreds of idle men read it and started for the scene, and the crowd was so large that it was necessary to suspend work and send for the police to disperse the gathering.

ABOUT THAT SEA DUEL.

The Cruiser Chicago Did Not Get Interned With Her.

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD BRAZIL.

What They Think at Washington Concerning the Sinking Naval Duel off Rocky Neck. The Fleets of President Peixoto and the Insurgent Navies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—A new feature of the Brazilian situation relating to engagements between the fleets of President Peixoto's agents of American ships for use by Brazil in her civil troubles has been called to the attention of the state and navy departments. The fact has its basis in the statements that have been printed in the newspapers that the cruiser Nictheroy, New York, and other vessels of the New York navy yard, would act as a convoy to the American vessels purchased by Brazil to go as the three mile limit off the Brazilian shore, or to protect Brazilian territory, where they could be turned over to the government of Brazil, the manifest purpose being to thwart any attempt that might be made by Admiral Mello, commanding the insurgent fleet, to destroy the vessels before they reach Brazilian waters.

The Cruiser Will Take No Part.

Still another feature of the case has been suggested to the officials—viz, that the New York is to convoy the Brazilian fleet while the latter discharges the American flag ensign which it now carries. Should it be that the vessels are to be turned over to the existing recognized government,

A proposition was referred to a number of officials of the navy department. They met the matter very lightly and scout the probability or even the possibility of any such events transpiring. Their position is based on the cardinal principle, it is asserted, which this government wants to have maintained and adhered to in case of misinterference with affairs of other nations.

To order the cruiser to be used for either of the purposes stated would be in direct contravention to this principle, and would be an unanswerable case to the nations of the world that this republic had espoused the cause of Brazil and was arraigned on the side of the insurgents in their revolt against the insurgent party, which it has not even recognized as belligerent. To allow the New York to convoy the vessels to Brazil would be equivalent, it is said, to one of the United States cruisers now in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro acting as an escort to an unarmed long Brazilian government vessel which desired to pass one of the forts now in the hands of the insurgents. Supposing, however, the probability of such actions, the commercial ships, it is insisted, would not be any safer when they reached Brazilian waters with the cruiser than they would be without her, for they would be compelled to attack just the same as if they were on the open seas, and no good result would be obtained.

Arms May Be Sold, Though.

Naval officers say they cannot recall any instance when action and interference, as this would be, has ever been resorted to on the part of this government, and they pronounce the proposition to be simply inoperative and without any foundation in fact. The government must not, they insist, interfere in the domestic affairs of Brazil or any other country any further than to protect its own citizens and see that they do not suffer as a result of internal difficulties.

It must be borne in mind, however, that there is nothing to prevent the shipment of arms and ammunition to Brazilian ports or to any other country by vessels flying the American flag.

In fact, the government does not restrict but rather encourages the sale of arms and ammunition to foreign powers, not with any desire, however, to meddle with their affairs or to help any contending party, but merely for the purpose of building up American trade.

But the line is emphatically drawn, and the government will promptly institute inquiries should it be led to believe that any vessels have been fitted out within this country for the use of any insurgent or revolutionary party. This was forcibly demonstrated in the case of the steamer Laurada, which was fitted out on the Pacific coast with arms and ammunition for the insurgent party in Chili two years ago, but which was seized by the United States and handed by a [illegible] the United States and her cargo forfeited.

Kept in Prison by His Brother.

BOSTON, Nov. 3.—William Tucker walked out of the Charlestown state prison a free man after serving three and a half years sentence for larceny. His brother recently filed a confession, which stated that William was in no way connected with the crime, and Governor Russell granted him a pardon.

CLARENCE KING INSANE.

The Eminent Geologist Confined In an Insane Asylum.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Mr. Clarence King, who was once director of the United States geological survey, and who is a member of the Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Union League, Century and Tuxedo clubs, has been committed to an insane asylum.

Mr. King's home is in Newport, but for several weeks he has been living at the Union League club and at the house of his parents in this city. It could not be learned to which asylum he had been committed, but in all probability it is Bloomingdale.

Mr. King was born in Newport, R. I., Jan. 6, 1842, and is a descendant of Daniel King, who settled in Lynn, Mass., in 1647, and was one of the largest landholders of his day. Mr. King graduated at the Yale Sheffield Scientific school in 1862, and in the following year crossed the continent on horseback from the Missouri river to California, where he became a member of the geological survey of that state. He continued that work until 1868, making a careful study of the gold belt of the Sierra mountains. It was through his discoveries in that region that the age of the gold bearing rocks was determined.

COUNTERFEITERS IN A CAVE.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Nov. 3.—A gang of counterfeiters were surprised in the Laurel Hill mountains, about 20 miles from Waterford. They were discovered by three hunters, who saw three men coming out of an old cave, each carrying a satchel. The hunters called to them, but they refused to stop and ran into the mountains in the direction of New Florence. The hunters opened fire on them, which the counterfeiters returned, but none of the shots took effect.

The hunters then concluded to explore the cave and were astonished to find a full kit of counterfeiters' tools, such as molds, etc., also about 100 pounds of wool, a keg of whisky, several crocks of honey, bedclothing, etc. They at once returned to Waterford and aroused the neighborhood, and several of the people started in hot pursuit.

For several months past counterfeit money has been in circulation all through that section. The people are greatly excited.

A VITAL DECISION.

It Will Affect Illegal Registration Cases All Over New York.

ALBANY, Nov. 3.—A remarkable decision in an illegal registration case was made by County Judge Clute here and is likely to affect registration all over the state unless the higher courts declare it void. He decided that the prosecution would have to prove that each and every person charged with registering illegally was not a soldier, sailor, pauper or criminal.

His quoted section 3 of article 2 of the constitution, which says: "No person shall lose a residence by reason of his absence while employed in the service of the United States, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this state or of the United States or of the high seas, nor while a student of any seminary of learning, nor while kept at any almshouse or other asylum at public expense, nor while confined in any public prison."

The district attorney will strike no name from the lists unless proof is full and complete that no such parties exist and that they have no right to vote."

Rebellious Princeton Students.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 3.—Trouble was caused among the students by the rule adopted by the faculty in regard to the Thanksgiving day holiday. It requires that all students must register in the college before midnight on Nov. 30. The idea is to prevent the collegians from skulking having in New York city after the football game.

The Bridegroom Hooked Out.

ALBANY, Nov. 3.—In the village of Hadley, Saratoga county, at least 100 guests gathered to see the nuptials of Miss Lois Roberts and William Slocum, but the groom came not. Nothing of his whereabouts is known. A letter to the bride came later, stating that he could not marry her. The girl is crazy with grief.

THIRTY OR MORE LOST.

The Burning of the City of Alexandria at Sea.

MANY SEEN TO JUMP OVERBOARD.

There Was an Explosion In the Steamer's Hold, and the Flames Were Fed by Four Hundred Hogsheads of Rum—Survivors Reach Havana.

HAVANA, Nov. 3.—The steamship City of Alexandria, belonging to the New York and China Mail Steamship company, from Havana and Matanzas for New York, has been burned at sea.

A small boat, in which were the second officer and 11 other persons from the City of Alexandria, entered the harbor here and reported the loss of the steamship. They state that an explosion occurred on board the steamship and that shortly after the explosion she was burning fiercely. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

The fire gained such headway that Captain Holman saw it would be impossible to save the vessel, and orders were given to abandon the ship. The steamship had 400 hogsheads of rum on board, and this, when it caught fire, caused immense masses of flames to ascend from the hatchways, the hatches having been blown off. The scene of the burning of the steamship was only 25 miles from Havana.

Ordered to Abandon Ship.

At first there was great excitement aboard, but the officers soon succeeded in restoring order. As soon as the fire alarm was sounded the stewards went to their fire stations, and the stewards began to carry provisions to the boats. There was comparatively little smoke running, and not much confusion. The boats in getting away the boats when the bell forward tolled the signal, "Abandon the ship." The officers in command of the several boats—the captain, first officer, purser—had not embarked—had little fear of not being able to reach this port or some other place along the coast.

In the first moment of terror several men, it is said, made a headlong plunge into the sea. Those who arrived here in the small boat said that 40 had been drowned, many of them through the upsetting of a boat. Later reports, however, show that none of the small boats upset and that many of the persons at first reported as lost reached Bermuda in safety. The number of the drowned is now believed to be 24 or 25. Among the lost were Herr Leibinger, a cabin passenger, whose home is in Germany, and several Cuban stevedores.

Nineteen Were Saved.

When the news of the disaster reached here, several tugs were sent to the burning steamer to give whatever assistance they could.

Two of the tugs returned in the afternoon, bringing 19 survivors from the wreck.

The names of those [illegible] have been saved from the City of Alexandria are: Captain Holman, Owen McGee, second assistant engineer; R. J. Jones, third assistant engineer; John Donahue, A. Williams, O. Ward, J. Ward, J. Rice, M. Okoy, E. Enasco, Emenehil Drumstaff, F. Antonio, J. Poland, J. W. Reid, J. Redmond, William Field, second officer; Andrew Neilson, Charles Anderson, Nicholas Clarkson, chief cook; Michael Haven, Francis McNamara, Michael Ryder, William Detenbark, W. Harvey, F. Peterson, W. Wallace and C. Ericson, carpenter.

GOLD LINED CHICKENS.

How a Montana Farmer Is Now Getting Rich.

BUTTE CITY, Mon., Nov. 3.—J. A. McConville, who lives near here, killed one of his chickens, and on cleaning it found some small gold nuggets in the crop and gizzard. Having about 30 more chickens on hand, he began killing and examining them.

In each of them he found nuggets, the total amount gathered from the 31 being $387.55, an average of $12.50 a head. The gold was sent to the State National bank here, the proceeds of the sale. Mr. McConville bought 50 more chickens and turned them out in the goldfield in the vicinity of his barnyard. Later, as an experiment, one of them was killed, and $2.80 in gold was taken from it. McConville expects to be a millionaire if the chickens hold out.

Riotous Italian Laborers.

GENESEO, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Trouble at Hemlock Lake, Livingston county, originated by about 100 Italians working on the Rochester conduit going on strike on account of a reduction of wages or time, and about 200 more were to go out later. THE WONDERFUL CABLES.

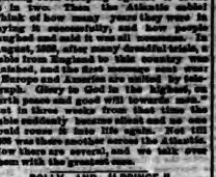
By Which We Converse Three Thousand Miles Under the Sea.

Cables are more wonderful and more fascinating than almost anything else I know. You know where the first one was laid? It was stretched across the English Channel from Dover to Cape Grisnez. This was in 1850, and two or three messages were sent back and forth, a "How are you?" and a "good night," and then the poor little cable died for a single day. And either the heat of some fishermen or some protruding rock escaping against it broke in two. Then the Atlantic was tried. Think of how many years they were in laying it successfully, and how people laughed at it until it was done! Then, in August, 1858, after many dreadful trials, a cable from England to this country was finished, and the first message sent over it through it was: "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will to men." But in three weeks from that time the cable ceased to operate, which end or one could reason it into life again. Not till 1866 was there another across the Atlantic. Now there are several, and we talk over them with the greatest ease.

POLLY AND "PRINCE."

Now have you seen our Polly!
She's dressed in green and grey;
And she has so much dinner,
There's none for me to give away.



And so she calls our doggie,
Who on the carpet lies—
"Here, quick, quick, quick! come, Prince."

Our clever Polly cries.

"Now hop, sir, hop!" she tells him,
"Sit up for it, I say;"
And if he wants the present,
You see he must obey:

He'll try to catch the morsel—
It's cake his eyes can tell;
And Poll is sure to drop it,
Because he begs so well.

Baby Language.

The matron of a well-managed foundling institution, when interrogated the other day, said: "I am almost convinced if little babies were left to themselves they would form a curious language of their own. The sounds and the simple words predominate and gestures would form half of the conversation. Have you ever studied the tones of those little cries and seen their fine, bright eyes twinkle and their shabby little fingers and dimpled hands continually move without regard to any thing else? Why, they have a language, and it suits admirably all monosyllables. Without much talk they manage to communicate with each other as to their wants. If surprised, they call it 'baby talk;' or 'infants' prattle,' but if they could be overheard by their own way of communication it would be a regular built language, and a complex one, too.—Philadelphia Press.

EARNEST LUCY STONE

A LIFE FULL OF ROMANCE AND PURPOSE AND STRUGGLE.

What She Endured to Secure an Education—Difficulties She Encountered as a Lecturer—Odd Things About Her Marriage—Gone Over to the Bright Side.

Seventy-five years ago a baby girl was born in West Brookfield, Mass., and when they told the mother she sighed and said: "I am sorry the baby is a girl. A woman's life is so hard." But the child grew and flourished despite the unfriendly air of the sex, and they named her Lucy—Lucy Stone. A short time ago Lucy Stone died in the happy consciousness that woman's life was easier and broader, her opportunities greater and her outlook brighter, because the baby born so many years ago was a woman child, great of heart and brain, and had devoted her time and talents to the advancement of her sex.

The personality of Lucy Stone was little known, and the gentler side of the woman was that she was masculine in appearance, of strident voice, assertive manners and pronounced eccentricity in dress. To those who had seen the small, gentle lady with the soft white cap over the snowy hair, the low, gentle voice, the simple, unassuming manner, this champion of all things strong minded in womanhood seemed the embodiment of perfect peace.

When Lucy Stone was a tiny maid, she read to the little, "My desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." At first she wanted to die. Then she made up her mind to go to college, study Greek and Hebrew, read the Bible and see for herself whether the texts were rightly translated.

She did go to college, despite the fact that her father, who had helped his son through college, called her crazy and would have nothing to do with the project. She picked berries and chestnuts and sold them to buy books. She taught school, studying during the time and saving her money to the great end. Work as she would, she was 25 before she could accumulate sufficient means to take her to Oberlin, the only college that would receive her. She crossed Lake Erie as a deck passenger to save her money and slept at night on a pile of grain sacks in the open air.

At Oberlin she also did housework for 3 cents an hour, cooked her food in her room and lived on 50 cents a week. She had only one new dress, and that a cheap print, during the college course. She graduated with honors, losing neither her health nor herself respect, and was appointed to write a commencement essay. Perhaps nothing more suggestive of a woman's progress can be told than this fact, that because it was considered unwomanly for a woman to appear on the platform and read her own work, she declined to write the essay rather than consent to have a professor read it for her.

Lucy Stone began her public work lecturing for the abolition party, but presently she mixed the subject dearest to her heart—that of equal rights for men and women—so much with that of freedom for the slave that the abolitionist leaders remonstrated with her.

"I cannot help it," she answered. "I was a woman before I was an abolitionist, and I must speak for women."

When she began to labor for woman's cause, there were no suffrage associations in existence and she had no backing. She traveled through the country, putting up her own handbills with tacks, and, woman fashion, using a stone for a hammer. Sometimes the boys followed her to tear down the bills, but she usually won them over to leave the bills unharmed. Once, when she was speaking at an anti-slavery meeting, the boys broke out the panes of glass and turned the hose on her. She put on her shawl and calmly went on with her speech.

At another time a mob broke up the meeting, and roughs climbed upon the platform. Every one fled but Lucy Stone. As the flying speakers ran they asked her what she was going to do. "I am going to ask this gentleman," she said, turning to the leader of the mob, "to protect me." He did it. She went through the mob unharmed, her hand on his arm.

Lucy Stone did not mean to marry, but, like ordinary women, she fell in love, and making him promise to devote his life not to herself, but to her cause, she married Henry B. Blackwell. They drove 20 miles to find a minister so unorthodox as to be willing to marry them and leave out the word "obey." At the time of their marriage they published a joint protest against the injustice of the laws which gave the husband control of the wife's property, earnings, children and person. This protest made a great stir at the time and had much to do with getting the laws amended.

Lucy Stone looked upon the use of a woman's name at marriage as a symbol of the loss of her legal personality and personal rights, and with the full consent of her husband, with whom her relations were always peculiarly happy, retained her maiden name and was known as Lucy Stone. Her one daughter is called Alice Stone Blackwell.

Her later years have been devoted to work in the American Woman's Suffrage association, of which she and William Lloyd Garrison and Julia Ward Howe were the founders, and in the editorship of the Boston Woman's Journal, in which Mrs. Blackstone and her daughter were associated also as editors. Her home in Dorchester was an ideal establishment, and she was the pink of New England housekeepers.

Just before her death she said, "I look forward to the other side as the brightest side, and I expect still to be busy for good things."—New York Sun.

Have a Sewing Room.

The wise housewife is she who would rather dispense with a reception room and have a sewing room than vice versa. The sewing room does not need to be large. It must not contain carpets or upholstered furniture. The floor should be stained and varnished, so that the daily brushing up may be easily accomplished. There should be books on the wall, from which the pieces-bags should hang. Several shelves are necessary, where boxes containing buttons, trimmings, flannels, ratteens and the like should be kept. A lapboard, an armless rocking chair, a dress form and a big closet for unfinished work are other necessaries. The machine should be placed in a strong light, and there should be a long mirror, in which the "hang" of a skirt may be viewed with ease.

Save Tables.

The bare table is much in evidence at informal meals, such as small luncheon parties. It is very artistic, if of fine wood in a high state of polish, when set off by a drawn work runner in the centre, and by handsome dishes and lighted candles. But it is rather noisy, and is so readily scratched and spoiled that even those who are the proud possessors of old mahogany do not answer it when they might do so.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Ally and the Lilly.

Ally was lying in her little bed with her face turned toward the window. Nurse had just left her.

"Good night! Sweet dreams!" she said. "Good night," said Ally, and then, closing her eyes, she fell to wondering where the dreams came from, and why she could not have a dream before she slept.

"I will keep awake tonight," she resolved, "and see the pretty dreams if I can." So she opened her eyes again and lay very still, watching the shadows of the vines on the white curtains and the moonlight on the floor. At last the moon itself came out from behind the great oak tree and sent a silver ladder in her with its big, good natured face. By and by a little bird was heard. He gave just one note, and Ally waited long for another, but it did not come, for he had gone directly to sleep again. Ally wondered if he also had "pretty dreams."

She grew very sleepy, but she tried hard to keep awake. The moonlight seemed like a path leading from the window to the bed, and the vines were beckoning, and the moon was smiling, and she knew that the garden was full of lovely white lilies. She had often looked down into their beautiful cups and had wished that they could tell her what the bees told them.

Presently she heard a gentle sound and felt something cool and soft against her cheek, and, oh, joy! the tallest of the lilies was standing by her side and was bending its stately head to whisper into her ear, and Ally, listening to the secret so sweetly murmured, forgot to watch for the "pretty dreams."

What the lily said to her that night she has never told, but every day she goes to the garden and bends her face down to the lovely flower. The secret is here, and she knows that the lily's cup is filled from she is sure that they come from the beautiful heart of the white lily.—Harriet Schultz.

Kittens, Dogs and Biology.

Is a kitten afraid of a dog the first time it sees one? That seems likes very simple question, and doubtless many of our young readers will be ready to answer it offhand with perfect confidence. Yet they should not be too sure, for men whose lives have been devoted to the study of animals differ widely from us on this subject.

Some of them say that kittens are terrorized even by the smell of a dog before they have seen their owners. Others assert that fear of dogs is something that kittens require a little time and experience to imbibe. And the question is being debated in scientific circles.

The question is really an important one in biology, because it is held that if kittens are born with a fear and dislike of dogs it must be an acquired instinct which has descended to them from their parents, and when the latter first opened the track of anything of that kind for mentally awakends in drawing some highly interesting inferences.

But in this case the biologists themselves are not agreed as to the facts, and we have to a chance for everybody to do a little scientific study of his own, with a good possibility that if his observations are carefully and properly made he may help to lay the foundation for a most valuable addition to the halls of knowledge.—Youth's Companion.

A Young Marksman.

The precocious American boy got in some fine work at the Columbian rifle shooting match at West Pullman, Ills., when Clarence E. Long, who is 12 years old and weighs only 62 pounds, earned one of the souvenir medals by firing 79 shots without a miss. The grow eyed Master Clarence, whose father is John E. Long of Lafayette, Ind., began to develop his talent about a year ago, learning from his father, who is a crack shot. He indulges in fancy shooting of all kinds, such as snipping small disks from his father's fingers, lighting parlor matches and cutting cards held edgewise toward him. He even shoots the pulse from his father's cigar, and such like fool tricks.

A Dog That Could Spell.

A great lover of animals has said that dogs can be almost taught to speak. Captain is the name of a clever dog, which, although he had not learned so far as this, could spell his own name and that of his owner's. The letters used in the names were cut out of painted cardboard and placed upon the ground before him, and with scarcely ever a mistake he would arrange them in the correct order. I do not know how long Captain took to learn this wonderful trick, but I do know that unlimited patience and kindness were used in the teaching. The years have robbed the luster from Captain's eyes, and his limbs are stiff, and his frame gaunt with age, but he is still living, and if he regards you as especially kind you may count him to spell his name.—Buffalo News.

Frankie's Soldiers.

Little Frankie has an uncle,
And he thinks him great and grand,
Surely never was a better
Uncle in the land.

He has sent a camp of soldiers
To him—guns and cannon, too—
Some wear light gray caps and jackets,
Some wear blue.

And his soldiers fight each battle,
Have so many gallant wars,
That already all are wearing
Ornaful scars.

One has lost an arm, another
Has no legs or has no head.
You would think so badly wounded
Can't be dead.

But they face the loaded cannon
Bold, yet, and like a sight
Even now to see how bravely
They can fight.

ALL ABOUT THE HOUSE.

HERE THE BUSY HOUSEKEEPER WILL FIND MANY HELPFUL HINTS.

The Hard Earned Experience of Others Told Here for Her Benefit — Well Tried Recipes and Much Useful Information.

When will women learn that it is distinctly vulgar to use meat, gatechoult or any heavy scent. A delicate whiff of violet or heliotrope is on the contrary, very agreeable. Sachets are the best means of imparting the faint odor which alone is considered desirable. These should be made of various sizes—tiny ones for the inside of gloves, larger ones to line the drawers of bureaus or dressing tablets, flat ones to baste into dresses, etc. One lady who always adores violets (just a faint suggestion—never too much) says that she keeps about 100 satchets of various kinds in use. These are filled about twice a year with orris and violet powder.

A Home Made Work Table.

ANY WOMAN CAN MAKE IT.

With three pine planks of equal size and a couple of old fishing rods any young woman may make for herself a most comfortable and pretty work table, says the New York Tribune.

The shelves are covered with chintz and edged with a ruffle, and four equal lengths of the bamboo form the supports. By making a hole in each corner of the shelf with a very small auger it can be made perfectly firm by the means of copper wire, which can be covered with the ruffle. The shelf should be slightly fitted to the round stick at each corner. Put castors on the bottom points of the bamboo and small screw hats, such as come for iron beds, at the top; or if they are too large, some little brass ornament may easily be found for a finish.

ORANGES ARE IN SEASON.

The season of the Valencia orange calls attention again to all dishes flavored with the orange. When the genuine Valencia orange cannot be obtained, nearly any Mediterranean orange will serve the same purpose, and we may be thankful that these oranges may be obtained in almost any part of the country and at reasonable low rates.

One of the most delightful desserts we have, according to the N. Y. Tribune, is a steamed custard flavored with orange. Beat the yolks of four eggs into four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Add the grated rind of one orange, using only the yellow part, and a half saltspoonful of salt. Add three cups of rich milk which has been brought to the boiling point. Pour it on slowly to prevent the eggs curdling, beating all the time. When the eggs and milk are thoroughly mixed fill six half-pint custard cups with them, set them over a steamer set over a pot of water which is boiling hard. Replace the cover on the steamer and let the custards cook in this way for ten minutes.

Meantime, beat the whites of the four eggs to a stiff meringue, adding four tablespoonfuls of sugar and the juice of half the orange. Heap a little of this meringue on each of the custard cups, and set them in the oven in a pan of boiling water for about ten minutes for the meringue to harden.

For Tender Feet.

For tender feet that ache from weariness, a bath of two quarts of cold water, one tablespoonful of borax and two tablespoonfuls of ammonia added to be efficacious. Bathe the feet for about ten minutes in this bath, throwing the water upward over the ankles. Dry well with a crash towel and the tired feeling will be gone. This will be a good thing to remember when the world's fair is in progress, as the fatigue of standing the time of sight-seeing will doubtless cause aching of the feet.

Onions for Nervousness.

Onions are valuable in nervous diseases, being soothing to the nerves; while their sleep-inviting qualities are amply attested by the drowsiness felt after dinner when these have composed any considerable part of that meal. Persons troubled with insomnia would do well to allow onions to form in some way a portion of the last meal of the day, or to try eating a piece of raw onion upon retiring.

Corn Oysters.

Add to a can of corn, slightly chopped, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls salt, a small cup of milk, a liberal dust of pepper, a pinch of salt and just flour enough to bind. Drop from a tablespoon into boiling fat, and fry quickly into a golden brown, draining thoroughly, and transferring to a hot dish. But at once; the resemblance to genuine fried oysters is very marked.

The Best Morning Tonic.

Where there is no bath tub in the house a sponge bath of cold water taken every morning is almost as valuable a tonic as immersion in a cold bath. A small portion of the body should be sponged off and dried with a friction towel at a time and there should be as little exposure to the air as possible.

A Supper Dish.

Boil six eggs and add a tablespoonful of minced young onions and one of parsley, two cupfuls of mashed potatoes, a pinch of cheese and salt and pepper to taste. Melt a little butter in a frying pan, turn in the mixture and fry lightly, stirring meanwhile. Take from the fire while mixture is soft.

At the Table.

"This tea is weak as water," growled the irritable boarder.

"I'll see that you hold up as many stomachs," retorted the boarder who was in love with the landlady.—Harper's Bazar.

Communicating Cholera.

You may breathe cholera germs into your lungs, and they will have no effect on you. They may even be in your clothing and your hair, and you will not take the scourge. But let them be in the food you eat or the water, milk, coffee or beer you drink and pass into your stomach, then it is that the cholera contagion catches you. "Cholera must be eaten. It cannot be absorbed or breathed," reports Dr. Kempster. He is the United States government agent who was appointed to investigate the whole subject of cholera in Europe, Asia and America. The disease always starts in British India, is brought westward by pilgrims returning from Mecca, and it always spreads over Europe through three great routes—northern, central or through the Mediterranean. By the latter route it reached France this summer.

The obvious remedy is strict quarantine and sanitation. There is scarcely a doubt that the rigid precautions in both these directions have kept the plague out of America this summer and prevented its going inland last fall. Absolute cleanliness and purity of food and drink are required. The germs travel upon the clothing and hands, upon articles of merchandise and in the air. Once they enter the human stomach there is a case of cholera.

Be saving, but don't be too saving.

THOMAS B. ADAMS, Esq., Summit, N. J.

DEAR SIR—I have your favor stating that a story is being circulated in Summit to the effect that I drew the resolutions which were passed by the Township Committee of Linden Township in August last granting a license to the Linden race track, and that these resolutions were devised at a meeting held in the Roselle Casino, at which a member of the Township Committee, myself and several adherents of the race track were present. You very properly asked me if there is any truth in this story, and I unhesitatingly answer that there is not. I did not draw the resolutions and I did not meet and devise them with any member of the Township Committee or with any adherent of the race tracks either at the Roselle Casino or elsewhere. The resolutions were first shown to me as attorney of the Township on the day they were passed. I advised against their passage and did what I could to prevent it. Finding that such passage could not be prevented I particularly urged that the resolutions be made subject to revocation at any time, and that a hearing be given to the public before action taken.

I have also heard from other sources that stories are being circulated to the effect that I am a stockholder in one or both of the race tracks in this county, and that I am attorney for at least one of them. Also that when I was in the Assembly three years ago I voted for a race track bill. Perhaps it is well that these stories should also be set at rest. When I was in the Assembly a bill was introduced taxing racing associations a percentage of their gross receipts, and limiting the period during which they were permitted to race. The bill was a revenue measure pure and simple, and I voted for it as such. It neither legalized nor countenanced book-making, pool-selling or any other form of gambling. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate. There a section was added legalizing pool-selling and bookmaking at the races. In this form it was returned to the Assembly, and as amended I not only voted against it but also worked and spoke against it.

As to the other rumors it is enough to say that I am not now nor have I ever been either counsel for or a stockholder in the race tracks referred to or either of them or any other.

Yours truly,

FOSTER M. VOORHEES.

A Card From Ex-Senator Thompson —An Unequivocal Declaration.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE EVENING NEWS:—I wish to correct a misapprehension that seems to exist in reference to my position upon the race track question. I expressed myself fully and honestly before the convention that nominated me when I said "that I would work and vote for the repeal of the obnoxious race track legislation of last winter." The effort to pervert my record has been fully answered in a letter which I published by me fully acquainted with the facts and I further unhesitatingly say that I have not now nor ever will be in favor of any legislation that would tend to legalize pool-selling or gambling in any form. Yours truly,

L. A. THOMPSON.

A Card from Holy Cross Choir.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In view of the fact that the labors of the campaign of misrepresentation, now being carried on against the rector of Holy Cross church, has taken the form of an imputation upon our honor, we beg that you will let us call the lie. It has been stated that our rector has importuned us to become subscribers to the church in the extent of five or ten cents a month, in order that we may be rendered eligible to vote in his behalf at the Easter parish election. Inasmuch as a majority of us are already eligible by reason of age and standing as regular communicants, the contradiction of a story so absurd would be unnecessary were it not that many persons, ignorant of the church laws, are likely to be misled. Our rector has, of course, never approached us on any such fool's errand, knowing full well that our loyal votes will be cast on the side of right. Thanking you for the courtesy of publication,

THE MEN OF HOLY CROSS CHOIR.

—To-morrow evening at the Park avenue Baptist church will be Jr. O. U. A. M. services. Franklin and Somerset Councils of Plainfield, and delegations from Friendship Council from New Market, and Wm. G. Heiter Council, of Dunellen, will attend in a body. The sermon will be a course on "America for American Institutions and Principles."

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

Better Police Protection to be Afforded the Borough. — Mr. Fountain Reports that 74 Lamps Have Been Broken Within a Short Time.—$10 Reward Offered for the Arrest of the Person or Persons Breaking Street Lamps. — Other Business.

The Borough Council held its regular November meeting last night. Present—Mayor Saunders, and Councilmen Edwards, Fountain, Bowell and Needham. Absent—Councilmen Neal.

Messrs. Benjamin Day, Samuel Townsend and others, in a communication, asked for better police protection, and requested Council to place two marshals on duty the entire night. The communication was received and filed.

A communication was read from Mr. Thomas S. Stiner, calling the Council's attention to the fact that on Willow avenue and West End avenue more lights are needed. The letter stated that West End avenue is the most dangerous in the borough, lined as it is with hedges on both sides, and that it is unsafe for persons to walk through there at night, under the present circumstances. The matter was referred to the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps.

The Fidelity and Deposit Company made application to the borough for the vacation of Fairview avenue, which had been laid out in 1890, across the property then belonging to William E. March and William Allen, but now owned by that company. Said street had never been opened by the borough and the company now want a release, in order to lay out two new streets across the property. The application was received and filed.

The following claims were received and ordered paid:

Frank Schuck	$5 65
John Mackey	2 50

Mayor Saunders appointed Mr. Frank Currie to fill the vacancy on the Board of Health caused by the death of Mr. Currie. The appointment was confirmed by the Council.

Mr. Fountain, of the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee, reported that the Committee to which the Borough Committee had placed a fire hydrant on Girard avenue, and recommended that it be added to the number of hydrants to be paid for by the borough. He also reported that he had investigated the complaint of the Edison Electric Light Company about their lamps being continually broken, and found that 74 lamps had been broken recently in different parts of the borough. On Greenbrook road, he said, every other lamp had been broken. The lamps are operated by gas, and when every other one was broken that put them all out.

A resolution, offered by Mr. Fountain, was adopted, offering a reward of $10 for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who were breaking the street lamps.

At the last meeting a petition was presented by Mr. Stites asking the Council to put a light on Rose road. The matter was referred to the committee of which Mr. Fountain is chairman. Last night Mr. Fountain stated that he had investigated the matter and found that there were about ten lights needed. Ten lights would cost the borough about $100 a year. Of the petitioners he had found that Mr. Cummings paid $2 50 light tax, Mrs. Hoagland paid $1 50, Mr. Stites nothing, so that if the lights were placed on Rose road it would be quite an expense to the borough.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a Committee of Council to prepare, and the Clerk to give such notice, as is required by law, of the application of the persons in accordance with the request of the Fidelity and Deposit Company.

Mr. Fountain also recommended that new lights be placed as follows: Two on Willow avenue, two on West End avenue, and one on Rose road.

It was resolved that two marshals be employed to do duty the entire night, under the direction of Marshal Hansbrough, and that their salary be not more than $2 per night. Mr. Needham stated that there was enough money in the borough fund to pay the extra expense, and that the men would be kept on duty all Winter.

Mr. Stiles of Summit avenue asked that Council would have a gate to be placed on the road bed of Summit avenue. It had been left standing up and left in bad condition. Mr. Reed was absent, but Marshal Hansbrough was instructed to inform him that complaint had been made of the condition of that street.

Mayor Saunders appointed Mr. Fountain on the Levee, Ordinance and Election, and the Licenses and Markets Committees.

Council adjourned to meet Nov. 17.

In the City Court.

The following cases were disposed of by City Judge Coddington this morning:

Fred. Williball, charged with trespassing on the railroad, was found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of $5 or spend 30 days in the county jail.

Joseph Doyle, charged with being disorderly, fined $10.

Hugh Laine, drunk, was fined $5.

The following persons were arraigned for trespassing on the railroad: Mary Bell, discharged; Kate Kiely, discharged; Kittie Kiely, sentence suspended; Dennis Cain, fined $10; Kitty Brown, sentence suspended; Mary Sitton, sentence suspended; John Sitton, sentence suspended; Ellen Bergen, fined $10.

VOTERS ASSEMBLING

IN ST. MARY'S HALL TO MEET THE CANDIDATES.

Foster M. Voorhees, Charles M. Codding and George Kyte Present and Most Cordially Received.—They Declare Themselves against Race Tracks.

SUCH a meeting as was held in St. Mary's Hall, Sixth street, last night is a credit to the Fourth Ward, and must be productive of good among the voters.

The object of the meeting was to meet the anti-race candidates of Union county—Foster M. Voorhees for Senator; Charles M. Codding for Assembly; and George Kyte for Sheriff.

They happen to be all Republicans, but the meeting was well attended, was largely composed of men generally regarded as Democrats.

The candidates are endorsed by the Citizens' Anti Race Track League, which was organized by leading Democrats of Union County.

The Fourth Ward is ably represented in Common Council by Councilman Weber, and he, its recognized representative citizen, called the meeting to order, while, as courtesy to another ward (the Third) one of its prominent citizens, Councilman Frank E. Marsh, was chosen chairman.

Councilman Millington, Justice Vincent W. Nash, Charles E. Corwin, Roger F. Murray, George Demerest and H. W. Force were elected Vice Presidents, and Mr. Gray Secretary.

At intervals a brass band furnished music and Mr. Marsh and Mr. Corwin occupied the time pending the arrival of the candidates by remarks which were well received. Those were substantially in line with what is being reiterated over and over again—on the platform and in the newspapers—against the race-track evil, which last year overwhelmed the State in disgrace by the laws enacted to protect race-track gamblers and keepers at disorderly houses, instead of to protect the people who are sufferers by these evils.

The candidates had to attend a mass meeting in Rahway last night, where they were most heartily received, but necessarily detained, so that it was necessarily late—some what after ten o'clock—before they reached Plainfield. To get here even as soon as they did it was necessary to drive across from Rahway to Elizabeth and take the train. They arrived in the hall heated and tired, but the genuine cordiality of the welcome they were given seemed to refresh them.

Each was introduced and made a few remarks, the effect of which was shown both in the way the audience warmed around and shook hands with them after the meeting.

Cigars and clam chowder were furnished to the voters by a committee and the whole affair passed off very pleasantly. The young ladies of the Fourth years to have been largely due to Mr. William T. Classon, a citizen of the Ward. It must, assisted, do good.

PERSONAL.

Mr. William White died this morning at his home on Willow avenue.

Miss Cecilia Staats, Dunellen's Postmistress, expects to go on an extended tour in a few weeks.

Bishop Ferguson, missionary bishop to Africa, will be present at the Church of the Holy Cross, Plainfield, on Sunday, and will speak concerning his work in Africa. The Bishop is a colored man and a graduate of Oxford, England.

Mrs. Catherine Quish died at her home on South Second street, yesterday morning, of cancer. She was 56 years of age. Mrs. Quish leaves a husband and children, four of whom are still living. The oldest aged ten years. Mr. Quish is a workman in Potter's.

The fair of the Board of Managers of Muhlenberg Hospital was one of the prettiest affairs of the kind ever held in this city. The Casino was just the place for such an affair to be held, and a more suitable place could not have been selected. The floral display was perfect, all the tables were given a dance at the closing night.

Mr. George B. Crevelling, father of Mrs. J. P. Laire of East Fifth street, died at his home in Cedar Hall, Staten Island, on Wednesday last night. He was 72 years old. Mr. Crevelling had been stricken with paralysis about a year ago, from which he never entirely recovered. On Thursday afternoon he was apparently as well as he was sitting in the house, he suddenly fell forward with another attack of paralysis. He never regained consciousness, and remained in that condition until Friday evening, when he passed away. Deceased was born in Bloomsbury. He lived in Annandale for about seven years, and after leaving there spent in the coal and lumber business and was a successful and prosperous merchant. A few years ago a serve him. For the past year he had lived with his daughter, Mrs. Laire. Four children survive him. His wife died about twenty years ago. The children are Mrs. J. P. Laire, Plainfield; Mrs. Caroline Farr, Staten Island; Mrs. D. Hoffman of Annandale; and Mrs. George H. Schenck, Bloomfield. The funeral services will be held Tuesday, Nov. 7, at Annandale.

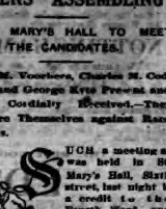
A Narrow Escape.

As Mr. John H. Tier, Jr., was delivering coal on North Second street, about nine o'clock this afternoon, a live electric light wire broke and fell just in front of him. It was a narrow escape.

AN ODD MEETING

BETWEEN FATHER AND SON AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Mr. Wm. Sandford of this City Unexpectedly Meets His Son, Charles from New Mexico, at the Great Exposition.—The Young Man's Bright Career.



RECENTLY Mr. William Sandford of East Front street was "doing" the World's Fair with his wife and daughter, Miss May. While in line before one of the ticket offices his arm was suddenly grasped by "Charley," who had arrived in Chicago but a short time before from New Mexico, where he now lives. The odd meeting so entirely unexpected, of course added much pleasure to the trip, and all went from the "White City" to St. Paul, Minn. where they visited Mr. Sandford's other son, "Will," who has settled down in that Western city and become a prosperous man. Both "the boys" were well known and very popular in this city, and were active members of the Plainfield Bicycle Club in its infancy. "Charley" was always fond of traveling about the country and has spent the past five or six years in the West, locating for awhile in the various States. About a year ago he was in the State of Washington where he owns 160 acres of fertile land. At present he is in Clapham, Mora County, New Mexico, and expects soon to start for Alaska where he may decide to locate.

"Charley" is "as brown as a well-browned berry," and as good natured as ever. He is very popular with the people of New Mexico for many miles about his ranch, and takes part in all their festivities.

He is remembered by his former associates in this city as a quiet but very plucky young man and could never be tired out on the bicycle "runs"—and they were runs in those days of the high wheels and bad roads, so different from the wheels and roads of the present. There is a very interesting story told of a recent brave act of his, where, at the risk of his own life, he saved some New Mexico lands from inundation.

The gate of a large reservoir had somehow opened and let forth a great rush of water. "Charley" was the only one in a position to close it. Many ranchmen who dared wade into the torrent and by main strength close the gate, thereby saving their property, and probably life. They are always a warm feeling for him in the hearts of his Plainfield friends.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The British in Africa.

When the disturbance in British South Africa is settled, it is quite possible that a new map of that region will be needed. At present the English have a commercial protectorate over what is called British Zambesia, the latest territory into which they have pushed their trading posts. The region lies on both sides of the great Zambesi river, which flows through it from west to east. In this land the Matabele, ruled over by King Lobengula, are the most powerful and warlike tribe and terrorize the Mashonas, who are the especial friends of the British. In Zambesia the South African Trading company is chartered by the British government and practically is supposed to keep order among the tribes with one hand while it gathers wealth for itself with the other.

The South African chartered company is a commercial organization invested with just political power enough to make itself respected among the natives. Its head is Hon. Cecil Rhodes, who bears the odd title of prime minister and chairman of the British South African company, and lives at Fort Salisbury, to which there is a road from the coast. The end of this condition of things is probably plain to the mind of every Englishman, and it is that Great Britain is to annex bodily the whole of Zambesia. But the Hon. Cecil Rhodes appears to be proceeding a little too rapidly with the plan to suit the Marquis of Ripon, British colonial secretary of state. There was a pretext on the part of the Matabele that the Mashonas had committed depredations on them. In revenge they made savage war on the Mashonas, who fled for their lives to the South African Trading company. Then Hon. Cecil Rhodes called for help from the home government.

Help was sent, but the control of Zambesian affairs was taken out of the hands of the South African company and given to Sir Henry Loch, governor of the colony of the Cape of Good Hope. One conclusion to be drawn from this is that the English government will take the control of Zambesia directly into its own hands. Another is that in the judgment of the home government Hon. Cecil Rhodes was proceeding a little too aggressively. At any rate, it is certain that the ignorant Matabele who so rashly defied the power of the British government will be wiped out as a disturbing force in Zambesian politics, and that is enough to know.

Meantime, up in Uganda, in the interior of eastern Africa, the system of territorial assimilation so well known as Victoria Nyanza, directly under the equator. When Stanley first visited Uganda, it was a powerful African kingdom; but, like all savage countries, it began to dwindle in population and importance as soon as its people became acquainted with the white man.

Uganda is under the politico commercial control of the East African Chartered Trading company. The British resident governor here is Captain McDonald. The British system has advanced a step further in Uganda than in Zambesia. The correspondent of the London Times writes very frankly about Sir Gerald Portal's arrangements, "understates with a view to paving the way for a future administration, in the event of the ultimate occupancy of the country." The British authorities are at present planting colonies of Soudanese in King Mwanga's beloved Uganda. Sir Gerald Portal, the imperial commissioner to adjust matters in Uganda, has had the most difficulty on account of religion in dividing the land. There was a hot quarrel between the Catholics and Protestants about the size of the slices of country which each should get. Sir Gerald finally settled the question by giving one quarter of Uganda theologically to the Catholics, the rest to the Protestants.

The latest electric light invention seems so marvelous that one is inclined to think the story of it is a fake. If it is feasible, however, then the electric light companies already occupying the field with their enormous machinery plants will find their occupation gone. If there is anything in the new invention, therefore, we may expect some movement on the part of the electric light companies either to buy it up or fight it down. If it is a success, then every household can have its own apparatus for heating, lighting and cooking at very small expense. Dr. Franz Fullner of Chicago claims to have invented what he calls the "primary cell" electric system. Within a cell 5 inches high, 3 inches across, the doctor puts a fine filament three sixty-fourths of an inch thick, nearly encircling the cell. The center of the cell contains a small, hollow, whitish core. The cell itself is filled with a dark liquid whose composition is the inventor's secret. He declares, however, that the whole arrangement is very cheap—cheaper than any material for lighting yet known. The primary cell furnishes the current for each electric lamp. Wires from the cell conduct the current where it is wanted, as in ordinary electric lighting. The only care ever required is that the star filament shall be renewed periodically. [illegible] a year.

CONGRESS TAKES WINGS

After Hasty Adjournment Members Hurry Away.

PRESIDENT WILL GO SHOOTING

The Extraordinary Session Finishes the Work It Was Called to Do, but Leaves Many Important Measures in an Undecided State.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The session of the senate just closed will be long memorable, for the extraordinary labor it has performed for the repeal of the purchasing clause of the silver purchasing act of 1890 known as the Sherman law. The extraordinary session was called for the purpose of accomplishing this repeal, and the other work so completely overshadowed it incidental. That bill reached the senate after passing the house on the 28th of August and was not passed by the senate until the 30th of October. How for these two months the senate contended over the issue involved, but at last brought the bill through and passed it by a safe majority, is all a matter of record familiar to the public.

This bill, provides in effect, for the passage of the 50 cent and coinage of silver and may be said to mark a revolution in the financial history of the country. While the result is clear that it was the house bill which became a law, that is only technically true, as the senate substituted a measure of its own, and the house accepted this substitute.

The bill of next greatest importance to the repeal bill which has passed both houses of congress and which extending the time in which Chinese laborers can register under the Chinese act known as the Geary law. Much interest attaches to the bill providing for a bridge across the Hudson at New York. This bill passed both houses.

Only Three Bills Became Laws.

Of the 1,132 bills which have been introduced in the house during the session only 12 have passed that body, and of these only three have passed the house of representatives, received the president's signature and become laws. Of the new laws originating in the senate, one is in aid of the Mirwinter International exposition to be held in San Francisco, another grants certain settlers in Oklahoma territory the right to commute their homestead entries, and the third relates to clerks in the office of the commissioners of the District of Columbia.

The other bills which have passed the senate are as follows:

Making appropriations for the purchase of ground in Washington for a building to be used as a hall of records; granting to California 5 per cent of the net proceeds of the cash sales of public lands in that state; to extend the time for making final payments on entries under the desert land act; authorizing certain Cherokee allottees or claimants to purchase certain tracts held and claimed by them; to donate to the county of Kingsbury, Dakota, certain bridges on the abandoned Fort Lacanie military reservation; to authorize the Chattanooga Western Railway company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee river near Chattanooga; to grant the right of way to the Kansas, Oklahoma Central and Southwestern Railway company through the Indian Territory and Oklahoma territory; to aid the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, Colorado and North Dakota to support schools of mines; for the relief of W. H. Ward.

The senate has in addition to those bills of its own passed on several houses bills, the most important of these being house bill No. 1 for the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman law.

The other house bills passed by the senate related to lands in the Sioux Indian reservation in Nebraska and South Dakota; for the relief of Stutsman county in Dakota, Wyoming and South Dakota; to the new York and New Jersey bridge; to steam revenue cutters for the protection of the New England coast; to the annual work on unpatented mining claims; to the increase of officers of the army detailed as colleges; to the amendment of the Chinese exclusion act, the others being bills of a private character.

The senate also passed four joint resolutions which originated in that body and 12 which originated in the house. The only one of the senate joint resolutions of importance is the one which provides for the construction of a hall of records in Washington, which also passed the house.

It will be seen that the session of the senate has been noteworthy on account of the number of bills and resolutions which have passed that body. The total of senate bills and joint resolutions and of house bills and joint resolutions, all told, is only 47.

The senate will not be without material to work upon when it will convene in December. The calendar just issued shows 90 bills and resolutions reported by committees and ready for the attention of the senate. A large proportion of these bills and resolutions relate to private claims, and there are also several relating to the Hawaiian which had connection with the repeal bill and which are now pertinent.

Probably the most important bill upon the senate calendar now is that for the repeal of the federal election laws. A similar bill has passed the house.

The work of the session is ended.

The other bill also failed to be acted upon at the house was that providing for urgent deficiencies. The most important item in this measure was that which provided for the public buildings throughout the country. There was an item of $800,000 to pay claims to most here, but that can be passed later without any suspension of payments to public business like the first named appropriation. A house joint resolution passed the house providing for a reduction of 50 per cent of the duty on all goods sold for the World's fair.

It was amended so as to admit duty free such goods as might be bond for the Chicago museums to be established in the Art building on the World's fair grounds; but the bill by some technicality of form got [illegible] was stricken out. There have been [illegible] passed in the house at this session 4,500 bills, and 87 joint resolutions. Of this entire number 181 have been reported from committees, and 56 have passed the house. Most of those which have passed are of local interest to the members whose they appeared and have been urged to the house [illegible] which existed. Some of these have become laws by favorable action in the senate, and others have failed of favorable action in that body. Others are yet in committee or on the calendar in the senate.

Cleveland Will Go Shooting.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Speaker Crisp has left for New York. He will remain in that city two days and then will return to his home in Georgia. A telegram received by the leaders of the Republican house minority in New York, has caused it to be in Washington again in a few days. Many accounts have been published of the [illegible] of Cleveland after self-attainment, while a majority of the [illegible] in the city this morning [illegible] up their department work [illegible] all haste to get out of town.

BIG WHALE CATCH.

The Fleet Captured 240 Sperm Monsters, Meaning All Kinds.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 4.—Reports just received in this city from the Arctic whaling fleet tell the effect that this season's catch is unprecedented in the history of the industry. The steamer Alaska, which arrived at San Francisco from Herschel island, brings the southernmost message to the report almost all the whales were taken by the steamers. The sailing vessels were in the ice pack, and got very few oil. The total catch of the season is 240 whales, 205 of which came down this fall.

The Narwhal's catch of 62 heads all previous records. The largest catch ever secured was by the Mary B. Hanna—32 whales—in 1891. This record is now beaten by four vessels. The Wanderer, wrecked in the Arctic ice made up to now in the catch this fall. This enormous catch will have great effect on the bone market and will probably place the price of bone at $3. Eighteen whalers reported clear.

They Were Fined and Imprisoned For Accepting Bribes.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 4.—In the court of oyer and terminer Freeholders Cornelius Quackenbush, Henry M. Watson, Jacob H. Fintle, John H. Morrow, John C. Roe, Josiah Riker, Thomas Howard, J. S. Riddle, T. Gibbin, Henry Wardle, John J. Folks and William Leonard were fined $1000 each for accepting a bribe to vote for a site for the new $300,000 courthouse.

Folks, Howard, Leonard and Morrow were each fined an additional $100 for giving out a contract to an electric light company.

Howard and Folks were sentenced to 18 months imprisonment in state prison for accepting $50 from Architect Rumpf to award him the contract of drawing up plans for the courthouse. All the fines were paid. Folks and Howard appealed from the sentence of imprisonment and were released on $3,000 bail each.

Killed Himself Before His Sweetheart.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Nov. 4.—Julius Weberman, a silk weaver, when his offer of marriage was refused for the second time by Miss Bella Eichs an, a young lady living on Jersey City Heights, said, "Very well, then," and drew a big revolver from his pocket. "I don't care to live a day longer," he added. "Goodby, Bella." Placing the muzzle of the weapon close to the side of his head, he fired a bullet through it. The bullet passed entirely through the head and was imbedded in the wall of the room. The unfortunate man died instantly. The young lady said she had never encouraged Weberman's attentions.

Chased a Rabbit and Caught Thieves.

PRESINEVILLE, Pa., Nov. 4.—A hunter chased a rabbit into a sewer, and on following he found a number of bags of stolen goods. A watch was set for the thieves, and Doc McHale, a notorious character, and a companion came after the goods. They were chased and jumped into the Schuylkill river. McHale was shot and captured, and the other man swam the river and escaped.

RAMMED A TROOP SHIP

REPUBLICA SUNK A TRANSPORT.

The Insurgent Brazilian Admiral Strikes a Hard Blow at His Government—King Lobengula Captured—More Fighting at Melilla—Riot In Old Vienna.

LISBON, Nov. 4.—A private telegram from Buenos Ayres says that the insurgent warship Republica ran into and sunk the transport Rio de Janeiro, which was on her way from Rio Grande do Sul to Rio de Janeiro with troops for President Peixoto. Thirteen hundred of the troops were drowned.

A dispatch from Rio Janeiro, received on Nov. 1, contained the information that the Republica had rammed the Rio de Janeiro, and that 500 out of 1,100 troops on board were drowned. The dispatch also said that Admiral Mello confirmed the truth of this report.

Peixoto's Fleet Almost Ready.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Minister Mendonca, it is said, has given instructions for the sailing on the 16th inst. of the heterogeneous and flourishing fleet of merchant ships converted into warships and steam launches into torpedo boats. The fleet will contain only two large vessels—El Cid, flagship, and the Riachuelo. Captain Baker, who is to command El Cid, will be the admiral of the fleet and will conduct all its operations against Mello's vessels.

The two large torpedo boats are now on the ocean and will reach New York on Monday or Tuesday. Besides El Cid and Britannia, there will be the dynamite cruiser Destroyer, the Javelin and Pelayo, which have been turned into torpedo boats, and the two torpedo boats on their way to New York.

Spaniards Made a Sally.

MELILLA, Nov. 4.—General Marcias prepared a detachment of troops for a sortie with the object of relieving the outlying forts. His force, which was composed of picked soldiers, sallied forth from the fortress amid the cheers of the entire population. The body marched rapidly toward the river Kert.

The Arabs, as soon as the approach of the Spanish troops was discovered, began to gather at the front in large numbers and soon made an attack upon the Spaniards. A fierce engagement followed, which ended in the defeat of the Arabs, who retired to the Guruba mountains after many of their force had been killed and wounded. The Spanish loss was 9 killed and 14 wounded. The European force then moved on to Forta Rostrogordo and Cabrerae, which it reached with a fresh supply of provisions.

A dispatch from Oran says that the powerful Kabyle tribes of Maluya are reported to be upon the point of joining the Riff Arabs against the Spaniards.

A Socialist Mob In Vienna.

VIENNA, Nov. 4.—There was fierce fighting in this city, caused by an attempt by the socialists to invade the Reichsher Music Hall, where a meeting of the Liberals was being held. The mob shouted, "Down with the Liberals!" "Down with the dogs!" and "Down with the cowardly enemies of the people!" and sang the labor song, "Hoch Arbeit." Finally a charge was made upon the police cordon. The police were badly handled by the mob. The commissioner of inspector was knocked down and trampled upon, and his men in trying to rescue him wielded their sabers right and left with great fierceness. Both sides fought savagely, and the result was many bloody heads among the mob from the sabers of the police, while all the police were bruised and beaten and their uniforms torn.

The fight caused a panic among the people in the vicinity, and houses and shops were closed and bolted.

That Westminster Bridge Bomb.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Scotland Yard detectives have traced the shell found on a buttress of the Westminster bridge to its late owner, who explains its presence in the place where it was found. The man says he picked up the shell on a battlefield after the Franco Prussian war, and it has been in his possession up to a few days ago. He at last came to the conclusion that it possibly might be dangerous and he concluded to get rid of it. He therefore dropped it from Westminster bridge, as he thought, into the river.

Lobengula Reported Captured.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 4.—A dispatch from Johannesburg announces that there has been heavy fighting along the fork of Shangnai river and that King Lobengula has been captured. Heavy loss of life is reported during the battle which preceded the capture of the king of Matabeleland. Later dispatches from the front announce that it is now believed that Captain Williams has been captured by the Matabeles. A quantity of blood was found on the tracks left by his horse.

CADIZ, Nov. 4.—A fleet of 13 British warships has been gathered at Gibraltar in anticipation, it is presumed, of a combined movement of the ships of France, Russia and Spain toward Tangier. It is also reported that the French and Russian squadrons intend to proceed from Toulon to Tangier and join a number of Spanish vessels there.

A Navigable Balloon.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—A navigable balloon, which was made in Paris, has been tested by a Russian military commission at Warsaw, with satisfactory results. The balloon rose against a strong atmospheric pressure, was steered against the wind, was then propelled in many different directions and was able to descend without letting out the gas.

Macedonians Loot a Town.

BELGRADE, Nov. 4.—A band of Macedonian armauts attacked the town of Prisrend, in Albania, and drove the Turkish garrison into the citadel. When the Turks had been completely boxed up in the fortress the Macedonians looted the stores and mansions of the leading citizens and also sacked the Theological seminary.

Accused of Exciting Riot.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—It is announced that summonses will be served upon Mr. William Field and Mr. Luke P. Hayden, Irish members of parliament, for illegal assembly and riot in connection with the evictions on the estate of Lord de Freyne.

Irish Girls In Montreal.

Georgia's Anticigarette Bill Killed.

ATLANTA, Nov. 4.—The Georgia senate killed by a decisive vote the anticigarette bill.

SENT POISONED ROSES.

Marie Tempest Gets a Bouquet Covered With Strychnine.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Marie Tempest is pursued. The Dresden-Chinese prima donna's life is sought by a crank of the first magnitude. She says so. Her manager says so. Glen MacDonoghue, who wrote "The Algerian," says so.

"It was very funny," said Miss Tempest at the Garden theater. "The absurdity of it! A real lovely bunch of American Beauty roses was handed in at the stage door after the second act of 'The Algerian.' There was no card or note with it, and I wondered who could have been so kind to me. As I presented the bouquet to my face I noticed a peculiar odor, and when I put one of the leaves to my tongue found it intensely bitter. I told my manager, and he sent the bouquet to Dr. Louis Seaman of 18 West Thirty-first street. I understand that he had the flowers examined and found them covered with strychnine or something of that sort. I suspect a chorus girl whom I had to discharge."

Dr. Seaman says: "I tasted the leaves and was convinced at once that strychnine had been sprinkled on the flowers. A chemical test proved this beyond question. I reported this to Mr. Hopkins today, and he then gave me some more roses, which he said were part of the same bouquet. I shall subject these flowers to the same test tomorrow."

PITH OF THE NEWS.

Two officers of the Plankinton bank were indicted in Milwaukee.

Truman Sheppard, the well known criminal lawyer, died in Philadelphia.

Adolph Olschwakg, an Indianapolis crank, was arrested as he was about to start for Washington to murder President Cleveland.

CRANKS IN PITTSBURG.

Three of Them Are In Jail, and More Are At Large.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 4.—The police are having no end of trouble with people who threaten to take human life. Three are now locked up in the central station, and the police are on the lookout for five others who have been writing threatening letters. Of the three under arrest, W. N. Bates, a traveling agent, is the most desperate. He was recently discharged from his position, and since then his former employer has been receiving threatening letters. When arrested, Bates had a large pistol and a buckthorn cane. He said he had been driven to desperate methods because he had no work.

The second crank is a newspaper man, who gave the name of Mike O'Brien. He went to The Times office, and when refused the position of editor pulled a pistol and threatened to clean out the office. He was arrested before he did any damage.

John McFarrey, the third crank, gave himself up, saying he was out of work and starving, and he was afraid he would kill some one.

Yale Students Object to the Campus Lights.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 4.—Ever since the electric lights were placed on the Yale campus, three weeks ago, the students and faculty have been in open war. The students thoroughly detest the innovation, and not a night has passed without the lights being in a measure destroyed. The employment of a detective to arrest the guilty person has had no result. In any case the lights are just about to be leveled to the ground with saws.

A Woman's Poisonous Bite.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Dr. Alphonse M. Wallace of 257 East Forty-eighth street, a visiting physician at Believue hospital, is lying dangerously ill at his residence of blood poisoning, the result of a bite inflicted on his hand by a woman patient last Wednesday.

TRAIN ROBBERS AGAIN.

CONDUCTOR KILLED IN THE FIGHT.

The Robbers Entered the Cars and Looted the Passengers — Another Attempt at Coal Creek Was Unsuccessful, and One Robber Was Killed.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 4.—Fast express train No. 21 of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern, known as the Cannon Ball, was held up and robbed by seven masked men at Oliphant, Ark., seven miles from Newport. Passenger Conductor McNally was shot and killed while trying to protect his train.

Oliphant is a small hamlet of about 300 inhabitants, situated in a timber district in White county. When train No. 21 stopped at the station four men jumped on the engine, and four pointed revolvers at the engineer and fireman and ordered them to keep still, threatening to blow their brains out if they moved a muscle. The other five men surrounded the express car, the door of which was open, and at once began firing a wicked fusillade from their revolvers.

Killed the Conductor.

Conductor J. P. McNally drew his revolver and returned the robbers' fire, but before he had succeeded in wounding any of them he was shot and killed. The robbers then entered the express car, overpowered the messenger and looted the car. Leaving two men to guard the trainmen, the other robbers proceeded to rob the passengers. They entered the coaches and sleepers and at the point of a revolver relieved all the passengers of their valuables. They then left with a parting volley, taking a northerly direction. A telegram was at once sent to the sheriff at Newport, who formed a posse and started in pursuit.

An engine was dispatched to Augusta for bloodhounds. Telegrams were quickly sent to Little Rock for assistance, and a special train left carrying a posse of officers and a pack of bloodhounds. The train which was held up is expected here soon, bringing the remains of Conductor McNally.

Railroad people have no idea as to the amount of money secured by the robbers.

Murdered the Telegraph Operator.

CHATTANOOGA, Nov. 4.—General Kennedy, one of the white men arrested on suspicion of murdering Night Operator Lowery at Shell Mound, Tenn., a few days ago, has confessed the crime. He says he and his cousin, John Kennedy, who is also under arrest, went to the depot on several occasions to perform the operation and reached the place, but they could not gain an entrance. Finally John shot the sleepy operator through a window, and they both crawled into the room and robbed the place and left. It was the most fiendish murder ever committed in this section, and feeling is intense.

A Train Robber Killed.

KNOXVILLE, Nov. 4.—Two bandits attempted to board the north bound express train at Coal Creek, on the Ohio division of the East Tennessee train. One of the robbers is Jim Smith, who was mortally wounded.

The authorities of the road had information that the robbery would be attempted, and a special force of armed men was on the express car for their reception. Smith will die, and the condition of the other robber is not known. The full particulars will not be known until later.

Science Gossip

THE MAGNETISM OF OXYGEN.

Wonderful Achievements of Modern Chemistry and a Unique Experiment.

Although oxygen is considered to be a nonmetallic element, it is found that when in the liquid state it is quite strongly attracted by a powerful electro magnet. It is only within a few years that the liquefaction of oxygen gas has been accomplished, it being formerly considered one of the "permanent" gases, but now it can be produced in quite large quantities by means of the improved methods devised by Professor Dewar.

An experiment proving the magnetic property of liquefied oxygen is described by Popular Science News, authority for the statements here made. The liquid is placed between the poles of a very powerful electro magnet in a little dish of rock crystal or quartz. It does not adhere to this substance, but remains in the spheroidal state like a drop of water in a radiket dish. Now if the electro magnet is excited the liquid oxygen is strongly attracted, leaves the quartz dish and adheres to the poles of the magnet. On breaking the circuit and demagnetizing the electro magnet the oxygen falls back into the dish again.

Hydrogen being an element of a metallic nature, it might be expected that it would also be attracted by the magnet, but although it has been liquefied and even solidified by intense cold and pressure it has only been obtained in such small quantities that it is impossible to try the experiment. Should we ever be able to obtain it in large quantities, it would be very interesting to observe whether it is influenced in any way by a powerful magnet, either by being attracted like iron or nickel or repelled like bismuth and other diamagnetic bodies.

High Temperature Thermometers.

Extremely useful high temperature thermometers have been constructed by replacing mercury with an alloy of sodium and potassium, which is liquid at ordinary temperatures and remains so through a long range. When a very hard glass is employed to hold the liquid alloy, it becomes possible to determine directly the temperature of any source of heat up to 1,150 degrees Fahrenheit, says Knowledge.

Photographing Under Water.

According to a scientific contemporary, Mr. Bontine has shown that photographs can be taken in a brief time under water in calm weather by direct sunlight at, depths up to six or seven meters; while by the use of special lamp they can be taken instantaneously at any depth that can be conveniently reached by a diver, and the state of the weather is of no importance.

GOOD HEALTH

A NEW MEDICAL SCIENCE.

About the Sponges.

The sponge is an animal, naturalists generally agree, and one observer says it will shrink from the hand which tries to seize it, and if viewed under a lens may be seen constantly drawing in water through the innumerable canals which form its digestive organs, and having consumed the minute animalcule in the fluid ejecting it again through some other channel.

A Steam Carriage.

A steam carriage is the reported invention of a Massachusetts genius. It weighs 600 pounds, can carry two persons at a time and has much the appearance of an ordinary carriage. The steam generates in a boiler run by naptha flames. The steering apparatus is so arranged that the engineer can steer at the same time that he is looking after the engine.

A Water Wheel Problem.

Whether a water wheel runs faster at night than in the day is a problem over which scientific readers of a German paper have been puzzling. The leading opinion is that the wheel does run faster at night, for the reason that the water is then cooler and somewhat more dense than when warmed by the sun.

A Six Inch Beetle.

The Hercules beetle (Dynastes Hercules), one of the largest species of the coleopters or beetle family, is frequently seen in the cases of the entomologist, but it is seldom that one is seen alive in New York. According to the New York Tribune, however, there was recently one of these giant beetles

It was caught in the island of Dominica and brought to New York by a sailor. It is full 6 inches long from the tip of the upper branch of its pinchers to the end of its body. The head is jet black, and from it grows out a long black horn, somewhat irregular in shape. The lower surface of this horn is covered with deep gold colored bristles, which no doubt aid in holding whatever the beetle seizes. Another but shorter horn grows out from the thorax. And the two form a powerful pair of pinchers, with the body for a handle.

The elytra, or wing covers, are of a dirty dapple gray, while the under part of the body is black. There are six powerful legs armed with claws which easily sink into the human flesh, while a nip from the pinchers is a thing to be remembered, even when the insect has only begun to pinch.

The Superstition of Halloween.

The tradition of superstition regarding Halloween is, according to an exchange, that it is the night of all others when supernatural influences prevail; when spirits of the invisible and visible world walk abroad, for on this mystic evening it is believed that the human spirit is enabled by the aid of supernatural power to detach itself from the body and wander through the realms of space.

Malaria Flourishes Even in Deserts.

Malaria is responsible for half the deaths of all mankind, according to Dr. H. M. Clark. From his experience in India he learns that malaria is not confined to rich, low lying soils, but is found even in sandy deserts. The negroes of the grain coast of western Africa and the Taurus of northern India are the only races proof against it.

ETIQUETTE

WEDDING FANCIES.

With the Present Matrimonial Season Have Come Many Changed Customs.

This world is a world of change, and each season brings its variation of manners and customs. Wedding etiquette is undergoing some modification, though in the main it remains unchanged, and some of these fancies are noted as follows by Harper's Bazar:

The preference is conspicuously rings still inclines toward the solitaire diamond, the purest stone, even though small, being in better taste than a more showy one defective in color. The setting is narrow, showing as little gold as possible, and the gem is not too prominent. Though the solitaire ranks first, yet for the sake of novelty some young people select a diamond and emerald cluster or a ruby and diamond set obliquely, a fine ruby tripling in value a diamond of equal size.

The wide and heavy wedding ring has been discarded in favor of a narrow oval band of plain coin gold, as pure as is feasible for long wear. The "square" ring is entirely out of vogue.

The favorite hour for weddings is at noon and the chosen place church, the reception at the home of the bride immediately following the ceremony. This early hour necessitates a wedding breakfast, of which the guests partake seated at large or small square tables, the quality and expense of it may be served from a buffet.

The wedding cake is provided in small, square boxes, tied with white ribbon, a gold or silver monogram in one corner, the boxes arranged on a table near the door and handed by a functionary to each departing guest.

The floral decorations are to be more elaborate at the house than at the church. Any blossoms not shading on purple are appropriate for wedding decorations, but the long stemmed American Beauty roses will be much used, as they are very effective when massed together in jars or vases with a background of maidenhair fern and palms.

Lilies of the valley and white orchids are the most chosen flowers for the bridal bouquet, but the rose known as the "Bride," though creamy rather than dead white, is used, it being much liked not only from the sentiment attached to it for its name's sake, but because it has a firm stem and is easily carried.

Gardenias are too stiff for the bouquet, but they are worn as a boutonniere by the groom, best man and ushers. Ropes or garlands of flowers will form a pretty alternative for the satin ribbons dividing the family seats from the rest of the church, and the little maids attendant upon the bride may carry baskets of cut flowers or loose blossoms, as taste or preference shall decide.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

THE WOMEN OF GREECE.

Conspicuous by Their Absence in City Streets—Day Laborers In the Country.

An American visiting Greece for the first time is struck, sooner or later, by a certain fullness in the street life of its towns, which it may take him some little time to define and trace to its real cause. At length and suddenly the fact comes home to him that there are few, if any, women visible among the foot passengers. No wonder, he reflects, that the streets should appear dull to him, shorn as they are of all the variety that woman's presence and dress ever lends to the thoroughfares of countries farther west.

In Greece it is only toward evening, and then for but a brief period, that the fair sex take an outing, unless the pressure of some urgent business should compel them to flit rapidly through the throng of men who at other times monopolize the streets. Nor will a foreigner find them serving in the shops, the restaurants or the cafes; they will still be conspicuous by their absence. In fact, unless he visits them in the privacy of their homes he will scarcely do more than catch an occasional glimpse of them at the upper windows of some private dwelling house or shop, where when the weather is reasonable they will sit reading and sewing and crossing their necks out to watch the passers-by.

But to quit the towns, where it will be seen that women play but a small part in public life, and to turn to the rural districts of Greece. Here woman takes a more active part in everyday life; she is he who draws the water, brings in the wood that the men have felled in the forest, or who plaintly earns her wages as a day laborer in the same occupation. In the burning summer, in the icy winter, she is ever to the fore, working, working, with her veil lightly covering her head, ready to be folded across the mouth should a stranger man approach. It is matter for thought how widespread even now among the country districts is this old custom of veiling the lower part of the face at the approach of an unknown member of the opposite sex. It is one sign among many that it is not so very long ago when the Greek women were masters of this "purple land, where law secures not life."

A Supposed Relic of the Pequot Indians.

Traditions of the Pequot Indians, whose early home along Long Island sound centuries ago is frequently recalled by the discovery of new relics, are revived by the "old Indian god" unearthed at Madison last week. The oldest inhabitant barely remembers seeing it and hearing it mentioned as a familiar sight about Tull's pond, but for nearly 75 years it has existed only in memory.

THE "OLD INDIAN GOD."

In Smith's "History of Guilford" and other reminiscent sketches of the locality reference to it are frequent. Its whereabouts have been thought to be permanently unknown till, as stated by a Connecticut correspondent of the New York Times, it was dug up by a gang of workmen a short time ago. It is a colossal red potstone rock, about 2½ feet high, with a broad base and tapering head. On the front are the distinct features of a man, with a rudely carved necklace hollowed in the stone.

Indications point to an Indian origin from the appearance of the carving. This is not, however, certain, and will not be settled till some of the Yale professors pass judgment on the rude attempt at sculpture. Theories have been advanced that it antedates the time of the Indians' abode in America, but this is uncertain.

"Acknowledging the Corn."

The following amusing story is told "as the probable origin of the familiar expression 'acknowledging the corn.'" A raw countryman went to New Orleans with flatboats, the one laden with corn, the other with potatoes. He visited a gambling house, and betting lost his money, corn and potatoes. Returning, he found the boat containing the corn sunk, all a total loss. He lay down and dreamed of "Jack pots," corn and potatoes, and about sunrise the "chinks" chance" who had won his corn and potatoes came to take them. Rubbing his eyes the countryman said: "Stranger, I acknowledge the corn—take 'em. But the potatoes you can't have, by thunder!"

A Household Motto.

In the seventeenth century prosperous Scotch households ornamented their houses with carved chimney pieces, on which were cut the initials of the proprietor and his wife.

Family mottoes and Scriptural maxims were also carved on the fireplaces, and sometimes a long inscription in verse.

As with the God do stand—
Keep not far off.
Nor come thou too near hand.

The Reptile Fad In Leather Goods.

The latest thing in leather goods is the fancy for reptile skins, as shown in purses, cardcases, cigar cases, etc. The beautiful markings of the boa constrictor's skin, with its large black and white scales, combined with artistic sterling silver corners make a most striking leather combination.

A feature not to be disregarded in this day of "artistic effects" in costume is that the natural color of the snake and lizard skins is in harmony with the prevailing styles of dress, and the color combines in all articles of dress. The stylish colors of green, brown and tan have also been introduced in these reptile leathers, according to jewelers' Circular, which illustrates a cardcase of natural snakeskin.

CHURCH DEDICATION

GERMAN AND ENGLISH SERVICES SUNDAY.

St. Peter's German Lutheran Church Dedication.—A General Time of Rejoicing.—128 People at a Dinner.

The St. Peter's German Lutheran church, on Grove street, North Plainfield, was dedicated yesterday to public worship by a service in the morning in German, conducted by Rev. E. Moldenke, D. D., of New York, who dedicated the church. Rev. W. Berkmeire and E. Brennecke of New York preached in the afternoon. In the evening Rev. C. Berkmeire preached in English.

There was a good attendance both morning and evening, and much interest was manifested.

The church was lit up at the evening service for the first time by electricity, the work having been very artistically done by Mr. Joseph Sohl, the electrician, who was present to see that everything in the lighting went smoothly.

There were fifty people present from New York, 25 from New Brunswick, and as many more from various other neighboring localities.

A chancel and large reredos were presented from the Ladies' Society, the Sunday-school presented a bell, small reredos, carpets, etc. Mr. Asa Collier a clock, Mr. C. McCullough, who made the furniture, the hymn boards, Mr. C. Thorp & Co., who decorated the church, the sun.

The visitors were entertained at dinner at Mr. Sutterlin's home, by the Ladies' Society. 128 persons sat down to the dinner.

A special service in German and English for the Ladies' Aid Society, will be held in the church this evening at 7.30 o'clock Rev. C. Fischer of Elizabeth and Rev. W. Peterson of Long Island will officiate.

BREVITIES.

—Young men will have an opportunity this evening to join the Y. M. C. A. classes in shorthand and mechanical drawing.

—The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the Library on Tuesday morning, Nov. 7th, at 11 o'clock.

—Complaint is made by residents of Webster Place that boys are continually throwing stones at their doors and houses.

—The Plainfield Board of Underwriters will meet at the office of the secretary, M. M. Dunham, 109 East Front street, at 7.30 this evening.

—The Free Public Library will be open at the usual hours on election day, as will also the art gallery. Books will be circulated in the afternoon and evening.

—The road-bed of West Eighth street, at the corner of Madison avenue, is being cut down to grade, and yesterday the excavation, a foot deep, was full of water.

—Mr. J. C. Allen is one of the first merchants to announce that he is getting ready for Christmas, and advertises a great cut in prices on present stock to make room for holiday goods.

—Some Democrats of Elizabeth are making a house-to-house canvass among their neighbors, urging them to vote for the Republican nominee, in order to register the vote of the Ex-Soldiers and Sailors against granting race-track licenses.

—The Citizens Anti-Race Track League sent circulars last week to the pastors of all the churches of New Jersey asking them to urge all christians to do their duty on election day, regardless of parties, and to the latter all preaching. In this city each pastor responded by appropriate remarks on the subject at the services yesterday.

A "LIVE" WIRE IN THE STREET.

A Team of Horses Driven Away, But Without Harm.

During the storm Saturday evening an electric light wire fell across the trolley wire, at the corner of Second and Watchung avenue, and the current was on before it was discovered a team of horses had been over it. Fortunately the animals did not come in contact with the wire, which was severed by a piece of it, and no serious results might have followed. The broken wire was covered by Policeman Cooney, who seized hold of a boy just as he was to the act of catching hold of it. Word was immediately telephoned to the electric light station, and the break was repaired in a short time.

Vote To-morrow.

The local Democratic paper says that the failure to vote the Democratic ticket to-morrow may mean the loss to the party of a United States Senator in 1895. Thousands of our young men will be lost before that time if the gambling laws are not repealed. Which loss will be most important?

Remember the record which is said to have been posted in the church in Louisville, in early days: "Don't shoot as the organist; he does the best he can."

A Tidal Wave Expected.

If every citizen of New Jersey votes tomorrow there is little doubt but that the result will be overwhelmingly against the race-track gamblers. Every voter in Plainfield and North Plainfield should vote early.

WASHINGTON PARK.

HOW IT ORIGINATED RECALLED BY MR. WHITE'S DEATH.

Other Incidents Connected with His Long and Useful Life Here. "A Pillar of the Church has Fallen," Says His Biographer.

Mr. William White, useful and honorable citizen of North Plainfield and well known throughout this community, who died Saturday morning, November 4, 1893, as announced in Saturday's NEWS, came to Plainfield in the Spring of 1855, and has been identified with its business interests ever since. In the fall of the previous year he purchased a large tract of land in what is now the Borough of North Plainfield. In 1857-8 he entered into an agreement with his neighbors, Judge Roome, and others, to lay out, beautify and improve their farm property of several hundred acres, including his own recent purchase, he to superintend the grading. The result was the development of the whole tract of Washington Park, as it is known at present.

In this city he invested in real estate on Front street and built the large brick block on the east corner of Park avenue, and on a lot about 150 feet west of Somerset street he erected another store building.

His sound business qualifications recommended his practical advice for the management of the Washington Fire Insurance Company, Dime Savings Institution and other fiduciary organizations.

In 1875 the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York engaged his valuable services as appraiser of real estate. There was probably no other man so efficient and reliable in the judgment of valuations of property in Northern New Jersey. Upon his estimates millions of dollars have been placed on bond and mortgage.

Mr. White was born in England, October 27, 1824. When six years old his father died and his mother came to America with her two daughters and the boy. The family settled in Jersey City, and there William White learned the moon trade, beating as early as he had reached his twelfth year. He worked faithfully at his building trade till twenty five years of age, at which time he had accummulated considerable property for those days. The excitement of the gold discoveries led him to seek quicker fortune in California. Thither he went, and not finding the nuggets as numerous as was expected, he took up his life trade, and, while there, built (in San Francisco) the First Baptist church on the Pacific coast.

Returning to the State of his adoption within a short time and getting fairly at work again in buying building lots in Jersey City and erecting dwellings, he settled down to married life. In 1855 he made the choice of a companion, Miss Mary Hegel, who has been a helpmeet indeed through all these years, and survives him to-day in the full vigor of a devoted christian matron. To them there are left a son, George, and two daughters, Mary and Nellie.

Not only in the public business affairs of life and the more peaceful duties of the domestic relations was Mr. White an example of fidelity and uprightness, but in his Christian character he honored his religion and lived a life of purity and usefulness. In 1841 he was converted from a worldly living and united with the Jersey City Baptist church, and he always been closely identified with this denominational faith. Subsequently he was instrumental in organizing the Bergen Baptist church, constituted in 1852. With that society he was actively associated in all its relations, when

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Trouble in Norway.

The average opinion concerning Sweden and Norway is that these two peninsulas constitute one kingdom and that kingdom is Sweden. This is exactly what the Norwegians object to. Swedes and Norsemen are as different in races as Irishmen and Scotchmen and like each other much the same as an Osterman and a Corkonian do. The complaint of the Norwegians is that Sweden appropriates all the consulships to herself, which is a grave charge indeed—as bad as if an American president should give all the postoffices to one faction of his party.

Norway was given up by Denmark in the treaty of Kiel in 1814, and Sweden and Norway were united into one kingdom. Norway, to begin, never has acknowledged that Denmark had a right to cede her to any country, and that was an original source of irritation. The articles of union declared Norway to be a "free, independent and indivisible kingdom." To be governed jointly with Sweden under one king. Norway was to have forever her own parliament, called in Norwegian the storthing, composed of two houses, like other modern legislative bodies. The Norwegian executive department consists of a cabinet or council, part of which remains in Stockholm to be in communication with the king. The king is always a Swede, the minister of foreign affairs is always a Swede, and the consular and diplomatic servants are always Swedes or Norwegians of Swedish sentiments. When therefore a Norwegian wishes to appeal to any representative of his country abroad, it is always a Swede to whom he must go, a person of different nationality and sympathies.

How serious a matter this is is laid before us in The North American Review by Professor H. H. Boyesen. The Norwegians, through their storthing, have made the fight to be allowed a consular and diplomatic representation of their own. This the king of Sweden has not been disposed to grant. In revenge the storthing cut off the king's civil list. Then less than ever were King Oscar II and his Swedish parliament disposed to grant Norway's request. The Swedes are a quiet, rather aristocratic, people. Norwegians are simply the wild, fierce vikings tamed down a little to suit nineteenth century requirements. They will not yield the claim they have made. Even in case of war between the two countries, Boyesen does not believe Sweden could whip the Norwegians or make them stay whipped after she had conquered them temporarily.

At the Top of Mount Blanc.

America has her astronomical observatories upon Mount Washington and Pike's peak, where the thermometer often sinks down to 40 below zero. Europe has had nothing to match these until now, when the completion of the observatory upon Mount Blanc brings her into line with progressive America.

The establishment of Mount Blanc observatory is an event of unusual interest. The building will be 40 feet above the honored snow. The structure is 28 feet high, but only about 12 feet of this is visible. The rest is buried within snow walls. It was intended to construct the house upon a solid rock foundation, but the projectors bored down and down through the ice till it seemed as if they would never find a solid foundation. After boring down 25 feet into the snow and ice they found themselves still at least 20 feet from solid earth and gave it up, concluding that they could not in any case get a much solider base than that afforded by the granite hard snow and ice cap of the mountain.

The first materials for the building were carried up the steep paths upon the backs of men. Afterward windlasses were rigged and a pair drawn up that way. The house itself was built in Paris in sections and shipped to Chamounix. The complete structure is in the shape of a pyramid. This gives the greatest strength. At this death cold height only anthracite coal will furnish heat enough to keep the frost out, even in summer. It is not intended to inhabit the observatory except in warm weather—from May to November, for instance. The people who come after will take care of them. Automatic thermometers and barometers will, however, tell the story of weather and temperature even when no man's eye is there to note it. Automatic electrical transmitting wires can convey the report to Chamounix the year around.

The thermometer registers sometimes 30 and 40 below zero at the observatory. The building will have shelter and rooms for tourists, so that the ascent of Mount Blanc will now be undoubtedly more popular than ever. The next step will be to construct a railway up the frozen heights. With the observatory already there, this should be an easy matter. Then Mount Blanc will be robbed of its terrors, perhaps of its fascination too.

ELECTIONS TOMORROW.

Several of the State Contests Will Be Rather Exciting.

MAYBARY QUESTION IN NEW YORK.

Massachusetts Has Close Gubernatorial Race—Tariff Issue In Ohio.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—New York state for many years past has been noted for the rapidly changing currents of public opinion as evinced in the results of the annual elections. The present election apparently bids fair to prove itself a copy of its predecessors. The whole issue of the campaign seems to have been in the nomination of Isaac H. Maynard for associate judge of the court of appeals by the Democracy.

National issues have been almost entirely ignored, and aside from an occasional mention of the financial troubles that have so seriously racked the country for months past, and the action of the United States senate in holding back the repeal of the so called Sherman silver bill, nothing has been heard of the questions which have been so prominently agitated both at Washington and in the press of the United States since the calling of the extra session of congress.

The Maynard Charges.

While Maynard is but one of the five state officers on the ticket, the average voter, it is said, would pause to think before he could tell the names of the other four candidates. The opposition to Judge Maynard has been of such a nature that all else was lost sight of, and vividly recalls the charges made against him in 1891. In that year several legislative seats were contested after the election. The returns from the fifteenth senatorial district were received at the office of the secretary of state. It is claimed by his opponents that Judge Maynard, in his official capacity, unlawfully removed from the office of the secretary of state the election returns sent there by order of the supreme court. It was charged that the motive for this was to prevent a counting of the returns by the board of state canvassers until a new return could be made out and forwarded.

The result of the contest in the courts practically sustained Judge Maynard and gave the Democratic party a majority of one in the senate, giving them also the complete control of every department of the state government. Following this came a number of enactments by the legislature, reapportionments of congressional and legislative districts and other measures designed to strengthen Democratic control of the state. On Judge Maynard's nomination this year the old charges were brought against him. For the first time in several years the Democrats have had to defend their candidate.

A majority of the legal fraternity throughout the state seem to be opposed to Mr. Maynard, and many predict that he will be defeated. Sanguine Republicans go so far as to claim a sweeping victory for their whole ticket. The Democrats seem to have little fear of the result of the legislature, and while the Republicans may sustain secure control of the senate the more conservative of both parties believe that the Democrats will have a majority on joint ballot.

Race Track Fight In New Jersey.

TRENTON, Nov. 6.—No state officers are involved in the election tomorrow, the fight being entirely confined to the legislature in the state and to the sheriffs and other local officers in the various counties. Senators are to be chosen in the counties of Camden, Essex, Hudson, Monmouth, Salem, Somerset, Union and Warren. It will be noticed that the above list includes the counties in which are all the large race tracks of the state. The senate now stood as follows: Democrats, 16; Republicans, 5. The last house stood: Democrats, 39; Republicans, 21.

A fierce fight is being waged in every county in the state on the legislative tickets. The one issue of the campaign is what is known as the race track bill, the Republicans charging that the last legislature was entirely dominated by the owners of the large race tracks in the state, and a determined effort is being made to elect a legislature which will repeal the bill legalizing betting on races throughout the state.

The Republicans in this fight are being aided by law and order leagues and other similar organizations in almost every county in the state.

This fight affects the local as well as the legislative tickets in most of the counties, and at this time the result of the contest is very much in doubt, although both sides are claiming a victory with confidence.

Massachusetts Elects a Governor.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—Massachusetts is expected to do the usual thing on Tuesday, so far as the election of all state officers except the governor is concerned, and the Republicans count on the customary heavy majority for their candidates. These anticipations may not be wholly realized, but it is regarded as a foregone conclusion that the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, secretary of state, treasurer, auditor and attorney general will be elected, and that the executive councilors will be largely of the same complexion.

The fight centers on the gubernatorship, and the work of the past few days has probably hardly been that during the closing days of last year's fierce campaign. The Republicans claim their former large

THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

It May Not Enlarge the Free List as Much as Expected.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—There is a growing impression among those who have talked with majority members of the committee on ways and means, who are preparing a tariff bill, that this bill, when it is reported, will not present such a radical reduction as was promised some time ago. Just what led to this is not clear, except that the deficit in the treasury makes it important that the reductions of the duty shall not be so radical as to impair the revenue raising qualities of the measure.

There have been numerous expedients talked of to raise sufficient revenue, chiefly those relating to an increase of international taxation. It has been intimated that these suggestions have been given out with the idea of testing the feeling of the people upon them and to see if they will be too much of a burden upon those who will have to bear them.

There has been a lull in the talk of the income tax during the week, but it is evident that those who favor it have not been idle. Mr. Bryan of Nebraska, a member of the committee, says that he is devoting much of his time to the income tax proposition. He thinks that he is making converts for it in the committee and hopes to have it reported as a revenue raising feature of the tariff bill. Other members of the committee say that it will be impossible now to cut the duties to the extent that many people seem to think should be done, and that they give out the impression that, so far from being such a radical measure as once predicted, it will be a mild reduction all around, without any heavy cuts on anything and that the free list will be largely increased as has been talked of. Indeed, some of the members are opposed to enlarging the free list to any extent, except in a few and unimportant articles, especially when the revenues of the government are in their present condition.

RECRUITS FOR BRAZIL.

A Practical Joker In Boston Stirs Up a Mare's Nest.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—Some jocose minded individual inserted an advertisement in the papers of Sunday calling for several hundred men to go to Brazil. The advertisement promised a bounty of $1,000 upon arrival at Rio de Janeiro. The men were to go to England as cattlemen and thence to Rio, so as to escape the United States law against enlisting men for foreign service.

About 200 men responded to the advertisement and besieged a Commercial street shipping office, where the proprietor perpetrated the joke by getting the men to put their signatures to a document, which had no significance to them beyond their belief that they were signing ship's articles for the Brazilian trip. The men were formed into companies, and one who claimed knowledge of the manual of arms was appointed captain. They were to drill in front of the shipping office, where they were for several hours furnishing amusement for a crowd of people who were onto the joke. Finally several members of the company objected to the frills of the captain. A free fight and mutiny followed, in which 100 of the recruits participated.

The police of Station 1 took a hand and arrested four of the men for fighting, and half a dozen of them were taken to the station to get their heads patched up.

POLITICAL ARRESTS.

Fourteen Men Arrested by Chief McKane at Gravesend.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Fourteen men were sent down to Gravesend on Saturday night by William J. Gaynor, the Republican and independent nominee for justice of the supreme court in the Second judicial district, to serve papers on the election inspectors of that town. They were met on the railroad station platform by 30 or more men, armed with clubs, and escorted to the lockup, where they spent the night.

Sunday morning they were arraigned before Justice of the Peace Kenneth F. Sutherland and committed without a hearing and without bail to Raymond Street jail, in Brooklyn, as common vagrants.

It was impossible to obtain the release of these men Sunday, but they will be brought before Justice Cullen in the supreme court in Brooklyn this morning on habeas corpus proceedings, instituted by Mr. E. M. Grout, law partner and legal representative of Mr. Gaynor.

The trouble which ended in the arrest of these 14 men has arisen from the political fight which Mr. Gaynor has been carrying on for the last few days against Chief John Y. McKane of Gravesend and his election inspectors.

Many Were Burned to Death.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 6.—At Kazan, the capital of the government of the same name in the eastern part of European Russia, a benzine oil store exploded in one of the main thoroughfares, and the flames quickly spreading eight large warehouses were destroyed. There was great loss of life, many persons being known to have perished in the burning buildings.

Labor Organizations Combining.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 6.—The labor organizations of this county, with several national organizations whose headquarters are in Pittsburg, are arranging a gigantic combination, the primary object being to assist those organizations which have suffered heavy reverses in the past year or two and make them stronger than before.

Business Begins to Boom.

TRENTON, Nov. 6.—Frank A. McGowan, manager and vice-president of patents and head of the new large rubber mills here, states that there is a marked improvement in the business outlook. The rubber mills will all be running on full time within a week.

Strike Is Over at Marseilles.

MARSEILLES, Nov. 6.—A strike on the tramway is now in progress. Several cars were burned, and the rioters tore up a number of rails. An immense crowd is thoroughly sympathy with the strikers gathered and urged them on.

British Embassy at Madrid In Danger.

MADRID, Nov. 6.—The British embassy is guarded by the police owing to an Anglophobe demonstration carried on by the advanced republican press.

Funeral of a Veteran Actor.

Train Robber Starr Must Hang.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 6.—Henry Starr, the notorious train robber and highwayman, has been sentenced to be hanged Feb. 23.

Spain Mobilizing Reserves.

MADRID, Nov. 6.—Ninety thousand reserves have been mobilized, involving an expenditure of £3,000,000.

TRAIN ROBBERS CAUGHT

BLOODHOUNDS USED IN THE CHASE

They Are Desperate Men, and a Fight to the Death Is Expected Before They Surrender.—A Treasure Train Wrecked In Illinois by Train Robbers.

BATESVILLE, Ark., Nov. 6.—This little mountain town is in the midst of the most intense excitement. The two train robbers captured Saturday afternoon are in jail, and there is no reasonable doubt as to their guilt. One, who gives his name as Bill Lemmons, but who is believed to be the notorious outlaw Bill Dalton, is undoubtedly the leader of the gang and the man who went down the aisles of the car relieving the passengers of their valuables. The other gave his name as Mark Arnett. Both men positively refuse to make any kind of a statement.

While both are evidently desperadoes of the worst character, they are back woodsmen and have the appearance of ideal novel heroes. The scenes in this city have been those of a "wild and woolly west" nature. The posse in pursuit of the four men still at large came upon them at an early hour in the morning, two miles from James town, and a lively running fight ensued.

The bandits were forced to abandon six of their horses and take to their heels. They also abandoned several overcoats, a pistol and a lot of jewelry. The news of the skirmish created the most intense excitement here.

Soon scores of men were engaged in earnest conversation. Big, brawny mountaineers, with wicked looking winchesters and astride swift horses, were hurrying to the scene, and men, women and children, eagerly watching for the arrival of couriers, could be seen all day long. Toward noon the town was thrown into a flutter over the arrival of two strangers, each carrying a pair of rough old saddlebags. It was quickly rumored that two of the bandits were in town, but such was not the case. The strangers were peddlers.

The Robbers Corralled.

Soon another telephone message was received from Jamestown stating that the pursuing bloodhounds were within rifle shot of the robbers and that they were fleeing at the hounds. Later an abandoned horse was found five miles from this city. The saddle was perforated with bullet-and the horse badly wounded. In the saddle-bags were found several gold watches, a quart of whisky and some cheap jewelry.

At 5 p. m. another skirmish took place between the opposing parties, but no one was hurt. The bandits were making for the White river bottoms on foot and were corralled in the caves along the banks of that stream. At least 100 men are out, and it is thought to be impossible for the bandits to escape.

In the skirmish which took place Jack Wackerly, who has been strongly suspected of knowing more about the robbery than he would admit, was accused of treachery in trying to throw the hounds off the trail and put under arrest.

The house of the Wackerlys is now being guarded, and the inmates are practically under arrest. Every effort will be made to capture the bandits, but is being pursued. The railroad officials believe they have the entire lot of robbers corralled, but it may take a day or two more to storm them out. It is believed also that they are short of ammunition, as in both skirmishes they showed great reluctance to fire. Fresh bloodhounds are on the way here from Memphis and will be put on the trail at once.

Train Robbers Wreck a Train.

CAIRO, Ills., Nov. 6.—The fast Chicago and New Orleans vestibuled train on the Illinois Central coming south was wrecked near Allen, 20 miles north of here. The tender and a baggage and express car were turned over, and three passenger coaches were derailed. Fireman Charles Harmond of Centralia, Ills., was caught under the tender and killed.

A switch had been turned, probably by would be train robbers, and the train ran out on a frail switch track leading to a limekiln in the woods. The track gave way under the heavy train, with the result stated. Two tramps stealing a ride on the blind baggage were also killed. The train consisted of 10 vestibule coaches, President Fish's private car and a baggage and two express cars, the latter containing a large amount of money in a safe from New York city, in charge of Messenger Boyle and two guards. Boyle had his arm broken, but the guards escaped unhurt. None of the passengers was seriously injured, though all were given a shaking up.

A Reward For the Wreckers.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—The general officers of the Illinois Central company in this city were promptly notified of the wreck of the New Orleans limited at Allen. From the last copy of the dispatch received it was concluded that the wreck had been caused by train robbers, and a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the robbers, or information leading to the arrest and conviction, of the persons responsible for it, has been offered.

Attacked Chicago's Dead Mayor.

THE MELANCHOLY DAYS

The Saddest Season of the Year for Baseball Players.

FROM AFFLUENCE TO POVERTY.

What Stars of the Diamond Will Be Next Winter—The Parable of the Man and the Bear.

AS THE sylvan poet sang about the melancholy days that come the saddest of the year, it is not surprising to hear from the stage-point of a baseball player in November. That solemn period of the annual cycle of time is about to swoop down once more upon the "perfect." The men who make base hits, fly catches and runs in the spring, summer and early autumn are, for the most part, improvident. Particularly is the characteristic of those who came up from comparative poverty within a few years to be the commanders of $2,000, $3,000 and $4,000 salaries.

There are men in baseball at $2,000 each in baseball salary last summer who will borrow money before spring to pay their board bills. Very few of the 1893 League players, comparatively, will go home with enough money saved to pay their winter's keeping. And yet these 150 men have been paid in cash since the 1st of last April not less than $400,000.

Winter to a baseball player has more terrors than it has to a hairless Mexican dog. There was a time when he could always "beat the game" and control some advance money against the following season, but that "snap" is obsolete. The fussy magnates have him at their mercy. If he is now lucky to get his salary when it falls due, as was proved by the New York club when they recently repudiated the last half month's "pay" of their most valuable player, Amos Rusie. It has come to that state in baseball business where the magnates, owing to the peculiar construction of the players' contracts, have everything their own way.

What do baseball players do during the winter? Mostly nothing. And they do it so gracefully too! Their professional life is a school which teaches them the art of doing nothing with skill and ease.

MODEMAKERS FOR THE WORLD.

Whose Latest Ideas Include Draperies, Overskirts and Bouped Bodices.

In the dead days fashion was but the expression of a whim or caprice of some queen of royal birth or regal beauty, but now the modemakers who control the world and legislate the style of every woman's gown, from the empress on her throne to the milliner's apprentice, may be counted on the fingers of a single hand—and they are men. There is Worth, the immortal; Lafaniere Doucet of the royally guarded personality and fine taste in antiques as well as dress; Felix, the darling comforter of colors, and Rouff, the inspired creator of novelties. These are fashion's prime ministers. The designer studies and pronounces upon new textiles and new tintings. On the living model he drapes and redrapes with patient art his fabrics, mingles his colors, shapes his fancies, and the thought of a gown is born—often to die and be forgotten in many cases—for the women of the day are capricious and hard to please.

Under such conditions and in the midst of such uncertainty the chronicler of modes can do little save to reproduce the novelties as they appear, leaving it to the good taste of women to select those most becoming and appropriate for special figures, says a writer in the New York Sun, who calls attention to the tendency toward overskirts. This manifests itself in the arrangement of waved and vandyked rows of trimming, in double skirts of contrasting colors, and in the more daring models the old fashioned overskirt actually appears unobtrusively.

In an evening gown of the new striped silk, in which stripes coming the skirt with iridescent lines on a soft gray ground, the simulated overdress is put on with a flounce of rich lace headed with a scant ruche of the tint to be seen on either side where the drapery curves and in the front where it curves down, as in the old fashion. Sashes of the velvet in the set of the shoulder, and deep ruffles of lace fall over the sleeves. Another mode which dominates the season's styles is the bouped bodice.

TRAINS MET HEAD ON.

Terrible Suffering of a Brakeman Who Escaped to Be Killed.

RENO, Cal., Nov. 6.—One of the most disastrous railroad wrecks that ever happened on the western division of the Central Pacific occurred between freight train No. 30, west bound, and No. 7, east bound, about a mile west of Salvia, 18 miles east of Reno, resulting in the death of Fred Leach, Tenkenuna on the west bound, and Charlie Silvius, the man of the same train, and four tramps not yet identified, and the serious —perhaps fatal—injuring of three others, namely:

James Bird, engineer of No. 7; Tom Morehead, his fireman, and a tramp named William H. Vos, who says he is from Chicago and has a wife living there.

The trains came together in a cut on a sharp turn, going at full speed. Leach was on the engine of his train and was caught between the boilerhead and tank. He lived two hours after the collision, perfectly conscious all the time, and begged his fellow workmen to kill him. After death it was found necessary to cut off his legs close to the body in order to extricate the body from the wreck. The cause of the accident was a misunderstanding of orders. None of the dead tramps has been identified.

ANOTHER FIGHT EXPECTED.

Lobengula Will Make a Last Stand at His Capital.

CAPE TOWN, Nov. 6.—The Hon. Cecil Rhodes, premier of Cape Colony, telegraphs that there will be another fight soon in the vicinity of Bulluwayo, where, it now seems, Lobengula has retreated, after having abandoned his attempt to escape across the Zambesi river. It appears that the tsetse fly, the coming rains and his own weight have been too much for the king, and he has determined to retreat to his capital.

Major Goold-Adams has reported to High Commissioner Loch that the two Matabela envoys who were killed were under merely nominal arrest when they attacked and wounded two troopers, who shot them in self defense.

In the battle at Fort Victoria the head induna of the Mauka regiment was wounded, and he afterward hanged himself. It is stated that King Lobengula, with 7,000 of his warriors, is in the Matoppo mountains, a short distance from Bulluwayo. The Matabelas dread the maxim guns and fear an encounter in the open fields.

Stricken in the Pulpit.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 6.—Rev. Bigham, one of the oldest United Presbyterian ministers in this section, while preaching to his congregation at Plain Grove, suddenly threw up his hands and then fell heavily to the floor of the pulpit. There was a scene of terrible excitement, which was soon subdued, and it was found that the venerable preacher had been stricken with paralysis. He is still living, but is unconscious and cannot recover.

Fired at Church During a Lecture.

CAMBRIDGEPORT, Mass., Nov. 6.—An attempt was made to burn the Lyman Street Universalist church during a lecture upon the World's fair delivered by the pastor, Rev. George W. Bicknell. The church was filled when the fire was discovered in a room off the auditorium, which had gained considerable headway. The pastor prevented a panic by continuing his lecture, and the blaze was finally extinguished with slight loss.

Five Bodies Recovered.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—At South Beach, S. I., the scene of the fatal downing of men in the Hoffman rowboat on Saturday, five bodies were recovered. The bodies recovered have each been identified and are: Edward Kenney, Thomas Hoy, Leonard Wagner, Albert S. Norman and Carlton Druis.

Fled With Her Child.

CAMBRIDGEPORT, Mass., Nov. 6.—Mrs. Walter Snow, while insane, left her home here on Friday last during the absence of her husband with her baby. She imagined that the child's life was being sought by wicked men. It is supposed she has gone to Chicago, where also has relatives.

Robbed a Ticket Office.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 6.—Three highwaymen went to Bennett's Mills, 14 miles east of here, on the Missouri Pacific railroad, held up the Missouri Pacific agent, W. S. Williams, and plundered the ticket office.

Went Over the Line to Flight.

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 6.—Mike McCormick, lightweight champion pugilist of Erie county, knocked Joe Kane of this city out in a prize fight which took place over the New York state line.

Killed In a Row Over a Wagon.

SPRINGVILLE, Ala., Nov. 6.—D. H. Hughes shot and killed John Smith in the street. Both were prominent farmers. They quarreled about the possession of a wagon.

An Actor Killed by a Cable Car.

A POEM FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

Always have lobster sauce with salmon,
And put mint sauce your roasted lamb on.

Veal cutlet dip in egg and bread crumb;
Fry till you see a brown sizzling come.

Grate Gruyere cheese on macaroni;
Make the top crisp, but not too briny.

In dressing salad mind this law:
With two hard yolks use one that's raw.

Roast veal with rich stock gravy serve,
And pickled mushrooms, too, observe.

Roast pork sans apple sauce, past doubt,

In Serving Meats.

To an inexperienced housekeeper it is a puzzling question to decide what vegetables and meats should be served together. This very much depends upon the manner of cooking the meat, and therefore the little table given below may prove a guide:

With roast beef, mashed, baked, or scalloped potatoes, corn, turnips, cabbage, stewed celery, mushrooms, parsnips, carrots, succotash or kale are the vegetables to select from.

With steak, potatoes should be French fried or mashed, and tomatoes or Saratoga chips.

With filet of beef, potato croquettes are served.

With lamb, new potatoes, peas, stuffed tomatoes, lima or string beans.

With turkey, potatoes, onions, cold slaw, peas and beans.

With chicken, the same vegetables are served as with turkey.

Making One's Self Agreeable.

Had I a daughter to train, said a woman of the world, one accomplishment above all should be taught her—to make herself agreeable without descending to make fun of other people. Much, if not most, of the fun current among young folks consists of picking others to pieces.

Bright people are given to use their wit very freely upon others to have the misfortune to come near them. Women especially regard the world outside their immediate circle as created to afford them amusement, and of the most amiable kind. They are not discriminating enough to see what underlies and effects the peculiarity which provokes their fun.

The ill dressed, hurried woman is commonly trying to carry affairs whose burdens her critics would shirk shamelessly. No wonder if the hears spirit steps acrawardly and unbecomingly under the load she can not but bear without breaking. Those who laid their fun at her mad laugh and laugh again unbending.—Exchange.

For the Sick Tots.

Sickroom amusements, especially for children, are difficult to find. They most tire of the most expensive toys, and there are really very few with which a child can play while propped up in bed. It is surprising how many others fail to appreciate the manifold delights of a slate and pencil. If you do not recall the rules of "tit, tat, toe," "spider," "tag and goose," the chances are that the little invalid can put you right and dispute point after point with you until he forgets that he is sick and tired. By and by when he falls asleep, he will dream of school and its trials and triumphs—mainly its triumphs—for in saying with quick, quiet indolence he is about to write one of the examples without detailing your suggestions.—Exchange.

Composition For the Feverish.

Many remedies are employed to counteract feverish troubles from pain, and nothing but wondrous perversion can prevent us from entering into the labors or experiments of the other members of the human family. If on these times they can be given certain work or pleasures such as of gratitude, the sick room will be flooded with harmonies, the remembrance or anticipations of which will lighten many days hours of pain.

Work for such natures is a special pleasure, for it does not require deep intelligence, which is most hard to have. Care should be taken by those selecting such occupations to thus as simple work—that which will not tax the brain or weigh down every the weak fingers.—Her Point of View to New York Times.

Daintily Curtains.

Dainty curtains are to a room what dainty neckwear is to a costume. Rolled shades are excellent things in their way, but there is no such effective finish as more than is that of a narrow lines collar. And nowadays, when muslin and net are so cheap, there is so little excuse for antiquated windows for unbecoming bodies adornments.

China silk, both plain and flowered, makes wonderfully pretty curtains to the back, though it is a little too closely woven for straight hanging ones. Silkolines are equally pretty in that and almost as durable. And one need not stick with blue or gold lines meandering over a creamy or pale blue surface, is used.—Boston Herald.

Care of the Nails.

The best way to manicure one's own nails is first to soak the finger tips in warm water for a few minutes, then press back with the blunt end of the file the cuticle which grows over the base of the nail and snip it off with the points of the scissors. This must be done with care not to mutilate the skin. Every trace of dirt should be removed with a nailbrush and hot water and soap, and the nails cut close at the sides, but left rather long in the middle, not pointed, but rounded into the desired filbert shape. Next the edges of the nails should be filed smooth, when a little bit of the pink powder may be applied to each nail, which is finally polished with the chamois skin.—Philadelphia Press.

Gentle Manners.

A calm and equable appearance, whatever may happen to annoy one, is one of the most certain of the many slight things that go to make up the true lady. One who manifests fretfulness at untoward events, or who scolds, however sweet the voice and the face, is not the type of a fine woman. Such a person has to have herself well in hand. It is a melancholy truth that one meets but few ladies, judged by this not unreasonable standard, in traveling for instance. The petty jars and hindrances seem to bring out all the bad tempers as I let them expect themselves for the fear of the lye under. "The true lady is serene" is a great axiom, but it is not always acted upon nevertheless.—Exchange.

For Finger Bowls.

The lightest possible dash of rose or orange water in the finger bowl is regarded as permissible, but more rather nice. But scarcely more than a drop should be allowed to each bowl, for only the most faintly perfumed finger tips are good form.

SOME READING THAT WILL INTEREST THE CHILDREN

And Some That Older People Will Not Pass By—Some Bright Sayings of Little Tots—Verses and Short Stories That Will Amuse the Young Folks.

Little Harry, three years old, was informed by his mother that his aunt and little cousin were on the steamer homeward bound from England, and that he ought to ask for their safety in his prayers. Accordingly, he included them nightly in his childish petitions, until they at length arrived. The evening after their return he said his prayers, as usual, at his mother's knee. He paused a moment, and then she was astonished to hear:

Dolly's Birthday.

'Tis your birthday, dearest Dolly,
You are really getting old;
Thirty days, or weeks, or ages,
You have lived, so we are told!
Here are dainties for your birthday,
Toys and goodies, sweets and cakes;
And you know that such occasions
For good cheer a reason makes.
So, my Dolly dear, be merry,
For I'm sure I cannot say
When you'll have another birthday—
Not, perhaps, for many day!
Come, now, dear, what will you choose?
A cake you surely won't refuse?
Well, well, if you've no wish to eat,
We are quite ready for the treat.

BRIGHT SAYINGS OF LITTLE TOTS.

Minister—And so you read the Bible every night?

Little Boy—Yessir. That's the only way I can keep from bein' sent to bed before I'm sleepy.

TOO DUR FOR PARA.

Papa—There are no fish in that stream.

Little Dick—Well, then, you won't have to go 'long to take 'em off th' hook.

A SURE SIGN.

Papa—It is not the thunder, but the electricity.

"How does electricity sour milk?"

"It works certain chemical changes in the constituents of the fluid, which result in the formation of an acid."

"Of course. But how?"

"I don't know."

"I thought you didn't, or you wouldn't 'a' used such big words."—Good News.

THEY WOULD DROP.

"Why do birds in their little nests agree?" asked the pretty school-ma'am of Freddy Fangle.

"Cause they'd fall out if they didn't," Freddy replied with pledge.

A VERY GOOD REASON.

"I know why they call the top of the mountain a peak," said Ronald.

"Why, dear?" asked the nurse.

"Because it sticks at you over 'nother mountain."—Harper's Young People.

KIND TO HER TEACHER.

Mother—Tommy, I hear you got a thrashing in school to-day.

Tommy—Yes, ma, the teacher whipped me, but he is getting old and weak so that it didn't hurt much.

"Did you cry?"

"O, I was terrified so that you could have heard it on the next block."

"Why did you do that?"

"I wanted to make the old man feel happy."

Nipsby Hop.

Nippity hop, hippity hop,
To the corner and back without ever a stop;
Little sister and brother with arms round each other
Do errands for mother at market and shop.

Nippity hop, hippity hip,
Look out, little brother, or sister will slip;
Be nimble and sprightly, take hold of hands tightly,
And laugh as you hippity hop hoppity skip.

Tom's Cool Spot.

Tom's Uncle George was visiting Tom's father over Sunday, and it was very hot.

"My!" cried Uncle George, in despair. "This is the hottest day yet. I'd give a dollar for a cool spot."

"I know one," said Tom.

"Very well," said Uncle George. "Here's your dollar. Take me to it."

Tom took the dollar, then led his Uncle George to and led him away to the cool spot. But Uncle George concluded he wouldn't stay there after all. The cool spot was down in the cellar, in the refrigerator.—Harpers Young People.

Aunt Mary's Diplomacy.

Mamma—You were gone a long time, Bobby.

Bobby—Well, Aunt Mary and I got over a fence and stayed there a long time, 'cos there was a bee in the rose and Aunt Mary said she didn't want to scare it with her red hat.—Judge.

High Praise.

It is by no means uncommon for an Englishman to say to an American: "We know more about your country than you do yourselves, you know. We read so much about it, you know." An illustration of this farreaching information on the part of the Britton in regard to American affairs is at hand in the September number of The Review of Reviews. The "Progress of the World" department in that periodical is under the immediate eye of W. T. Stead himself, if not actually written by him. Yet in this department is the following official announcement, "The silver act has now been repealed at Washington, and there is general expectancy all along the line that something is going to happen." Then even one of the most intelligent journalists in Great Britain announces to his readers that the Sherman silver law was repealed before the middle of September. It is a bad break, Mr. Stead. If you are no more accurate in your psychic facts than in your political information, you will bear considerable watching.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

Many Petitions Presented.—Bills Ordered Paid.—Mr. Marsh Says Mr. Moses Cannot Get His Money Back.—Places for Coasting and "Brushing."—Other Matters.

Last night the City Common Council met in regular session. Besides President Gimus, Councilmen Bird, Erickson, Fisk, Frost, Millington, Marsh, See and Weber, were present. Councilmen Frazee and Johnson were absent.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A petition was read from the residents of Lee place for an electric light on their street. The petition was referred to the Committee on lights.

Patrick Lynch and others petitioned Council to place an electric light on West Second street, between Central avenue and New street. It was granted.

Mr. T. DeProsse and others petitioned Council for a crosswalk at West Second and New Streets. Also for an electric light at that corner. The petitions were referred to the Street and Light Committees, and later granted.

$1000 for Gazelle Engine No. 1.

A communication was read from Mr. D. A. Woodhouse offering $1,000 cash for Gazelle Engine No. 1, to be delivered within 30 days. The offer was accepted.

In communications, the clerks of the Union and Somerset County Boards of Freeholders, stated that the Boards had no jurisdiction in the Sandford avenue bridge.

The reports of City Physician Simpson, Tax Collector Johnson and Treasurer Alex Titsworth were read and filed.

On motion of Mr. Fisk it was ordered that $825 be returned from the general fund to the poor fund. It was also ordered that the notes falling due Nov. 21, for $4500; Nov. 18, for $500, and Nov. 11, for $5,000, be renewed.

To Widen a Portion of Front Street.

An ordinance was passed on its first and second reading in reference to the resetting of the curbing on West Front street from Madison to Central avenues. The idea is to widen the road-bed. The work will be done at the expense of the property owners on that block.

The Fire Chief and Mr. Tunison both Censured.

Mr. See stated that at the last meeting of Common Council Mr. Tunison had been given the privilege to construct an awning of corrugated iron. As Mr. Tunison had erected one of wood, Corporation Counsel Marsh had given his opinion that the awning is an obstruction. The Street Commissioner was authorized to remove it.

President Gimus inquired if the said awning was erected with consent of the fire marshal.

Mr. See said it had been, but that Mr. Doane had not found out what the privilege granted Mr. Tunison was.

Mr. Erickson said it should be the duty of the chief, and he had better find out what he was to superintend.

Mr. Fisk offered a resolution regarding the unpaid assessments for the opening of Orchard place. It was adopted.

Mr. See also offered a resolution, which was adopted, calling for the names of those persons who had refused to pay benefits for the opening of Watchung avenue. The money is to be collected by sale of property if necessary.

At a recent meeting Mr. James Moses asked the Council to return him the money he had paid to the city as called for by the assessment for the proposed extension of Grace street. The matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel, who gave his opinion that the money could not be returned. Mr. Marsh's statement was ordered filed and a copy sent to Mr. Moses.

Of Interest to Boys and Girls and Men With Good Horses.

Mr. Fisk said, "Winter is coming on and we may have snow. If we do, the boys and girls will want a place to coast. As there is no such place I offer an ordinance regarding the same." The ordinance was passed on its first and second readings, and ordered engrossed and advertised. "Broadway Hill" is the place designated.

Mr. Fisk also stated that a place for a little "brush" would also be a good thing for owners of sleighs and horses.

Mr. Marsh asked, "Is that anti-race track?" To which Mr. Fisk replied: "Yes. No track and no coasting."

The ordinance was passed on its first and second readings, and ordered engrossed and advertised. The place designated for such a "brush" is on East Front street, above Richmond street.

If anyone objected to the "brushing," they could make objections, Mr. Fisk said, when the ordinance came up for its final reading.

Council adjourned.

FOOD ROBBERS BUSY.

They Scouring Beef, Pumpkins, Chickens and Lunch at Various Places.

A quantity of prime beef and several cheese pumpkins, that were ready to be put into pies, were stolen from the slaughter house of Israel Lewis on Somerset street, Saturday night. There is no clue of the thieves.

Saturday night thieves helped themselves to fourteen game fowl from the yard of George Perrine of Westfield. Mr. Perrine heard the noise caused by the act and hurried to get his gun. Meanwhile the thieves escaped.

Two young men of North Plainfield drove to Second mountain Sunday to gather nuts. They tied their horse to a tree and roamed about the woods. In the wagon was a fine lunch, composed of sandwiches, pie, fruit and other things. When they returned all was gone, even the "other things." Only crumbs and the empty baskets were left.

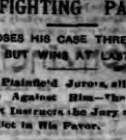
A FIGHTING PARSON.

HE LOSES HIS CASE THREE TIMES, BUT WINS AT LAST.

Of $6 Plainfield Jurors, all but Two were Against Him—The County Court Instructs the Jury to Find a Verdict in His Favor.



IT is a result that will surprise three Plainfield jurors, which had already rendered in the case, a suit came to an end yesterday. The case was tried on appeal at Elizabeth. It was the case of Griffin vs. Springer on a Pennsylvania lease. Suit was brought for $122.50 rent, which fell due while Springer left the leased premises vacant.

Springer said that the lease had been cancelled. The first jury disagreed, having stood 12 to 1 in favor of the tenant; the second jury disagreed, having stood the same as the first; the third jury came in with a verdict in favor of Springer, although the court directed a verdict for the plaintiff Griffin.

Craig A. Marsh represented Mr. Griffin, who by the way has shown that he is a fighting parson from the word go, at once took an appeal and yesterday won it before the County Court and a jury from the county at large. The verdict was in favor of Mr. Griffin for the full amount of his claim, and carries with it against Mr. Springer the costs of all four trials.

Mr. Marsh realized that there was considerable uncertainty about settling a verdict from a local jury in favor of an absentee landlord against a Plainfield tenant, and so, in each case, he moved that the jury instruct the jury in force that there was no legal defense and that their verdict should be for the plaintiff. This motion the court granted in each case, and it seemed to be a new thing to the opposite counsel and to the juries. But evidently it was the right thing, for the Court of Common Pleas granted the same motion, and this jury rendered their verdict in favor of Mr. Griffin without leaving their seats.

OF INTEREST TO WORKINGMEN.

The Library is open daily from nine a. m., until 12, from two until six p. m., and from 7 to 9 until nine p. m. The Library receives regularly 87 periodicals containing many fine articles, scientific and technical, and the more important and popular magazines and reviews, American and English. Current numbers of these are always kept on the tables in the reading room, and are always open to public examination. The well stocked shelves, containing now something over 1200 volumes. Readers are invited to go to these and help themselves as they are at their own homes. Assistance is always being proffered during the day, however, part of whose duty it is to assist readers in finding the books of which they are in search, or to direct them to the books on the subject in which they are interested. Saturday evening, the busiest evening of the whole week, for on this night book rowers who find it impossible to get to the Library in the day time to exchange their books, come to provide themselves with reading for the coming week.

To become a borrower the Library requires that the form, with which the applicant is furnished, should be properly filled out and the signature of a responsible person obtained as a reference. Any inhabitant of the city of Plainfield over 13 years of age can become a borrower upon compliance with the above regulations. In addition to these requirements North Plainfielders may obtain membership by the payment of $1 per annum, which entitles them to all the Library's privileges.

The reading room and art gallery are, of course, open to all, whether they are borrowers or not. The art gallery contains many excellent works of art and temporarily, also Col. Scott's interesting collection of Indian curiosities, such as articles of wearing apparel, arrows, wampum, canips, a fine war bonnet, loans to the Library by Mrs. Scott and Navajo Indians, etc. Mr. Fountain's collection is of peculiar interest to Plainfielders generally as well as to the student in archæology, being a purely local collection. It comprises arrow heads, spear points and stones worked by the Indians for various purposes. The gallery has, also, a fine case of stuffed birds, as also the reading room, that in the reading room having been presented to the institution by Dr. Endicott. The gallery hours are shorter than the library hours, being in Winter from 10 until 12 in the morning and from two until four in the afternoon.

Says He is 121 Years Old.

An inmate of the poor farm, near Stelton, only a few miles South of Plainfield, named Noah Bebby, lays claim to the age of 121 years. He says he was born April 1, 1772, at Eatontown, N. C. His father was an Indian and his mother a white woman.

Have You Voted?

Polls remain open until seven o'clock this evening.

Mr. Johnson, collector of taxes, reported school monies collected for October, $3,185.65. The report was received and ordered filed.

Superintendent of Schools Maxson reported that he had collected $127.00 tuition money.

It was decided that the schools close for Thanksgiving vacation on Wednesday afternoon, November 29th, and open again on Monday, December 4th.

The Clerk of the Board was instructed to have the usual notices posted of election of one school trustee at charter election in December in place of Rev. W. R. Richards, whose term expires this year.

Mr. E. L. Finch reported that he had been unable to change the loans with the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York for a lower rate of interest than six per cent, and would look further to see what could be done. The Board then adjourned to December 5th.

TO EXPLAIN THE SYSTEM.

The Sewerage Committee to Address a Public Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Board of Trade Messrs. Woolston, J. T. Vail and Dr. Adams were appointed a committee to see the Sewerage Committee of the Common Council and request the members to attend the next Board of Trade meeting and explain to the public just what the approximate cost per tax payer would be for sewerage. They promised to do so. The next meeting of the Board of Trade will be on Thursday evening. The members of the Sewerage Committee of the Common Council are Messrs. Frost, Erickson and See.

Mr. Frost says his detailed report on the Sewage question is in pamphlet form, if anyone wishes to get it.

THOUGHT IT WAS A THIEF.

Northerwood Residents Given a Great Scare.

There was quite a scare at Netherwood last night. The family of Mr. Hemance of Woodland avenue is away. Last night Mr. William Spangenberg went into the basement of Mr. Hemance's house to get the bellow here. He left a light burning in the kitchen. Seeing it he thought the house was being robbed, and prepared to capture the thief, by surrounding the house. After all preparations had been made, Mr. Spangenberg proceeded to blow out the light, and the whole matter was explained.

Washington Park Residents Want Two Marshals.

Marshal Pangborn, at the request of the residents of Washington Park, is circulating a petition asking for another marshal for the summer season. The petition is numerously signed by residents of the section during nights of the coming Winter. The Council at their meeting last night referred the matter to the appointment of two such extra marshals at its next meeting. It is thought by the petitioners getting up the petition that Marshal Pangborn will be one and the other a son of Mr. Washington Park residents want two marshals they will pay his salary themselves. The petition is being liberally signed.

A Colored Sot Arrested.

Last night Agnes Bainford was arrested for drunkenness by Policeman Frederickson. She was cook for Mrs. Cruikshank who also charged her with stealing money that had been given her to pay the gas bill. The prisoner pleaded guilty to both charges and paid Mrs. Cruikshank back the money. The judge then fined her $5.

The Walk Cased In.

The heavy storm of Saturday night was responsible for a painful injury to Mrs. Robert Walker of New street yesterday. The walk at the corner of Fourth and New streets, and in Mrs. Walker stepped upon it, the earth gave way. One of Mrs. Walker's ankles was severely wrenched and her leg was bruised.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The House of Steel.

The most remarkable architectural revolution and evolution in history have been progressing in our large cities, notably Chicago and New York, in the past 10 years. The revolution involves a reversal of nearly all the old ideas of comfort and safety in house building.

The sky scraping steel house developed out of the great need for ground room in the two cities named. Chicago began it, and New York quickly took it up. Ground was so precious that it had to be made the most of. Since buildings could not spread out, they had to push up into the air. The 20 story office building and hotel was the only structure that would pay upon land worth $40,000 or more to the front foot.

A difficulty presented itself in the construction of the sky scraper. If it shot up 20 stories in the air, there could hardly be ground enough got for the necessary thickness of the walls. But "an obstacle is something to be overcome." Why make walls at all? The human body seems to have suggested an idea to some brilliant architect. At least we are told that such was the case. Why not make the skeleton support and cover it with a skin? The idea was made to materialize. The bones of the 20 story house are of steel.

In sandy or marshy soil a great iron plate is laid flat upon the ground, covering all the space that the house is to occupy. It cannot sink or sag one added, for the utmost care is taken to distribute the weight evenly. Into this plate are fixed, from as the rock of ages, a row of steel columns of the height of the first story. Across these at the top are riveted steel girders to support the flooring. To the first row of upright columns is riveted a second row of upright columns for the second story. Thus, with row upon row of steel post and girder, the skeleton is built, until it reaches any height desired. Then the steel framework is merely filled in and covered with a light wall, sometimes brick, again of the beautiful terra cotta, which can be fashioned into designs of great beauty. The possibilities of artistic development in the new style of house are very great.

Cheap Homes In Texas.

In Texas there are still 23,000,000 acres of land which no settler has ever yet occupied. These are under control of the state of Texas herself and are divided into school, railroad, river improvement and irrigation lands. Texas surveyors have divided them again, according to quality, into dry agricultural, watered agricultural, timber and pasture lands. Besides the others included in the above grants there are yet left 4,000,000 acres of unappropriated public ground which settlers can get by simply going and living upon them under the United States homestead laws.

These unoccupied acres are scattered in almost every county of the state. Of the school lands, those where the rainfall is sufficient to irrigate them are sold for $3 an acre, those that need artificial irrigation for $2, while timber land is valued at $5 an acre. The Texas public domain is admirably guarded from the clutches of boomers and speculators. It is sold only to actual settlers in lots not exceeding 640 acres and not less than 80 acres except in case of the purely grazing lands, of which one individual may buy four sections, or three agricultural and one grazing, at $2 an acre. It will thus be seen that there is in Texas still an abundance of good land, the only necessary precaution being that the settler must find out from the county clerk or some one else exactly the character of the land on which he proposes to locate. The terms are exceedingly liberal, the settler being required to pay annually only a fraction of the price of the farm until the debt is defrayed, with interest at 5 per cent.

The silver bullion which, under the Sherman law, the government has been buying annually amounts to within a small fraction of enough to coin into 70,000,000 silver dollars. For this amount of silver, purchased at the market rate, the government pays at present $50,000,000 a year. It therefore has left, after paying for the bullion, enough to make 20,000,000 silver dollars more. This left over bullion is called in coinage parlance "seigniorage." The compromise on which the senate majority so nearly agreed—then split—provided that all this seigniorage should be coined and placed in the United States treasury.

There are at least two great regions in which Chinese are wanted and welcomed. They are Central and South America. A company in San Francisco has contracted to supply 30,000 Chinese laborers to planters in Central and South American states. Another contract made by the same company binds it to supply 10,000 Japanese and Chinese as agricultural laborers in Peru. The latter contract was openly made with the Peruvian consul general at San Francisco. Some nations have not our little prejudice against contract labor.

Mexico is one ahead of even the United States in the transmission of long distance electric lighting. An electric plant on the Rio Grande river sends light to Guadalajara, 17 miles away.

NEWS FROM THE POLLS.

How Things Looked on Election Morning.

FIGHT MAKES HOT IN NEW JERSEY.

In Massachusetts Both Sides Are Claiming a Victory Even Tonight—New York Women Are Told to Vote—Colonizers In Buffalo Arrested.

TRENTON, Nov. 7.—The indications this morning are favorable to a large vote. Race track legislation and in Newark a fight against "the ring" give promise of bringing to the polls flocks of voters as large as the flocks of mosquitoes for which this state is famous. In Newark, as in the cities of Brooklyn and Buffalo, in Jersey's adjoining state, there is a hand to hand encounter with "the ring." The lines are drawn sharply, and the question of racing or no racing is dwarfed into insignificance by a home rule movement.

Over in Hudson county, it is said, the gamblers have decided to sacrifice the Democratic assembly candidates of the Seventh and Eighth districts for a shrievalty candidate, and the same plan will be operated in other districts where it is thought the Republicans have a chance of electing assembly candidates.

In this county, with politics as the only issue, 10 of the 11 districts could be counted on to return Democrats. The Democratic leaders in Union county also feel confident of victory, as do the Democrats of Monmouth county.

There is very little betting on the result, and what there is is almost entirely of a local character.

Both Sides Confident In Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—There are only two opinions upon the result of today's election in Massachusetts, but a great many thinking men are far from being certain which is the right one. The strictly independent and unprejudiced opinion is hard to find, but a careful canvass among the politicians discloses that the scale is apparently tipping toward Republican success. The main fight is over the election of a governor, and as the candidates—John B. Russell, Democrat, and Frederick T. Greenhalge, Republican—are about equally popular, the fight is largely on party lines. Democrats who have in former years so confidently claimed victory are not now so enthusiastic, but they have been working as never before.

Boston has been the field upon which the party has pinned its hope, and by its vote today it will stand or fall. The Republicans awakened to this fact some days ago, and that they realize this is to be the battleground royal was demonstrated when the state committee announced a reward of $100 for the detection of any case of illegal voting. At both the party headquarters this morning the spirit of complete and assured success is given out by the leaders.

Little Interest In Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—Pennsylvania has never known an election, either state or national, in which so little interest has been taken by the public. The fact that there are absolutely no bets, save possibly a hat here or there, to be decided by the result, indicates just how little the people care who is elected.

As far as the state is concerned, the only question to be decided is how large the majority for the Republican state ticket will be. The Democrats concede that it will be, but the Republicans claim 100,000, and conservative Republicans are confident that their majority will reach at least 75,000.

If the claims of the Democrats are substantiated, the result will be a Republican loss, while if those of the sanguine Republicans prove true the Republicans will gain. A majority of 75,000 for the Republican ticket will be about a standoff. There are a few counties in which the Democrats think they will show up strong, but the political candidates, and factional fights in other counties, notably Allegehany, may cause some surprises. Upon the whole, however, there seems but little upon which to predict anything.

The Fight In Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 7.—The morning of the state elections finds the Republicans as confident as ever of an overwhelming plurality for Governor McKinley. Among the grounds of their belief in the success of McKinley are the splendid large and enthusiastic meetings he has held, the division among the Democrats in congress on the tariff question, the effect of unemployed work men and of half time work in so many manufactories and the intense feeling aroused by the suspension of soldiers' pensions.

There is still a disposition to claim the state by not less than 25,000. On the other hand, the Democrats expect to carry this state by not less than 15,000. On the other hand, the Democrats expect to carry this state by not less than 15,000. On the other hand, the Democrats expect to carry this state by not less than 15

WILL WED AN EARL.

Adele Grant, the Famous American Beauty, to Marry in London.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Miss Adele Grant, the famous American beauty and daughter of the late Beach Grant of New York, has announced to the members of her family her engagement to the Earl of Essex, adding that the marriage will be celebrated at the earliest day possible after the necessary legal papers can be drawn, certainly before Christmas.

The Earl of Essex is a widower 36 years old. He succeeded to the title only in September of last year on the death of his grandfather, the sixth earl. He married on July 13, 1892, the daughter of a commoner in Gloucestershire, but who died three years afterward, leaving one child, a son, then not quite 2 years old, who is still living, and if he survives his father will of course succeed to the title.

A cablegram was sent to Boydam Grant yesterday announcing the engagement and asking him to come over and act in loco parentis. If he he cannot come, the bride's first cousin, James P. Scott, son of the late Thomas H. Scott, who is now in London, will give her away.

The engagement, when formally announced, will create a great sensation in London society, where Miss Grant is not only well known for her beauty, but is a favorite guest at the most fashionable London and the country houses. She is of unusual intelligence and conversational

RIOT FEARED IN CAMDEN.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 7.—There is great excitement in this city today. Yesterday Sheriff West received a application of a number of citizens, appointed 500 deputy sheriffs. When this became known, the police commissioners held a special meeting and decided to appoint 500 special policemen to meet the deputy sheriffs. The policemen were sworn in at midnight. They went on duty at 6 o'clock this morning and will remain until the polls are closed.

For fear of serious trouble Colonel Cooper ordered a guard placed on the Sixth regiment armory, after barricading the windows and doors and concealing the ammunition in the building.

The military has been ordered to be in readiness at a moment's call. Captain George S. West has been detailed with a full detachment. He will be officer of the day and will be relieved by Captain Stockham at 6 p. m.

Riot and bloodshed are feared. The court of common pleas had a session during the entire day yesterday and closed without ordering any names stricken from the alleged padded registry lists.

THEY DEFY TILLMAN.

GREENVILLE, S. C., Nov. 7.—There is prospect of serious trouble in what is known as "Dark Corner" section, this (Greenville) county. It is in the mountains joining the North Carolina line and a favorite haunt for moonshiners. An attempt is being made to enforce the state dispensary law there, and Friday a deputy sheriff went up with five warrants.

He failed to find any of his men. He got out with difficulty, being repeatedly fired at from cover. The citizens of the section roughly stirred and seem disposed to defy Governor Tillman, although at the last election they voted for him almost solidly and threw what votes were against him out of the box.

An Injunction on McKane.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Messrs. Johnson and Lamb, counsel for William J. Gaynor, applied to Judge Barnard in Brooklyn today for an injunction to restrain John Y. McKane and his officials from interfering with the Republican watchers who will be appointed to look after their party's interests at the Gravesend election today. The injunction was granted.

Big Boom in the Torpedo Business.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 7.—The branch of the Hotchkiss Ordnance company here has been the scene of unusual activity within the past two weeks. Strict secrecy is maintained. The plant is running night and day. The company is manufacturing the Lowell torpedo.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 7.—While struggling for the possession of a revolver John Miner and his wife fell to the floor, the woman underneath. In this position she succeeded in firing the pistol, the ball entering near Miner's heart, killing him.

Found Dead in His Wagon.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 7.—Chief Samuel Bemish of the Rochester fire department was found dead in his buggy in Greece, ashburn of this city. He horse was walking slowly along the road, and he was leaning back in the buggy.

A Fast Railroad Run.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 7.—The Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern made a running record with President Bacon's special train. The run of 185 miles from St. Louis to Washington, Ind., was made in 185 minutes.

Killed With a Coupling Pin.

LAKE CITY, Fla., Nov. 7.—At Lake City Junction William Dunham, a white man, was killed in the yards with a coupling pin. With this his brains were beat out. Four negroes are suspected.

Missing Man Found.

CAMBRIDGEPORT, Mass., Nov. 7.—Mr. Snow has received a telegram from New York stating that the missing wife was in a hospital in that city with the child.

Says the Vigilant Cannot Cross the Ocean.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The Chronicle says that the Vigilant cannot cross the ocean. It challenges her to make the attempt at any time of the year.

OUR FLAG UNDER FIRE.

CONSUL BAKER WAS A PASSENGER.

LA LIBERTAD, Honduras, Nov. 7.—Honduras has fired upon the American flag. By the alleged orders of President Vasquez and by the express command of the commissioner of the port of Amapala, seven cannon shots were fired after the Pacific mail steamship Costa Rica, flying the stars and stripes, as she steamed away, because she refused to surrender one of her passengers to the Honduras government.

United States Minister Baker was on board the Costa Rica at the time. The passenger about whom the trouble arose is Policarpo Bonilli, who recently led the revolution in Honduras, but was defeated by General Vasquez.

He then fled to Nicaragua, and with 200 of his adherents joined the army of President Sacasa, who was engaged in an attempt to quell a rebellion.

Consul Baker on Board.

Bonilla had decided to leave Nicaragua in order to relieve the government from all responsibility of harboring him. He therefore sailed for Corinto for Guatemala on Nov. 4 on the Costa Rica. American Minister Baker and more than 100 other persons were his fellow passengers.

They arrived in the harbor of Amapala, a port of entry of Honduras on the Pacific coast, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon Commander of the Port Villa demanded that Captain Dow should surrender Bonilla.

Could Not Scare Captain Dow.

A government officer came on board at 2:30 o'clock Monday morning, saying that new orders had been received from the president insisting on the delivery of Bonilla or the bombardment of the ship.

Captain Dow replied that the commander of the port would receive his answer in half an hour, but before that time had expired he steamed away.

Seven shots were fired after the Costa Rica, although she flew the American flag. None of the shots struck her, however, but it is feared the steamship City of Panama of the same line, which was lying in the port, may have been injured, because the firing continued for some time after the Costa Rica was out of range.

The congress of Honduras has conferred upon President Vasquez full power to make war upon Nicaragua whenever a revolution or an invasion of revolutionists from that republic occurs.

Cut the Throats of Sleeping Men.

CHANDLER, O. T., Nov. 7.—Three white men—two brothers named Johnson and a brother-in-law—were murdered last night by a negro near the town of Ingram. The negro came upon the men while they were asleep and cut their throats with a knife. The negro was pursued by a posse, and it is reported here that he was captured in the Lackapoo Indian lands.

Train Robbers Still Penned.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 7.—The men engaged in hunting down the Iron mountain train robbers have been in their saddles for the past 48 hours. The robbers are in close quarters near Jamestown, where the posse has them surrounded. If they attempt to break through the circle, it will be at the risk of their lives, as the hunters are becoming desperate.

Voting For County Seats.

BUFFALO, Nov. 7.—At today's election in Cattaraugus county a vote is being taken on the question of moving the county seat from Little Valley to Salamanca. In Chautauqua county the voters are to decide whether the county seat shall be moved from Mayville to Jamestown.

MELLO BUYS TUGS.

A Plot to Sink Admiral Peixoto's New Warships.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—If the plots now being contrived by the friends of Admiral Mello in this city succeed, Admiral Mello's country will never recognize the flag of the navy by the rapid way in which President Peixoto has improvised a fleet of ships in the harbor, the rebels have been completely overcome by numbers and are now in a very formidable fix. El Cid, could he prevented from carrying out her errand of vengeance. Every diplomatic or legal means whereby her departure could be delayed or prevented has been tried, only to result in failure.

Now as a last resort it has been resolved to attempt to attack and destroy her in midocean by treacherous means.

If the present plans are carried out, two powerful tugs will approach her as if on friendly terms and then without warning ram her again and again until her battered and broken hull sinks beneath the waves, carrying down with her her dynamite gun, her Hotchkiss rifles and her crew of American tars. Once she is gone, the other members of Peixoto's new fleet will be rapidly sent to follow her until all are destroyed.

Two of the newest and most powerful ships in the harbor, the R. C. Veit and the P. H. Wise, have been practically purchased by the Brazilian rebels. They will undoubtedly be used in waging war against the fleet of impromptu war vessels which President Peixoto's government is gathering in American waters.

There's nothing So GOOD as Cottolene

The new vegetable shortening. Wherever introduced, it drives lard from the kitchen, and indigestion from the household. It has been tried by every test, and has met every requirement. It is as much superior to lard as the electric light is to the tallow-dip. The only question now is, will you give your family the benefits which its use bestows?

There's nothing LIKE Cottolene

In composition, in healthfulness, in flavor, or in economy. Its success has called out a lot of imitations and counterfeits made for the sole purpose of selling in the place and on the merits of Cottolene. Avoid them all. They are made to sell and they are a sell. Get the genuine COTTOLENE.

SECTION 1. That pursuant to the petition of Charles P. Sotting, Lebbeus L. Manning, Joel B. Manning, John Dunham, the Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Sarah Dunham, owners of property on the southeasterly side of West Front street, between Madison and Central avenues, and the owners of property on the northwesterly side of West Front street, between Madison and Central avenues, the curb line on the southeasterly side of West Front street, between Madison and Central avenues, be and the same is hereby established on a line two feet southeasterly of the southeasterly side of said street, and parallel therewith, and said property owners are granted permission to build in front of the curb line so established,

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE DARTER.

A Handsome Bird With Many and Remarkable Peculiarities.

This strange bird has a very long, slender, snakelike head and neck. When swimming, the body is generally under the water, the neck and head only being seen. This view of the darter is very puzzling to any one seeing it for the first time, the head and neck twisting in a manner so much like a serpent that the spectator fancies he is looking at a water snake. When among the trees, the body hidden by the foliage, it is curious to see the head and neck darting from side to side among the leaves. The darter is found in warm climates and prefers the banks of rivers and marshes. Its manner of feeding is curious. It swallows small fish whole, and it is said that having captured a number the darter will spread off to the young, then open its mouth, and the young ones in turn pick out with their beaks a fish from the gullet of the parent.

The darter is about 3 feet long, of a deep green color, variegated with silver white. Its eyes, which are blue, are laid in a large nest built of sticks upon trees growing in the marshes.

The strange form and beautiful plumage of this bird would alone attract one. But when we know more of its habits, its manner of feeding the young, that it is a good flier when once on the wing (though it has some difficulty in getting under way in the air), a splendid swimmer and diver and an expert fisher, the darter becomes highly interesting.

A Fellow's Mother.

Who does the most for a fellow, say?
Who brings him up from his baby's day?
Who starts him off in the proper way?
A fellow's mother.

Who sits up when the evening's come
And helps him along with his school's hard sum
Or reads him a book the library from?
A fellow's mother.

Who keeps a fellow all in trim,
And brightens him up when things get dim?
Who thinks the boss who's the world of him?
A fellow's mother.

Whom should we love with a love so warm?
Whom should we buy from all care and harm?
Whom should we shield with a strong right arm?
A fellow's mother.

A Youthful Pessimist.

Any boy or girl who doesn't know what a pessimist is should be sure to read the following, says an exchange. Jeremiah, who is 12 years old, is already a confirmed pessimist. Among the things he continually grumbles about are his lead pencils, which never have points and to sharpen which he always has to borrow a knife of some schoolmate.

"Why don't you have a knife of your own, Jerry?" one of the boys asked.

"Got no pockets to keep it in," said Jerry.

"Then why don't you have a pocket?"

"If I had one, 'd have a hole in it."

"Well, even then you wouldn't be any worse off than you are now."

"Hm! Yes, I should. 'If I had a pocket 'n a hole in it, I never'd have anything to lose through it!"

Jerry sighed deeply and went on whittling his pencil with the dull blade of the other boy's knife.

Margery's Monster.

I once had a neighbor called Margery Daw,
Who firmly believed everything that she saw,
And one summer day I was taken to see
A "monster"—she termed it so—under a tree.

The "monster" was standing as still as a post,
And Margery Daw could do nothing but boast
Of the marvel she found. I agreed that of course
It was odd for an ox to end off like a horse.

But I said, "There is one thing sufficiently clear:
You're a sad little gooney, Miss Margery, dear,
And as for your 'monster,' let's go round and see
How he looks not divided in two by the tree!"

A Dog Story.

A story told by a resident of Boston shows that at least one St. Bernard dog has not only reasoning faculties, but also almost more than human sympathy. The dog belongs to a little girl who is extremely fond of it, and usually it is quite willing to be her playfellow. However, one morning the dog wanted to go a-field with the men, and all the blandishments of the little mistress failed to turn him from his purpose. Even her commands and calls made no impression. Away he went after the men and the horses. When the little maid saw that she was deserted, she broke out into a violent fit of weeping. The dog, hearing the child's cries, stopped, hesitated a moment as if considering the matter, and then turned about and came to her. Consideration for her grief completely conquered his selfish determination to enjoy himself in his own way, and he made no further effort to leave her.

THE HOUSEHOLD

HOW TO MAKE AN APPLE PIE.

The Just How of Having It Just Right. Directions For the Inexperienced.

To the practiced cook the following directions may seem foolishly explicit, but inexperienced housekeepers and young girls learning to cook like to be told just how to combine materials, and with such information can sometimes outdo the woman who tells "by the feeling of her elbow" how much sugar or salt to use.

Pie Paste—For one pie use 1¼ cupfuls of sifted flour, a small half cup of lard, a fourth of a cupful of ice water, a saltspoonful of salt and a large pinch of baking powder. Place the flour in a pan, sift the salt and baking powder over it, add the lard and with a chopping knife mix the lard thoroughly with the flour. It is well to provide more than the exact amount of ice water, but be careful to use as little as will readily get the crust into shape. Mix with the tips of the fingers, adding but little water at a time and handling as little as possible. Endeavor, as you become experienced, to roll your crusts to the exact dimensions, as usually is can be managed, that there may be little to trim off and mold over.

For seasoning one pie, three-fourths of a cupful of granulated sugar will be needed. Put in a bowl and add a tiny pinch of salt, half a teaspoonful of cinnamon and 2 heaping tablespoonfuls of flour. Mix these together and sprinkle a little over the bottom crust before putting in the apple. Of course you will have pared and sliced a sufficient quantity of apple as the first step in your piemaking. The quantity needed can be best decided by heaping them upon the tin or plate to be used. The thickest possible pie and a large pinch are the dimensions upon which the pies of these notes were built.

Place the apple in the lined plate in three layers, with the mixed seasoning over each and a grating of nutmeg over the top layer. Wet the edges of the under crust with milk before putting the top crust on and pinch or fold closely. Milk makes the edges adhere more securely than if they are merely wet with water. Cut a small slit in the top crust or prick whatever sort of vent and ornamentation you fancy. The sugar being mixed with flour will thicken as it melts, and the juices of the pie be in little danger of baking out.

A quick oven is needed for pies, and an apple pie should only be pronounced done when there is danger of baking the crust too long, for thorough cooking renders the apple rich and toothsome. Red Astrakhan apples, fall pippins, Rhode Island Greenings and Northern Spys make each in their season delicious pies, but a Good Housekeeping correspondent, the author of these directions, declares that there are apples from which no amount of skill can evoke its interior substance for a perfect pie.

Button Bags For the Housewife.

The button or darning bag is a comfort to the busy wife and mother, and may be fashioned prettily enough to be brought out at a moment's notice. An attractive affair of the kind, described by Golden Days, is of a chamois skin, the top finished with scallops, while below is a casing in which to run the drawing string. All about the edges falls a cut fringe of the chamois doll.

THE BUTTON BAG.

cately tinted with gold paint. In the center of the bag half a dozen stray buttons are outlined in water colors and lustre paints.

A cretonne button bag is an antique looking trifle, with its big bright hued blossoms scattered across a sober colored background. The edges of one of these quaint button receptacles have been garnished by its clever maker with a solid row of pearl buttons, this odd decoration revealing the practical use to which the rather giddy looking bag is put.

Why Not Try a "Quotation Party?"

A pleasant entertainment for a few friends is called a quotation party. When the invitations are sent out, the request accompanies them that the recipient will come to the party with three quotations memorized. When these quotations are given, the name of the author is to be guessed by any one of the company who can do so. The first one who guesses correctly receives a favor, usually a flower, or a bit of bright colored ribbon that can be tied in the buttonhole may be substituted. Of course the one to win the greatest number of favors is the hero of the hour.

Teach the Child a Song.

"Music lessens care and heartache. Often and often the words of a song, the sweet melody, linger in the heart after the voice is silent and keep alive the courage which has almost died.

"Song sweetens toil, and it is impersuative," urges an exchange, "that parents and teachers should aim to increase this means of happiness for the children, if for no other reason than to strengthen their minds and hearts for the labors to be borne in maturer years."

Glazed Onions.

For these choose small onions. Trim them neatly, lay them in a well buttered pan, sprinkling them well with powdered sugar. Shake them gently over the fire till they begin to color, then add to them a little stock and some salt and let them cook gently, shaking the pan very gently now and again till they are cooked and nicely colored. If the pan is shaken roughly, the onions are liable to break.

CAREFULLY SELECTED MATTER THAT THEY MAY READ.

The Sayings of Clever Children Told that Bright Ones May Read—Interesting Prose and Poetry all Containing Information.

Young America does not like to be beaten. After a very patriotic speech before a youthful debating society, a week or so ago, a small boy of twelve wound up with the following peroration: "Not only, fellow countrymen, did we beat, rout, and utterly annihilate the British in our glorious war for independence, but we, too, have 'a son that never sets,' although they think they are the only fellows which have that proud distinction. For when it is 6 o'clock at Attu Island, Alaska, it is 9 o'clock a. m. the next day at Mr. Bi-ne's home in Portland, Maine Hurrah for the red, white and blue."

AN ALPHABETICAL JINGLE.

Said Master A to Master B,
We'll go and call on Master C,
And after that on Uncle D,
If they are willing, and Master E.
We must ask after Master F,
Poor gentleman he's rather deaf.
And after that we'll take our tea
With cousin Gog and cousin Magog.
They went and met with Master H
Who has a nephew, Master I—
He'll be a great man by-and-by.
Who, with his cousin, Master J,
Goes to the school across the way,
Kept by the great Professor K,
So great none can him excel
Except the great Professor L,
Who gave his best boy, Master M,
A present of a lovely gem,
Picked up within a lonely glen
Upon the land of Farmer N.
This farmer was, as you must know,
The father of young Master O.
And very fond of tarts was he,
Though not so fond as Master P,
Who never would buy less than two
Out of the shop of Mister Q,
'Tis said he ate too much by far,
And tarts, you know, most tempting are
His father sent for Doctor R,
Who came and said,—"I can't do less
Than bid you send for Doctor S.
I know he cured wild Master T,
Who ate unripe fruit from the tree.
Believe me, sir, that I speak true,
But if you don't, ask Mister U,
Who sent his son last week to see
With that bold sailor, Captain V.
Or if you think it wouldn't trouble you,
Just ask my neighbor, Mister W,
A man I would not like to vex—
He is so kind to poor old X.
But I must off, I'll tell you why,
I have to visit Mister Y,
To collect from him a fee,
And then call on Mister Z."

AMONG THE ANIMALS.

"My dear," said old Mr. Monkey to his wife, "I wish you'd give the baby some oil or vaseline for his throat."

"Why, my dear Baboon?" queried Mrs. Monkey.

"He squeaks dreadfully every time he opens his mouth."

THE SARCASTIC GIRAFFE.

"I want a collar," said the giraffe, going into a collar and cuff store.

"Here is the latest New York style," said the salesman.

"Dear me!" cried the giraffe. "That is too high. How much neck do you suppose I've got?"

THOUGHT HE WAS SOMEWHERE ELSE.

"Now, see here," said the elephant to the mosquito, "if you don't stop singing in my ear, I'll hurt you."

"Dear me! Excuse me," returned the mosquito. "I really didn't mean to; but your ear is so large I thought it was the Mammoth Cave."—Harper's Young People.

PLEA FOR THE BOYS.

They have earned their quiet joys;
And everywhere, from East to West,
The boys must still be boys.

They do not want your larger sight,
Nor want your wisdom grim;
The boy has right to the boy's delight,
And play is the work for him.

The idle day is the evil day,
And work is the time to be right,
But be that wrestles best in the play
Will rustle best in the fight.

Then do not as their hours run by
Their harmless pleasure clip.
For he that sails his kite to the sky
May some time sail a ship.

And soon enough the years will steal
Their mood of frolic joys!
So keep your shoulder to the wheel,
And let the boys be boys.

FOR BRIGHT CHILDREN.

A Little Fun Gathered From Here and There.

A mother had been telling her little son Harry about Jack Frost. She taught him a pretty song about him, and said, "Watch, Harry, and some morning soon you will see him."

One morning not long after ward Harry went out to play. A moment later he came running in very much excited, crying:

"Oh, mamma, mamma! Jack Frost has come! I saw his tail sticking out of the rain-water spout." The child had seen an icicle.

IMPROVING A DOG.

Lady—Why did you have your dog's tail cut off?

Boy—To make him more affectionate.

Lady—How? Did that do it?

Boy—Yes'm. He can wag all the time now without gettin' tired.—Good News.

PAST TENSE.

Music Teacher—Harry, what does the letter t over a bar or a stave in music mean?

Teacher—Correct. Now, what does f mean?

Harry—Two-Forty.—Harper's Young People.

This Date In History—Nov. 7.

1805—Battle of Prague in the "Thirty Years' War."

The New York test oaths quote that passage of the United States constitution which says, "Representative and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included in this Union according to their respective numbers." The Sun adds out of its own head, "Does not this mean that direct taxation levied upon the states in proportion to their population is the rigid method of supplying the temporary treasury deficit?"

Even the fires have been something unprecedented in this record breaking year of 1893. During its first nine months losses by fire were $26,840,000 greater than for the same time in 1892, in some cases payments on fire losses have broken up insurance companies. Not less than 12 of these companies will go out of business at the beginning of 1894, because of bad luck in 1893.

An innocent, confiding woman on Long Island was lately swindled out of $13,000 by a pair of rascals by means of the ancient and duby gold dust fraud. Why don't people read the newspapers? For goodness sake, why don't they read the newspapers?

Jackson S. Shultz, the first president of the board of health of New York city, gave the following decision, "No individual or association of individuals has the right to conduct any work that obliges citizens to close their windows."

THE GREAT ELECTION!

Republican Victories Everywhere!

CANDIDATES ELECTED BY THE LARGEST REPUBLICAN MAJORITIES EVER KNOWN.

Kyte Holds the Record for Union County for Any Office.—Voorhees from Union and Thompson from Somerset Have the Record for Republican Senators in these Counties.

"It's all over!"

New Jersey by yesterday's election has at last done herself honor. She has overthrown the thugs and criminals, gamblers and blacklegs generally who were placed in power by Democratic votes to the everlasting disgrace of the State and the party.

The votes of respectable Democrats helped to do it, and we trust they at least realize that our only hope of decent government lies in the Republican party, whose victory we are sure will be found the harbinger of all that is good for the welfare of the people.

It was a State election in 12 States, and the action taken by them shows that the people elsewhere have become as sick of Democratic rule as has New Jersey. The only reason that the National election could not have been held yesterday, when the people undoubtedly would have repaired the awful blunder they made last Fall. Then they swept from power the Republican party and the wise administration of President Harrison. They turned the country over to the Democracy, and, in a few short months what a change!

With the Republicans in power the policy of protection brought years of the greatest prosperity the country had ever known. Yet even so brief a period of Democratic rule has brought an end to all this and made the worst times ever known in this great land.

This vicinity has nothing to reproach itself for. It remained true in sunshine and storm to the principles of the party which has been true to the people, and yesterday the election was no exception to the rule.

The election here passed off quietly. There was the usual vote, and Plainfield and North Plainfield gave their usual Republican majorities for the ticket, but the majority for Kyte in Plainfield, for Sheriff, is something extraordinary. The fact it does not appear that his majority in this city has ever been equaled by any candidate, while no Republican seems to have ever equaled his majority all over the county. The majority for Foster M. Voorhees for Senator is also the greatest ever given in Union county to any Republican for that office.

In Somerset the same may be said of Thompson for Senator, whose majority of 603 is probably the largest ever received by any Republican in that county.

The vote in detail is as follows:

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Alleged Diet For Brain Workers.

Some fellow who worked on space and had to pad to fill up has been laying down a regimen for brain workers, meaning authors and newspaper people. He says brain workers should never "go" for more than eight hours a day. What he means by that is not clear, unless perhaps he fancies he is reporting a horse race. If you are a "brain worker," says this blessed idiot, you should have a cup of coffee and some toast at 6:30. Then you may write an hour. Between 8 and 9 have a "thoroughly good breakfast" and a short walk. Then sit down and work your mighty intellect from 9 till 12, never longer. Then "saunter" in the open air half an hour, then eat some more, nothing much, only something "light," like a meat chop with bread and pudding. Then between 1 and 2 you must "saunter" again, then at 2 o'clock drink a cup of black coffee and work till 4. Drink a cup of tea and rest till 5, then write another hour. At 7 eat a great big dinner and drink some more black coffee. At 10:45—O ye gods—eat some more, this time toast and chocolate, and go to bed. Thus the "brain worker" eats five times a day and drinks seven or eight times. It is enough to kill a mule. The man's stomach would never have half an hour's sight or day to rest. Away with this lunatic with his black coffee, tea and his five meals a day! The man who should attempt to follow such advice would be dead or crazy in six months. Nothing worse than black coffee, except it be alcohol, can be taken into the stomach of the brain worker.

Commandments For the Novelist.

There are 11 of them instead of 10, according to Mr. Walter Besant. Anthony Trollope always said that a novel writing was a trade to be learned like any other—by industrious pegging away. Walter Besant, on the other hand, insists that it is an art, and a very high art indeed, though he, too, declares that success in it is to be reached by pegging away. For the highest success, however, there must be an inborn genius. The would-be novelist must have the gift of observation; he must train his power of description; he must draw characters clearly, and he must strive without ceasing to attain style. Mr. Besant lays great stress on style. It will be a long time, he says, before the aspirant can gain a style of his own, but the only thing to do is to "go on." Only the best authors are to be read, and Thackeray is one of the best.

1. Practice writing something original every day.
2. Cultivate the habit of observation.
3. Write chiefly at Sunday leisure.
4. Read no rubbish.
5. Aim at the formation of style.
6. Eschew the art of the dramatic.
7. A great element of dramatic skill is selection.
8. Avoid the sin of writing about a character. Never attempt to describe any kind of life except that with which you are familiar.
10. Learn as much as you can about men and women.
11. For the sake of forming a good natural style and acquiring command of language, write poetry.

Vertical Handwriting.

Professor Joseph B. Witherbee, writing in The Popular Science Monthly, calls for universal reform in penmanship. He says the demand among business men now is for a style of penmanship that can be written rapidly and easily read. The typical present fashion, with its sloping letters, is so far from meeting these requirements that commercial firms complain boys now do not begin to write so well as the boys of a generation ago did.

The kind of hand that will fill the bill Professor Witherbee finds in the straight up and down style, the letters being written without tendency to slant in any direction. He claims that this is the natural style, and that the slanting chirography is only obtained after long and painful effort on the part of the pupil. The vertical handwriting is much more easily read than the sloping one, just as the plain letters of ordinary print are more easily read than italics.

In England the reform has so far progressed that the civil service examiners require the upright writing on the part of applicants and will accept no other. This is on account of its greater legibility. Vertical style copybooks have already been published in England, and on the whole we may look upon this as the handwriting of the future.

The turning down by the Roman inquisition of St. George Mivart and his theory that there can be anything but unhappiness in hell takes away the last drop of consolation from some people. Father Clarke of the Jesuit society informs the public that Mivart's view is condemned alike by the congregation of the inquisition and the congregation of the index, as contrary to Roman Catholic teaching. As a faithful Catholic, therefore, Professor Mivart will now have to give up his doctrine as erroneous and declare that it was all a mistake—his allowing any comfort whatsoever to the inhabitant of hell.

The late Dr. Philip Schaff was a Swiss by birth. Believing the Christian theology with all his heart, he was at the same time one of the most fearless men of his generation and easily the foremost Biblical scholar of the world.

BIG REPUBLICAN GAINS.

An Unexpected Landslide in New York State.

MANHATTAN CRUSHED DEPEW?

In New Jersey the Antirent Track Ticket Makes a Close Sweep, and There Were Big Republican Gains—Pennsylvania Republicans Rolled Up Good Majorities.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The election in New York state resulted in an overwhelming victory for the Republicans. Edward T. Bartlett, Republican candidate for judge of the court of appeals, is elected over Isaac H. Maynard, the Democratic candidate, by the largest plurality given for any state office. Grover Cleveland defeated Mr. Folger. It will certainly be over 75,000 and may easily reach 80,000.

The rest of the Republican state ticket is elected by a plurality of from 20,000 to 30,000. There seems to be no prospect but that the legislature has gone the way of the rest of the state and passed under Republican control.

The Democratic leaders still refuse to admit this and claim that at the very worst they will retain the senate. The returns already in do not bear out this idea.

Governor Flower was interviewed on the situation as follows:

"The Republicans have elected their state ticket," he said. "The legislature is in doubt. The Republicans will probably control the constitutional convention. The result is surprising, but seems to have been general throughout the country and can only be attributed to the business depression and the thousands of men out of work."

New York city gave Maynard less than half the regular Democratic majority. In Kings county the Republicans made a clean sweep, in Lieutenant Governor Sheehan's own (Erie) county the Republican majority is from 4,000 to 10,000. Monroe county doubles its usual Republican majority.

The legislative contests resulted in Republican success in nearly every doubtful district. In Hudson county the fight between Morris, Democrat, for the senate and Robertson, Republican, is still in doubt, but latest returns favor Robertson.

There is little chance that the constitutional convention will not be controlled by a Republican majority.

The vote for judges of the court of appeals was: Maynard, Democrat, 40,857; Bartlett, Republican, 127,611; Bartlett's majority, 86,754.

The Vote In the States.

H. C. Baker, Republican, is elected to the assembly from Clinton county by about 1,500. F. V. Kilburn is elected to the senate from the Twenty-first district by about 7,000.

Auburn gave Meyer 1,861; Palmer, 2,657; Maynard, 1,320; Bartlett, 2,726.

Oswego city, which usually gives a Democratic majority of 600, went Republican by 5 votes for the first time since 1868.

Albany gave Meyer 13,893; Palmer, 7,527. Republican Democratic leaders concede all the Republican senatorial candidates to be elected with the exception of McCarren's opponent. They also give Baldwin's majority at from 5,000 to 7,000.

Bartlett, Republican, and Smith, Republican, are elected to the assembly from Steuben county. Chemung county goes Republican by 1,500, and elected van 100 behind his ticket. Otsego county goes Republican by 50. Herkimer county goes Republican by 1,200. Mayor Hunt ran 180 behind his ticket. Saxton carries Tompkins county for senator by 750 majority. Putnam county's Republican ticket is elected. Hamilton Fish is elected assemblyman.

The Democratic ticket carried the day in Columbia county, all the candidates receiving majorities except Maynard for judge of the court of appeals. He is beaten by more than 200, while Meyer, for secretary of state, has a majority of about 150. Hoysradt, Democrat, is elected to the assembly. Collins for senator is probably elected.

With four districts lacking the estimated returns make the vote of Tioga county as follows: Palmer, 3,299; Meyer, 2,163; Bartlett, 3,266; Maynard, 2,067. Howe, Republican, is elected to the assembly by over 1,200 plurality. O'Connor, Republican, is elected to the senate from the Twenty-fifth district.

Estimating a dozen districts, Cayuga county will give a plurality of 2,000 for Bartlett and 2,600 for Palmer. Wilcox, Republican, is elected assemblyman by 1,700 plurality, and Sarto for senator has 2,100.

For secretary of state Troy gives Meyer 10,238 and Palmer 4,346.

Maynard was beaten in Queens County. The remainder of the Democratic state ticket was elected by a reduced majority. The majority in the Democratic city will be about 3,000. It is not believed that the Democrats will have 1,000 majority this year. From the latest returns the Democrats have elected the county for their state ticket, minus Maynard. Childs, Republican, for senator, carries Queens county by estimated majority of 500. Dem ocratic Leve re elected James Robinson, the Jeffersonian Democratic candidate for assembly in the First district. The Republicans have elected Jeffrey Hazzard, assembly in the Second district, also Tacheron to the assembly in the Third district. Gleason is snowed under. He ran for both senate and assembly.

C. W. Pound, Republican, is elected senator in the Twenty-ninth district, and John H. Clark, Republican, is elected assemblyman in Niagara county.

The Senate is sewed up in all safety now this morning show the election of four Republican senators and one Republican.

Edmund H. Thompson, Republican, is elected to the assembly from the First assembly district of Dutchess county.

In Long Island City Patrick Fleming, ex-assessor and Independent Democratic candidate for senator and assemblyman, received but few votes, and Jeffersonian claim he is completely snowed under.

Matthews, Republican, is elected assemblyman by 1,500 in Franklin county.

Governor Flower Interprets the News.

ALBANY, Nov. 8.—The Democratic state leaders in this city practically gave the state to their opponents in the Republican watchlight, but hoped to save the legislature. Returns were received at the executive chamber by telegraph of notable officials, including Senator Hill, Governor Flower, Attorney General Rosendale, State Engineer and Surveyor Adams, Comptroller Campbell, Colonel Johnson and Colonel McEwan.

During the earlier hours of the evening it became apparent that the state was lost to the Democrats, and they had very little to say. At 10 o'clock all hope of saving the state ticket was given up.

When it was seen that the Republican state ticket was elected, the Republican clubs gathered together, and headed by a band proceeded to the home of General Sickles, the Democratic secretary of state. They were accompanied by an immense throng of people, and when General Sickles appeared on the balcony of his home he was cheered for Republican party had electioned itself and thrown off the thrall of Democracy.

At midnight Governor Flower expressed himself regarding the result in New York state as follows: "The Republicans have elected their state ticket. The legislature in this state is in doubt. The Republicans will probably control the constitutional convention. The result is surprising, but seems to have been general throughout the country and can only be attributed to the business depression and the thousands of men out of work."

The election here was possibly more exciting than ever before. For days the streets were filled with people discussing the situation, and the greatest interest was manifested in the result. Democrats were confident to the last that they would have a majority in the assembly, and Republicans were equally confident that they would not. The Democrats claimed that they would have a majority of from 10 to 15 on joint ballot.

The election was not very lively, and only a small vote was polled. Early in the day the Democrats were very much encouraged by the reports from the city, but as the day wore on they became more and more depressed. Democrats who had been confident that they would have a majority in the assembly, and Republicans were equally confident that they would not. The Democrats claimed that they would have a majority of from 10 to 15 on joint ballot.

The election was not very lively, and only a small vote was polled. Early in the day the Democrats were very much encouraged by the reports from the city, but as the day wore on they became more and more depressed. Democrats who had been confident that they would have a majority in the assembly, and Republicans were equally confident that they would not. The Democrats claimed that they would have a majority of from 10 to 15 on joint ballot.

GREENHALGE ELECTED.

The Republicans Swept the Old Bay State.

M'KINLEY WINS AGAIN IN OHIO.

The Buckeye State Gives the Premier of the Tariff Bill a Majority of 50,000—Democratic Victorious in Virginia and Maryland—Republicans Gain In Illinois.

BOSTON, Nov. 8.—The result of the election in Massachusetts can only be described as a huge political landslide. For the first time in three years the state will have a Republican governor, and his plurality is 30,000 at the least. The whole ticket is elected with him, and the legislature is solidly Republican in both branches.

Candid Democrats had conceded the defeat of John E. Russell, their candidate for governor, by a small majority, while even the most sanguine Republicans would not claim over 15,000 for Greenhalge.

The astonishing result is attributed by those Democrats who are willing to look at it to the present industrial depression, aided by the fact that Massachusetts is normally a Republican state, as is always proven by her vote on presidential candidates.

The Republicans are so jubilant that they are very little about the causes. The day was a beautiful one, and according to tradition was perfect for the bringing out of a heavy Republican vote. Early in the day it was seen that a big total would be polled, and the very first returns that began to come in showed that the Republicans were gaining. A very significant report was that from Greenfield, the birthplace of Hon. John E. Russell, the Democratic candidate, where, from a Democratic plurality of 12 last year, Greenhalge got a plurality of 182.

In this city alone the loss was 4,283. John E. Russell's plurality was reduced to 10,295.

The same story was repeated in a like ratio from all over the state and at 7 o'clock it was evident that Greenhalge was triumphantly elected. After that it was merely a question of his plurality.

The Prohibitionist vote did not differ materially from last year's figures, the Populists managed to increase their total 100 per cent. The Socialist-Labor vote was insignificant. The scenes in Newspaper row, where all the papers displayed bulletins, rivaled those of a presidential election. It is estimated that 50,000 people swarmed in the narrow space on Washington street, where the news was received. It was an enthusiastic crowd, but the early forecasts of Greenhalge's election made the cheering somewhat one sided.

Much interest was shown in the returns from New York, and the apparent defeat of Maynard was received with general applause. The throng finally got tired of watching the returns and indulged in hat smashing and rushing, which had to be quelled by the police several times, and some heads were broken as a result. By midnight the huge assemblage had dispersed.

The headquarters for the jubilant Republicans was at the American House, where the Republican Club of Massachusetts held forth. All the prominent politicians of the party called in at one time or another during the evening, and many of them made short and snappy speeches before they were released. A colored glee club was also pressed into service and uproariously cheered, singing songs appropriate to the words reflecting on the dignity of Josiah Quincy, John E. Russell and other Democratic leaders.

LOWELL, Mass., Nov. 8.—Hon. F. T. Greenhalge, the Republican governor-elect, when seen at his home tonight said: "I am of course greatly gratified at my election by so pronounced a majority. Apart from personal considerations, however, it is evident that Massachusetts has once more emphatically swung back into the Republican column where she naturally belongs. I venture to say that Democratic rule in this state is dead for many years to come. The result is also a most fitting rebuke to Democratic tariff principles, the mere threat of whose enforcement has brought such disaster to our work-ingmen and paralysis to business."

When the governor-elect arrived in this city, the Republican organizations met him with a big procession and escorted him to his residence amid great enthusiasm along the line. Roosters, brooms and red fire were features of the jubilation. Mr. Greenhalge made a little speech thanking his townsmen for their interest in his behalf and congratulating the party on its magnificent victory.

M'KINLEY ELECTED.

Ohio Republicans Give Him a Majority of 50,000.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 8.—With a plurality of 50,000 and two-thirds of both branches of the legislature, McKinley has won the most decisive victory recorded in Ohio since the civil war. It has been won on national issues. Although McKinley was running for re-election as governor, he made state affairs secondary to protection and honest money in all his speeches, numbering 181. It would not have been a surprise two weeks ago, but after the action of congress there seemed to have been such reaction that the overwhelming vote is a surprise.

Democrats did not allow the contest to go by default, but made a most vigorous fight with harmonious working. Gen. A. Ex-Governor Campbell canvassed the state for Lawrence T. Neal all last week, and the Democratic committee was in total accord. Congress took no lon on silver. The Republican managers have expected such results two weeks ago, but they were astonished when Governor McKinley was not surprised at the result. He has expected it all along and felt confident that the impressions of the change of conditions would not be overcome by the campaign efforts for reaction.

The weather was pleasant, and there was a full vote all over the state. The decisive votes of former years have been because of a snow vote, those of one party or the other not turning out. But the voters were out all over the state, and McKinley has a majority over both Democratic, Prohibitionist and Prohibition tickets opposed to him.

This is the first time a majority over all any state candidate has had since Foster's election, just after Garfield's death in 1881. The Republicans are apprehensive of one part of their victory. The legislature elected does not select a United States senator, and it is by two-thirds Republican—the strongest since the war. With such a large working majority, they fear such legislation by city members as may lead to defeat two years hence, when another legislature is to be selected that will choose Senator Brice's successor.

Judge Gary Won.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—The election seems to be about a standoff. At midnight the returns indicated that the Republicans had elected the entire judicial ticket and that the Democrats had secured the county commissioners inside the city. The Democrats broke away and nominated a ticket of their own, and the Republicans seem to have elected every judicial candidate.

The great fight has been over the election of Judge Gary, who presided at the trial of the anarchists. At the time Governor Altgeld pardoned the anarchists he made a severe attack upon Gary, and the fight has been one of Gary against the state machine, with the result that Gary seems not only to have polled the full Republican strength, but to have drawn on the Democratic party for aid. In almost every precinct in the city and county he was from 5 to 10 per cent ahead of the balance of the ticket. The general result shows decisive Republican gains over the presidential election of a year ago.

Virginia Solidly Democratic.

RICHMOND, Nov. 8.—This state goes Democratic by a majority of about 20,000. The legislature will be largely Democratic. The feature of the campaign was the apathy of the Republicans. The negro vote was small in many districts. Most of it was cast for the Democratic ticket. The election of a Democratic United States senator is assured. The legislature will choose a court of appeals.

Norfolk gives a Democratic majority of about 4,000. Full and periodical returns from 32 counties and cities, including Richmond, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Manchester and Lynchburg, show net Democratic gains of about 3,700 over the vote of 1889, when the Democratic majority was 42,000. If this ratio is maintained, the state has gone Democratic by something like 30,000 majority.

The Returns in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Secretaries Gresham, Lamont, Hoke Smith and Morton received the election returns at the White House in Private Secretary Thurber's room. A special wire delivered the bulletins. Such as were indicative of results were telephoned the president at Woodley. The members of the cabinet at the White House attributed the results to the business depression of the past several months, and the statement was made that this was the worst possible time for the Democrats to have an election while so many people were suffering from conditions that were not political, but wholly extraneous. Secretary Carlisle is out of the city, and Secretaries Herbert and Bissell received the returns at their private residences.

Kentucky's Legislature Democratic.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 8. — Full returns throughout Kentucky will not be available for several days, but so far as the reports have been received it is pretty certain that the relative standing of the political parties has not changed. The only elections of general interest were for members of the general assembly, which will vote for a United States senator. The Kentucky legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot by about 40 to 1. The only issue in this election were factional, the dominant faction of the Democracy being the Cleveland party as opposed to the wing which supported Mr. Henry Watterson in his opposition to Cleveland's nomination.

Democrats Carry Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8.—Because of the length of the ticket the returns from the state were late. The only state official voted for was comptroller. The Democrats carried the election by about 20,000. In this city Latrobe has been re-elected mayor by 6,000 plurality. The negroes stayed away from the polls, making up for the Democratic defection on the citizens' ticket. The Democrats carry 18 out of 22 wards.

Close Vote In Nebraska.

OMAHA, Nov. 8.—Returns from the state are coming in slowly. The scattering returns received indicate Republican losses on the head of the ticket and Populist gains. The race between Harrison, Republican, and Holcomb, Populist, will be very close. The result in this county will determine the outcome in the state, and the vote here will not be counted before morning.

Republicans Sweep South Dakota.

YANKTON, Nov. 8.—Information received here from the headquarters of both Republican and Democratic central committees assure the election of all the Republican candidates for judgeship. The vote cast will be about one half, or 40,000, of which the Republican candidates will receive 65 per cent. Actual figures will not be available until tonight.

Republicans Mayor In Detroit.

DETROIT, Nov. 8.—After one of the most bitter and hardest fought campaigns in 20 years Hazen S. Pingree, Republican nominee for mayor, was elected to his third successive term in that office by a majority of over 3,000.

TWENTY-FOUR LOST.

The Albany and the Philadelphia In Collision on Lake Huron.

DETROIT, Nov. 8.—A dispatch from Port Huron, Mich., states that Captain McDonald of the sunken steamer Albany refuses to give out any statement whatever about the collision between the Philadelphia and Albany. The only facts obtainable are that the Philadelphia ran head into the Albany, striking her over the second gangway. The Albany floated for about half an hour, and her crew went on board the Philadelphia, which also went down half hour later. Both carried, numbering 47 men, left the Philadelphia in two boats. The boat containing the captains and mates capsized. Both steamers reached Point Aux Barques yesterday. The other boat, containing 24 sailors, was lost. There was no sea running, and how the boat capsized does not appear. The steamer City of Concord found the empty boat and picked up 15 bodies, all of which had life preservers on.

Presidential Boom For Reed.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 8.—John Dalzell, representing the Twenty-second congressional district, started a presidential boom for ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed at a meeting of Republican ward workers at old city hall. The hall was crowded to the doors. Congressman Dalzell was called on for a speech, and after congratulating the Republicans on the general result of the election he launched out into an eulogy of Congressman Reed, in the course of which he said he hoped, in common with thousands others, to see the day when Thomas B. Reed would be elevated to the highest position in the gift of the people. The applause following this statement lasted for several minutes.

The Prussian Elections.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The returns received up to midnight show that the parties will be divided in the diet as follows: Conservatives, 144; Free Conservatives, 67; National Liberals, 98; Freisinnige Volkspartei, including Berlin, 14; Freisinnige Union, 8; Danes, 2; Poles, 18; Farmers' Alliance, 8; Guelphs, 1; Independents, 1.

HOUSEWORK SHOULD NOT BE HEAVY.

If a Woman Will Be Sure Systematic and Not Worry.

Polishing a stove is now generally considered about the hardest work of the kitchen, and it may be, indeed is prety, burdensome thing, if done in a haphazard fashion. If, however, the worker puts on a pair of old gloves, wipes the dust off the stove thoroughly, uses an ordinary shoe-blacking brush, kept for the purpose (not the heavy brush furnished by stove-makers), she can do wonders. Let her apply the blacking with the round part of the brush, intended to apply the blacking on shoes, and then polish the stove with the other brush, intended for polishing shoes. Let her do this with light, steady strokes, such as an expert bootblack uses. The more force the less speed. The same is true of polishing silver, brass work, nickel-plate or any cleaning. It is the light, steady and well-directed stroke that tells. The same is true also of cleaning the floor or of cleaning paint or windows, or of laundry work. The laundress who expends her strength in rubbing clothes is a very undesirable member of the kitchen. Let her boil the clothes most be rubbed by hand alone. This would be worn out if rubbed on the board. The expert ironer is not one who runs a race, but one who irons with ease. The long wall which is continually going up over the hardships of housekeepers has no place in a home furnished with modern improvements. Only in remote country districts where water is not supplied to the kitchen, and much heavy work is done by women folks should that to the lot of men, is there any cause for complaint that housework is heavy.

Women whose "chimneys always smoke," whose fires always go out, who insist on using their dampers in the opposite way from that the stovemaker intended, who use frequent sprinkling things and are subject to all manner of untoward accidents, who pile greasy pots and pans and half soiled dishes together, are quite likely to find housekeeping burdensome.—N. Y. Tribune.

JOHNNY'S BREAKFAST.

Johnny had for breakfast
Such nice milk and bread,
"Oh! 'tis very nasty,"
Naughty Johnny said.
"Horrid stuff—I'll leave it,"
Mother said "You may,
You shall have though, Johnny,
Nothing else to-day."

There was fuss for dinner—
Beef and rice pud-ding tart—
When he drew his chair up,
Didn't Johnny start?

For there stood his basin
Filled with milk and bread,
"Eat it," said his mother,
"Or you go to bed."

Up to bed went Johnny,
Grumbling all the way,
Saying, "She'll be sorry
If I die to-day."

Of how bad felt Johnny,
Really felt he'd die;
No one came to see him,
No one heard him cry.

When he heard the tea-bell,
Johnny cried the more,
Then he saw his mother
Stand outside the door.

"Are you good now, Johnny?
Here's your milk and bread."
"I could eat dog biscuits," Hungry Johnny said.

He sat up and took it,
Soon it was all gone,
Thought it quite delicious,
Better than felt John.

Now he never grumbles
At his food or fare,
Children, when you're dainty,
Think of Johnny Price.

FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN.

THEY CAN LAY ASIDE THEIR STUDIES FOR A LITTLE WHILE.

Here are Some Fresh Items That Will Brighten Their Wits and Amuse Them While Giving Them Information.

Some it Carefully Selected.

Not to know how to spell is sometimes very unfortunate for little people, as is shown by the following brief story: A little girl named Susie Snow met a fairy, who said to her: "I will make you, as a Birthday present, anything that you may ask of me in writing." Susie had long wished for a pony, so she ran home, and, borrowing her mot er's pen and paper, wrote: "Dear Fairy, pleas-e make me a little horse." The next morning when she awoke she was so hoarse that she could hardly speak above a whisper, and she never got the pony. Wasn't it a pity that she neglected her spelling book?

SETTLING THE DISPUTE.

Parrot.

"I'm just the clever-est pet on the face of the earth;
Just hear how I can talk!
I'm handsome, too, with dress of bright hue,
And there's nothing I can't mock."

Cat.

"I'm a tortoise shell of the loveliest shade—
This is said of me daily;
Then wear spectacles and read the news.
And entertain every one gaily."

Parrot.

"I can do greater feats; I'm a tricky elf,
And I cost much more than a cat."

Cat.

"Don't you be too sure! I cost something myself, Just fifty! What say you to that?"

Parrot.

"That's the price I brought. 'Twas too much for you.
The dealer who asked that was bold."

Cat.

"Well, in my opinion, sweet-voiced sir,
When my mistress bought you, she got sold."

Parrot.

"Pets like me, I can tell you, bring highest price
In the market, sir—That's decided."

Cat.

"Well, I say, that no pet by any device Ever brought so much money as I did."

St. Bernard.

"Oh, stop your quarreling, foolish pair!
In your smartness you have blundered,
I can settle this question at once, my friends,
For I cost a cool fifteen hundred.

THE PUZZLED GROCER.

Swindled By a Youth Who Was Not As Green as He Looked.

A tall, green-looking youth stopped into a village grocery where they kept something to drink as well as to eat, and after peering about a little, spied some ginger-cake. Said he to the grocer:

WHITE, of Plainfield.

"There's mighty fine cakes. I'll state it right now I'll take two dozen of 'em." "I'm sorry," replied the grocer, "but I believe I'll take one if you'll wrap it up right well." The grocery keeper put up the cake and handed it to him. He took it thankfully at it a while and said: "I don't believe I want the cake after all. I won't you swap me a drink for it?" "Yes," said the grocer as he took back the cake and handed him a glass of something. The young man swallowed the liquor and started off. "Hold on," cried the grocer, "you haven't paid me for the drink." "I s-upped you the cake for the drink." "But you haven't paid me for the cake." "You've got your cake." This last retort so nonplussed the grocer that he stood and scratched his puzzled head, while the young man made good his retreat.

WOODLAND NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Robin have gone South with their family.

This is a great season for nuts.

Gray Squirrel fell into the honey store of a bee-tree lately, and the young ladies say he is the sweetest thing alive.

Mr. Rabbit is posing as a novelist, but everybody knows that he hasn't a tale worth speaking of.

Brer Fox considers it libel to call a fox-hunt a breach with fate.

Father Bear has gone into his winter-quarters, and will not be in our midst again until April. Adieu, Pop.

Mr. Turvey Gobbler and wife took advantage of the approaching holidays to go camping in Glen Hollow. It is the opinion of their friends that this timely outing will prolong their lives.—Harper's Young People.

Ching-a-Ling.

We had a little China boy,
His name was Ching-a-Ling,
His hair grew in a pig-tail and
He tied it with a string.
His eyes were black as buttons,
The kind you saw on shoes,
They rested at an angle
Which people called obtuse.
He washed the shirts and collars,
And, if you'll believe it, dear,
He ate his food with chopsticks,
In manner very queer.
But his black eyes snapped so gayly,
And 'twas fun to hear him sing,
"Melican boy not half so bright
As little Ching-a-Ling!"

Eva Loreta Carson.

New Monkeys Are Caught.

In order to catch the older monkeys—the men steal the baby monkeys and paint their body with treacle and tartar emetic. They then carry them back where the parent monkeys can find them, and they, being overjoyed to have their children restored to them, caress them, and lick their faces until they have become deathly sick, when they are too weak and wrecked to make any resistance to being carried away.

No Place Like Home.

A little girl in the primary department of one of the public schools in Kingston, took great interest in what her teacher said in relation to the unhealthiness of water. When she reached home in the afternoon, she was very thirsty, and her mother asked the cause. "Our teacher," said the child, "says the water at the school is all full of worms and bugs; so I waited to drink until I got home."—Goldthwaite's Magazine.

A USEFUL KITCHEN CABINET.

Handy Combination Cupboard and Table Easily Made.

The accompanying illustration represents a cabinet which most housekeepers will find extremely convenient, especially in ill-arranged kitchens where its use will save a good many steps during the day. It is a sort of combination cupboard and table, fitted against the wall of the kitchen, and is out of the way when not in use. The table top is closed up against the lower part of the case, as it takes so little space that it does not interfere with anything in the room. Where there are large and convenient-ly-arranged pantries it will not be needed, but the average pantry is so small that the most handsome appointing of this kind will be highly appreciated. The one from which the design is drawn has a row of little drawers at the top, in which spices, raising, baking-powder, and the like, are kept. Thus the housekeeper has those things always at hand when she wants them, for they are never put away in the wrong place as they often are in the most convenient pantry. The shelves are occupied by cake-pans, pie-plates and pudding dishes, and the various other articles used in cooking, while from hooks just under the lower shelf, hangs the rolling-pin, grater, big spoons, and the like, which every woman has daily need of.

In the kitchen where the original of this "cabinet" is in use, a shelf at one side holds the cans of sugar, salt, and such things, while a flour-box stands conveniently near. We have found it a great convenience to have everything I want to use in cooking all in one place," the housekeeper who owns it will explain. One foot-bath of Anti-Tire will do it. Trial size, 10c. Family size, 25c. All druggists. Send 10 cents in stamps for trial package.

QUEER TOBACCO MOTHS.

They Hatch Out Big Green Caterpillars that Destroy Leaves.

"Oh, papa, see the pretty humming bird!"

The object at which the child pointed was poised above a big white flower on rapidly agitating wings, robbing the blossom of nectar with its long beak.

"That is not a humming bird, pet," said the gentleman who sat on the porch in the gathering dusk of the evening. "It is a hornblower moth. Once upon a time, it was a big green caterpillar."

"A caterpillar, papa?"

"Yes, dearie. The insect which looks so like a humming bird, as you say, is an enemy of my own, because it destroys tobacco. Perhaps I would not have had to pay so much for this cigar I am smoking if there were no such moths in existence."

"But the moth does not eat tobacco, papa."

"No, my dear, but it lays eggs that hatch out into caterpillars, and the caterpillars feed on the tobacco leaves. There are plenty of them over in Maryland and Virginia, and the planters have to fight them constantly. The moth deposits its eggs on the leaves and the new born worms eat holes through them, which render them useless for making cigars. When they are full grown they are about three inches long. They are bright green with small red heads and are very fat and unpleasant."

"What becomes of them after they get big?"

"Oh, they keep on eating as long as they are growing, gobbling up whole leaves and plants, and after shedding their skins a few times they burrow into the ground and stay there quite torpid for a while. Then they come out of the earth in the shape of great moths, such as the one you saw a moment ago. After that they do not care to feed upon tobacco leaves any more, but they live on the juice of flowers, particularly on those of the honeysuckle and a plant called the 'Jamestown weed.' They extract the honey from the blossoms by means of a flexible tongue five or six inches in length. When they are not feeding the tongue is coiled up like a watch spring under the head. Pretty soon they lay their eggs on the tobacco leaves and then die."—Washington Star.

BRIGHT SAYINGS OF LITTLE TOTS.

"Maggie, Maggie," cried Elsie, when she saw the perspiration on her hands for the first time, "get an umbrella quick. I'm raining."

A GOOD PLEA.

"How do you manage to take your medicine without making a face, Johnnie? It is awful-tasting stuff."

"I know that," said Johnnie, "but I pretend it's candy."

A NICE SCHEME.

"Papa," said Jack, "you drop a two-cent piece in my hand while my eyes are shut, and then I'll try to guess what it is. If I guess right, I'll be two cents."

HARRY'S WISH.

"Papa," said Harry, as he looked at his new baby brother, "I wish we had seven more, because with him and me and seven more we'd have a base ball nine."

CAUSE FOR REJOICING.

"I'm glad I'm not a peach," said Rollo. "If I was, mamma'd eat me, she's so fond of 'em.

WISDOM.

"My!" said Bessie. "It is awful hot. I wish I was a cake of ice."

"Pooh!" said Jessie. "If you were a cake of ice you couldn't stand the heat half so well. You'd melt all up."—Harper's Young People.

A Poet.

When the sparrow has a toothache
And the bluebird tears her gown,
And the robin falls to sobbin'
I'll commence to mourn and drown,
That day a mole and a bat may see
A cow jump over a dried-apple tree.

How He Would Reach Heaven.

Warren, aged four years, had formed his ideas of heaven and the way to get there from the study of certain steel engravings, and told his mother if she scolded him again he would "die and go right to heaven." Being told that was wicked, he said then done, and asked how he would get there, he answered without any hesitation: "Oh! I would pile up all the chairs and tables and boxes and ladders as far as they would go, and then I 'spose an angel would come down and get me. And any way I'd a good deal rather go that way than have things screwed into me!"

He Had Wanted It.

Tommie's mother had left him to entertain Johnnie, his younger brother, while she went out to do an hour's shopping. When she returned Tommie was on hand with an important question.

"Does little boys about Johnnie's size, mamma, have hair on the inside of them?"

"Of course they don't," she exclaimed. "Why do you ask that?"

"Oh, nothin'," he said, starting off, "only I guess I've wasted a bottle of hair oil in Johnnie."

Sister Early.

I like to wake up in the morn,
A little after four,
To hear the little birdy's song,
And dear old papa's snore.

The Belgian suffrage law fills the dictum of Allen G. Thurman that intelligence and property should rule the country, and more too. In Belgium intelligence, property and matrimony rule the country. There graduates of colleges and universities may vote twice. A married man of 25 may vote twice. A married man with a given amount of property may vote three times. Any man 25 and over may vote once.

Cloture in our American houses of lords is said to be impossible, because there is no precedent for it. One good thing at least has come of the long and tremendous discussion of the silver question in the senate—that is, that information in regard to it has been spread among the people in a way that could never otherwise have happened.

It is less important to increase the population of a state or city than to give a fair show to the people already there.

Will Canada really succeed in annexing the United States this time?

Searles Lowrie.

THE MARRIAGE of Dr. Frank Rufus Searles of East Front street to Miss Myra Ross Lowrie, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Lowrie of Park ave, one, was solemnized at three o'clock last evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. R. W. Lowrie of Washington, D. C., an uncle of the bride, assisted by the Rev. C. G. Bristol of Hartford, Conn., a brother-in-law of the bride, and the Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector of Grace church.

Mr. Lester Leggett of Haines' Falls, N. Y., was best man, and Miss Maud Lowrie, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

The bride wore a handsome gown of ivory white satin, with pearl trimmings. The maid of honor was beautifully attired in pink silk, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The church decorations were chrysanthemums.

The ushers were: Mr. Howard Whiting of Cambridge, a cousin of the bride; Dr. F. W. Humphrey of South Windham, Conn., Dr. J. O. Polak of Brooklyn, and Messrs. Elston M. French, Frederick Yates and Harry Lowrie, a brother of the bride.

The organist was Clarence Eick of Elizabeth, formerly of the First Presbyterian church, this city.

The bride was given away by her father.

They were the recipients of many handsome presents.

By special permission from Mr. Baldwin of the Central Railroad the 10:10 train to New York was allowed to make a stop in this city, and take the bride and party aboard.

Dr. and Mrs. Searles will spend their honeymoon in New York State.

Apzar—Helm.

Mr. Walter Apzar and Miss Maggie Helm, both of Dunellen, were married at that place last night.

BREVITIES.

—The retiring and new officers of the Young People's Society of Warren chapel will be given a reception in the chapel to-night.

—The 150th performance of the extravaganza "1492" with souvenirs, is fixed for December 4, at Palmer's Theatre, New York.

—At All Souls' church to-night the comedietta "A Wooden Wedding" will be given. Afterward there will be singing and recitations.

—A meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will be held Friday at two p. m. in the lecture room.

—At to-morrow night's meeting Mistitomono Tribe, I. O. R. M., with initiate three pale faces. Six applicants will take the Hunter's Degree.

—The second game of the series of bowling matches between the oysters and non-oysters of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum will be rolled to-morrow night.

—The P. A. A. C. defeated the N. P. A. C. at football on the North Plainfield Cricket Club grounds, after an exciting contest, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 4 to 0.

—Hereafter the meetings of the K. of L. will be held on Tuesday instead of Monday evenings. On Tuesday, November 14, a Thanksgiving praise service will be led by Miss Lulu Lowrie.

—A delegation, comprising 20 voters and 6 chiefs, of Iona Council, O. of R. P. will go to Elizabeth to-night, to attend an entertainment given by Naponsha Council of that place.

—Mr. Rockefellow, of the Board of Trade, says that all taxpayers who are opposed to sewerage are urgently requested to attend the meeting Thursday night, and see the Sewage Committee of Common Council.

—Mr. George Rockefellow, the grocery man, is to occupy the store corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, when completed. Mr. F. W. Dunn will move from North avenue into the store vacated by Mr. Rockefellow, corner of Park and North avenues.

To Give a Reception Thanksgiving Night.

At the regular meeting of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum, last night, it was decided to hold a reception in the club house on Thanksgiving night. The Lyceum also decided to give a dramatic entertainment in Music Hall on March 17. Mr. Charles Ward was appointed to manage the affair.

Members of the Lyceum will take part.

An Infant's Jaws Locked.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Connett, of Watchung avenue almost died with lockjaw last night and it was through the aid of Dr. Long that his life was saved. The little one had been crying when its jaws became locked. It took sometime to "unlock" them.

SHERIFF-ELECT KYTE.

SKETCH OF THE MOST POPULAR REPUBLICAN IN UNION COUNTY.

His Majority the Highest Ever Given a Republican for any Office in the County—His Remarkable Career in the Political Field.

The majority of over 1,000 given Mr. George Kyte of Fanwood on Tuesday (which may be increased in the official count) draws anew attention to this extremely popular Scotsman of our neighboring township. We herewith re-publish a picture and biographical sketch from THE NEWS of October 29, 1891:

HON. GEORGE KYTE.

Hon. George Kyte, the Third Assembly District Republican candidate for the Assembly, in which he has already served one term to the general satisfaction of his constituents, is a native of Demarara, South America, his father having been a planter and merchant of that place. Mr. Kyte was born in 1846, and brought to this country when he was two years old. The family settled in Brooklyn. Our candidate attended the Boarding School of Rev. Dr. Harris, of Tarrytown, N. Y., where he was the companion Robert, the son of Admiral Rogers, Henry, son of Gideon Wells, afterwards Secretary of the Navy under President Lincoln. Nicholas, son of Hamilton Fish, of ex-Governor of New York, later Secretary of the State under President Lincoln; John C. Calhoun, grandson of the distinguished Southern Statesman, of the same name, William, the son, and Mayhew, the grandson of Henry Wadsworth, the grandson having been killed later on the U. S. Revenue Cutter Harriett Lane, during the famous capture of the confederates, in which he distinguished himself.

Mr. Kyte afterwards attended the Polytechnic school at Brooklyn, where he met John, son of Admiral Worden for a companion. Mr. Kyte left the Polytechnic to become a soldier, enlisting at Brooklyn in the 13th regiment, N. Y. Vols. for three months. The regiment was hurried to Gettysburg, but did not arrive until after the great battle. It was then hurried back to New York to help quell the riots. The term expiring the regiment was mustered out, where Mr. Kyte re-enlisted for two years in the Seventh Battery, remaining in active service until the close of the war.

He became a citizen of New Jersey in 1866, locating at Fanwood, where he soon became identified with the work of improving the locality. His reputation spread, and he was elected year after year to one office after another. He has never been defeated for any office he has run for, for he has the people and his record is that of a clean and conservative, painstaking official and wise counsellor. He has never been found wanting, and hence his continued success. He is particularly well versed in the matter of public road improvements, and was among the first to see the advantage of good roads.

He has been a member of the Board of Freeholders for the past five years.

He is a prominent Mason, Odd Fellow, Knight of Pythias, and Royal Arcanum, and is very popular.

The majority given the Union candidate elected last year in Union county, his majority being 1,000. That was a Democratic county last year, and large in its publican indifference.

BICYCLE RIDERS ARRAIGNED.

Charged with Riding Bicycles on the Sidewalks.

Frank Martin and Alfred Springer were arraigned before Judge Coddington, this morning, charged with riding bicycles on the sidewalks. The complaint states that Mr. Martin rode his "bike" on the sidewalk of Park avenue, while the latter violated the ordinance on Ninth street. Mr. Martin pleaded not guilty and trial was set down for three o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Springer pleaded guilty and was fined three dollars.

PERSONAL.

Mr. William Kisly is confined to his home by illness.

Mr. George Quidort of Fredericksburg, Md. is visiting his cousin, Mr. Fred Obitz, of North Plainfield.

Mr. James McCormick, who has been confined to his home by illness for the past week, is out again.

A reception will be given Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Catherine Obitz, of Somerset street, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jones (nee Allison), who recently returned from their wedding tour.

The Uncle Sam Social Club gave a party at the house of Percy Davis of Orchard place last night. It was a surprise on Thomas Randall. About fifty persons were present. Dancing, games and other amusements were features of the evening's entertainment.

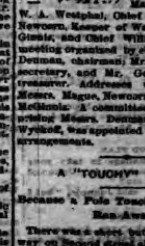
RED MEN AT WESTFIELD.

Preliminary Meeting Held There Last Night.



RED men of this city hope soon to institute a Tribe of their order in Westfield. A preliminary meeting was held in Elks Hall, that place, last night, attended by Deputy Great Sachem A. L. Sillcin, Great Representative N. C. Magee, Past Sachem W. A. Westphal, Chief of Records W. Brown, Keeper of Wampum G. E. Mc-Guesis, and Chief of Wigwam Trum. The meeting organized by electing Mr. C. H. Denman, chairman; Mr. B. P. Wyckoff, secretary, and Mr. George Stamsels, treasurer. Addresses were made by Messrs. Magee, Navarro, Westphal and McGinnis. A committee of three, consisting Messrs. Denman, Mangon and Wyckoff, was appointed to make the final arrangements.

A "TOUCHY" HORSE.

There was a short but spirited race this way on Second street about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Two conspirators of the Electric Light Company had placed an electric light before a light spring wagon. In order to balance the pole on the wagon it was necessary to push one end of it over the front of the wagon until it almost touched the horse's hip. An irate party came along the pole and touched the animal's hip.

The horse ran away. It ran down Park avenue at a furious pace. Both men had hold of the reins endeavoring to check their now thoroughly frightened steed.

In front of Gazelle's engine house one of the shafts broke. The horse swerved to the side of the street and was stopped by "Mike" Sendor, the driver of Gazelle's engine, and Lewis Beckman. No damage other than the broken shaft resulted.

Meeting of Amateur Photographers.

The New Jersey Division of Amateur Photographers met in the Plainfield Camera Club rooms last night. President Teale presided. Representatives were present from Plainfield, Cranford and Newark. The resignation of Secretary G. W. Bice of Newark was accepted and Mr. H. M. Durant of this city was appointed to fill the vacancy.

A motion was adopted authorizing the appointment of a committee to arrange for a lantern slide competition, open to amateur photographers in New Jersey, to which a prize is to be given for the best single slide. The exhibit is to be held next Spring after the series of exhibitions of the interchange slides.

Bicycle Race Over Long Road.

About six o'clock last evening, eighteen bicyclists started from the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, on a race to Elizabeth over the North avenue station.

The route was to be followed on the West avenue to Cranford, Roselle, etc. and was kept the same as that followed by the bicycle race to Dunellen.

TO PREVENT FRAUD.

Charity Organizations in Plainfield Discussed.

A LLUSION has lately been made in THE EVENING NEWS to a proposal for the consolidation of our local charities with the purpose of preventing the "over inspiration" of relief work, and of establishing a central agency and efficiency in such work.

THE NEWS is now able to announce to its readers that a meeting will be held in the parlors of Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, Monday evening, 13th inst., to consider the formation of a local "Charity Organization Society." Among other speakers it is expected that Rabt. W. De Forest, Esq., president of the New York Society will be present to explain the methods employed in that and other cities for the union of charities, and to explain how such unions may be brought about.

It is earnestly hoped that every benevolent lady and citizen in Plainfield will be liberally represented at this meeting, as well as the general public. For no prophetic insight is needed to foresee a hard Winter in our town, and unusual demand upon the prosperous classes for money and service for the relief of destitution. And, without the care and wisdom which only organization can supply, both money and service are liable to be squandered.

THE EVENING NEWS may be relied upon to keep its readers informed as to the progress of the movement for organization which is now in earnest hands.

In union is strength is a trite saying, and true as trite.

The "Patriarch" Explains About P. Bi. C. Entertainments.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I have been both amused and annoyed by the comments and criticisms anent the "Smoker" given by the Plainfield Bicycle Club, some three weeks ago. I think on the whole that I have been more annoyed than amused; but I very much regret that misrepresentation, distortion and enlargement of a little incident at the close of the evening have put the club in an unfortunate and a false light before the good people of Plainfield—particularly the "Patriarch" of Plainfield! Bless their dear hearts! we could never have built our pretty little club house without their assistance.

Now, what are the facts in regard to the "Smoker" alluded to? That there was a collation served, with cigars, and music I think "nobody will deny." Burdett, Pearsall and the Columbia quartette acquitted themselves beautifully, and the tenor Cree-ated a furore.

After that, the deluge—or thought! You may say what you please from such men as ex-President Harrison and others.

Their trade mark and name are known to almost every school boy.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Changes in the Senate.

The people of the country are not wildly interested in the rules that the United States senate may pass or not pass for its own government. Indeed they do not know or care whether the senate has any rules except in cases like this in the present congress, when the senate remained in session month after month, thrashing the wind and not coming to a vote. Then the people learn that there is not in the senate nor ever has been any rule whereby it can stop the talk.

Should or should not the majority party of the senate make such a rule and establish such a precedent as has been already established in the house of representatives, enabling the majority to shut off the mean of talk and bring a question to vote? The subject is discussed indirectly by Senator Stewart of Nevada and directly by Senator Lodge of Massachusetts in The North American Review; Senator Stewart first declares that the refusal of the government to continue the purchase of the usual quantity of silver in July cut off the supply of money from the Denver banks and precipitated the panic.

If the gold advocates have their way, this country will always be a financial colony of Great Britain, says Senator Stewart. The only obstacle to the absolute rule over the United States of the bond holding syndicate in London and New York is the silver senators in congress, who "dare to do their duty and exercise their constitutional right of informing the country of the scheme of the gold monopolists to enslave the country." For this purpose they should talk as long as they like—till doomsday, if necessary.

Senator Lodge takes the view diametrically opposite. He declares in effect that if there is anything legislative bodies now have in England and America it is the right to discuss. Correct, Senator Lodge! The right of unlimited debate belongs to a time when there were 39 senators instead of 88. At present probably 10 days would be long enough for full discussion of any measure. It could be fully understood by all the people in that time. At the end of that or some other fixed time the senate should be compelled to vote on it. They can be thus compelled by the majority party at any time making a rule to that effect. The time has come when that rule should be made, says Lodge.

Parliamentary red tape in congress is something which the common mind regards with admiration not mingled with awe. During the debate closing the silver question the senate had lately one single session that lasted two weeks. When the wind has all been expended and the day's work is over in that august assembly it is customary regularly till the next day. In that case on meeting in the morning there must be roll call, prayers and the customary senatorial flourishes. But if the senate does not adjourn, but merely takes a recess till next day, it can and does meet at exactly the same hour. In this case, however, there are no prayers and no opening exercises. The senators plunge directly into business as nearly as such honorable old gentlemen can come to plunging into anything. The bobbin of talk is taken up just where it was laid down the day before, and the threads are reeled off as though they had never stopped and never would stop. There is an instance in which the difference between a recess and an adjournment is much more important than in the above case. If this extra session of congress adjourned till December, then the pay of all the clerks and employes stops till then. If, on the other hand, congress merely takes a recess till the opening of the regular session, then their pay goes on.

Portable Garbage Furnaces.

In its intervals of whacking the silver men over the head the Chicago Tribune gets in some valiant work for smoke prevention and sanitation in the Windy City. It has lately discovered a perambulating garbage crematory, which seems to fill a long felt want. This furnace on wheels is hauled by two horses from house to house, receiving at each the scraps of vegetable and animal refuse from the kitchen. The mass is then thrust into a furnace, which consumes as it travels.

The right way to dispose of garbage, when making are civilized enough, will be to use it for the enrichment of the soil. But until that day the best thing to do with it will certainly be to burn it, and the perambulating crematory seems desirable. The machine is divided into three compartments. In one of these the refuse is dried; in another it is baked. The whole receptacle is 8 feet long and 4½ feet wide. The fuel used is kerosene. One of the savings effected is that of cartage for the refuse. This amounts to the cost of 15 or 20 wagons daily, it is claimed, vehicles which would otherwise be employed in gathering the garbage up and hauling it out of the city.

Emperor William will probably conclude that "I and the Almighty" have a little task of disciplining on hand if that pestiferous socialist, Herr von Vollmar, does not stop saying in his speeches that Germany is at the limit of her financial strength and that militarism is hampering production and suppressing prosperity.

THE REVISED RETURNS.

Full Figures Show Increased Republican Majorities.

PARTRIDGE ELECTED BY 100,000.

The Tokays in New York Defeated May-nard by Over 25,000 and Elected Repub-lican Majorities in the Legislature—New Jersey's Senator Sure to Go.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The latest returns from all parts of the state show that the Republican victory is fully as great as the most enthusiastic of that party's leaders have claimed.

Partlett's majority for judge of the court of appeals over Maynard is in round figures 99,000.

Governor Flower's majority for secretary of state is 35,000.

Of the 60 counties, Maynard secures a majority in only seven—Albany, Chemung, Greene, New York, Rensselaer, Schoharie and Seneca. He carries New York by about 29,000. His smallest majority is in Greene, 30. Partlett's largest majorities are in Kings, 30,000; Erie, President Cleveland's old home, 11,500; Monroe, 8,000, and Chautauqua, 6,000. The smallest majority is in Schenectady, 293.

Meyer, the Democratic candidate for secretary of state, carries 13 counties, five more than Maynard. The counties which he carried and which go against Maynard are Queens (Meyer's home), Richmond, Rockland, Schenectady and Westchester. Meyer's majority in New York county is more than double that of Maynard—34,978. In Kings county his vote is 9,000 more than Maynard's. The total majorities for judge of the court of appeals and secretary of state are as follows: Partlett, 135,000; Maynard, 45,395; Palmer, 100,000; Meyer, 74,000.

The Democratic rout in Kings is complete. Besides the loss of the mayor, their control of the board of aldermen is gone. This puts all the power in the hands of their political opponents.

John Y. McKane attributes the defeat of the Democrats in Kings county, not to the riotous scenes in Gravesend, but to the general feeling of dissatisfaction, as shown by the voters in various states.

Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—With full returns from every county in the state, it looks as though the Republican majority on the state ticket would not be less than 130,000. The official vote is almost every instance has far exceeded the estimates of the most sanguine Republicans. Alleghany county, for instance, has been put down in the Republican column for 60,000. It gives over 27,000. Armstrong, which was estimated at 1,700, gives 3,000; Beaver, estimated at 1,500, gives 1,722; Blair, estimated at 3,000, gives 4,500; Delaware, estimated at 3,000, gives 3,900; Westmoreland, estimated at 4,000, gives 5,500; Huntingdon, estimated at 1,200, gives 1,500; Mercer, estimated at 600, gives 2,000; Somerset, which had been conceded to the Democrats by 700, only gave them 71 majority.

As to the probable majority in the state, as computed from the previous estimates, was 108,218, the large increase in official majorities leaves but little doubt that it will ultimately reach 150,000 or more. Last night the city was in a blaze of enthusiasm, and the streets were full of parades, with brass bands, drum corps and campaign and torch clubs, which crowded the house with delight.

Ohio.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—It now seems probable that Governor McKinley's plurality will reach 300,000, and may even have been approached since Brough won his famous victory over Valladdigham during the war. Every portion of the state from the counties adds a few hundred, perhaps a thousand, to the total. The result

As a sample, Franklin county, which is the seat of the Democratic strongholds of the state, has gone Republican by over 1,100. Cuyahoga county, Cook's district, which gave Campbell, Democrat, 5,600 majority, this year gave McKinley a majority of 7,000. This is the first time it has been carried since the war.

Governor McKinley's office is thronged by people of all classes, and telegrams come in thick and fast that it is a task to open them. The Republicans all over the state are celebrating, and it is probable that the celebrations of the result will be on a parallel with the tremendous ovation

New Jersey.

TRENTON, Nov. 9.—Late returns received from the remaining districts in the state show that the Republicans have elected 19 senators and 48 assemblymen. This will give the Republicans a majority of 2 in the senate and 6 in the assembly. This will insure three years of Republican supremacy in state affairs. Senator John R. McPherson, Democrat, of Essex, will succeed himself. Senator George H. Cook, Republican, of Passaic, succeeds William A. Barbour, Republican, of Passaic.

McKinley's Presidential Boom.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 8.—The Leader says: "Governor McKinley's election by the unprecedented majority of 30,000 to 40,000 will make him the strongest candidate for the Republican presidential nomination in 1896. It is much easier for the Republicans to defeat United States Senator John R.

BOMB THROWER IN JAIL

The Author of the Barcelona Theater Horror Confesses.

HE WAS A LEADER OF STRIKERS.

Seven More Anarchists Arrested—It Is Now Thought That Many of Those Injured by the Explosion and In the Panic Which Followed Will Die.

BARCELONA, Nov. 9.—The man who threw the bomb in the Lyceum Opera House, which resulted in the death of many persons, is now under arrest. His name is Manuico Salsani, and he has confessed.

Salsani was arrested as he was hastening down the staircase from the top gallery just after the explosion.

When he was taken before a judge, he gave various replies to the questions put to him. The only definite bit of information that could be got from him was that he was the leader of a recent strike of marble workers. A search was made of his house, but nothing of a criminating nature was discovered.

At a council of the ministry special powers were granted to the police to pursue the persons connected with last night's crime. The new powers conferred are equivalent to the suspension of the habeas corpus.

It is now stated that 30 of the wounded persons cannot recover. A considerable portion of the furniture of the theater was ruined, and the decorations were damaged. The architect has ordered that the house be temporarily closed.

Two More Bombs Found.

Two more bombs have been discovered among the debris in the demolished portion of the theater. Had all four bombs exploded, the destruction of life among the 4,000 people in the house would have been something appalling.

The damage done by the one bomb that exploded was awful, and it was not confined to the spot where the missile landed. A gentleman who was sitting in the fourteenth row of the stalls, some distance away, was killed by a fragment of the bomb, and another fragment hit the ceiling and left a decided mark. The lights were not put out by the explosion.

Among the dead are a young married pair who were on their wedding trip. Another victim was a lady who was about to become a mother. A merchant of the city of the name of Guillo dropped dead on hearing the news of the terrible disaster. A jeweler named Pencar, who had a marvelous escape from death in the theater, returned home to find his house had been entered and robbed of $5,000.

The catastrophe has caused a profound sensation throughout Spain. The authorities of Barcelona are censured for permitting the perpetration of frequent outrages by anarchists or other lawless persons. The queen regent is much upset over this fresh calamity, coming so soon after the Santander disaster. Seven additional anarchists were arrested last night.

Panic Followed the Explosion.

The theater is a fine building, situated in the heart of the city on the Ramela del Centra, where are located the most frequented clubs, cafes, shops and hotels. Shortly after 10 o'clock the report of an explosion was heard by the people in the street. A large crowd immediately flocked to the doors of the theater and was met by the people rushing from the building. These latter people were in a state of great panic, and in the crush to escape from the house were thrown down and trampled upon, while others were severely injured in the crush.

The police vainly endeavored to restore order and to facilitate egress from the theater. Inside the house the explosion caused a momentary stupor. Then, the audience, terrified by the volume of smoke rising from the center of the stalls, rose and made a wild rush for the doors. The scenes and the members of the orchestra at the same time attempted to do the same. On the stage, and an indescribable scene of confusion prevailed. The entreaty of a few men who retained their presence of mind to the people to go out quietly was altogether ineffectual. The prefect, the mayor and others in authority who were in the theater assisted the people in getting out of the building and tried to calm their fears.

Many persons, however, resisted their efforts, and continued to shout and cry for members of their families from whom they had become separated. In the first confusion the screams of the women were as distressing as were the cries of the wounded. Many persons were trampled upon as they proceeded to attend the wounded as fast as they could be carried out into the hall, where the dead, dying and injured were laid out on stretchers. The worst cases among the injured were taken to the hospitals as fast as possible.

More Hawaiian Rumors.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 9.—Advices from Honolulu are to the effect that Judge Fitch and Land Commissioner Chambers, who passed there en route to Samoa, are authority for the statement that Cleveland will recommend a war of protectorate for Hawaii under the form of a new treaty which will be sent to the senate in December.

Young Mills Weds the Brazos Queen.

BRYAN, Tex., Nov. 9.—Miss Rachel Flournoy Sims was married to Mr. Charles Henry Mills, son of Hon. Q. Mills, ex-postmaster. The bride is the belle of this wealthy plantation, has been named, it is in verse by the ranchmen, poet of Texas, Harry Chamberlain, who calls her "The Brazos Queen."

Fatal Shot Tragedy in the Bluegrass.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 9.—Oscar Smith, a weekly farmer, committed suicide near here. He went out, behind the barn and fired both barrels of a shotgun into his head. He discharged the gun by taking off his right boot and using his great toe to pull the trigger.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 9.—The United States Glass company has two more factories in operation.

LOST WITH THE STEAMER.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Nov. 9.—Later particulars of the burning of the steamer Fraser on Lake Nipissing have been received here. Nineteen of the crew were lost.

The steamer was owned by Davidson, Hay & Co. of Toronto and was bound for Frank's bay with supplies for the lumbermen. She caught fire about three miles from Goose island, and a panic must have ensued, as only seven lives, including the firemen and cook, were saved out of 27 or 28, notwithstanding the fact that the steamer carried the usual supply of lifeboats and life preservers and had a large crew to tow. Captain Carr and Mr. Douglass, the firm's storekeeper at Frank's bay, are among the lost.

They immediately put off in their boat to the scene of the accident, but by the time they reached the spot the boat was burned to the water's edge, and the seven survivors had reached the top of the tow.

The engine for some unaccountable reason was not stopped, and during all the time the boat was burning she continued to plow through the water. Some of the men struggling in the water managed to climb into a boat which had been launched, but were caught in the steamer's wheel and went down. The hull sank in about 50 feet of water, and all that now marks the spot of the catastrophe is a short piece of the smokestack which appears above the water's edge. The yacht Okimawisheya, with Judge Dean and a number of citizens on board, has gone to the scene of the fatal mishap.

The list of drowned, so far as known, is as follows: Captain Carr, W. Carr, Matthew Brennan, J. Sutherland, Alf Barban, William Storey, Thomas Ashbourne, Alexander Douglass, John Hay, Isaac Sharp, John Smalley, Thomas Massey, Thomas Bowes, James McCann and Tom Sherry. The names of five others are not known.

NEWSY NUGGETS.

WASHINGTON WIRINGS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—No expressions of opinion on the elections were to be had from members of the administration. The president staid out at Woodley, presumably to work on his message. His intention is to spend several days of each week in the country engaged in this work. Secretary Herbert was at the department but a short time this morning, and Secretary Gresham declined to express an opinion on the result of the voting.

The Deficit Rapidly Increasing.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The daily statement of the treasury department shows that the expenditures of the government thus far this month have exceeded the receipts by nearly $2,000,000.

The Storm Coming North.

NORFOLK, Nov. 9.—Norfolk and vicinity were visited by a severe storm that moved north. The wind gained a velocity of 50 miles. Several houses were unroofed, but considerable damage was done to property along the water fronts and wharves. All of the lower streets were under water.

Catcher Decker Thinks He Is Rich.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—E. H. Decker, ex-catcher of the Philadelphia League baseball club and inventor of the catchers' glove now generally used, was for the second time sent to an insane asylum. Decker believes that he is immensely wealthy.

Eloped With a Rich Widow.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 9.—It is now learned that Charles Bottuan, one of the best known young men about town, and Mrs. Ella A. Currier, a rich widow of Hampstead, N. H., who disappeared some days ago, are in Chicago.

More Explosions Feared.

SANTANDER, Nov. 9.—It is reported that there are still 60 cases of dynamite in the ruins of the steamer Cabo Machichaco, and in consequence many people are leaving their homes, fearing fresh explosions.

BUFFALO, Nov. 8.—Papers will be served within a day or two upon Governor Flower impeaching Sheriff Bosh, the sheriff of Erie county, and demanding his removal from office on election charges.

A SMASHUP IN CHICAGO

Five Killed and Many Injured in a Rear End Collision.

TAKEN FROM THE BURNING WRECK

Because of a Heavy Fog an Express on the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad Ran Into the Rear End of an Accommodation Train—Several Cars Burned.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—By a rear end collision on the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee railroad at Seventy-first street, five people were killed and 11 injured. Passenger train No. 11, known as the limited vestibuled express, ran into the rear end of a Blue Island accommodation, badly wrecking two coaches and the engine of the limited.

The Dead and Injured.

The dead are:

Mark Bowman of Rock Island, Sagman and Ambrose Park.

Mrs. Aubrey of Blue Island.

A heavy fog had settled over the city early in the evening, and it was almost impossible to clearly discern signal lights. The limited express train passed its way into the rear couch of the accommodation. The car was picked up and carried forward, so great was the momentum, and was driven with terrific force into the end of the second coach from the rear. The explosion of a lamp ignited the woodwork in the debris, and the fire soon began to spread rapidly.

An alarm was at once sent to the fire department, but before any of the engines had arrived the majority of the dead and wounded had been taken from the wreck, some of them, however, being badly burned. The engine attached to the limited express had been partly demolished, and pouring from one of its escape pipes was a constant stream of scalding steam. This made the work of rescue almost an impossibility at times. Men were driven back time and time again, and often the workmen were slightly scalded.

McKane's Inspectors Held For Trial.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 9.—The inspectors of election for Gravesend, for whom warrants were issued, gave themselves up and appeared before Judge Cullen of the supreme court. He held them for examination, and they were admitted to bail.

WOMAN AND HOME.

GIRLS IN BUSINESS MUST UNDERSTAND WHAT IS REQUIRED.

Hint, girls, if you don't mean to make a thorough business of the occupation you have chosen, never, never begin to be occupied at all. Half finished work will do for amateurs. It will never answer for professionals. The bracket you are saving for a New Year's present can hang a little crooked on its screws, and you will be forgiven for the love's sake found therein by the dear hearts to which you offer it, but the trinket carved for sale in the Sorrento rooms must be cut as true as a rose leaf. You can be a little shaky as to your German declensions in the Schiller club, which you join so enthusiastically after leaving school, and not grieve him over some of it, but teach Schiller for a living, and for each dative case forgotten you are so much money out of pocket.

People who pay for a thing demand thorough workmanship or none. To offer incomplete work for complete market price is to be either a cheat or a beggar. The tendency to grinding out of supply and demand, pay and receive, give and get, give no quarter to shilly shally labor. The excellence of your intentions is nothing to the point. The stress of your poverty has not the slightest connection with the case. An editor will never pay you for your poems because you wish to help your mother. No customer will buy her best bonnet or her wheat flour of you because you are unable to pay your rent. When you have entered the world of trade you have entered a world where tenderness and charity and personal interest are foreign relations. Not "for for friendship's sake," nor "for pity's sake," nor "for chivalry's sake" runs the great rallying cry of this great world—but only "for value received."

Is it with sorrow and shame, but yet with hope and courage, that I write it. There is reason for the extensive complaint made by men that women do not work thoroughly. I am afraid that till time and trouble shall have taught them better they will not. Is it because they never have been trained? Is it because they expect to be married? That it is not in the least because they cannot, we know, for we know that some of the most magnificently accurate work in the world has been done by women—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps in St. Nicholas.

The Truest Hospitality.

Hospitality shares what it has. It does not attempt to give what it has not. The finest hospitality, it has been said, is that which welcomes you to the fireside and permits you to look upon the picture of a home life so little disturbed by your coming that you are soon able to feel yourself a part of the little symphony—the rare bit of color just needed to complete the harmonic combination. With this flattering fact impressed upon your memory you will hardly be able to recall the material adjuncts of the occasion. It is a sign of a gross nature to measure hospitality by the loaves and fishes, forgetting the miracle that goes with them. And it is equally a mistake for a host to be afraid to offer humble entertainments when richer offers are beyond his means.

To a refined perception, "the life is more than the meat," and the personality of the host, not the condition of his larder, decides whether or not it is an honor to be his guest. Delightful though it be to be able to afford one's guest a rare and beautiful entertainment, one must dismiss the idea that a graceful and acceptable hospitality depends on material things. Sir Launfal, leaving his cause with the beggar at the gate, was still Sir Launfal. The impoverished hostess may preside at her frugal board with the spirit and the manner of a queen, whereas the coarse fibered vulgarian vainly heaps his platters with choicest game and rarest fruits, the while he serves the banquet like the churl that he is.—New York Advertiser.

Six Reasons Why Women Work.

"Why do women work?" asks Walter Besant, and then he replies that there are six principal reasons.

Because their intellectual activity will not allow them to rest at home. Such a woman, for instance, was George Eliot. There are intellectual openings for them in every direction. A woman of this kind may study medicine, science, history; she may teach as well as study; she may write; she may become a journalist or an editor; she may find in these things lives far better to such a brain than the old fashioned *social round and domestic duties, the em*broidery, the piano playing and the small talk. These are the happy workers; but these are not the average.

Because they must earn money somehow. Among these are the unhappy workers, the unwilling workers, who, so long as they have to work for a living, miss the life they would prefer.

Because they want to make a little more money for dress or for spending. A very considerable class.

Because they have taken up a cause and feel called upon to speak, act, write and work for it.

Because they have become "advanced" women, and they want, above all things, to show that they are as good as the men.

Because their home lives are so deadly dull and unsocial and lonely and vacuous that they want a change.

Exercise For Women.

A celebrated physician, on being asked "What is the exercise most conducive to physical beauty in women?" replied very decidedly, "Walking."

Tennis be declared to be too violent, and too much of it is likely to lengthen the arms and make the bright of the shoulders uneven.

Cycling renders women awkward in their walk. They gradually come to move with a plunging kind of motion the reverse of graceful, and frequently cultivate weakness of back which makes them hold themselves badly.

Riding is one sided, and women who have habitually ridden for years usually have one hip higher than the other.

Croquet really does not give exercise, and after a survey of all the ways he knew in which women take physical exercise he considered none so conducive to health and beauty of form as walking.

It ought to be observed that in and done in all but the worst weather and particularly in winter.

It is the cheapest and safest tax. A woman may be hurt with a ball at tennis, injured by horse or bicycle or receive a blow on the head from a club at golf, which is now being indulged in by women.

Bottle Fed Babies.

The occupation of the wet nurse has been very much interfered with latterly by the introduction of the numerous baby foods and the different treatments of cow's milk to suit it to the delicate digestion of the infant deprived of its natural sustenance. Mother's milk has been analyzed and its elements reproduced in a compound that has proved very satisfactory and that is sold under various names, with slight variations of combination. Sterilized, condensed, peptonized and the latest scientific milk, which is an elimination or modification of milk elements to suit individual babies—all these further combine to make the wet nurse less and less in demand, and physicians depend upon her in very much fewer instances than formerly.

Another change in the treatment of bottle or hand fed babies is the method frequently recommended nowadays by physicians of alternating several foods. Formerly a change in the smallest particular the preparation of the accepted food for any baby was looked upon as most unwise, and if the little one was fed upon cow's milk the greatest pains were taken to secure the supply always from the same animal. Experience has proved, however, that a delicate infant will thrive, and sometimes only thrive, when variety, not, mind you, monotony is the recipe of four or five foods, on each of which it may be fed for 24 or 48 hours before changing to another.—New York Times.

Why Some Women Grow Old.

One reason why the average woman wears out, grows old and pain before her husband is because, with a mistaken idea of duty she lays out for herself at the beginning of her married life a scheme or plan of duty and employment for her time, every hour filled, with rare and short periods for relaxation.

This she follows religiously for years, feeling that she has done her duty, because every household event occurs regularly and on time, while she soon becomes merely a machine, a thing without life of itself or volition. She settles into a certain groove round and round on the same track everlastingly.

Can any woman keep brightness, originality of thought and speech, or even mere prettiness, with such a life, and without those things how can she keep her husband and growing children full of the loving admiration, which is the strongest tie by which she can bind them to her? How bright and jolly the neighbor's wife seems when she calls! In nine cases out of ten it is because the surroundings and talk of your home are variety to her and rouse her to originality and brightness of speech. In her own rut she may be as dull as ditch water.—Domestic Monthly.

Slang In Dress.

A puzzled girl says, "How can I be slangy in my dress?" I'll tell you, and then you can see whether you are or not. The girl who, because lace frills are fashionable, has her underclothes cut low enough to display ostentatiously the width of her skirts, the brim of her hat, who, because pink roses are fashionable, has the greatest number of pink roses and the deepest in tone; this girl is slangy in dress. She is the girl whose dress tires you to look at. She is the girl who, like a certain actress we could name, makes you conscious of her presence by the noise of her skirts, and who gives you an overpowering sense of her having too much to wear. She is one type.

Another is the girl, who, seizing the pretty fashion of cloth skirts, soft blouses and pretty jackets, makes it slangy by having the soft blouse pulled about into a stiff shirt and the jacket made to look as much like a man's coat as possible. With this she wears a masculine tie, a stiff, plain hat, and unconsciously she assumes the mannerisms of a man. Just as she is not a man she does not succeed in this.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Dissection of Child Training.

A funny commentary on the difficulties of child training was recently noted in the misconduct of a small girl, who was taken to task by her mother for her behavior. Each of the two combined a little over 8 years to her credit in the month of life. The youngster proposed playing with her mother as a diversion, but was promptly rebuked by her companion, who said: "We don't play cards at our house, and I am not allowed to say where I might teach my big brother to be a gambler, mamma says."

It was not 10 minutes later, however, that the little game acted for youthful honors if she didn't think it was fun to flirt, and on the latter's replying that she didn't know what that meant had the process explained to her thus:

"Why, it's getting a nice little boy off in a corner and giving him a kiss."

The astute mother, watching closely for the note of gambling which might appear in her little one's eye, had evidently quite overlooked the very pronounced lesson of coquetry in that of her little daughter.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

An Effective Sentence.

A woman who is noted for a very clever set for her conversational powers was complimented thereon. She said in a sudden burst of confidence: "I feel almost guilty to take the praise to myself, although I know I earn it by downright hard work. Where do you suppose all my bright speeches come from? I keep a notebook ready at my elbow, and every odd or even odd or cunning or amusing thing that I see or hear or read, and which I think I can work up into a telling sentence, phrase, anecdote, pop it down in my book. Then I study some telling way that I can put them to use.

"Of course much tact is necessary in using this bulk of material. I try to discover whom I am to meet and what their special fad or subject of interest may be. Then I load up to appropriate topics, introducing them as adroitly as possible. I don't think, with a wistful look at her listener, "that the machinery ever shows?"—Buffalo Express.

For Round Shoulders.

A woman physician has recommended the following movements for the cure of all except very "one sided" round shoulders, when braces are also sometimes a necessity: "1. Raise arms before your shoulder block: extend arms sideways; throw head back; straighten head; move arms forward; lower arms; repeat 10 times. 2. Stand erect; raise arms before you; rise on tiptoes, then throw arms as far backward as possible, sink again on heels and drop arms to side; repeat 10 times. 3. Raise arms, with elbow bent shoulder high, bringing palms together in front of face; then, with elbows still bent, swing both vigorously backward as far as possible even with the shoulders, palms turned forward. This should be repeated several times, but as the position is somewhat fatiguing rest or change of exercise may be made between the movements."—Boston Herald.

Good Taste In Dressing.

The cleverest woman in the matter of dress is the plain woman who contrives never to let you know she's plain. To be successful in this respect one must have natural good taste. It's no use to put one's self entirely in the hands of a good dress maker. Dressmakers need directing. They can't be expected to know a customer's weak or strong points as well as she should know them herself.

All women except those with hopelessly bad figures and no throats pay for dressing. A gown is usually becoming if it is the same color as the wearer's eyes. A bright headband under the brim of a hat is apt to have an improving effect. Good taste is a thing to be thankful for. Those who possess it are inclined to value it too lightly.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Luxurious Lounge.

The best lounge that even the most luxuriously minded woman can have in a frame supporting a good single width spring bed and a regular hair mattress. For about $2 a cot bed can be converted into a lounge at any carpenter's.

For the cover, various things are possible, but either an inexpensive Bagdad or an expensive Kelim rug will be satisfactory. Bagdads which are nearly all that can be desired may be bought for $8, while $4 will purchase a very good one. Cushions covered with silks or cretonnes that repeat the colors of the rug will give a air of artistic harmony to the lounge that no amount of money could purchase "ready made" at the furniture dealer's.—Chicago Times.

A Rittenhouse Philosophize.

Mrs. Fred Vanderbilt is one of the most earnest and practical of New York city's philanthropists. As she does not deem it invariably necessary to let her left hand know all that her right hand finds to do, much of her good work goes unchronicled. There is a certain hospital in the city, how ever, whose sufferers could tell a most moving tale of Mrs. Vanderbilt's kindness toward alleviating their several distresses. The Louise Home, a permanent board ing house for self supporting women, in East Tenth street, is another of Mrs. Vanderbilt's enterprising charities, as it was established at her special instigation and is almost altogether under her control.—New York Recorder.

Artistic and inexpensive picture frames are made for etchings or water color drawings without glass or molding and with a most pleasing result.

Frame the etchings with three inch material, and baste smoothly against the wall. Outline the mats in some pretty shade of fine ribbon (one is suitable for stockings) leaving a bare space of two or three inches around this on the wall. Now outline this space with a second row of ribbon the same color.

A group of these etchings framed with ribbon is effective and gives a finishing touch to any room. Water colors are also very dainty when thus treated.—New York Herald.

The White Petticoat.

The white petticoat with a frill of lace has been regarded for generations back as the ideal garment, but when the lace is be draggled and the muslin has been soiled by contact with dusty floors and muddy streets is been all its pretty, fresh, airy graces and vulgarizes the entire toilet. Colored skirts have their advantages for street wear, since they do not show soil as readily as white, if the petticoat must be worn, provision should be made for a clean one every day in the week—that is the least number that can be worn with black boots even in dry weather, when there is only dust to soil the edges.—New York World.

Injudicious Spending.

Many a woman who wastes each season $25 piecemeal on the most ephemeral furbelows and frillings would stand aghast at the suggestion of putting so much money in a length of good lace. Yet she could keep it from year to year, put it to uses innumerable, get out of it a hundredfold the distinction that her ribbons and ruchings afford, to say nothing of the heavenly satisfaction which such possessions bring to the truly feminine soul. Even if she herself have not a fine feeling for lace, the envy of her fellow women, will be a sweet savor unto her spirit.—Harper's Bazar.

Eat Celery Freely.

If celery were eaten freely, sufferers from rheumatism would be comparatively few. It is a mistake idea that cold and damp produce the disease—they simply develop it. Acid blood is the primary and mutating cause. If celery is eaten largely, an alkaline blood is the result, and where this exists there can be neither rheumatism nor gout. It should be eaten cooked.

Make Your Own Style.

Worth, the famous Parisian dressmaker, is quoted as saying will give no set style. Everything is in fashion to the fashionable woman. One woman should not wear a dress because another woman does. If a washed Venetian dress will suit with an empire skirt, wear it by all means and call it 'style fin de siecle' if you will. That does not matter if it is becoming."

Buying Shoes.

Women should never go in the early morning to get boots and shoes fitted. In the latter part of the day the feet are at their maximum size. Activity and standing tend to enlarge the foot. If women would remember this rule, there would not be so many complaints of shoes when worn being tight which, when fitted, seemed so comfortable.

Home and Children.

An experienced teacher used to say that he could always tell the children who lived unhappily at home. They were much more troublesome at school, and were almost always on the alert for slights and offenses, and far more difficult to control than the children who came from happy and peaceable families.

"Some women dress to win envy, jealousy and admiration all at once. A few sensible women dare to dress for neither *men nor women, but for health and com*fort, and women acknowledgedly over fifty sometimes dress to suit themselves."

Clean the papers that come over butter or lard, so that no particle remains on them to become rancid, and put them the size of jelly glasses. If only a thousand gather, it will be on the top of the paper, and can be removed with it.

Singularly becoming to the foot that hasn't a high instep is a dancing slipper of brown kid, crossed with a trio of gold spangled straps the space between each strap being filled in with a puff of old gold satin.

It is better to powder the hands rather than the inside of the gloves to avoid perspiration, as in the latter case the powder gets under the nails and is very unpleasant.

Women whose faces have a growth of down should avoid the use of borax, as it is very drying to the skin.

OUR SEWERAGE SYSTEM

FULLY EXPLAINED AT THE BOARD OF TRADE ROOMS.

By Mayor Gilbert and Councilmen Erickson, Frost and Ginna—What the System will Cost and How it will be Constructed.

WHEN the Board of Trade met in regular session a week ago it was decided to take up the matter of sewerage. Mayor Gilbert and the Sewerage Committee of Common Council—Messrs. Erickson, Frost and Ginna—were invited to be present at the time and talk upon the subject. Persons opposed to the system were also urged to be present and ask questions concerning sewerage. Last night was the date set. When the meeting was called to order by President Hubbard Mayor Alexander Gilbert, Councilmen Eric N. Erickson, George H. Frost, and Stephen A. Ginna, and Messrs. A. M. Runyon, John Runyon, George Hallock, James Davis, L. R. Woolston, Wm. Woodruff, H. G. Parker, John Ulrich, W. S. Codrington, Aaron D. Thompson, Robert Meeker, H. H. Baker, John Doane, J. Harvey Doane, E. R. Pope, George M. Griffen, Charles Vail, James F. Hoobs, Henry Liefke, J. A. Hubbard, ex Mayor Place, Frank W. Drake, Dr. Jenkins.

Mayor Gilbert was the first speaker. He said in part: "As a member of the Board of Trade I am glad this organization has so soon taken an interest in public matters. The question of sewerage is the most important before the people of Plainfield to-day. A great many people I find, as I go around with a petition, know very little about this matter. Like all great public questions the one of sewerage has met reverses. Just now we encounter a class of people who object to sewers, and this makes progress very slow. We have now received signers, whose property valuations amount to $3,000,000. We require $600,000 more. The hardest work is to come. We hear objections to the one thing, then another. First 'new tried experiment,' next 'the pipes are too small,' and still another is 'we are going to increase taxes.' The Sewerage Committee did not take hold of this question recklessly. They found first, that this intermittent filtration system had been in use for five years at Framingham, Mass. This system is best adopted for villages and towns. When Mr. Ginna started for South Framingham, as one of the committee to investigate the intermittent filtration system, he was utterly opposed to their system, but when he came back he could not praise the system enough. He stood over the beds there and could not detect any more offensive odor than you will find in the cities of Philadelphia and Baltimore to-day.

The filtration beds are constructed of loose gravel and stone on top, and drain underneath. The sewerage is deposited on the beds, and it is generally known that this sewerage is 998 parts water and two parts solids. The watery substance filtrates through the beds and comes out of the drain pure water, which chemists say is purer than the water in most wells. Many people do not understand what becomes of the solids. Nature has provided a microbe which lives on this matter, and thirty hours after the disposal of the sewerage on the beds it has all disappeared.

Cost of the System.

"The estimated cost of building a sewerage system is not our own opinion, but the opinion of the best experts in this line in the country. The cost at the most would not exceed $125,000. We don't propose to bond the city for the full amount. We only do it according to law. We propose to raise the money by assessing each property owner in front of whose place the laterals run. It is estimated that the entire cost to dig the trench, lay the pipe and junction street back in as good condition as it was before will cost 70 cents a foot. The property owner on each side of the street on which a lateral runs will each have to pay 35 cents a foot. If he owns over 100 feet front his assessment will amount to $35. A portion of the tax will fall upon the city. As the main pipes will run quite a distance where there are no houses, in order to get to the beds, about half of the expense will be borne by the city. Bonds will be issued for 10 years at about 5 per cent. This will make about $3,500 for the city to pay the first year besides $5,000 on the bonds. This will only make the tax about 12 cents more on the $100. This cost to the taxpayers will be no more to as much as the cost of having his cesspool cleaned regularly year after year.

Location.

"The question of location of the filtration beds is also important. We can't tell where we would locate them until the people signify their willingness to go ahead with the work. But you can rest assured that the committee has the welfare of Plainfield at heart and they will do nothing to its detriment."

Mr. Ginna was the next speaker. Among other things he said: "I went to South Framingham opposed to the system, but I came back an enthusiastic convert. It is the best system in the world. In Lawrence, Mass., large tanks are filled with soil from different parts of the State. Into these tanks the sewerage from one of the heaviest sewers in the city is run. The liquid filters through and comes out underneath pure water. The chemists said this water was better than that drank in the city. By this tank arrangement it can be ascertained how the beds need to be made in different localities in accordance with the soil. There are about forty acres of ground in these beds. One is used at a time.

"Crops are grown on the others. In Berlin, with 1,000,000 inhabitants, this same system is used."

The question was asked "would a man owning a corner lot be assessed on both sides of the lateral run on both sides." Mayor Gilbert replied that the commissioners, appointed by the court, would have to make the assessments according to the benefits, and they could not possibly find that a man was benefitted on both sides.

Mr. Frost said: "Plainfield was the last city of its size in the United States to adopt water works, and it is the last to adopt sewerage. But sewerage must come, and it can never be got in cheaper than at the present time. Plainfield will be compelled to eventually put in sewers. We have a population of the best people in America; our water is the best in the World, and our air is so pure that the city is called 'the Colorado of the East.' The old cesspools remain pure unless we establish sewers.

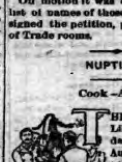
"The filtration system is the only practical one. To get to Raritan would involve law suits, besides costing about $125,000 more. The filtration beds are such as to almost literally breathe in the substance."

Mr. Baker wanted to know if there was any danger of the bacteria, that eat up the solids, finally going over the city like mosquitoes. He was informed that there was no possible danger of such a thing happening.

On motion it was decided to have a list of names of those who had not yet signed the petition, placed in the Board of Trade rooms.

NUPTIALS.

Cook—Apgar.



THE marriage of Miss Lillian Shreve Apgar, daughter of Professor Austin C. Apgar, of the State Normal School, and Alfred D. Cook, took place on Tuesday evening at the residence of the bride's parents, on East State street, Trenton.

The bride was attended by the Misses Minoola and May Tomlinson of Plainfield; Miss Mary L. Hillard of Gladstone, and Miss May Apgar of Dunellen, as brides maids, and by Miss Ada C. Apgar, a sister of the bride, as maid of honor. Arthur Moore acted as groomsman, and Edward A. Stokes, Raymond Cook, a brother of the groom, Walter H. Apgar, a brother of the bride, and Howard Newell, of Bordentown, as ushers.

Rev. S. S. Hartzer, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony.

One of the pleasant incidents of the affair was that Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, mother of two of the bridesmaids, was herself a bridesmaid at the wedding of Professor and Mrs. A. C. Apgar, parents of the bride, at their wedding twenty-seven years ago.

Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield, Miss M. B. Fellon of Hightstown, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Cook, Misses Margaret E. and Anna M. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cook, Miss Ida Cook, and Mr. Charles S. Cook of Plainfield.

BREVITIES.

—Business is brisk at Edsall's. Good.

—Plainfield's football team will play at Summit, Saturday.

—The Somerset street road-bed is receiving a much needed scraping.

—The sidewalk in front of Mr. J. P. Homan's residence, on West Fifth street, is being cut down to grade.

—A Columbian sociable will be held to-night in the Trinity Reformed church lecture room under the auspices of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor.

—"Their treatment of the banjo as an instrument with the most difficult scores, was fine," is the example in the Grand March from the Opera of Tannhauser, Moszkowski's Spanish Dances, etc., as rendered by members of the high-school "musical society," says the Musical Review, in writing of Brooks and Denton, the banjoists who will be at the Casino on Saturday night. As competition for prizes at all banjo tournaments they have to be variable carried off the honors. With them will be Marshall P. Wilder, the American humorist, to whom the late Gen. W. T. Sherman wrote, "You make the whole world laugh." This is the entertainment offered by the Plainfield Bicycle Club, but it is not a "smoker." See adv.

Mr. Martin Fined $15.

Mr. Frank Martin, who yesterday morning pleaded not guilty to the charge of riding his bicycle on the sidewalk, was tried in the afternoon. Judge Coddington adjudged him guilty and fined him $15. Mr. Martin said the reason he did not plead guilty in the morning was that the complaint charged him with riding on the sidewalk from Sixth to Seventh street. He had not ridden a block on the sidewalk, but only half a block. The complaint was read again and it was found he was charged with riding his bicycle on the sidewalk "between Sixth and Seventh street."

UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

IMPORTANT DECISION BY THE SUPREME COURT.

The Present Law by which Legislators are Elected Declared Unconstitutional.—An Unconstitutional Excise Law as Well.

THE WAR Justice Depue, who yesterday filed the opinion holding that the Assembly District law is unconstitutional. The point that here after the members of assembly are to be elected by the whole county, as reported yesterday's News dispatches.

The Democratic Assembly district gerrymander act was passed by the Legislature of 1891 and was designed to give the Democrats perpetual control of the legislature of New Jersey. The Essex County Republican Club last Summer decided to have the Supreme Court pass on the validity of the act. R. Wayne Parker, of Newark, and other lawyers were retained, and they argued that the act was unconstitutional because Section 3, Article IV, of the Constitution, says substantially that "the General Assembly shall be composed of members annually elected by the legal voters of the respective counties, who shall be apportioned among the said counties as nearly as may be, according to the number of their present inhabitants." Under the gerrymander act the Assembly districts have been composed of members elected by the voters of districts only. Allan L. McDermott, chairman of the State Democratic Committee, and ex Judge Stevens, of Newark, contended that the Constitution had not been disobeyed.

Judge Depue, speaking for the court, says that the Constitution is violated by the act, and he orders a rule requiring all elections hereafter for members of the Legislature to be held according to the Constitution—that is, voters are to have the privilege of voting for all the candidates running in the county, instead of for only a district candidate. In his opinion Judge Depue says:

"The Constitution contains the permanent will of the people. It is paramount to the power of the Legislature. It was framed by the people only by the power which created it. Popular acquiescence in the provisions of the act framing the Constitution act all times and on all occasions. It was the will of the people that the people by whose fiat it was established as the fundamental law of the commonwealth should not be altered by the authority which created it.

"No one can examine the legislation on this subject without the greatest desire to contemplate the result without realizing the evils which have been the subject of complaint. Relief from those wrongs through the ballot-box has been sought by a majority of the legal voters of the State. That relief has been denied by the failure to elected by a minority of the legal voters of the State. It was the purpose of the act of relief, to be operated from time to time as occasion may arise for legislation, but power from supremacy in the Legislature has been given to a minority to defeat the will of the majority. The question of wrongs is not the question of this suit. The only remedy is by a return to constitutional methods."

The news of the decision had a startling effect until it was learned that it would not serve to set aside the results of Tuesday's election. The Republicans are satisfied with the decision.

Chief Justice Beasley held that the County Excise Commission law is also unconstitutional. This is the law authorizing a commission appointed by the Governor to grant licenses refused by city councils or other similar bodies.

SURRENDERED BY HIS BONDSMEN YESTERDAY.

The Actual Creditors' Loss was Something over $350,000, and of this Amount it is Alleged that Mr. Patton Transferred $250,000 to His Individual Account.

William L. Patton, a stockbroker of Wall street, and son of the late Rev. Wm. A. Patton, formerly president of the Columbia University, in Washington, is now in Ludlow street jail on a charge of hypothecating $60,000 in railway securities. It is said that the lawyers' surety company surrendered him. The firm of William L. Patton & Co., stockbrokers of No. 6 Wall street, made an assignment on May 5 last, with liabilities of $288,000, and assets at $12,000. The actual creditors' loss was something over $350,000, and of this amount it is alleged, Patton transferred $250,000 to his individual account and lost it in speculation. Of this latter amount, $60,000 was in bonds, belonging to the Craig estate, which Patton had in his keeping.

Mr. Craig, a Hoagerman, of No. 49 Wall street, who is the attorney for the Craig estate, tried in vain to effect an agreement, but, finally, October 19, he secured an order, and Patton was arrested. He was released under $15,000 bail, given by the Lawyers' Surety Company.

There are also other claims against Patton on the same charge as that brought by the Craig estate. One is of $60,000 of Judge Potter of Providence, one of $60,000 of Wm. Darves of New York, and others.

Mr. Walter Scott has been granted another patent for a printing machine.

Mr. Alfred Drew is confined to his home on West Third street with pneumonia.

Miss Grace Yerkes will lead the young people's meeting at the First Baptist church to-night.

Great Sachem Cunningham of Paterson will pay a fraternal visit to Minotonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, to-night.

Justice Nash has issued summons in the cases of Tonk et. al. vs. Holsts, returnable November 16th, and Johnson vs. Sale, returnable the present time in the Justice's office.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis will preach a special sermon to young men to-morrow morning, as requested by the Y. M. C. A., in the Seventh Day Baptist church.

Treasurer John J. Beary, of the Journal Bowling League, attended a meeting of the league at Elizabeth, last night. The league schedule will be given out in card form immediately.

Mrs. William Tunnill, of Orange county New York, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Spencer, mother of Collector H. N. Spencer of Somerset street.

Mr. John Hall, a brother of Mr. Charles Hall of Central avenue, has recently come to America from India. He is his first and last visit to the United States, as he intends to make his home here. He says he is delighted with the country.

Mrs. J. C. Black of New York, will speak at the First Church of Christ on Grove street, to-night. All the ladies of the city and borough are cordially invited to be present. Mrs. Black is a very able speaker, it is claimed.

Several months ago Malcolm W. Ford, the well-known amateur athlete, brought a suit against his two brothers and four sisters to enforce the fulfillment of a certain agreement as to the distribution of the estate of his father, George L. Ford, valued at over $1,000,000. His name was not mentioned in his father's will, but it was understood that his brothers and sisters had agreed to give him an equal share of the estate, on condition that he would not contest the will. Wednesday Frederick A. Ward, on behalf of the defendants, moved before Justice Depue in the Supreme Court, for a bill of particulars. The attorneys desire to know the time and place and the circumstances under which the alleged agreement with the plaintiff was made. Judge Collin reserved his decision. Mr. Ford's wife is a sister of Mrs. Preston of Rockville ave.

Mr. Morris Lyon, of Lyon Farms, met with a painful accident by getting carbolic acid in mistake for medicine. She has, however, recovered.

Won't Have to Use Cork.

Cuff, Edward Cuff, Walter Carter, "Joe" Carter, Chas. Carr, James Brown, Oscar Ten Eyck, and "Lover Joe."

Deep Mud at Garwood.

The mud at Garwood is so deep from the recent rains that William Hand of this city, who has been grading the streets of the new village, has been compelled to abandon the work. Yesterday he brought his various implements to this city. His contract also contained the straightening the wayward brook, which he did.

—A reception to their pastor, Rev. Herbert Manees, was held at the Monroe Avenue church, last night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

WHAT WILL BE DONE.

TO RESTORE POWER UNJUSTLY TAKEN FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Jury Commission, Local Option, and Sunset Election Laws to be Re-enacted.—Thompson and Flinn May not be Allowed to Sit.

[From the Sun.]

The fatal remark, "Shoot your Sheriff and the law cannot hurt you," was made by Dennis McLaughlin to the men of Hudson early in the campaign in Hudson, and it is probable that this terse sentence secured the election of a Republican Sheriff by the most surprising vote ever given in Hudson. Republicans made a strong play for Sheriffs in all of the counties and got them in Morris, Atlantic, Mercer, Monmouth, Union, Camden, Cumberland, Sussex (the banner Democratic county), Burlington, Essex, Hudson, Cape May, Passaic, Ocean, and Gloucester.

There has been a story current for several days that "Billy" Thompson, the Duke of Gloucester, who was re-elected in Camden county, has never been naturalized. This has been asserted with as much positiveness and so frequently that the Republicans have decided to investigate the matter. Of course, if found to be true, the Duke will not be allowed to sit in the Assembly next Winter, and Tom Flynn, the starter at the races and Republican candidate for those offices are already springing up. The Legislature will probably repeal the law creating the office of Superintendent of the State House, and if it does, "Barney" Ford of Newark will have to look up another sinecure.

The Republican majority in the Legislature will wipe out the Democratic Assembly district gerrymander as well as the race track gambling laws. The Jury Commission, the Sunset Election, and the Local Option laws will be re-enacted, and the Ballot Reform law will be amended in numerous particulars. All the Democratic employees at the State House will be turned down.

The next session of the Legislature will be a busy and busy one. The Governor will be shorn of much power, and the preliminaries all arranged for the election of Gen. William Joyce Sewell as United States Senator, to succeed John Roderick McPherson, whose term expires in 1895.

SOCIABILITY REIGNED.

Friends of the Warren Chapel Society Delightfully Entertained.

PLAINFIELDERS AT ELIZABETH.

Red Men and Their Wives Pay a Visit to Neanscooka Council.

A delegation comprising 19 ladies and seven chiefs, of Inna Council of this city, visited Elizabeth last night and spent a pleasant evening as guests of Neanscooka Council of that place. They were welcomed by Pocahontas Coleman. After the degree team had adopted several candidates, the Council Fire was quenched and the party adjourned to the wigwam, where an interesting programme was rendered. There were short talks by Great Sagamore Brown of Passaic, Great Junior Sagamore Forsyth of Jersey City, Great Chief of Records Stevens of Camden, notes by Messrs. Holland and Teach, original recitation by William Westphal of Plainfield, entitled "Pull Together;" solo by Mr. Leach, song, by Miss Holsey; remarks by Mrs. Richter of Plainfield; Grand Sagamore Mr. J. H. Carney of Plainfield; remarks, by Pocahontas Turner. The entertainment wound up by "special request" by Mr. Carney. The guests were then escorted to the banqueting hall and later to the ball room.

CAW'S

Pen and Ink Company Exhibit.

One of the many notable exhibits at the World's Fair was the joint exhibit of the Caw's Pen and Ink Company, manufacturers of the celebrated Caw's Fountain Pen. This company was established 50 years ago by one of America's great men of the present time, and, among the things they prize as a result of their exhibit at the great fair was an autograph letter from President Harrison and others.

Their trade mark and name are known to almost every school boy.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Beet Sugar Fad.

Mr. Gerrit Smith Glen, through the Philadelphia Press, recommends farmers to go into the culture of the sugar beet extensively, since wheat has fallen so low in price as to be past raising profitably. Mr. Glen tells us that we imported in 1892 $106,000,000 worth of raw sugar, all of which ought to be grown at home and can be. The sugar beet, according to Mr. Glen, will grow in all except the extreme southern states, and there are today 1,800,000 acres of unprofitable land that ought to be bringing in a net revenue of $40 to the acre by being put into sugar beets.

Not only does this fine story appeal to our pockets, but also to our patriotism. It has a tendency to make each farmer resolve not to let another year go over his head without tackling the sugar beet. Just here, however, Mr. C. Wood Davis takes up the tale in the New York Sun and throws a shower of icy facts upon Mr. Glen's glowing picture. Mr. Glen showed, or thought he showed, that the culture of sugar beets in Europe had for some reason about reached its limit. The Sun writer gives figures that look as if the beet sugar culture had not only not reached its limit in Europe, but that it has no limit. Moreover, in his country not only do the beets fail to return a profit of $40 an acre to the farmer, but at the experiment station in Nebraska, where as much attention has been given to their culture as anywhere else in the country, they have, on the contrary, been grown at an actual loss of 70 cents an acre.

Even Russia had in 1890 a million acres set in sugar beets. The most unpromising feature of the case is, however, that when beet sugar production has been attempted in this country it has proved a failure everywhere east of the Rocky mountains, except at Oxnard, Neb., where the beet sugar plant "has not yet gone to the wall," says The Sun writer.

Moreover, one factor Mr. Glen seems to leave quite out of his calculation. Even if we could grow sugar beets here, we could not compete with Europe successfully in cultivating them because of the high price of labor here.

The Elephant Hunting Industry.

Unless the indiscriminate slaughter of elephants in Africa is stopped the ivory industry there will in a short time come to an untimely end, and the magnificent African elephant will be as much a creature of the past as the American bison now is. The tribe of the Waganda in Uganda hunt the animals mercilessly and ceaselessly. Their methods would hardly meet the approval of societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals. Your Waganda African creeps as close to the male elephant as he can do with safety. Half a dozen or more of the savages hunt in a party. They are armed with clumsy muskets, which are loaded with iron slugs an inch to an inch and a half long. These gentle savages fire the slugs into the elephant's legs, with the view to breaking them and thus crippling the beast, so that he falls and is finished by being hacked and shot to pieces.

Another favorite way of elephant killing is for the expert Waganda to climb a tree under which the elephant passes. As the beast tramps beneath him the Waganda drives a heavy iron spear into the back of the neck. If the aim is sure, the animal drops, for the spinal marrow has been penetrated. But oftener he is only wounded and dashes away frantic with pain through the forest, the deadly spear driving deeper into him, till after days or weeks of torture he dies. This inhuman slaughter has been carried on indiscriminately so long that few males are left among the herds which still linger.

Bernard Cressler, a hermit living alone at the head of Cheat river, expects to realize before his death the dream of Bulwer in "The Coming Race," and produce a flying apparatus that can be put on and off the human body in the way in which Bulwer's men and women donned and doffed their wings. For years this solitary old man had been shooting and studying hawks. He has discovered over seventy in the boys of this king of flyers and made drawings of each in all positions. He has carefully calculated the strength necessary to sustain and propel a given weight of body. Then he works at wings, endeavoring to bring into reality the hawk wing idea. He believes he can construct a machine that will enable the human flyer to calmly support himself in midair and soar this way and that by a movement of the body—as people do in dreams.

For the first time in many years internal revenue receipts during the past month exceeded the customs revenues. The excess was nearly $2,000,000. This does not mean that Americans are using more whisky and tobacco probably, but only that American women are wearing less foreign jewelry.

A postoffice telegraphic service may be one of the next steps toward Mr. Bellamy's millennium in this country. A bill to connect each postoffice with the district telegraph system has been introduced into the American house of lords by Senator Butler.

A SPLIT IN THE CHURCH

Seed Sown by the Dr. Briggs Decision Bears Fruit.

LIBERAL PRESBYTERIANS DEFIANT

After a Long Secret Conference They Issue a Manifesto Declaring Their Intention Not to Leave the Church Until They Are Forced Out.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 10.—The Presbyterian conference has concluded its sessions in Calvary church, and the conclusions reached have made this gathering a historical one. The liberal gentlemen who compose the conference have taken a belligerent stand against their more orthodox brethren and are determined to fight for their rights in the church of their choice.

The conference was surrounded with the same air of mystery and secrecy which pervaded the gathering on the first day of the meeting. No one seemed to be authorized to give out the simplest routine features of the proceedings.

A paper given out says that the place for liberal Presbyterians is in the church, and that because they have new ideas it is not necessary that they should resign. It recommends that the Presbyterian clergymen of advanced ideas should contest every inch of ground and should not leave the church until they are forced out.

It avers that there is no authority for the general assembly to promulgate new dogmas, and that no clergyman is obliged to recognize such new dogmas. The declaration is pugilistic throughout, while it was the subject for lengthy discussion before agreed to by peaceful unanimity.

The Declaration Agreed Upon.

"We, the undersigned, ministers and elders of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, being seriously concerned in view of certain facts and tendencies in our church, hereby make the following statement:

"First—We believe that the general assembly has no right to impose upon the church new doctrinal statements under the guise of interpretation, whether by deliverance or through judicial process, and, further, that interpretation of doctrine by the courts of the church ought always to be strictly within the letter of the standards and with sacred regard to the broad and general terms of the creed of the church.

"Second—We believe that the most scrupulous care should be used in all trials for doctrinal divergence from the standard, especially now when a large majority of the presbyteries have expressed, after much deliberation, their dissatisfaction with our confession of faith as it stands, their desire for its revision and many of them their desire for a new creed. We view with grave concern procedures at such a time, connected by their forms and interpretations of our standards strained beyond their letter and far beyond any just regard for the compact of the reunion.

"Third—We believe that no court of our church has a right by deliverance or resolution or rebuke or otherwise to seek to suppress respectful action by judicatories below it or expressed in their utterances of apprehension concerning anything in the church which seems to them to imperil the constitutional liberties of the church or of any of its members. The right of petition and remonstrance must not be denied in the church of Christ.

"Fourth—We believe that the interpretation of one or two phrases in our book of discipline as meaning that a prosecuting committee should become from the moment it organizes the accuser of the accused and of prosecuting after the judicatory has acquitted, is a strained interpretation, leading logically to many absurdities and really to possible miscarriage of justice. If these phrases are fairly susceptible of such interpretation, they ought to be eliminated from the book.

A Call to Arms.

"Fifth—We believe that it is no part of the constitutional power of any court of the church to warn brother and God fearing men to withdraw themselves from its ministry or fellowship because they cannot accept as binding upon them interpretations of doctrines which are outside the letter of the confession and which have never been settled by the sanction of the presbyteries in any legal way. This method of discipline by withdrawal, enjoined by prohibition of a church court, is not provided for in the book of discipline. Such warning carries with it obloquy of individual members wherever circulated, and necessarily appears of the gravest of Dr. Herrick Johnson, Dr. Nicols and others as the last appeal to arms.

"Eighth—We do most urgently counsel our brethren who may be perplexed concerning their duty to abide in the communion and service of the church, assured that in so doing they remain well within their constitutional rights.

"Finally, only a profound sense of the peril that now besets our church has led us to make this declaration of what seems to us fundamental principles."

Amendment Rights May Be Changed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Tomorrow a famous Edison patent expires in England and from that date the incandescent lamp of that invention will be free. This may affect the term of the Edison patent for the United States.

Think They Are the Prophets.

NEW BOSTON, Conn., Nov. 10.—There seem to be two factions in the Mormon church here, and the one which has been in control for the last few years has been forced to leave. Mormons to the number of 150 have left here for Salt Lake City.

A $25,000 Bequest For Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 10.—Yale is to receive $25,000 by the will of Mrs. Mary C. Harper Hartford. The money is left in trust, the income to be used for the benefit of the Yale library.

THE HAWAIIAN POLICY

It Is Held to Be That Laid Down by Secretary Foster.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—It is evident that there is no change in the policy of the administration in regard to Hawaiian affairs from that laid down by Secretary Foster in his dispatch of March 9 last. Minister Willis will be governed by the instructions given to Secretary Foster, and will not make any new departure in the matter. His office gives no ray of light upon it. The discussion of the policy toward Hawaii at the cabinet meeting on Tuesday is said to have given information to some members of the administration that have lacked it heretofore. Bits of talk on the subject have also filtered through to the public since then in a way that does not lessen the belief that the policy of the administration is friendly to Queen Liliuokalani's policy.

It is evident that it is not a policy friendly to the present provisional government of the islands or the purpose for which it was formed, which was annexation to the United States.

There is reason to believe that the present provisional government in Hawaii is regarded as the result of the landing of marines from the Boston in Honolulu at the time of the revolution, and the desire of this administration is to go back over all the steps taken by the last administration and undo them.

There seems no authority for believing that the United States minister has been given the power to exercise anything more than a moral influence to secure a re-establishment of the conditions in the islands which obtained before the recent revolution. The fact that such influence is to be tried indicates that there is some hope that it will succeed. But there is practical unanimity among those well acquainted with the islands that no more moral suasion will ever serve to depose the provisional government and re-establish the queen. The further policy to be pursued must then probably wait for further instructions.

THE ENGINEER DISOBEYED.

Four Killed in a Rear End Collision on the Rocking Valley.

TOLEDO, Nov. 10.—South bound passenger train No. 55 crashed into the north bound freight No. 57 on the Rocking Valley railroad 11 miles north of Rising Sun. The collision was due to the disobedience of orders on the part of the engineer of the freight. A heavy fog prevailed at the time and obscured the vision of the passenger engineer. Four were killed outright. The dead are: L. H. Jones, engineer of the passenger; James F. Kerlin, engineer of the freight; Jacob Shaw, a fireman of the passenger; James E. Brisch, express messenger.

Both engines were reduced to a mass of shapeless iron, and the baggage car was smashed to splinters. The smoker was also badly damaged, and a number of freight cars were wrecked. The small number of fatalities—four—is remarkable, and a number of narrow escapes are reported. The baggageman escaped with a number of bruises, but no serious injuries. None of the passengers was injured. Physicians were summoned from Fostoria, and the injured after being cared for, were put on a special and brought to this city.

A Half Million Missing.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—A receiver will probably be appointed within a day or two for the American Steam Boiler Insurance company, the affairs of which are in a most peculiar condition. An application to this effect has been made, based on charges in which the officers of the company were accused of defalcation to an amount considerably over $500,000.

A Murderer Murdered.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 10.—During a fight among Italians, Tomaso Sterro was fatally stabbed with a stiletto. Five men were arrested for the murder and are now in jail.

Vincenzo Cuccia, released from the Eastern penitentiary two weeks ago, having served five years for the murder of a conductor on one of the Philadelphia car lines.

Santander Still Deserted.

SANTANDER, Nov. 10.—All the dynamite has now been removed from the wreck of the steamer Cabo Machicaco. Business is fully suspended in this port, over 30,000 people having abandoned the town and encamped about Sardinero and other hamlets. Another dynamite steamer has arrived off the port.

Killed From Ambush.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10.—James J. Collins, head bartender at the East St. Louis Jockey club track, was shot and killed by the rear approach of Miss Kitty Gallagher by Charles McCafferty, a horse owner from Chicago. Collins was partially intoxicated and insulted ladies who were with McCafferty.

Annie Pixley's Death.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Miss Annie Pixley, the well known American actress, died today in the house of Dr. Phillips, husband of her brother-in-law, Mr. Edwin Fulford of 186 Pentonville road. Her husband was present at the time of her death, which was caused by brain fever.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER POISONED

Fatal Evidence Found in a Bottle of Porter Which Was Drunk by Both Women—Arrest and Suspicion of a Neighbor—Other Deaths Investigated.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—The wife and daughter, Margaret, of John J. Toole of South Boston drank part of a bottle of porter on Sept. 26. Both stricken with pain. A post mortem examination revealed the fact that they had swallowed enough cyanide of potassium to have killed 10 persons. To-day a neighbor of Toole's has been arrested, charged with the murder, but the evidence which the police have thus far secured against them is not strong.

Last night Mr. Toole learned for the first time of the death of his wife and daughter, and in a few minutes he, too, was dead. The shock brought on a fatal illness. Another daughter is lying at death's door, and the chances are against her recovery.

The scene of the tragedy is No. 6 Dorset street, South Boston. Mr. Toole is a piano polisher and had lived in that house for 30 years.

The Fatal Porter.

He had reared a family of five sons and three daughters and had acquired property worth about $20,000. He was one of the most respectable citizens in that part of the town. His wife had been ill for some time, and in accordance with her physician's orders had been in the habit of drinking a glass of porter every night before retiring. Wednesday night she asked her daughter Mary to give her son Michael some money to purchase a bottle of porter.

The lad went to George Walker's liquor store and returned to Mary Toole and set him at the foot of the stairs and carried the bottle to her mother's room.

It was corked when given to Mrs. Toole broke the seal, uncorked the bottle and poured out a small glass for her daughter Margaret and one for herself. No sooner had the porter been drunk than the mother complained of feeling sick at her stomach, and she started to go in her eldest daughter's room, only 10 feet away. When she reached this room she sat down and soon vomited. Margaret, thinking her mother was about to have a fainting spell, went to her assistance and took her by the arm. Mrs. Toole never spoke after the door entered the room and in about two minutes fell dead to the floor.

Margaret cried out to her sister Mary, who was down stairs, to come up, and when the latter entered the room Margaret fell across the lifeless body of her mother.

Mary immediately called for her brother Michael, who lives near. He mounted his bicycle and summoned Drs. Whipple and D. F. O'Callaghan. Both women were dead when the doctors arrived. The physicians at once said that the women had been poisoned, but it was not until Medical Examiner Draper had examined the bodies that the nature of the poison was known.

The Mystery Unsolved.

Meantime the police had searched high and low to solve the mystery. The poison had been placed in the bottle of porter, but by whom and for what reason they could not ascertain.

The bottle came in a case purchased by Walker from Foster, a New York brewer, on Sept. 21. The bottle had been found with the deadly poison. It was either put in by an employee of the bottling establishment in New York, or else it was placed in the bottle by Walker or some one with the purpose of killing some one. The police chose to follow the latter theory and looked for a reason for the crime. They found that there was a slight misunderstanding between Stephen Toole and his brother Patrick. On Tuesday and Wednesday Stephen was seen drinking, so the police say, and had had a row with other members of the family.

The father was very sick, and on Wednesday Mrs. Toole sent Patrick to procure a draft for $1,000, which was taken from the bank to provide for the payment of certain bills. So far as can be learned, there was no other money upon which Stephen could lay his hands. Some of this money and it was found intact Thursday in Mrs Toole's trunk.

A Skeleton in the Closet.

These circumstances were all that the police could find to work upon. They offered no clue to the mystery, so they arrested and charged with the murder Michael Toole, who purchased the liquor; Mary Toole, who carried it to her mother, and Patrick Toole, who had had a disagreeable exhibition at the time, and who has not yet been connected with the purchase of the liquor.

Mary, the daughter, Mary, who is under arrest, tells a straightforward story about the purchase of the liquor and the condition of the bottle when it was given to Mrs. Toole. Her brother Michael also tells a straightforward story.

When the police questioned the young girl, Mary, as to the motive any one might have for killing her mother, she declined to answer, saying that she could not.

"How can I answer," she said, "when I do not know myself?"

This seemed to point to some secret, and the police are pursuing the matter closely. After the father's death the family of the murdered man made accusations against the girl and her two brothers. There is no evidence that any of the family purchased cyanide of potassium.

FRANCIS PARKMAN'S DEATH.

He Was One of the Most Eminent of American Historians.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—Mr. Francis Parkman, the eminent historian, died at his home on Prince street, Jamaica Plain. His last illness was brief, portions being the cause of death. It was only recently that he celebrated his seventieth birthday in an unostentatious manner, receiving few callers, but a great many letters and telegrams from all parts of the world.

Francis Parkman, whom Blackwood's Magazine had recently called "the most eminent American historian now alive," was born in Boston, Sept. 16, 1823.

FRANCIS PARKMAN.

In 1840 he entered Harvard college, and it was then, at the age of 17, that he planned a project, since realized, of writing a history of the French and Indian wars.

During his college career his vacations were spent in wild life, one being passed in northern Maine and another in the neighborhood of Lake George. After studying law for two years young Parkman resolved to live the life of the Indians in order to fit himself for the work he had projected.

Early in the spring of 1846 he started for the distant west. Through the region now governed by the states of Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado he traveled. For weeks he lived among the Indians, partaking of their food and living their rough life. The memorials of his travels were published in The Knickerbocker Magazine and afterward in book form under the title "The Oregon Trail." His later works are well known.

A LAKE MYSTERY.

It Involves the Cause of a Disaster by Which Twenty-four Men Perished.

EAST TAWAS, Mich., Nov. 10.—The mystery surrounding the death of the 24 seamen of the steamers Philadelphia and Albany was greatly intensified by the announcement that one man from the overturned boat was being held in hiding until after the inquest.

The schooner Dunford was in tow of the City of Concord. The Dunford's captain, who gave the information, refused to divulge the survivors' names or enter into any particulars.

The coroner is making little progress. Both Captain Huff of the Philadelphia and First Mate Drury of the Albany refused to testify as to the signals exchanged by the two steamers before the collision. The jury demanded that both men be placed on the stand again, when a strong effort will be made to force out the facts.

Captain Huff testified positively that the boat and men that were lost were all right when they left the Philadelphia. The crushed skull of the mate is yet to be explained.

Accused of Killing a Salvationist.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 10.—During a meeting of the Salvation Army in their hall on Grand street a disturbance was created by two small boys who were ejected. A few minutes later Chris Starz, a prominent member of the army, aged 70 years, dropped dead. The boys were arrested and will be held for the coroner's investigation. The Salvationists claim that Joseph Nesselhauff stoked the old man.

Fired Bayonets in Court.

BARDSTOWN, Ky., Nov. 10.—The negro Evans was taken from the jail by the soldiers and escorted to the courthouse to stand trial for his crime. There was a large crowd present, and the soldiers sat in the rear of the courtroom with fixed bayonets, ready at a moment's notice to quell any disturbance. Everything is quiet now, and no trouble is anticipated.

Robbers Left Garrett Bound.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 10.—Three masked men entered the Baltimore station at Idlewild, 12 miles from this city, and after binding a young man named Garrett, a brother of the station agent, robbed the safe. The robbers then boarded a freight train for this city, leaving young Garrett tied to a chair.

MASSING THEIR FORCES

The Struggle In Brazil Nearing a Critical Point.

BATTLE WILL BE AT DESTERRO.

President Peixoto Marches His Army Toward the Insurgents' Capital—Rio Janeiro Still Under Fire—The Rebel Commander Asks For Recognition.

MONTEVIDEO, Nov. 10.—News has been received from Rio Grande do Sul of a skirmish between the revolutionary forces and the outposts of the government troops in Santa Ana. After hard fighting lasting more than an hour the government troops retreated. A body of 2,000 revolutionary troops, under command of Piskaire, Saraiva, Ines and Tigre, are now 20 leagues from Desterro.

A battle with the government forces is expected, as the revolutionists propose to maintain, if possible, the independence of the state of Santa Catharina, while Peixoto's troops will try to regain a foothold there and drive out the provisional government established by the rebels.

Minister Montero has received a telegram announcing that important events may be expected in Desterro. General Argollo has arrived in command of Peixoto's forces.

Recent arrivals from Rio say that Mello is gradually losing ground. Revolutionists here assert that Mello is amply provided with provisions, ammunition and funds sufficient to continue the fight for a year. The capital of Santa Catharina, Desterro, where the provisional government has been established, is a prolific source of income.

Agents of the revolutionists in Rio Grande do Sul contradict the official reports alleging the pacification of that disturbed state. They say that their forces are again concentrating to renew the siege of Bage. Skirmishing continues in many districts.

Official reports have been received in which it is stated that the insurgent armed packet Pallas has been wrecked near Staguahi. It is said she struck a rock and sank.

Mello Seeks Recognition.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A dispatch from Montevideo contains the following advices from Rio Janeiro under date of Nov. 3: The insurgents have placed three guns on the island of Mocanque. Skirmishes with the government troops occur daily. The governments forts continue to fire on Fort Villegaignon. The casualties are small on both sides. The foreign legations have received a circular from Admiral Mello, the insurgent leader, asking that they recognize his rights as a belligerent. By doing so, he says, the danger to life and property in the city will be decreased. The foreign representatives consider the application premature.

There is a strong undercurrent of feeling here in favor of the insurgents. It is thought that their success would mean the abolition of militarism and a general reform in the method of government. The foreign warships maintain a position of neutrality and refuse to give protection to vessels landing cargoes of war material.

The insurgent troops expect to move in a northerly direction shortly in order to attack Santos. It is thought they will land on the coast near the city. A severe engagement of hostilities is thought to be not unlikely. The newspapers are publishing articles adverse to foreigners, whom they accuse of favoring the cause of Mello.

On Friday afternoon a magazine belonging to the insurgents on the island of Governador, which contained 100 tons of nitrocellulose, exploded with terrible force, the shock being severely felt here.

It is supposed by the government agents that 25 persons were killed or wounded. The explosion caused a serious loss to Mello, although he still has a large supply of ammunition.

A force of insurgents is expected to land at Marica in a few days. Niteheroy was heavily bombarded on Saturday. President Peixoto is concentrating his southern forces in the city of Rio Grande do Sul, with the minister of war in command.

A Patrolman Acquitted of Murder.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 10.—A coroner's jury held an inquest into the death of John E. K. Green, who was shot and killed by Patrolman William T. INDIANS SACK A TOWN.

A Wandering Band of Renegade Tomichis Create Havoc In Mexico.

DEMING, N. M., Nov. 10.—Frank Siebold, a merchant of Palomas, Mexico, four miles below the border, arrived here and brings news that 50 Tomichi Indians sacked that town. They are one of the scattering bands of Indians who have created the horrible massacre in the engagement with Diaz's soldiers last May and have since been roaming in the mountains.

In the raid on Palomas they fired on the custom house guards, numbering 13, killed one of the guards and his horse and then rifled the custom house, carrying away 23 carbines and pistols, 800 rounds of ammunition and $200 in money. They appropriated provisions and other supplies from the stores. One of the marauding band was killed in an engagement.

After the raid they coolly camped in the town until prepared to leave and distributed printed circulars saying: "Down with Diaz! Viva la republica!" The main government has ordered out troops.

BE ORIGINAL AT HOME

IT IS CURIOUS THAT SO MANY WOMEN ARE PLAGIARISTS.

The Dull Monotony of Some Homes—A Genuine Comfort to Visit Where There Is Originality—Shift the Furniture Around Before It Takes Root.

One of the worst conditions in the world is getting into a rut. It may be a very comfortable, flannel kind of rut. But we have no business there. Some phase of our existence is sure to be growing cramped by it. Change is not always improvement, reiterates a sententious old saying. It isn't, but at least it is change.

Nature has set us a grand example in this matter of variety. The shadows never fall exactly alike day after day, two successive hours. If we don't go on with the lesson for ourselves it is our own fault. Our eyes crave change of vision as much as our stomachs crave a variety in diet. To be sure, not every woman can shift her family frequently into new scenes, but at least she can alter and vary their environment, and she can also discover many fresh ways of accomplishing monotonous duties.

The writer has in mind several old fash ioned home-keepers who declare "I am obliged to keep everything in my house arranged just as it always has been. My husband says he doesn't feel at home with things changed about." The moral of this is "things" shouldn't have started in life with a settled abiding place. Because the sofas and chairs have found desirable spots to loiter is no reason why they should take root in those special spots. When one of the conservative husbands runs across a good book he doesn't think he must read that and no other all the rest of his days.

"I stir my house up with a spoon every week or two," says a wise housewife, "and I find that a complete change in household environment is as refreshing to figurative senses as a bath is to a tired body." After a judicious periodical rearrangement of such household goods as one is already possessor of comes next in importance that of selecting new ones. This must be a careful choice of such things as will fill our needs, and at the same time be altogether individual and suggestive of ourselves alone and not our neighbors. Miss Jones or Mrs. Smith — no matter how estimable Miss Jones or Mrs. Smith may be. It isn't always as easy to do this as it seems because the baneful custom of wedding gifts often decrees that several brides in the same block shall build their modest homes about some such incongruity as a half dozen gorgeous piano lamps, thus thrusting them at once into a class. But as far as a housekeeper is responsible she must furnish her apartments with a decided flavor of originality.

A young wife, moving into a village where the women had ideas of their own about decoration, exclaimed: "It is a genuine comfort to visit about here from one house to another. Each one's little parlor is quite different from her neighbor's. In my old home everybody had a green Brussels carpet on their drawing room, the plan was just such an single and an invariable jar of roses on the marble shelf of the pier glass till"—think of it, you who find life so sweet—"I hated the smell of roses."

It is a curious thing that so many women besides the members of this young wife's home circle should be content to adopt another's decorative principles to build a home upon. But so it is. At one time the average American home looked like a Japanese bazaar, then it ran through a Dutch period, and now we are in the midst of a Turkish era. When a woman is neither a Japanese, a Hollander nor a Turk, why should she not prove herself an eclectic and select the best from every nationality's sense of beauty?

In urging originality for the home, a word of caution is necessary. It is that flimsiness be earnestly avoided. A certain sculptor and his wife occupy rooms that are on the wrong side of the unique. The ingenious husband has parcelled off one of the tall rooms to make a boudoir for my lady. A room would be tall, indeed, that could still boast sufficient height after half of it had been substracted. This one wasn't tall enough. A little inside balcony landing, with an ornamental banister railing running about it, makes further ravages on space, and padded walls and crowded divans and lurking suits of armor add their own sense of clutter and the beling stuffed to a bursting point. One visitor has always felt that she ought to get outside of this doll's house and move the host and hostess about with her hands through the tiny room, as one did a gay array of paper ladies and gentlemen residing in a diminutive mansion altogether resembling this.

On the right side of unique are some other rooms supreme in their individuality. One is papered in dull Venetian red. Its furniture—it is a library—is of plain, polished oak. A dark, golden brown rug covers the floor, and the danger of somberness is relieved by a gorgeous tiger skin pattered against the one door. An immense bowl of rich blue china, heaped with great yellow oranges, standing on a low oak bookcase, further enhances the brilliant effect that is sealed and made sure by a pile of gay sofa pillows of iridescent coloring. Another charming small apartment of this class is furnished throughout in various tones of soft silvery green, not off by a single solid gilt chair, with a gay rose brocaded cushion, bright brass fire irons, lamps and candlesticks. Neither of these two rooms are expensive, but both are a delight to every visitor.—Philadelphia Times.

To Keep Table Fruit.

Table fruit will keep twice as long if it is kept in separate lots. Contact hastens decay. One bad apple will spoil a barrel. It will pay the housewife to have the peaches, plums, oranges, lemons and other small fruit wrapped in paper when it comes from the market, and to separate the bunches of grapes. Street venders preserve them by hanging them up in a cool place. The next best plan is to lay them on a large platter or in kitchen saucers, with space between.

Women and Display.

I enter a protest against that judgment which paints woman as fonder of display than other members of the human race. Can you forget Absalom's long hair, or Saul's magnificent armor, or the pomp and superbity that attended Joseph in the land of Egypt, when he visited and presented his brethren? How about King Solomon, whose glory discounted that even of his famous guest, the queen of Sheba?—Joe Howard.

Forceful Women.

The sweet, gentle, modest lovely woman makes no mana no permanent impression. There must be force somewhere to evolve force. A feminine woman with some flavor of the vivacious and the masculine character has the trick to keep men steadily influenced.—Dr. Weir Mitchell.

General Belief . . . and Private Opinion.

It isn't always that you will find everybody agreeing on any one subject, on the question as to the best place in town to buy most everything you want. There is no room for disagreement. Everybody knows that we are headquarters, and for fear that somebody lately come to town may not know it, we append some very Convincing Arguments.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Fussy's "Good Morning."

One night, just as Mabel was being put to bed, she told her nurse that she heard a soft "Scratch, scratch!" at her door. The nurse said she did not hear it at all. But Mabel said: "Hush! Now listen!" Both kept very still and plainly heard the sound again. Nurse opened the door, and there was a little kitten, who looked up, saying, "Mew!" and then walked in, lifting her paws high at each step.

"Why," said the nurse, "that is the kitten that came to the kitchen door today. The cook thought her so gentle and pretty that she gave her some milk and let her stay. She has come up to see you. Maybe she was some little girl's pet."

"Will you keep her and let me till tomorrow?" Mabel asked as the little kitten came purring about her feet.

"Yes," said the nurse.

Next morning, when the nurse came to dress Mabel, the kitten came with her and jumped up on Mabel's lap, saying, "Mew, mew, mew."

"What does she mean?" Mabel asked.

"She means 'Good morning, Mabel. I'd like my breakfast,'" said the nurse, smiling.

But just then the kitten looked at Mabel's canary, "Dick," and said, "Mew, mew, mew!" very fast.

Then Mabel laughed and said:

"I think you are a polite little cat to come and wish me good morning, and you shall have some breakfast. You can't have my canary, Fussy, but I'll give you a big bowl of bread and milk."

And the kitten had the bread and milk as soon as Mabel finished her own breakfast.

Perhaps the kitten did not mean that she wanted to eat the canary, for before long the kitten and Dick—the canary—became good friends.—St. Nicholas.

The Use of Chopsticks.

We are very apt to think that the use of chopsticks is a heathen custom and should be left to the heathen. But if we only knew it the despised little sticks are of great service in everyday work and play, and our boys and girls cannot do better than learn to handle them.

The first thing in the use of chopsticks is to hold one of them very firmly in the right hand, just as an awkward boy holds his pen, and to get the trick of holding it so it will not slip. The other stick is held in the left hand and is placed in the fingers as if the writer were a pen holder, so it will stide and move with the motions of the fingers. A little practice with two pointed sticks will soon give the necessary experience, so that any boy or girl can use the chopsticks readily.

Now, when you have learned the use of the sticks, you will soon find how serviceable the knowledge will be to you in many practical ways. Suppose your food is very hot or sticky or dirty, and do not want to come in contact with your fingers. When you can quickly make a pair of chopsticks and get what you want without any trouble. Or if anything falls into a small crack you can get it easily with the sticks. And by and by, when you go to Japan, you will be able to eat at the Japanese tables without any trouble and pick up the rice as if you were a Japanese.—New York Ledger.

Mind Cookers.

[A Little Girl's Recipe.]
I don't see why the big folks all
Need to go to cooking school,
For I'm sure that any child can make a cake
If you make it by this rule:

First, you must have an apron
That you're not afraid to hurt,
For in this recipe we use
Flour and eggs and butter.

Then dip with an iron moon
A hole in the cool, dark ground
And put in dirt and water,
Rubbers must not be round.

And then a handful of pebbles
You'd best put into the dough.
What are these for? In this recipe
Pebbles are cashew nuts.

And when you get it all thick enough
You make it into a cake;
Then put it on a nice clean board
And set in the sun to bake.

Dear me! I'd most forgot to say
You must sprinkle with sugar (or sand)
And when they're done no better cakes
Will be found in Belgium.

That's all! You see, to learn to cook
You don't need to make a fuss,
Though mamma says, when she comes to look,
"Why, Bessie, child! what a mess!"
—Ethel E. Sleeper in Good Housekeeping.

Frogs.

Frogs are mainly juice. If they try to make more than a short journey away from moisture, in a drought, they will perish for want of water, and then their bodies will dry away. The frog's bones are so soft that they scarcely leave any skeleton.—Washington Post.

Good Air.

The three great requisites to healthy, and hence happy, living—good air, good water and good nature—are so cheaply obtained that they are very frequently ignored or not estimated at their real value. In the country, where pure air is to be had for the mere demand, one often sees small windows and few of them in sleeping rooms, or else no provision is made for opening at the top to let out foul or warm air, quite as necessary as the coaxing of it in. Many an invalid would recover could he but live in a constantly purified atmosphere and drink nature's purest beverage.

Many another, a victim to indifferent health, would be restored to his normal condition if his mental atmosphere were cleared of all the ill nature, the petty complainings, envy, malice and all unfairness of his own or his family, which cloud his life. The perfect man—physically and mentally—he who has discovered nothing are simply struggling for existence, and that an abundance of charity for others' shortcomings will meet a like return and help greatly in preserving serenity.—New York Ledger.

Some of Lucy Stone's Late Utterances.

The last articulate words that Lucy Stone uttered were whispered in the ear of her daughter—"Make the world better." The woman died as she had lived, brave and fearless and with her last breath left not the smallest apprehension," she said. "I know the eternal order, and I believe in it." To a friend who expressed the wish that she might have lived to see woman's suffrage granted, she said: "Oh, I shall know it. I think I shall know it on the other side. And if I don't," she added emphatically, "the people on this earth will know it." To some one else, who suggested the possibility of her coming back to communicate with those she loved, she answered: "I expect to be too busy to come back. Perhaps I shall know about the women voting when I am, and if not I shall be doing something better. I have not a fear, nor a dread, nor a doubt. I think I have done what I could here. I certainly have tried. With one hand I made my family comfortable, with the other—" But she never finished the sentence.

To Dissolve Gelatin.

To dissolve gelatin is not so easy a matter as some cooks suppose. If the gelatin is covered with water and placed on the hearth or on the back of the stove, it will melt in 15 or 20 minutes, but the water is out of ten it will be strong flavored and will spoil whatever it is added to. This is the reason that gelatin is not fully appreciated by many housekeepers.

If the gelatin be soaked in cold water for two or more hours, and then have boiling water or milk poured on it, it will dissolve immediately and rarely will have taste or odor. Here is a good rule to follow:

Put a box of gelatin in a bowl, and pour over it half a pint of cold water. Cover it; let it stand for two hours or more. When ready to use it, add half a pint of boiling water or the same quantity of boiling milk. Stir for a few minutes and the gelatin will be dissolved.

Death to Roaches.

I tried every remedy I could hear of, and I was always inquiring. They seemed to fatten on my poisons; at least their numbers did not suffer diminution. One day I took up an old almanac and idly turned its tattered yellow pages, and on the last fragment of a leaf came this, "Equal portions of cornmeal and red lead mixed with molasses and spread on plates will destroy roaches." And it did. I put it in several dishes and set them on the floor, and at 9 o'clock stole softly out to see if they ate it. The dishes were so covered with roaches that the mixture was scarcely visible. The next night there were fewer at the feast. And in a week not a roach was seen. I lived seven years thereafter in the same house and never saw one.

Encourage Independence.

Children under 7 or 8 years of age need in their amusement a great deal of oversight and seldom can two children be made, and cannot get along without it. It is one thing to amuse children and another to lead them to amuse themselves. The first makes a slave of the one who has them in charge, the latter makes them plan and think for themselves, and assures for the mother or nurse more time to devote to other things. Even small children usually possess considerable ingenuity and inventive faculties, and, while they are not equal to the task of always finding amusements for themselves, will, when given articles to play with, turn them to a much greater variety of uses than was thought of by their elders when they provided them.

Teach the Help.

If housekeepers would teach their cooks, waitresses and nurses what to do in the first place, a source of trouble would be avoided. It is not well to allow things to go at haphazard with the hired help.

There is too much of the feeling: "What is the use of taking trouble? As soon as Norah is taught she will leave me for my next door neighbor." It is better to go on with the teaching, and when she leaving you say, "Do the best you know how, Norah, in your new place, for I do not want to be thought a poor housekeeper." Certainly it is time to put a stop to the tramp through the kitchen of unskilled, uneducated workers, and this is one way out.—Domestic Monthly.

Goats Chained by Flowers.

A vogue in Paris is to drape pictures and screens and ornament the table with heavy ropes of flowers. Not only does this call go on the table, but the floral rope is sometimes stretched across the backs of the chairs about a round table, so that when guests are seated they have the appearance of being united by a chain of blossoms and foliage.

A brilliant effect was produced at a dinner recently by the use of scarlet geraniums twined in this way with smilax and festoned asparagus.—Exchange.

The Value of Onions.

Boiled onions taken about an hour before going to bed will usually relieve any but the worst cases of insomnia. The heart of a hot onion placed in the ear will often relieve an earache. The sting caused by sprinkling a sliced onion with sugar and baking it in the oven will certainly relieve a croupy child. Eating raw onions will generally check a "cold in the head."

COLUMBIAN SOCIABLE.

THE WORLD'S FAIR DESCRIBED BY THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN THERE.

A Pleasing Entertainment in the Lecture Room of the Church Last Night.

THE lecture room of Trinity Reformed church was crowded last evening by the Christian Endeavor Society and their friends. The occasion for this large gathering was a Columbian Sociable. Those who attended were surprised and delighted at finding themselves dropping in the grandeur of the World's Fair. First, with Mr. Hobert Meeker, they entered the Midway Plaisance and there beheld the wild east; they then, with Mr. H. E. Gayle, inspected the different buildings, and even climbed to the top of the Transportation Building, after which, by the help of Mr. John Van Winkle, they beheld the United States exhibits, watched the life saving service crew go through their daily drill, and could almost see the life-lines as it sped from the mouth of the mortar. Mr. Horace J. Martin then entertained them with facts about the Exposition, after which they partook of refreshments, such as only the young ladies of Trinity church can prepare, and the audience by twos and threes, slowly left for home with many pleasant thoughts of the entertainment still fresh in their memory.

The following is the programme in detail:

Vocal Solo.....Mr. E. Clark
Talk—Midway Plaisance.....Mr. H. Meeker
Song by Quartet.
Talk—The Buildings.....Mr. E. H. Gale
Song by Quartet.
Talk—U. S. Exhibits.....Mr. J. W. Van Winkle.
Song by Quartet.
Talk—Impressions of Exposition.....
Mr. Horace J. Martin
Song by Quartet.
Refreshments.

A novel way for obtaining refreshments was practised. Checks were passed around to the young men, and each one went to the counter and procured a box of lunch. Each young lady had her name on a box and the young man must find the young lady whose name was on his box and share its contents with her.

BREVITIES.

—It is rumored that one of the North avenue merchants made an assignment to-day.

—To night there will be a song service in the W. C. T. U. rooms, on Watchung avenue.

—The Peace street Extension case was brought up at Trenton this week. No decision will be reached until 1894.

—Many complimentary remarks have been made regarding the chrysanthemum exhibit of Mr. J. J. Denton, of the Hillside avenue Nursery.

—The first game in the Journal League will be bowled in this city next Friday night, between the Pioneers of Elizabeth and the C. Y. M. L.'s of this city.

—President Cleveland has issued his proclamation to have Thanksgiving on Thursday, Nov. 30. The governors of the several states will probably appoint the same day.

—Monday at four p. m., an advertise will be delivered in the guild room of Grace Episcopal church, on the "Child Voice," by Miss Bronson. All interested are invited to attend.

—An adjourned meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association will be held in the Parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Monday evening at eight o'clock.

—A handsome big Newfoundland dog had its two forelegs cut off by a train at the Grant avenue station about nine o'clock this morning. Mr. Gheigus Broome shot the animal to put an end to its sufferings.

—Kremmer's express ran away on North avenue about 8.15 last night. The horse got caught one on each side of a telegraph pole. A colored man was seen crawling out from under the wagon badly scared.

—John M. E. Marsh of Westfield is at work securing the right of way for the Paterson and New Brunswick Railway Company along Broad street. The bank people have given their consent, as have almost all other large property-owners along the street.

Dr. Barnes Welcomes Young Men at the Methodist Parsonage.

In response to invitations sent by their pastor, a large company of the young men of the Methodist Episcopal church met at the parsonage last evening. Rev. Dr. Barnes and family gave them hearty welcome. A brief address was given by the pastor respecting the relation of the young men to the church, and an earnest exhortation for each to work for its advancement.

The friends were then invited into the dining room where a liberal supply of edibles awaited the attack of the young men. After an hour or two of social enjoyment the gathering broke up, leaving very pleasant memories all round.

Insurance Men Eat Oysters.

Superintendent S. C. Price of Elizabeth gave the Plainfield agents of the Metropolitan Insurance Company an oyster supper last night, at Stephenson's, on North avenue. Those present were Messrs. J. R. Martin, Nostuny, Naylor, Westling, Kiss, Vail, Pine and Showring.

CYCLERS WIN THIS TIME.

The Second Game of the Series Bowled Last Night.

ONCE more the bowling teams of the cyclers and non-cyclers of the C. Y. M. L. contested for supremacy in the battle of the pins. This time the result was in favor of the cyclers, who were smarting under the defeat of last Monday night. The score was as follows.

PAID HIS TAXES IN JAIL.

William Ross Squares One Account with the City.

On election day William Ross refused to remain the lawful limit—100 feet—outside the polling places. When Policeman Bookafoss attempted to arrest Ross, he resisted and made his escape. Yesterday, Police Sergeant Kiely arrested Ross after a short chase through Ninth street and Plainfield avenue.

When arraigned before Judge Coddington this morning Ross pleaded not guilty and trial was set down for Wednesday. While Ross was in jail, Justice Nash took him his tax bill for $1.55, which he paid.

THE WAGON WAS WRECKED.

Dr. Davis's Horse Gets Scared and Runs Away.

About eleven o'clock this morning as Dr. Davis was attending a patient on Waynewood avenue, near the railroad, his horse became frightened at a passing train and ran away. The driver, Thomas Finnegan, pluckily held the reins until the wagon struck a tree, when he was thrown out. The horse broke loose from the wagon and dashed down the street, but was caught and taken to Holden's livery stable. The wagon, which was a new one and one of the finest in Plainfield, was damaged considerably. The boy was uninjured.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Andrew Geyer, who has spent the Summer and Fall in Plainfield has returned to New York.

E. V. Mattison of New Brunswick will deliver a lecture on temperance in the Trinity Reformed in this city on Monday evening.

Mr. J. W. Reinhart of Netherwood, President of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe has just returned from a three weeks' tour of inspection of the lines of that system.

Mr. George B. Brainard, who has been boarding at Mrs. Gerard's, on Park avenue, has rented Dr. Farrington's house, on Sandford avenue, and will take possession next week. Dr. Farrington has moved to New York.

A reception was given at the home of Mrs. Hilaire Obits on Somerset street last night by Mr. and Mrs. August Trost, who recently returned from their honeymoon. Only the immediate relatives and members of the family were present.

Special Agent William S. Johnson of the United States Express Company, stopped off at Plainfield yesterday on his way from Philadelphia to New York, and inspected the working of the Plainfield office. Mr. Johnson is a son-in-law of Vice-President Williams of the company.

The Grace M. E. Church Revival.

Last evening, Grace M. E. Church of North Plainfield completed its first week of revival service. Each night has found many present, but the Friday evening meeting (held especially in the interest of the Sunday school) excelled all others, the room adjoining the audience room being needed to accommodate the increased numbers.

Earnest words from the pastor, and of many who have been benefitted by a christian life are the means used, which have manifested power.

The services will be continued next week. All are welcome.

Climax Stopper Company Incorporated.

Articles of incorporation have been filed in the office of the County Clerk at Elizabeth, by the Climax Stopper Company, of Plainfield, the incorporators of which are Ella Nightingale, Clarence E. Teel and Charles T. Nightingale. The object for which the company is formed is the manufacture and sale of bottle stoppers, caps and trimmings. The total amount of capital stock is placed at $5,000.

To Build on Seventh Street.

Mr. John H. French has recently sold a lot on Seventh street, below Monroe avenue, to Mr. Arthur of New York. Mr. French is to have a $5,000 residence erected on the plot by next Spring, for Mr. Arthur.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In the report of the last meeting of the Plainfield Common Council held on the 8th instant, it is stated that an ordinance was passed, designating East Front street, above Richmond street as the place for a "brush," or in common parlance for horse racing at any time.

I hereby request a place in your valuable paper for a vigorous protest against this act as gross injustice to the travelling public, and to the property owners along this much frequented highway.

They are accustomed to drive, not only for pleasure, but of necessity, many miles at all times of day, and there is a continuous running of vehicles.

The bicyclists are turned off the sidewalks, and yet the council would allow such fast driving as to endanger the lives of the men, women and children who are passing constantly along From street on their daily business.

In the name of humanity I ask that the Council stop and consider before passing this seriously objectionable bill.

A PROPERTY OWNER ON EAST FRONT ST.

FRANK WILLIAMSON SOMERS,

Assemblyman-Elect in Somerset County.

[Bound Brook Chronicle]

Frank Williamson Somers, member-elect from Somerset county to the next Legislature, was born in South Bound Brook, January 30, 1852. He is a son of the late Hon. Daniel J. Somers, at one time a prominent business man of this place. After attending the public schools Frank W. Somers early in life started out to win his own way in the world. He is an ardent Republican, a good business man, an enthusiastic hustler in every interest which has for its object improvement of the twin towns in which he resides. That he has the confidence and esteem of everyone who claims his acquaintance is shown by his vote on Tuesday. Last year Cramer carried the South Bound Brook polls by a plurality of 44. This year Somers carries it by 20 plurality, a change of 134. In Bound Brook last year Cramer had a plurality of 11. This Somers reversed by getting a plurality of 115, a change of 126, making a total difference of 260 right here, sufficient in itself to have elected him. This is the first time he has ever run for office, and the quiet, manly, and at the same time effective method he displayed in the canvass brings to light his executive ability as a party leader and the admiration of his political opponents. Time will prove that Somerset county has honored itself by honoring Bound Brook's favorite son.

ATE TOO MUCH.

A Cow Dies from a Feast of Green Corn.

A valuable cow belonging to a milkman, on Terrill road, died, yesterday from the effects of eating too much corn, which had been husked and left in the field in heaps. The animal got outed the pasture and finding a pile of corn, started in for a good feast. After eating its fill, the beast went to the water trough and drank a quantity of water. The result was that "Molly" bloated up and died.

Admitted to the Bar.

The examination of young students ambitious to enter the ranks of the legal profession, was held in the Assembly Chamber at the State House, at Trenton, Wednesday. Out of a large number of candidates who presented themselves for qualification, twenty-five were adjudged successful, and are admitted to practice as attorneys. Out of those being Mr. A. J. Brunson of this city, who studied with Mr. Lindabury at Elizabeth. Among those who were admitted to practice as counsellors was Lawyer Hiram O. Hance of this city.

Plainfield City Union of King's Daughters.

The Plainfield City Union of the King's Daughters, will hold a social meeting, to be addressed by Mrs. M. L. Dickinson, on Monday, Nov. 13th, at three p. m., in the Crescent Avenue church parlors. A large attendance is desired. Tea will be served.

A Workman's Painful Injury.

A helper named Ryan had a fall at Scott's Press Works this morning. He fell down the second story landing and struck an iron roller, inflicting a painful gash in his scalp. Dr. Fritts attended him.

Contents of the Carpet Factory Sold.

The contents of the Carpet Factory, on South avenue, were sold to day at auction. Mr. Brunson, of North Plainfield, was the buyer. The price paid was $6,500.

Died of Diphtheria.

Walter S. Schoonmaker, son of Mr. Joseph S. Schoonmaker of West Eighth street, died this morning, with diphtheria. He was 12 years old.

The Weather.

The weather to-morrow promises to be cloudy and partly cloudy, with slight temperature changes, followed by rain and a "cold wave" on Monday morning.

COUNTING THE VOTES.

Board of Canvassers at Work at Elizabeth.

The Union County Board of Canvassers met yesterday at Elizabeth.

Mr. T. C. Lathrop of Elizabeth was elected chairman and the oaths were administered by Judge Goldsmith of this city. The roll was then called and an adjournment was declared until half past one o'clock.

County Clerk Gerber and Deputy Clerk Moffett assisted in the tabulating of the votes.

When the Board assembled in the afternoon, Chairman Lathrop showed by reference to the election laws that Justice Wadsworth, of Plainfield, who had raised the point, was in error when he held that it was required that every member should be in attendance. The law requires that a majority be present, but it does require that all the returns shall be in the hands of the clerk of the board before the canvass can proceed.

There were no objections, a majority of the jority were present, and the work proceeded.

The following is the official vote of the county:

The Race Track Gamblers Want More.

The people of New York last Tuesday showed their contempt for Hayward for his attempt to use his authority to help his party. Let that serve as a warning to any of the Democratic statesmen of New Jersey who would try to do the same thing to help the race track gamblers. The gamblers want another election held, under the Supreme Court decision declaring the Democratic gerrymander unconstitutional, although the court expressly stated that the decision was not retro active. The constitution forbids the passage of any law which may be retro active in its operation, and it is presumably the same with a court decision as to the constitutionality of the law.

Bayard Stockton, a nephew of Attorney-General Stockton and Prosecutor of the Pleas of Mercer county, is one of those who believes that a new election must be held, and he quotes from the State constitution as follows:

That whenever any vacancy shall happen in the representation of any county in the Senate or General Assembly, by such vacancy happens during the recess of the Legislature or after the annual election, and not less than fifteen days before the commencement of the legislative year, it shall be the duty of the Governor to issue a writ for a special election to fill the said vacancy, unless he shall be of the opinion that the services of a person in the office where vacant will not be required during the legislative year or the residue thereof.

Mr. Stockton also says that he considers him that there was no question about the decision of the Supreme Court, created vacancies in all of the counties except seven—Atlantic, Cape May, Gloucester, Ocean, Salem, Somerset and Sussex—which of which only one is a Democratic man is elected. It was not a question of opinion as to the advisability of holding another election or of option with the Governor, but one where the Governor's duty in the premises seems to be clearly defined.

The Herald of to-day has a column on the subject, among other things saying: "Governor Abbett will have to exercise the newly elected Assembly from its operation and to direct that the new Senate be followed only in joint elections, but the Democrats say that the mere illness of a judge cannot make a vacancy in the office of Governor. The only cure for this condition of affairs, they declare, is a special election for the choice of a new Senator of Passaic county.

It is reply to this we say that the law was lawful until declared unlawful.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Not War, but Arbitration.

"War belongs to other ages and other forms of civilization than those under which we live. Its brutality, cruelty and injustice, its unthinking tendencies of the nineteenth century," writes Mr. Frederic R. Coudert in Harper's Magazine. He sees in the ever increasing value attached to human life an evidence of our growing civilization and a herald of the time when war shall be a relic of barbarism and nations shall settle all their differences by arbitration.

That the trend of the time is strongly in that direction Mr. Coudert judges from the steady growth of various influences that work for peace. The first great foe of war is the ever increasing regard for human life already mentioned. Another great foe is a free press, in which the newspaper correspondent describes unrestrained the bleeding horrors of actual battle, bringing them home to every fireside. Yet a third powerful enemy of war is to be found in the steadily growing influence of woman, which will all be thrown against the battlefield. Above all the other forces that are to stop fighting between nations, however, Mr. Coudert relies on the fact that war does not pay. This calm, cold conviction is gradually fixing itself in the mind of nations, especially in that of the cool headed, practical Anglo-Saxon race on both sides of the Atlantic. It is an appeal which will find ready response in the American breast.

There are many historic instances of the increasing tendency to settle international disputes by arbitration. In this chapter of history Mr. Coudert is proud to place the United States at the head of nations. We began acting on the principle of arbitration Sept. 3, 1782, when the Jay treaty between Great Britain and the infant United States was signed, thus closing the long and bloody war of the Revolution. From that time on till the arbitration commission met last year in Paris and decided the seal fisheries question the United States has been ever the first to resort to arbitration and to submit to it even when the decision was against her. We can do that now with a good grace, for all the world knows we can fight our way anywhere. Altogether, since its beginning, the United States has entered into 47 agreements for international arbitration.

A Story With a Moral.

A man died in Louisville in 1889, leaving property worth $10,000 to his supposed wife. It turned out, however, that she was not really such, but that the original wife was in New Jersey, having been deserted for the alleged wife nearly 30 years ago. The real wife brought suit for the man's property. She had her attorney, her witnesses and all that was necessary to prove her case. The alleged wife also had her lawyer and her witnesses, and at it the two ladies went nip and tuck to find out which should have that $10,000.

The real wife was entitled by law to one-half the $10,000, it having been left in the form of personal property. If the alleged wife had given up that amount peaceably to her predecessor in the old man's affections, there would have been enough to each to live on decently, if not happily, to the end of their days. Nay, they might have lumped the property and gone in on the co-operative plan, living together in one house like sisters, share and share alike. But not They would fight it out if they had to law all the rest of their days.

The first wife finally established her claim. She is now in the county poorhouse. The alleged wife died from alcoholism last year in a Louisville hospital. The moral you can find for yourself.

As fast as one naval cruiser is built and is considered to be the swiftest afloat, another appears to take the laurels away from her. The announcement was made not two months ago that one of our new American cruisers was the speediest on the water. Now, however, she is thrown altogether in the shade by the work of the English warship Havoc, which has developed a speed of 30 miles an hour, thus distancing any vessel either in the merchant marine or naval service. The British government will construct 12 cruisers like the Havoc and the specific name of the type will be that of torpedo destroyer.

The success of the World's fair and the amount obtained from the concessionaires, $3,300,000, proves among other things that the Americans are better financial managers than even the French. The French were able to collect from the United States precisely only $60,000, Making due allowance for increase of population and commercial enterprise since 1880, the difference in the two amounts is a compliment to American financial ability. The side show people themselves appear to be satisfied with results, too, in spite of considerable grumbling heard in the early days of the fair.

Experienced irrigating engineers declared at the Los Angeles congress that there is water enough in the arid region to supply every acre worth tilling. There is considerable land not worth irrigating.

The figures show that a third of the people of the United States visited their World's fair.

RESTORATION IS URGED

Secretary Gresham's Views on the Hawaiian Matter.

WOULD RE-SEAT QUEEN LILIUOKALANI

The Secretary of State Says That Lilliuokalani's Abdication Was Forced by the Landing of the Boston's Marines and That the Injustice Should Be Repaired.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A letter of Secretary Gresham to the president, dated the 18th, concerning Hawaiian affairs, has been handed out for publication. In it he takes the ground that the marines landed from the United States steamer Boston at the time of the revolution were not landed to protect American life and property, but to aid in overthrowing the existing government. Their very presence, he says, implies force and measures against it. The provisional government was established by the action of the American minister and the presence of troops landed from the Boston, and if left entirely to itself is due to the belief of the Hawaiians that if they made an effort to overthrow it, they would encounter the armed forces of the United States.

Mr. Gresham Theorizes.

The letter concludes as follows: "The earnest appeals to the American minister by the queen and her adherents were made in the midst of their weakness and inability. Courageous men, conscious of their strength and the justice of their cause, do not thus act. It is not now claimed that a majority of the people have not the right to vote under the constitution of 1887 or ever favored the existing authority or annexation to this or any other country They earnestly desire that the government of their choice shall be restored and its independence respected.

"Mr. Blount states that while at Honolulu he did not meet a single annexationist who expressed willingness to submit the question to a vote of the people, nor did he talk with one on the subject who did not insist that if the islands were annexed suffrage should be so restricted as to give complete control to foreigners or whites, and representative annexationists have repeatedly made similar statements to the undersigned.

Surrendered Provisionally.

"The government of Hawaii surrendered its authority under a threat of war until such time only as the government of the United States, upon the facts being presented to it, should reinstate the constitutional sovereign, and the provisional government was created to exist until the existing treaty between the United States of America have been negotiated and agreed upon.

"A careful consideration of the facts will, I think, convince you that the treaty which was withdrawn from the senate for further consideration should not be resubmitted for its action thereon. Should not the great wrong done to a feeble but independent state by an abuse of the authority of the United States be undone by restoring the legitimate government? Anything short of that will not, I respectfully submit, satisfy the demands of justice. Can the United States consistently insist that other nations shall respect the independence of Hawaii while not respecting it themselves? Our government was the first to recognize the independence of the islands and should be the last to acquire sovereignty over them by force and fraud."

He Prefers Hoodshed.

Professor W. C. Alexander, surveyor general of the Hawaiian Islands, when asked what he thought of Secretary Gresham's views, said:

"This is a great blow to me. If this policy is carried out, it means the backruptcy and ruin of the islands. If an attempt is made to restore Queen Lilliuokalani, bloodshed will result. I doubt if the queen herself would live to set again upon the throne.

"The people who established the provisional government in the islands were the same who secured the constitution of 1887, which was acquiesced in by Kalakaua. There was danger of disorder at that time, and Secretary Bayard, President Cleveland's former secretary of state, was very vigorous in his instructions to Mr. Merrill, the United States minister to Hawaii, that the rights and liberties of the queen must be preserved, and that he was at liberty to call on United States armed forces to secure this.

"It was this constitution of 1887 which Lilliuokalani sought to overthrow, and to establish one which would make only natives eligible to the upper house of the legislature, and which would deny the right to white men to vote. The revolution of last January was the result.

"The United States recognized the new government, has received its minister, has accredited a minister to it and has granted exequatur to its consuls. How can it interfere with that government, seek to depose it and set up another in its place?

"We come asking the United States government to annex the islands. Then right it is not in accord with the principles of the government to interfere in the affairs of another country, and then they seek to overthrow the government which the people of the islands have established and set up another."

Some Postal Statistics.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—First Assistant Postmaster General Jones has made his first annual report. The revenues required by the entire postoffice department of $81,000,000 short of the receipts, which will be about $5,000,000 more than every year. The appropriation for the expenses under the first assistant for the fiscal year of 1893 is $40,000,000, and there will be required for the year ending June 30, 1894, $45,000,000. On March 4, 1893, the presidential offices numbered 70,964, receiving $3,007,700, and there are now 72,610 offices receiving $3,250,000. The number of postmasters has increased from 62,444 to 64,998, etc. There is now one fourth-class postmaster to the county.

Special Agent Hugo Resigned.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Supervising Special Agent O. K. Hugo has handed his resignation to Secretary Carlisle.

STEEL POOL SMASHED.

The Carnegies Led the Unparalleled Cut In Steel Rails.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 11.—The cutting on steel rails is said to have been much greater than generally known. While a few days the Maryland Steel company accepted an order for 15,000 tons of rails, delivered on the line of the Boston and Albany railroad, at $27 per ton, and within a couple of days the Carnegie Steel company has sold rails at the phenomenally low price of $21.50 at the mill. This is shaking prices with a vengeance and is unparalleled in this branch of the trade.

The effect of it has been the disruption of the pool that has been in existence for the last four years.

This combination has fallen to pieces nearly in the same way and from the same causes that the Tobin tinplate did and in consequence of the action of the same people.

With condition of affairs is due to the inability of the rail manufacturers to agree upon a division of orders and on prices for the trade here. There are nine plants in this country making rails. For four years past they have stood together in an agreement under which each mill received a certain pro rata allotment of the orders, but as the fort ran out it failed to continue the pooling arrangement completely collapsed.

THE WICKED ONE LIVES.

It Was Another Van Sinderen, Not an Executioner, Who Died.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Tribune says today: A New York newspaper on Sept. 14, 1892, published an account of the death of Adrian Van Sinderen, the lawyer, at New Lots, N. Y., giving an account also of his disappropriation of the estate of William Lewis. The next day an account of the funeral appeared. People recalled the handsome Mr. Van Sinderen, his luxurious home in Brooklyn and the charge of larceny which led to his flight.

Few learned that the Adrian Van Sinderen who died on Sept. 14, 1892, was not the man, but a well known Adrian Van Sinderen for many years prominent in grand larceny. The general impression has been that the lawyer was dead.

As a matter of fact, the well known Adrian Van Sinderen is alive and well. He is in Berlin, secure in the knowledge no doubt that his offense is not named in the extradition treaty between Germany and the United States. District Attorney Nicoll hopes that the foreign government will surrender him as an act of international comity, as Costa Rica gave up Francis H. Weeks.

Cow Killing Is Prohibited.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—A dispatch to The Times from Calcutta, British India, says: The viceroy, in reply to an address presented to him by the municipal authorities, made an important announcement in regard to the practice of cow killing, resulting from the late riots. He said he must declare in the plainest language that the government would not permit these lawless exhibitions."

Anarchists Gather In London.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—A meeting was held in the Memorial Institute to-night to denounce the execution of the Chicago anarchists who were connected with the Haymarket riots. Two hundred anarchists were present, and a number of violent speeches were made.

A Ghoulish Crook.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Nov. 11.—A warrant is out for the arrest of John Dawson. He identified one of the bodies taken from the wreck as that of George Dawson of Ipsus, England, securing $200 that was found on the body. The man is said to be a crook.

General Grubb's Offer Accepted.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—Captain Mackey of the University of Pennsylvania football team today in a letter to the Hon. R. Burd Grubb agrees to play Princeton for the intercollegiate cup which the ex-minister to Spain offers.

Tricoupis Should Stay Out.

VIENNA, Nov. 11.—The return to office at Athens of M. Tricoupis is regarded in Vienna as a very serious matter. It is certain that he cannot work in harmony with the king, who finds his position well nigh unbearable.

Labor Leaders to Enter Politics.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—At a meeting of delegates from the trades labor unions held here it was resolved that political action by workingmen is the only possible and practical remedy for industrial and political evils.

THE TIDE HAS TURNED.

The Election Followed by an Upcurve in Business.

SURRENDER IN IRON INDUSTRIES.

Dun's Review Announces That the Return of Business Prosperity Is Now Well Under Way—The Dry Goods Market Feels the Change, and Mill Towns Will Rejoice.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The weekly review of trade issued today by R. G. Dun & Co. announces the return of business prosperity as follows: The turn of the tide has come. Since the elections there has been a change for improvement in business and standard industrial activities. There is some increase in actual transactions and much more in the tone of business. Men of all parties confess that there is ground for greater confidence, the silver question being for the present definitely out of the way and the chances of disarming action in other directions being considered, while the right of the people to rule their rulers has been vindicated.

While it is yet too early to look for great changes, there is already a distinct improvement in the demand for manufactured products since the action on the silver bill, some increase in the output of pig iron, and in sales of wool, in the building trades in several cities, and the failures for the week latest reported show lower liabilities.

In brief, the recovery which began when the silver repeal bill passed continues with increased strength.

The speculative markets have not changed, though the improvement in the stock markets which was expected from the silver bill comes slowly. The average of prices, though not quite as high as a week ago, is no longer depressed by heavy selling of home and foreign holders.

Iron Again Is Active.

The sudden call in the price of steel rails, which has been maintained at $29 for a long time, but is now $23 at the mills, has brought the quick enlargement of demand which might have been anticipated, and in turn the demand for ore, coke and pig iron improves. There is also a better demand for some manufactured products at the west, though not improvement as yet appears in prices, and with a few large contracts taken at the east prices are nevertheless at the lowest point.

The first week of November has passed, and thousands of business men breathe more freely because the apprehended failures in dry goods have been much less numerous and less important than was feared. No doubt it is true that many concerns have been carried over by extension, but even a moderate revival of trade will enable most of them to weather the storm. A gradual improvement is seen in the market for cotton goods, with slightly better prices in print cloths and some other grades. The sales of wool for the week have been 3,984,200 pounds at the three principal markets of Boston, New York and Philadelphia, while the production of men's woolens from June 1 to Nov. 1 was only 10,172,716 yards, against 17,068,929 for the same period last year, there is good reason to expect a large demand hereafter. Thus orders for spring woolens have clearly increased, and with mills which have some orders booked already, but not enough, the change is already important.

The volume of domestic trade, though smaller than a year ago, shows considerably less decrease than appeared in September or October, the exchanges at clearing houses outside New York being only 17.4 per cent below last year, but the consolidated week last year. Railroad earnings also exhibit some relative improvement, as the decrease for the latest week reported is only 4.1 per cent, against 10.4 for the month. Iron returns shows that the decrease in freight movement, separately considered, was decidedly larger. Money is abundant and rates for call loans, with slightly better demand has quite perceptibly expanded, the supply accumulated at the chief financial centers is extraordinarily large.

Much more confidence is felt in the future of monetary affairs since the repeal of the silver bill, and it is the common estimate that the result of the elections will be found to make the next congress favorable to the free coinage of silver coinage or paper inflation.

The failures for the past week have been 361 in the United States, against 210 for the same week last year, and in Canada 27, against 26 last year. There were four failures with liabilities between $100,000 and $500,000 each, and one or two between $50,000 and $100,000 each. The liabilities of failures for last week show a very encouraging decrease, amounting to only $3,000,000, against $13,000,000 for the preceding week, and it is noticed that while the number of failures does not materially decline as yet, there are fewer of important names.

Hood's Cures

Mr. P. J. Flemming

For Impure Blood.

"About three years ago a slight pimple appeared on my hand. I took a great many things for it, and at last, as it grew gradually larger, I consulted a physician for it. He pronounced it a cancer, and said that I had impure blood, and that the only way to cure it was to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took it according to directions, and have taken in all about six bottles. The sore is entirely healed, and I have the skin is nearly clear." P. J. FLEMMING, Whitesville, Mass. THE DIME SAVINGS INSTITUTION

OF

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand, with interest at the rate of three (3) per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually

JOHN W. MURRAY, President.
WILLIAM WHITE, Vice-President.
NATHAN HARPER.
ELIAS S. FOSS, Treasurer.

WANTED $50,000.

A Bold Robber Foiled by a Bold Bank Treasurer.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 11.—A daring attempt was made to rob the Society for Savings, which nearly resulted in the murder of Colonel Myron T. Herrick, the treasurer of the institution. Owing to the bravery of Colonel Herrick the robber was balked, although the treasurer had a narrow escape from death, a bullet fired by the robber passing through his coat and burying itself in the frame of an office door.

A stranger entered and asked for a private interview. Colonel Herrick led him into the trustees' room, the stranger closing the door behind them. The man was of medium height and build, with a sandy mustache. He was rather poorly dressed and wore a slouch hat and was in appearance not different from scores of men who call upon Colonel Herrick daily.

Colonel Herrick seated himself upon a corner of the table that stands in the middle of the trustees' room. He was at the corner next the door. The stranger passed him and stood at the further end of the table.

Without preliminary remarks the man said: "I want some money, and I want you to give it to me. Now you can go into the vault and give me $50,000. I'll go with you, and the clerks in the banking house will think you are showing me the vaults." The stranger quickly drew a revolver from his pocket and thrust the muzzle against Colonel Herrick's head. "If you don't do that," he continued, "I'll shoot you. I have a charge of dynamite in my other hand, and I'll blow you both up."

Colonel Herrick struck the man in the face and knocked him down. The robber sprang to his feet, shot at Colonel Herrick and sprang out of an open window into the street. The ball passed through the right side of Colonel Herrick's coat. The robber has not been found.

MADMAN IN A SCHOOL.

He Drinks a Bottle of Ink and Then Attacks a Woman Teacher.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—During recess Moses Thorne, a demented young man, whose parents live at 340 East Thirty-second street, entered grammar school No. 14 on East Twenty-seventh street and greatly alarmed the pupils by his strange antics. He drank a bottle of ink, which he said was excellent whisky, and of Miss Mary Roby, the teacher whose room he invaded, ordered him to leave he made grimaces at her. This so disconcerted Miss Roby that she ran screaming into the street.

Thorne pursued and knocked the teacher down with a blow of his fist. Persons in the street prevented him from doing further harm, and he was afterward arrested. At the Yorkville police court he was committed for examination as to his sanity. He presented a curious appearance in court, his face being smeared with ink, which he said was his favorite beverage. Thorne's father, Isidor Thorne, is a tailor.

AN EXCITING MEETING.

It Was the Result of a Demand Made by the Central Labor Union.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11.—The special school meeting called to consider the demands of the Central Labor union of this city that none but union men be employed on the new Boardman Manual Training school was held in the Grand Opera House and proved one of the most exciting public meetings ever held in this city. The theater was packed, and hundreds were unable to obtain admittance.

Many radical speeches were made. Great disorder prevailed most of the time, a dozen speakers trying to make themselves heard at the same time. The resolution proposed by the union men that only union laborers be employed on the building was voted down by a large majority, and the meeting refused to allow the question to be decided at the polls.

Matabeles Carried Death.

FORT VICTORIA, Nov. 11.—In the last fight all the Matabeles seemed to court death. They returned again and again to the attack over ground thickly dotted with corpses of their comrades. The colonists at Buluwayo are now building places of shelter for the force that will remain over the rainy season.

A RACE WAR IMPENDING

The Trial of Phil Evans Stirs Up a Riot at Bardstown.

THE STATE MILITIA CALLED OUT.

The Negroes Cheered the Prisoner, and Immediately the Whites Resented It.

One Negro Fatally Shot and Others Injured—Will Hang Evans Anyway.

BARDSTOWN, Ky., Nov. 11.—This town today is in a state of excitement, and an occurrence of yesterday afternoon may precipitate a race war that will result in much bloodshed. For the past week the people of this and surrounding counties have been aroused to a high pitch over the assault of Edna Hall by a negro—Evans. The trial has been in progress for two days, and not until yesterday afternoon was any evidence introduced that was at all favorable to the accused. At the trial last evening the testimony of one of the witnesses tended to prove the innocence of the accused.

The negroes have all been favorable to Evans. A crowd of them had congregated outside the courthouse. When Evans was being conducted from the courthouse to the jail by the police, they cheered him. The streets were packed with crowds of white people.

The cheering of the negroes so exasperated the whites that a fight was the result. The deputies made a charge upon the negroes and arrested three of them.

Mussel Ordered Out.

Leroy Wickliffe, negro, was badly wounded and will probably die. Paul Abel and another negro named Sims were arrested. These men are desperate characters and were badly beaten. Several negroes and one or two whites were also hurt, but their injuries are not of a serious nature. The deputies, re-enforced by the militia, soon dispersed the mob.

More trouble may result. The negroes are considerably wrought up over the occurrence and threaten vengeance. The whites, however, greatly outnumber the blacks, and an outbreak will result disastrously for the latter.

The cheering of the negroes has largely Intensified the feeling of the whites, and there are many rumors concerning a mob to take the law into its own hands and make Evans pay the penalty for his crime.

It is thought that wiser council will prevail and serious trouble will be averted. The militia is still guarding the jail, and any attempt to secure the prisoner will certainly result in the loss of many lives.

Evans, when on the stand, testified that he was at home on the night of the crime. His mother's testimony was badly mixed, however, and Evans' testimony will go for nothing.

Court adjourned at a late hour until this morning at 8 o'clock, and by noon the case will go to the jury, which means death for Phil Evans by the law or at the hands of an angry mob.

Boy Jailed For a Prank.

BUFFALO, Nov. 11.—A justice of the peace, G. W. Warren of Chautauqua county, is a terror to mischievous lads. Fred Martin, a youth of Fredonia, not yet out of his teens, is serving a sentence of 60 days in the Erie county penitentiary imposed by this justice. The offense is that of spilling mucilage on a schoolmate of the normal college, by the name of Davis.

Rockefeller Gives $500,000 More.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—John D. Rockefeller made his fourth gift to the University of Chicago. Its amount is $500,000. With his previous donations, this last contribution makes Mr. Rockefeller's gifts to the university $3,250,000. Mr. Rockefeller's last gift is conditional on securing Martin A. Ryerson's donation of $100,000.

Lehigh Valley's Outlet.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—The officers of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company announce that they have just completed arrangements with the New York, New Hampshire and Hartford for an interchange of business. This gives to the Lehigh an outlet into New England for its coal and other business.

John Brown's Judge Dead.

BRAZIL'S NEW NAVY.

Formidable Looking Craft Being Fitted Out For Peixoto.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Work on Brazil's improvised fleet of warships is being pushed night and day. The big dynamite gun will be put in place on El Cid today and will be ready for a trial. The Republica is rapidly being transformed into a formidable looking craft. In a few days the Green Folsom and Peixoto will have been fitted with three submerged tubes. Two lights polished rapid fire guns are now on board, and 1,000 rifles, ammunition and stores of all descriptions are arriving daily.

Forty barrels of "salt horse" were carted down to the vessels yesterday. The ration of the Britannia's outfit will consist of canned Sims-Belmont fish torpedoes. Each torpedo contains an explosive charge of 500 pounds of gun cotton. These torpedoes are controlled from the ship by means of a cable which is paid out as the submerged torpedo dives away in the direction of the enemy's fleet. The firing is by electricity. Experiments with these torpedoes have proved highly satisfactory, but they have never been used in actual warfare.

Miss Brandon Won Again.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The new comedy "Gudgeons," by Thornton Clarke and Louis Parker, was produced tonight at Toole's theater. Olga Brandon did not appear in the cast owing to a dispute which she had with the management at dress rehearsal on Thursday. After high words had passed between the two Miss Brandon walked out of the theater, declaring that she would throw up her part.

Spoons In His Pocket.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 11.—A dispatch from Wheeling says: Colonel Streator of the nail and guard of Pennsylvania was arrested here on a charge of stealing two silver spoons from the buffet lunch counter of the Hotel Windsor. Streator has been drinking heavily and put the spoons in his pocket while drinking hot drinks at the bars mentioned.

An Heiress Weds an Engineer.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 11.—The marriage of Miss Lillian Josephine Prior of Cromwell, Conn., to Hammond Morrill, an engineer in the employ of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, has created widespread excitement, which promises to increase, as a stern parent has been found to be unforgiving and relentless.

May Hunt Anarchists at Will.

MADRID, Nov. 11.—Powers have been conferred under the constitution upon the authorities of the province of Barcelona, empowering them to arrest suspected persons without the usual prescribed forms, and permitting the police to enter domiciles and to examine documents without warning or warrant.

GOOD HEALTH

THE HEADACHE.

How Some of Its Commoner Forms Are Caused and Occasionally Prevented.

"Since civilization began, if not since time-worn men, women have been the slaves of a viewless but powerful monster whose shadow can darken the whole of heaven till it passes—a second Kitten on the head ache. And it is but recently that it has been found possible in some degree to combat its power."

Harper's Bazar, just quoted, says, concerning some forms of this affliction, that a headache as frequent as any is caused by undue strain upon the eyes, by the presence of astigmatism and supersensitiveness and by their incessant use in bad light. This is to be attended to by the dentist, although more care in the habit of using the eyes does much to relieve by far trouble.

The headache which seems to be rheumatic and is the result of exposure to cold or drafts or sudden changes is best treated with hot applications, hot water bags and gentle friction at the place of pain, which readily relieve it for a time. But when the pain is persistent, keeping up its sharp torment day after day, the physician's overs ght is required.

There are many ways of easing the nervous and congestive headaches. Perhaps the best way is not to have them—that is, by undertaking no more than the strength is equal to, by not wearing one's self out with too much to perfect one fastidious housekeeping, with too much care or study or work of any kind, by dismissing anxieties, by bathing, by living in sweet and fresh air and by taking sufficient sleep. Another and often an easier way is through the nervous effect of the various phenomena and cathartic and brandy preparations that the physician prescribes with more or less hesitation.

Although it is not possible at the time that the headache is on in full force to make much movement, an almost sure impediment to its frequent recurrence is to be found in easy physical exercises which will call the blood from the dilated vessels of the head to warm the hands and to fill the arteries in the legs and arms and main body. A teacher of gymnastics can best avail here, but in the absence of such there are simple movements easily made which, if undertaken daily and continued for some time, will be of great use—the circular swinging of the arms extended crosswise, the raising and bending of the legs alternately and stretching out first one and then the other horizontally in front while standing on the other and swinging it in a circle, clasping the hands behind the head and bending over sideways to right and left. All this, practiced immediately will take but a few moments morning and night and will obliterate the blood to forsake the head vessels and thus give them time to assume their normal condition and do much to prevent the habit of congestion.

Superior Treatment For Burns.

If a person has been burned by the clothing catching fire, remove the clothing as soon as possible, taking care to keep the burned surface touched with no liquid water, and be sure not to drag upon the injured skin in such a way as to pull it off, as it is the best possible protection for the tender flesh beneath. When the clothing has been removed, keep the burned surface covered with cloths wrung out of soda water, made by dissolving a teaspoonful of soda in a pint of water. This is an effectual method of treating burns, and it is far superior to the old dressing of carron oil, a mixture of linseed oil and lime water, says Hall's Journal of Health.

To Trace a Ball In the Body.

Professor Keen says that the entrance and exit of a ball from a gun or revolver can often be determined in the following manner: When the ball enters the body, it is black with grease and powder, and on striking the skin this is wiped off, and therefore leaves a dirty black mark on the skin, and being clean when it comes out it does not leave a mark.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

TEA CUP SUPERSTITIONS.

A Few Quaint Traditions Regarding the Ever Friendly Cup That Cheers.

If, while the tea is being made, the lid, which has been removed to pour in the water, is forgotten, it is a sure sign that some one will "drop in to tea." If a single person happens to have two spoons in his or her saucer it is a prediction that the fortunate (or unfortunate?) drinker of that particular cup will be married within a year from that date. If you put cream into your cup before the sugar it will "cross your love," so be very careful. If a tea stalk floats in the cup it is called a "beau," and when this is seen unmarried women should stir their tea very quickly round and round and then hold the spoon upright in the center of the cup. If the "beau" is attracted to the spoon and clings to it, he will be sure to call very shortly if not that same evening, but if the stalk goes to the side of the cup he will not come.

If you want to know how many years will elapse before you may expect to be married, balance your spoon on the edge of your cup, first noting that it is perfectly dry. Fill another spoon partly with tea, and holding it above the balanced spoon let the drops of the tea gather to the tip of the spoon and gently fall into the bowl of the one below. Count the drops required to overbalance it—each one stands for a year. It is a sign of fair weather if the cluster of small air bubbles formed by the sugar collect and remain in the center of the cup. If they rush to the sides, it will surely rain before night.

When toast is made, three or four thin slices of bread must be cut the whole length of the loaf and placed one over the other. This done they must all be cut in half by one sweep of the knife. If this is done by a young woman, and the slices are not severed clean through to the plate, she will not be married within the year. If the bread parts in two even heaps, she might as well order her trousseau. On no account must she take the last piece of toast or bread on the plate unless she wishes to be an old maid, says The Jewelers' Circular in concluding this bit of tea cup lore.

CUP AND SAUCER IN YELLOW AND GREEN.

ART AMATEURS

CHINA DECORATION.

A Striking Design In Yellow and Green For a Cup and Saucer.

An attractive design is carried out in greens, with pale yellow for the flowers, and the scalloped border in dark green, to which a little mixing yellow may be added to make the color warmer. Use the same at the base of the cup and around the center of the saucer.

On the broad, curving leaves use moss green, becoming paler at the tips. Line off the markings on the leaves with dark green. For the dotted work on the cup and saucer use moss green, leaving the white of the china for background. Use moss green for the stems of the flowers and outline with the same color and a little duck green added to deepen it. For the flowers use jonquil yellow, putting on a pale wash. Line the markings with the outline color used on the stems. Use duck green for the border lines and handle of the cup. To secure a deep color put the green on in two washes. Allow the first to thoroughly dry before adding the second. These directions and design were given recently by The Art Interchange.

Children's Characteristic Sayings.

What can be better than a child's definition of drawing—"First you think about something, and then you draw a line round your think?" The stories about children are innumerable, but owing to a singularly undiscriminating quality in the minds of parents they are often as foolish as not. Sometimes their utterances betray character, as of the little boy who, when the tiger's growls behind the sofa had become too realistic for human endurance, burst forth with "Mother, mother, don't growl so loud, it frightens granny," or of the self-conscious infant who rushed to leave the Bonhomme at the Zoo because he said, "the lion is peeping at baby," as if that wide-eyed majesty were conscious of anything smaller than some Libyan desert visible in his mental gaze. Often they are questions to confound the wise. "Mother, does any one have tomorrow before me? And will they use today when we've done with it?" —has a flavor of oriental wisdom about it.

The Fabian Policy.

The policy of wearing out the enemy in new ways, misleading movements, feints of attack, etc., while avoiding open battle, is called the "Fabian policy," from the following circumstance: Fabius Maximus was a Roman general in the second Punic war. Having been appointed just after the Romans army had suffered severe defeat at Lake Thrasymene, he perceived that his men were discouraged and fearful of raw recruits could not cope successfully with a trained army flushed with victory and led by their great commander, Hannibal. He therefore avoided pitched battles, moved his camp from highland to highland, and tired out the enemy with marches and countermarches. This he continued until thwarted in his intentions by the impatience of the Roman senate.

Photograph Taken on Shipboard.

Of this curious photograph of the moon during an eclipse the Popular Science News says that it owes its remarkable appearance to the fact that it was taken on shipboard. The rolling and pitching of the vessel caused the image of the moon to move in an irregular path over the surface of the sensitive plate, producing the result shown in the engraving.

It has been suggested that by a method similar to this the movements of a vessel can be accurately and permanently registered, and in certain cases might be of value in determining the judgment and direction in the case of new vessels or during storms of unusual violence. The sharp line of demarkation between the sea and sky in this picture is due to the phenomenon like illumination of the water, which was very brilliant at the time the photograph was taken.

Cloture.

Cloture is the parliamentary closing of a debate in order to secure a vote upon a bill before a legislative assembly. An exchange explains that it is a French measure—the word is also French—and it was introduced into the house of commons in 1893. It is similar in result to the "previous question." The Anglicized form of the word is "closure." The French pronunciation is klotoor. The English pronunciation is kle-tur, according to Webster, the u having the sound of u in "bull."

A trade journal states that electrotyping was first successfully practiced in 1837 and was considered a triumph of chemical and mechanical skill. Engraving the utmost nicety for its execution.

Dryden's Poetical Philosophy.

Want is a bitter and a hateful good
Because its virtues are not understood.
Yet many things impossible to thought
Have been by need to full perfection brought.

Sharpness of wit and active diligence.
Prudence at once and fortitude it gives,
And if in patience taken mends our lives.

A LIMITED HONEYMOON.

A Would Be Bridegroom Declares His Prospective Plans.

His back was humped up, his knees badly sprung, and there was a squeak in his voice as he fondly smoothed down his long goatee and inquired:

"Stranger, could you tell that I'd just paid 50 cents to hev these whiskers dyed? Jest stand off and squint at 'em and gimme an honest answer."

"Yes, I could tell that they had been dyed," I replied.

"So could I, but that's all right. Got my ha'r dyed at the same time. How old would you take me to be?"

"Well, about 50."

"That was my object—to deceive the public in general and the Widder Spicer in particuler. I'm 72 years old."

"You have an object then?" I asked.

"I hev. I'm goin to git married."

"No!"

"That is, if the widder fills the bill. I'm goin down to Skinnersville today to see her. If she fills the bill, she's my jaybird to love and cherish; if she don't, she's somebody else's jaybird. What d'ye think of an old chap of 72 shinin up to a widder of 28?"

"Such matches generally bring trouble."

"Yes, I s'pose they do, and the old chaps are generally to blame fur it. I left all the children cryin around, and the last thing my eldest gal said was that if I be finashually wrecked in three months All of 'em figger that the widder is after my money and that she'll make the dollars fly like feathers."

"But you don't think so?"

"Not this evenin, stranger. When a widder picks this old moss-back up fur a flat, she's bound to git him. I had a farm, but I've put it outer my hands. I had a hired gal doin the work, but I've let her go. I had three cows to milk, and I've bought two more."

"The widow will have plenty of work, sh?"

"More'n a hundred pounds of carpet rags waitin to be sewed," whispered the old man as he drew down his eye. "Seven of me to cook, wash and mend fur. Cellar hain't bin whitewashed fur three years, and all the house has got to be cleaned. I've throwed the well pump away and gone back to a rope and bucket, and it's comin on time to dry pumpkins, smoke meat and pick the geese."

"She won't have much of a honeymoon," I suggested.

"Bridal tower is goin to be just eight miles long!" he said as he winked the other eye. "I've got it all planned, and the cost is $1.50. I've already bought her 10 yards of caliker and a 27 pair of shoes, and she can't hev no excuse to run to the store fur a year. The only money I shall hev about the house is this 50 cent piece with a hole in it. Stranger, look me all over as I turn around."

"What's the idea?"

"To see if any flies hev lit on me while we're bin talkin."

"No, I don't see any."

"I didn't much 'spect you would. Thar wasn't any on me when I left home, though I'm 72 years old, and thar won't be any on me when I stand before that widder and offer her my hand and heart. Think of them children a-takin on because that widder is goin to wreck me inside of three months, and then think of the widder tryin it on next Say, stranger."

"Well?"

"Jest one word more. I've got seven hogs in the pen to home, and I'll bet the hull of 'em agin a dollar that instead of the widder wreckin me I'll borrow her last shillin to pay me gettin my ha'r and whiskers dyed up an to fix the preacher who marries us. The children don't know that I'm a-gettin a wife, hired man, hired gal, sewin woman an a mother fur 'em all combined in one, and I don't actually believe the hull expense will amount to over $8. Thar is moss in the woods around here, stranger, but none growin on my spinal column. Thar is flies a-flyin about this depot, but you jest notice that none of 'em stop to light on the undersigned!"—Detroit Free Press.

"Where people take things to sell when they need money?"

"Yes."

HELD UP AND ROBBED

$13 AND A GOLD WATCH TAKEN FROM SAMUEL O'HARA.

He was Stopped by a Gang of Tramps Between Fanwood and Netherwood.—Some Held Him While Others Robbed Him

Samuel O'Hara of Elizabeth reported to the police this morning that he had been held up and robbed about eleven o'clock by a gang of tramps. The robbery took place between Netherwood and Fanwood.

He was relieved of $13 in money and a gold watch.

O'Hara says he was on his way from Elizabeth to this city to visit friends.

Two tramps were arrested on suspicion.

A BOY LOST.

Missing Since Five o'Clock Saturday Afternoon.

Mr. Thomas Smith of South Plainfield reported to Chief Grant this morning that his nine year-old son, Richard, had been missing from home since Saturday last. He asked the aid of the police to find him. The boy was last seen at about five o'clock Saturday afternoon.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. John Shirley of West Front street is very ill.

Father Murphy, assistant priest at St. Mary's Catholic church, has gone for a few weeks' visit at Summit.

Mr. William P. Locke of West Sixth street is the happy father of a bouncing baby boy. The little one arrived yesterday.

Miss Mary Terrill of Irvington, returned home to-day after a week's visit with her niece, Mrs. J. E. Southard of Third street.

Miss Humpston, principal at the Washington School, is confined to her home with a severe sore throat. Miss Boorsm is acting principal in her absence.

Mr. Levi Bird's little eight months' old child, Beatrice, died this morning of brain fever, at her parents' home on Harmony street, North Plainfield. She was only ill about two weeks.

Frederick H. Cheeswright, the successful choirmaster and organist of the Church of the Holy Cross, has composed an Easter Hymn entitled "Let Your Glad Voices." The Churchman, an Episcopal weekly, publishes the music in this week's issue.

Hazel M. Glaentzer, the three-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Glaentzer, of New street, died yesterday of diphtheric croup. She was taken sick Saturday night. Her death is a very sad blow to the parents as they were wholly unprepared for it, because she had been in perfect health before Saturday. She was the life of the house and everyone that knew her loved her. The funeral will be private.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon of John H. Greer, at the home of his uncle, Elijah Sites, on Chatham street. He was 27 years old, and died of consumption. Deceased had never enjoyed good health. When an infant he was attacked by the dread disease, and he never out grew it. When twelve years old his family were told that he couldn't possibly live six months unless he was sent West. He was sent West and located in Missouri, where his health improved and he remained there until about two years ago, when he became very bad again. He returned to Plainfield and lived here since, gradually wasting away until he was a mere shadow. He retired to his bed, but remained sitting in a chair, almost to the hour of his death. His parents died several years ago. Three brothers survive him. His funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon, at two o'clock.

The programme of the historical and educational Old Country Pilgrimage which has been arranged for January next by Bishop Vincent, formerly of this city, now of Buffalo, N. Y., and the Rev. Dr. Lunn, the editor of the Review of the Churches, has just received an interesting addition. The Right Hon. James Bryce, M. P., Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in the present British Cabinet, and author of "The American Commonwealth," has consented to show the Pilgrims the House of Parliament, and lecture them upon these historic buildings. He writes to say: "I am much interested in the Chautauqua movement—one of the most remarkable phenomena of modern America—and if I am in London when Bishop Vincent's party arrives, it will give me much pleasure to meet them in Westminster Hall, and explain, so far as I can, our arrangements to them. Their programme seems to be an excellent one."

Argument Concluded.

The argument was concluded to-day, at Trenton, in the Passaic street extension matter. Mr. Craig A. Marsh represented the city, Mr. Charles A. Reed, the township, and Judge Coddington and Mr. R. V. Lindabury the objectors. The decision will be rendered at the next term of court, which is January or February.

DIED WHILE ASLEEP.

LAWYER CHAUNCEY B. RIPLEY SUCCUMBS TO APOPLEXY.

Looked as Peaceful as if Sleeping When Found in Bed at the Hoffman House, Where he Always Staid When he Did not go to his Home in Westfield, N. J.—for the Night.—Well Known as a Lawyer and as an Advocate of Improved Roads in Union County.

EARLY yesterday morning Chauncey B. Ripley, an old and well-known lawyer, was found dead in bed in a room in the Hoffman House, New York. He had expired during Saturday night, from cerebral apoplexy.

Mr. Ripley had an office in the Potter Building, but his home was in Westfield. He frequently went to the Hoffman House, always staying there when he remained in the city over night. He went to the hotel Thursday evening and was assigned to room 219, in the Twenty-fifth street annex, the room he usually occupied.

The last time he was seen alive was at noon Saturday, when he took luncheon in the men's cafe.

When the chambermaid went to room 219 yesterday morning she found the door locked. As she received no response, she informed Mrs. Bock, the housekeeper. The office was notified and the door was forced.

Mr. Ripley was found lying dead in bed. Dr. D. F. Pease, the hotel doctor, examined the body and gave it as his opinion that death had resulted from cerebral apoplexy.

The features of the dead man were composed, and there was no evidence of a struggle. Dr. Pease said that Mr. Ripley had passed away in his sleep. Dr. John H. Ripley of 605 Lexington avenue, a brother of the dead lawyer, was sent for, and Coroner Schultze, after issuing a certificate that apoplexy had been the cause of death, notified Undertaker Albert Maurer, sexton of Trinity Chapel, to take charge of the body.

Chauncey B. Ripley was born on May 14, 1835, at the Ripley homestead, known as Ripley Hill, Tolland County, Conn. His father was Chauncey Ripley, who was also born at the homestead. His grandfather was Jeremiah Ripley, who had been an officer in the Revolutionary Army, and was afterward County Judge of Tolland County.

Young Ripley received his preparatory education at the Connecticut Literary Institute, at Suffield, Conn., and taught school at Windsor Locks and East Granby while preparing himself for entrance to college. He also taught school at Scotch Plains, near Westfield, and subsequently was the Principal of a select school in Springfield. He continued his studies under the Rev. Dr. James Fuller Brown.

In 1860 he entered the freshman class of the University of Rochester, but remained there only two years. During his junior year he held the chair of mathematics at the Flushing Institute, L. I. In 1863 he entered the senior class at the university at Lewisburg, Penn., and was graduated with honors in 1864. Two years later the degree of M. A. was conferred upon him by the university.

Immediately after his graduation, Mr. Ripley went to New York and entered the law office of Benjamin Vaughan Abbott. He became a student in the law department of the University of the City of New York, and was graduated in June, 1865. He was the valedictorian of his class.

In 1866 he opened a law office in the New York Times building, and remained there until the old building was removed. Then he went to the Potter Building, where he had remained ever since.

On June 27, 1888, Bucknell College (the successor of the university at Lewisburg) conferred upon him the degree of LL.D. He was the first elected President of the New York Alumni Club of Bucknell College, and was for several years President of the Alumni Association of the law department of the University of the City of New York. At the time of his death Mr. Ripley was chairman of the Executive Committee of the Alumni Association, and one of the examiners for degrees and awards of prizes in the law department of the university. He delivered the address on behalf of the alumni when the Hev. Howard Crosby was chosen Chancellor in 1870. He was a member of Sigma Chi Fraternity, of which President Cleveland was made a member some years ago.

Mr. Ripley was one of the largest landholders at Westfield. He was much interested in the movement for improving country roads, and was one of the Executive Committee of the National League for Improved Roads, and counsel for the league. He is said to have spent $100,000 in improving the roads in the neighborhood of his property, and in furthering the interests of the league.

In 1865 Mr. Ripley married Cornelia Ann, the daughter of Gideon Bonnell of Westfield. She died on March 14, 1893, leaving no issue.

Up to last Summer Mr. Ripley's health had been fairly good, but one unusually hot day he was overtaken while on his farm with his former trouble. From that time his health began to fail, and he frequently complained of pains in the head and of dizziness. He was very stout, and his corpulence often troubled him.

He was a member of the Presbyterian church in Westfield, and was President of the Fairview Cemetery there.

The funeral services will be held at his home in Westfield. The burial will be in the Fairview Cemetery.

FOR THE ABSENT ONES.

A DIGEST OF TWO INTERESTING SERMONS.

Dr. Barnes of the Methodist Episcopal Church Tells of Parents' Love and Duty, and Rev. Mr. Herring, of the First Presbyterian Church, Describes "The Complete Man."—Mr. Crane Talks to Young Men.

Synopsis of Dr. Barnes' Sermon.

"And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept: and as he went, thus he said, O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!"—2 Samuel, 1, 12:33.

Sad words indeed are these. As sad as any in the literature of the world. Not only had a father lost his daughter to warfare by a rebellious, but the chief rebel was his favorite son. The joy of the suppression of the rebellion was o'er-shadowed by the tidings of Absalom's death. This heart breaking manifestation of parental grief recalls Dr. Talmage's love for his son, and is a type of that which dwells in the breast of many a parent. I think there are three facts which should greatly encourage you in your dealing with children. I consider them as realities, and not as theories.

1. Your children are of divine origin. They are born under the covenant of grace, the promise being to you and your children. Your child is also God's child. You represent the human side of parentage, God the divine side. What an inducement to do your best for him.

2. In caring for them you have divine co operation. He who was once the Babe of Bethlehem, bends with you over the cradle in which your dear one sleeps in innocence. He who was the boy of Nazareth walks to and fro with your boy, to keep him in all his way. Take heart, O loving, anxious parent. You are a worker together with God for the present and everlasting well-being of your child.

3. God is your example as a parent. The bible is the book of corrections. There he has informed us that there are no partialities with him. No one is chosen through some unreasoning fancy. No one has preferred because of love and another rejected because of hate. God loves all men, you are to love all your children. God makes due allowance for the circumstances of each, so should you. God extends to each his care, so are we to care for ours. Then as the boy becomes the perfect man, you must meet the growing mind with growth in your own. He must ever find in you a wealth of spiritual life, a clean cut appreciation of morals, a holy uplift of soul.

May God grant you his grace, so that as fellow workers with him you may have the indescribable of presenting them to him fit jewels to adorn the crown of divine parentage.

Synopsis of Mr. Herring's Sermon.

"And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of Lord Jesus Christ." The Apostle Paul had the power of putting "multum in parvo." A rich benediction this is for the Thessalonians, a benediction profound, sublime and broad.

The danger is that we esteem such exuberance of spirit impractical. Paul was most practical. Few men have passed through such a practical experience in the world. Paul was no hermit.

The complete man is three fold. The materialist says he possesses but one element—matter, and mind is but the manifestation of matter. The philosopher says, "Man is two-fold, material and immaterial." There is a trinity in man. "The body is the house of the soul and the soul the house of the spirit, but the trinity in the Godhead is not symbolized by the house of man." The Apostle Paul's trinity of the Godhead is a trinity of persons and the three-fold nature of man is a trinity of manifestation. We image God in the body or in the soul but in the spirit.

THE SANCTIFICATION OF THE SOUL.

The sanctification of the reason. Give mind to God and it cannot rest on a conquering and to conquer. "God is in light and there is in Him darkness none at all." The sources of our faith are in the light. The foundation is God. All bad to criticise. All bad is light. The scientific spirit should be consecrated. The way of Agnosticism is not the way of light. An unconsecrated intellect may change a man into a brilliant demon.

The sanctification of the spirit. We have a spirit and also the spirit. We have the spiritual that we possess by consciousness. We are like the understanding deputy plate. There is the image, though unseen that awaits development.

Because man is a spirit he can receive God's word. Because he is a spirit he can better than external. Because we are spirits, Christ came and said, "Ye must have a new birth and be born the Father."

"There is a spirit in man and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth Him understanding."

The Holy Spirit communes with man's spirit. Because man is a spirit he can realize the need because the seed is part of the sunlight. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, that born of spirit is spirit."

WHOLLY SANCTIFIED.

Body with the senses, soul with thought and spirit with conscience, wholly sanctified and peace reigns. God is the God of peace. The legacy of Christ is peace. "My peace I give unto you." Impossible for you to carry fears and doubts, and possibly to possess the "peace that passeth all understanding." Only as every part of your nature be sanctified wholly, and may you be filled with all the fullness of God.

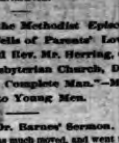
Mr. Crane Speaks to Young Men.

The Rev. A. Crane, the New England evangelist, preached an eloquent sermon to a large congregation of young men in the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon, and again last night in the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

A HUMOROUS HUMORIST

ONE WHO LAUGHS WHILE MAKING OTHERS LAUGH.

Mr. Marshall P. Wilder, the "Prince of Entertainers," at the Casino Saturday Night, at the Si-Club Entertainment.



AST Saturday night the Casino was filled with an audience that laughed itself hoarse at Mr. Marshall P. Wilder's renditions of humorous pieces. He is rightly called "the prince of entertainers" and he upheld his title in Plainfield, by keeping his hearers continually convulsed with laughter.

The entertainment was given by the Plainfield Bicycle Club, which was fortunate in securing, besides Mr. Wilder, the famous banjoists, Messrs. Brooks and Denton. The selections rendered by these were most excellent.

Mr. Wilder's wit seemed to be unlimited and he was continually encored. At every number the programme where he appeared he was called back time after time. At one of these times he good naturedly told the audience that he would do all he could for them. The hit of the evening, however, was his rendering of an opera, taking the four characters of to perfection. The programme was as follows:

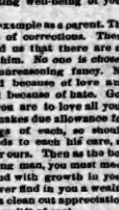
FAST TIME IN A RELAY RACE.

The Newark Wheelmen Cover 50 Miles in 2 Hours, 56 Minutes.



ROBABLY the fastest time ever made in a relay race was made Saturday afternoon in the fifty-mile relay road race of the two teams of the Newark Wheelmen captained by George Coffin and R. L. Blauvelt respectively.

The start was made at 2:27 o'clock, Peter Murray being the first runner for Coffin and Dr. Fraser for Blauvelt. Murray rode the five miles up the hilly road to Avondale in seventeen minutes, reaching there three minutes ahead of Fraser. At Avondale George Coffin relieved Murray, and Haddon took Fraser's place. Coffin arriving at South Orange five minutes ahead of Hudson.

At South Orange the message was delivered to R. Tague for Coffin and Hargon for Blauvelt. Before the start from Milburn Tague fell and injured himself so badly that he was compelled to retire. G. Coffin again taking the message and reaching Milburn seven minutes ahead of Hargon. Here Gregory and Lang started off on a run, the former proving himself the better man. He reached Scotch Plains eight minutes ahead of his competitor. Wilson the message for Coffin at Scotch Plains, Cook doing likewise for Blauvelt. Wilson threw the relay from Cook's eyes all the way into Plainfield, both retaining their respective positions and time. Mayo and Swartout started from Plainfield at a record breaking gait. Blauvelt's man. Swartout, passing Mayo very closely to Westfield, and reducing Coffin's man's lead to six minutes. At Westfield Mayo was relieved by Trunk and Swartout by Frazer. Trunk gained a minute during the race to Rahway. Coffin's lead there being seven minutes.

Beeber and Blanchard entered the race here and arrived at Elizabeth only a short distance apart. From Elizabeth to Newark the race was very exciting. Charles Coffin and R. L. Blauvelt being the contestants. Coffin finished at the corner of Broad and Market streets at 5:23, four minutes ahead of Blauvelt, who arrived at 5:27. The actual time of the race was 2:56, probably the fastest relay road race ever held in this part of the country. The winning team received a handsome prize.

CHARITY ORGANIZATION.

Adjourned Meeting To-Night of the Union County Organization.

An adjourned meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association will be held in the parlors of the Crane Avenue Church, to-night, at eight o'clock. Robert W. DeForest, President of the New York Charity Organization Society, will speak of practical methods of charity organization work, and his address will be followed by a general discussion of the subject. All interested are cordially invited to attend.

THE GUN EXPLODED.

DAVID ROANTREE SEVERELY INJURED AT NEW MARKET.

The Gun Had a Six Inch Load in it.—Roantree's Eyes and Face Filled with Powder.—A Piece of His Nose Shot off.

T NEW Market, Friday afternoon, David Roantree had a narrow escape from death. He, in company with Benjamin Van, William Wacker and another young man, was hunting for rabbits in the vicinity of Stelle's woods.

They had one gun, a double barreled weapon. It belonged to a resident of New Market, who had loaded it for burglars, at the time when thefts were so numerous is that locality.

The owner of the gun must have put in a charge of nine buckshot and a rifle bullet, as he had about six inches of ammunition in it. An ordinary load being about two inches.

The hunters had been cautioned about the heavy charge the gun contained, and were warned to look out for it. It seems that Roantree was the only one who was willing to take the chances and shoot it off, as it was liable to explode. The first rabbit spotted was a short distance from a fence. Roantree rested the barrel of the muzzle loader on the fence and pulled the trigger. There was a loud report, a flash of burning powder and smoke, and Roantree fell to the ground. The gun had exploded, splitting the butt in two.

The young man received the charge of powder in his face. A piece of his nose was torn off and his eyes were almost blinded. He was rendered unconscious. His companions carried him to Dr. Nelson's office. From there he was taken to his home. The powder was removed, unless much of the powder was picked out of his face. He will probably lose his eyesight.

The hammer of the gun was driven in one of the wooden rails of the fence with such force that it took the united strength of the three men, who tied a rope to it, to pull it out. Had this hammer struck young Roantree in the head he would no doubt have been killed.

"BOOKS AND READING."

Second Course Lecture To-Morrow in All Souls' Church.

Mrs. Lucy Gilbon Morse of New York will read a paper on "Books and Reading," at All Souls' church, to-morrow afternoon, Nov. 14, at four p. m. This is the second afternoon lecture in the course, given at this church. Mrs. Morse is a daughter of the late Rev. Hosea Ballou Hop per Gibbons, philanthropist of national reputation, and a grand-daughter of the Quaker philanthropist, Isaac T. Hopper. Her father, James Sloan Gibbons, was the author of the song, "We're Coming, Father Abraham, Three Hundred Thousand Strong," written during the war.

A Tussle with His Hired Man.

William Kelly of Oak Tree had a serious tussle with his hired man, David Schumaker, one day last week. Mr. Kelly was worsted, and was quite severely injured. The knocking "Mary" over was the last one of the neighbors interfered by taking hold of Mr. Kelly, and allowing his opponent to get in several telling blows. Schumaker could be subdued. "Dave" is locked up at New Brunswick.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Steps Toward Nationalism.

The long and disastrous coal strike in England, lasting three months and paralyzing many trades, has naturally given rise to plans for the prevention of such strikes in future. The Socialist party of course has its panaces, which is that the state shall buy up all the coal mines of Great Britain and operate them. Numbers of the Radical party have gone over to the Socialists on this question, arguing that the coal mining interests of the country are too important and involve too many other industries to allow them longer to be controlled by private persons.

Sir George Elliot is a self made Briton. When a boy he was a common miner in the coalpits. He was brainy and ambitious, however, and he raised himself step by step, till he became very rich and a baronet. Sir George's plan for preventing coal strikes is to merge all the coal mine owners into one great trust, worth, say $500,000,000. The mines of the kingdom could be bought for that, he says. This huge corporation should be managed on a semi-co-operative basis by directors who looked at once to the best interests of employers and employes. The price of coal should be fixed, and when once made should not be advanced except with the approbation of the government, and then all, stockholder, workman and consumer, should share in the profits accruing.

In Switzerland, which an eminent British writer declares to be the best governed country on the globe, the drift toward state socialism is still more marked. The initiative has been resorted to to compel the national legislature to enact laws providing work for every citizen. The signers of the initiative demand that the congress shall make the hours of labor shorter so as to give employment to more workmen. That is one of the demands. Another is the passing of laws establishing government workshops. Besides that the initiative also calls on the government to found and manage public labor bureaus on its own account, and also to provide for compulsory arbitration in labor disputes.

A Growling Old Lion.

If Louis Kossuth lives until the 27th of next April he will be 91 years old. On the occasion of his ninety-first birthday he wrote in answer to a letter of congratulation, "It will be a blessing for me if your congratulations are the last I receive, as I sincerely hope they may be." Such a reply as that would tend to damp the ardor of a man's most enthusiastic admirers.

The fact is that for 40 years this old lion has done nothing but sit and growl. He was once an idol when the revolt of Hungary against the Austrian government finally failed. He was young then, and no foreigner who ever visited the United States was ever made so much of a lion of, except Lafayette, as Kossuth was. After the Hungarian revolution failed, many of his countrymen who had been with him accepted the order of things and began to work inside the Austrian empire for a greatness for Hungary that they had hoped to win outside of it.

The result of their patriotic efforts is that Hungary is today the most powerful portion of Austria-Hungary. The tail wags the dog. But Kossuth over and again refused election to the diet at Pesth, where he might have wrought far reaching reforms. He declined to do anything whatsoever for his country. Consequently he is today a scurvy, disappointed, not over agreeable old man, a burden to himself and no good to anybody else.

"The sun do move!" In the national house of representatives a bill is pending which calls for the plain, honest printing of bills instead of the "engrossing" of them. The word "engros" is probably employed from considerations of dignity to imply the writing out of a document in a large plain hand. Why else it should be always used is a mystery. The engrossing of a bill is a survival from the days of pomp and flourish, of heavy red and gold seals, illuminated manuscripts and parchments. We have indeed come down to utilitarian times when a legislative body proposes to give up its ponderous "engrossing."

Hon. David B. Hill seems in earnest about reforming the poky ways of the United States senate. He has already introduced into that venerable body the amendment to the rules which raised such a storm in the house two years ago —the one providing that when a member is in the chamber in plain sight he shall be counted as present whether he answers to his name at roll call or not.

Millionaires, rich men, prominent public men and those in authority need to be on the lookout for the crank that shoots to kill. These are the times that try men's souls, and they have raised a great crop of murderous cranks. Weak, excitable brains grow way under great stress. The man who shot Mayor Carter Harrison was only one of many now in this country.

Prince Bismarck hangs on to life in a way that shows what a magnificent constitution he had before he allowed bad temper and too much eating and drinking to get away with him.

THE REDS ARE RAMPANT.

All Spain Tremblingly Awaits the Next Outrage.

COUNTRY A HOTBED OF ANARCHY.

All the Public Buildings In Madrid Under Double Guard — Three Important Arrests—A Bomb In Lisbon—Bloody Sunday Anniversary.

MADRID, Nov. 13.—The authorities having been informed that the anarchists of this city have threatened to blow up the house, all strangers will henceforth is excluded from that building unless they are provided with special permits and are fully identified upon presentation of these permits. Three anarchists were arrested here Sunday at the instance of the police of Marseilles, charged with complicity in the recent dynamite bomb outrage at the Liceo theater.

One of the anarchists arrested is the keeper of a tavern, where the anarchists of this city and other parts of Spain are said to have been in the habit of meeting. The tavern keeper is suspected of having acted as a sort of postmaster for the anarchists, receiving their underground mail and distributing it to those who called for the communications addressed to them. It is exchanged between the anarchists of Spain and other countries.

A Nest of Anarchy.

The authorities, it would appear, have long had the tavern under suspicion but have not yet been able to connect him in a satisfactory manner with any of the conspiracies hatched by the enemies of society that have been laid bare. The arrests made yesterday may lead to other and very much more important raids upon the part of the police, as it is reported that a clew has at last been found to the location of the head center of the anarchist conspiracy which is said to extend all over Europe and to have its branches at least in the United States. The government authorities are known to be in active communication with the police of Paris, London, Berlin and Vienna, and the report which has been in circulation ever since the plot to blow up the houses of parliament in Vienna, to the effect that there is a connection between the anarchists of Europe and those of Chicago, is revived.

In future no reports of the trials of anarchists will be allowed to be published. This step is taken in order to prevent the escape of suspects and in order that the information obtained from prisoners may be more readily used in furthering the arrest and conviction of other anarchists.

There are people who say that it is lucky for the government of Spain that the troubles in Melilla are to some extent attracting the attention of the people from the spread of anarchy and from the weakness shown by the authorities in dealing with this terrible question. Spain, it would seem, is now a hotbed of anarchy, and there is a state of great apprehension throughout the country. So no one knows where the next outbreak will occur.

The report received by the police officials of this city to the effect that the anarchists threaten to blow up the bourse or Stock Exchange, is said to be only one of a number of such warnings received by the authorities.

People are beginning to believe that Pallas, the anarchist executed for attempting the life of General Martinez Campos, had good ground for using almost with his dying breath that his death would be avenged and intimating that a series of dynamite explosions might be expected from those not in sympathy with the wild doctrines which he believed in.

Wholesale Dynamiting Expected.

This is al. the more evident as it is known that the authorities are doing everything possible to suppress the real facts in the case, and that it is gradually becoming apparent that the government is in possession of more definite information as to the spread of anarchy in Spain. Rumor has it that a conspiracy existed and may still exist to blow up a number of the most important buildings in this city, and every precaution is being taken to prevent further outrages.

Now the public buildings are under double guard, and the police were never so active, as they are at present in tracking anarchists and in following up the clews in their possession. But the fact remains that the public is greatly alarmed at the few arrests made, and at the fact that such a state of affairs should exist in spite of the determined efforts on the part of the government to suppress anarchy. This feeling of alarm is in no way lessened by the report that the government of Spain has been compelled to ask for the assistance of the governments of other countries in this emergency, and the suggestion that Captain-General Martinez Campos should be given unlimited power to act in the case is received with general approval. The situation is now so grave that ordinary measures are generally considered to be of little avail, and the most radical steps for the suppression of anarchy will have any effect in this country at least.

Mob in Trafalgar Square.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A meeting of English and foreign anarchists took place on Trafalgar square. There were about 1,200 of these "reds" assembled upon the place referred to, the object of the assemblage being to honor the memory of the Chicago martyrs and the Bloody Sunday of 1887, when the police violently dispersed the anarchists.

The base of the Nelson column, in the center of the front portion of Trafalgar square, was surrounded with anarchists, bearing red and black banners. There was a large number of police present, and several detectives were among the crowd listening to the speeches made and in some cases taking notes of the most sensational remarks.

The speakers, however, were less violent than usual and seemed to be in dread of being rounded in by the authorities of Scotland Yard.

This did not prevent the anarchist orators from calling upon their hearers to emulate the example of those "who died for the cause," but the usual bloodthirsty remarks were carefully avoided. The anarchist meeting finally dispersed with cheers for anarchy.

Bloody Sunday's Anniversary.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—Services in commemoration of the death of the five anarchists—Spies, Parsons, Fischer, Fisher and Engel—were held at the monument erected to their memory in Waldheim cemetery. In spite of a leaden sky which threatened rain fully throughout the day, the services at the graves were attended by nearly 2,000 persons. The occasion was made notable by the fact that Samuel Fielden, Michael Schwab and Oscar Neebe, the comrades of the executed anarchists, who were sentenced to Joliet, but pardoned out recently by Governor Altgeld, were present at the grave here of them. Fielden and Schwab delivered the orations of the day.

When Fielden, Neebe and Schwab were released, it was said to be "a condition of their pardon" that the anarchists make no more anarchistic speeches, but they made their orations here. The ceremonies at the cemetery were preceded by a parade in which nearly a thousand persons of the down town streets. No red flags were carried, but each organization participating in the parade carried a small anarchistic ordered profusely with red ribbon, upon the streamers of which were the usual anarchistic inscriptions in German. The speeches were mild.

A Bomb in a Lisbon Street.

LISBON, Nov. 12.—The police have arrested three anarchists who were distributing a manifesto calling for a meeting at the theater to protest against the execution of the anarchists in Chicago. Many well known anarchists went to the theater, but the police prohibited the opening of its doors. About the same time a large bomb charged with powder, was found in Pombal Rocio, one of the principal streets of Lisbon. There was no damage done.

A MOB FOILED.

The Militia Called Out to Guard an Acquitted Prisoner.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 13.—For nearly a week past a young man named Walker has been on trial at Orlando on complicity in the murder of old man Sharon in Dade last. Saturday he was acquitted on a rather doubtful alibi. An Orlando special says: The sequel to the acquittal of Walker occurred when a mob went to the jail and attempted to break in and apparently intending to shoot Walker in his cell.

All the afternoon excited men gathered on street corners and discussed the conflict. After dark men began collecting from the neighborhood of the crime—generally on horseback and armed with shotguns.

Sheriff Anderson sent for help and armed a number of sledge hammers and crowbars and started for the jail, intending to beat a hole in the wall and gain access to the cell where Walker was confined, apparently unheeding the shouts of the mob.

Sheriff Anderson hurriedly gathered a few men and prepared to guard the jail, while he sent word to Judge Bryant to order out the militia. The mob came up expecting no real resistance, but when they found the jail guarded, by the militia they were hampered by the lack of a leader. Finally the mob dispersed. The guards remained under arms till morning. The most active leaders are said to be now in jail. On the line of the F. C. and P. railroad, but many good citizens of Orlando. It is highly probable that Walker will be tried again.

A ROUGH VOYAGE.

The Umbria's Last Trip Across Enlivened by Terrific Storms.

QUEENSTOWN, Nov. 13.—The Cunard steamship Umbria, Captain Dutton, has arrived here after encountering terrific weather in her passage across the Atlantic. Captain Dutton and his officers, during the voyage, said that they encountered the most severe weather they ever experienced on the ocean.

The Umbria, after leaving the coast waters of the United States, experienced fearful northerly and easterly gales, accompanied by tremendous head seas, which was the cause of affairs until the steamer reached Queenstown, where the tender was unable, owing to the heavy weather prevailing, to meet the transatlantic liner and take off her mails and passengers for points in Ireland. Consequently the Umbria was obliged to steam into the harbor and land her passengers above the passengers and mails could be transferred.

On Wednesday last the wind blew with cyclonic force, and several heavy seas were shipped. One "green sea," which came aboard smashed a couple of the saloon portlights.

Killed by His Sons.

WAUSAU, Wis., Nov. 13.—William Hasbrook's mysterious disappearance from his home near Edgar was cleared up by the neighbors finding his body about 80 rods from his home in the woods in a newly made grave, with a tree fallen across it, and the brush piled over it. His son Harman, aged 13, confessed to killing him with an ax and was assisted by his brother Otto, aged 15, in burying the body. Both were arrested and brought to this city.

An Author Sues Gov. Flower.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The Recorder says today: Mr. Richard Harding Davis, the writer, is seeking the blood of Mr. E. W. Townsend, who has won local fame as a detective through the pen of Major Max. Mr. Davis has dared Mr. Townsend to challenge him to fight a duel. It all came about because of a pecuniary paragraph in a comic article, in which Mr. Townsend, as Major Max, called Mr. Davis a "fool."

An Italian Banker Robbed.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 13.—Raimando Marino, who conducts a bank on the ground floor of the Italian colony in this city, was robbed by four of his countrymen as he was about to close up his place of business. They compelled him to open the safe and give up several thousand dollars and then disappeared.

Boy Killed by a Falt.

MARTIN, Ky., Nov. 13.—John McCann, aged 18 years, fell out of a three story window and broke his neck.

NO NEWS FOR ONE WEEK

Until Saturday Nothing Will Be Heard From Hawaii.

THE QUEEN MAY BE RULING NOW.

Natives of the Island Think That a Show of Force at Least Will Be Needed to Dethrone Liliuokalani Again — A Boston Firm Protests.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Unless he has met with some accident, United States Minister Willis has now been in Honolulu a week, and it is not improbable that he has acted in accordance with the instructions he took with him and which have been so well kept secret on this side of the Pacific. If he has done so, the steamer which left Honolulu on the 6th will bring the news of the consequent events and will reach an outlet to the rest of the world with it on next Saturday.

Whatever measures the administration may have determined upon to secure the restoration of Queen Liliuokalani, it is very evident that Secretary Gresham does not expect that extreme measures will have to be resorted to. The course proposed to be pursued seems to be to request the provisional government, in the name of the United States, to give way quietly to the restoration of the queen.

Natives Think Will Be Trouble.

The Hawaiians in this city are very firm in their conviction that the government will refuse to yield to any such gentle persuasion as that. They assert their earnest belief that it will require more than a show of force to induce them to resign the reins of authority. But this opinion is not unanimous among those familiar with affairs in the islands. Some of the natives have long and severe a strain there has been on the members of the provisional government in the unsettled condition of the islands since the location. The manner and purpose of their creation, it is pointed out, show how dependent they feel upon the United States. The absolute withdrawal of support by this government will be announced to them by Minister Willis.

Whatever outcry of public sentiment there may be here in sympathy with them and against their deposition they will be absolutely cut off from. All they have is vital by dependent upon good order and maintenance of the United States.

Any sort of assurance from Minister Willis that the moral influence of the United States government would be exerted to maintain a stable government by the queen, and to restrain it from such vagaries and excesses as those of the constitution she sought to have granted in January last, might tempt the members of the provisional government to step aside and trust to the United States to preserve their interests in its own way. It is what President Cleveland and Secretary Gresham hoped for, though what assurances they have authorized the minister to give as to future influence by the government in the islands are not known.

Congressman O'Neill of Massachusetts has called attention to the receipt of an appeal from a Boston house having large interests in the islands, which shows that all those acquainted with the conditions have not so hopeful a belief as to the outcome of the effort to restore the queen.

The dispatch reads as follows:

Please call on proper officials and request on behalf of four constituents having property in Honolulu and throughout the kingdom the instructions be sent to Hon. United States minister to protect the same. We believe there is great danger of bloodshed and destruction of property. Have telegraphed Minister. Hear these facts. CHARLES BREWER & CO.

Honduras Apologizes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Secretary Gresham gave out the following last night:

"When authentic information was received at the state department of the firing upon the American mail steamer Costa Rica at Amapala on the 6th inst. because of the refusal of the captain to deliver up papers in a case pending in the courts of the United States minister to Honduras, under instructions sent by Secretary Gresham by direction of the president, protested against the act and demanded an apology. The government of Honduras promptly disavowed the conduct of its officers and expressed sincere regret of the occurrence."

Hawaiian Drafts Refused.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—Hawaiian Consul Wilder was pleasantly surprised when he presented a draft drawn on the provisional government at the bank and found it was refused payment. He explained to him by the bank officials that they did not know what might happen to Honolulu when the contents of Secretary Gresham's dispatch to Minister Willis were known, and they did not care to take any risks.

Threatening Letter to Parole.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—A prominent Hawaiian in this city has received the following telegram from Charles Brewer & Co., of Boston: "Cannot get answer from Minister Willis. Have telegraphed Secretary Gresham. Please call on proper officials and request on behalf of four constituents having property in Honolulu and throughout the kingdom the instructions be sent to Hon. United States minister to protect the same. We believe there is great danger of bloodshed and destruction of property. Have telegraphed Minister. Hear these facts. CHARLES BREWER & CO."

DEADLY BRAZIL.

Peixoto's Recruits Will Be Met by Yellow Fever and Smallpox.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Alex. American who has only recently returned from Brazil after a long residence in that country, when interviewed on the subject of the risks being taken by Americans who were enlisting for service on the Brazilian fleet now being fitted out at this port by the agents of Peixoto, said: "It is an outrage to enlist men at this season of the year to go to Brazilian ports, even if peace was reigning there. The yellow fever season commences at just about this time, and a month hence it will be raging furiously throughout all the section where the fighting will take place. I venture to predict that at least 90 per cent of the men going down on the Brazilian fleet will never return alive, even should they be so fortunate as to escape the bullets and torpedoes of the insurgent fleet.

"Even in times of peace in Rio de Janeiro and Santos, Americans going ashore during the months from November to March inclusive cannot, as a general rule, withstand the intense tropical heat.

"Besides the heat there are the sickening sights one meets daily in the very thoroughfares of these two cities. The funerals of the victims of yellow fever, smallpox and beri beri, a species of African leprosy, are seen at the turning of almost every street. I have frequently seen new arrivals among my own countrymen in the full vigor of youth and health pass away almost between the rising and the setting of the sun.

"It is not the climate and the prevailing epidemics that are mostly to be feared. The most painful and harrowing reminiscences in my mind consist of what I have seen of the indifference and brutality of the Brazilian authorities toward foreigners.

"I have personal knowledge of the fact that two Americans, employees of a firm of American gun manufacturers, and who were sent to Brazil on business for their company met their death through the unscrupulous and inhuman neglect of Brazilian health authorities. These men were taken ill, packed off to one of the hospitals as yellow fever patients, their cases pronounced hopeless and thrust, against all entreaty into their coffins and buried before life had become extinct."

CRAZY MAN AT BAY.

For Nearly Three Hours He Exchanged Shot With a Crowd.

WATKIN'S DEPOT, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Amos Forrester, aged about 47, broke into and ransacked the residence of Henry Losey, who lived nearly across the road from him, but in Yates county. Forrester is a man who has been confined in Willard State Hospital for the Insane and has long been feared in Tyrone.

When Losey discovered what had been done, he at once went to Forrester's house. Forrester shot Losey in the right breast, the ball passing entirely through his body and coming out of his back. The wounded man, was carried to his home and a surgeon summoned, who found that the wound was a serious one.

After the shooting Forrester locked himself in his house and defied arrest. Very soon a crowd of fully 200 people had gathered, but no one dared to attempt his arrest. In the course of two or three hours, in which time he had exchanged several shots with the crowd, the building in some way caught fire, and he was forced to come out.

He ran to a corner of the fence, still holding a revolver in each hand, and tearing down boards and rails built a barricade, behind which he stood and fought for his life.

During this time a young lad in the crowd received a flesh wound in the arm, and Forrester himself was wounded twice, a ball passing through the left cheek and lodging in his right hand. A constable from Dundee finally induced him to surrender to Deputy Sheriff Finlan of Reading Center.

Fell Dead at His Post.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—A pretty 17-year-old girl named Bertha Wills killed herself in Dover, N. H., under the most unusual circumstances. She was joking with her cousin, Louis Tuttle, and picking up a revolver she pointed it at him and playfully asked him if she should shoot him. He told her in the same jocular mood to go ahead. Quick as a flash she turned the weapon upon her own breast, fired and fell dead as the young man's feet. It is rumored that she was in love with him, but that her affection was not reciprocated. No other reason for her action can be assigned.

Found a Headless Body.

MOUNT MORRIS, N. Y. Nov., 13.—At South Groveland, in the city of York, the body of Pasquale Purchis, an Italian laborer, was found outside the shanty in which he lived. His head was completely severed from his body. A razor, an axe and a file were found near the body, and there were evidences of a struggle. Two unknown Italians had been seen in the neighborhood, and they are suspected.

Confidence Is Restored.

READING, Pa., Nov. 13.—It is estimated here that 200 country merchants doing business within 30 miles of Reading had visited Philadelphia during the past few weeks and placed their orders for the usual fall and winter goods and that the total of these orders is over $300,000, all of which are to be delivered in the next month or so.

Beer Judges Agree to Disagree.

CHICAGO, Nov. 13.—A local paper says that the beer judges of the World's fair have decided to disagree as to whether St. Louis or Milwaukee produces the better beer. They have left the matter to be reported upon by the supervisory committee of the national commission.

Will Expel Eiffel and De Lesseps.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The royalist paper La Gazette de France says that the council of the Legion of Honor has decided upon the expulsion of Gustave Eiffel, the celebrated engineer of the Eiffel tower, and of Ferdinand de Lesseps from the order.

MR. STEVENS REPLIES.

Ex-Hawaiian Minister Scores Secretary Gresham.

WHEN AND WHY MARINES LANDED.

He Says It Was Fifty Hours After the Hawaiian Monarchy Had Collapsed When the Marines From the Steamship Boston Landed.

AUGUSTA, Me., Nov. 13.—In a signed leader in the Kennebec Journal today the Hon. John L. Stevens, late United States minister at Hawaii, makes the following reply to Secretary Gresham's letter:

"According to authentic reports from Washington, a public crime of startling import is about to be committed in the name and under the authority of the American government—a public crime of less proportions, but in its moral type similar to the stifling of national life and the reform aspirations of Poland and Hungary a few years ago by the imperial despots, and to the crushing out of the newly formed republic of Rome by the usurped powers of Louis Napoleon.

"All that American piety, American benevolence, American schools and American patriotism have accomplished in Hawaii in the past 70 years is now centralized in the provisional government and stands in its support. It is a government honestly and ably administered and the best government that Hawaii ever had.

"I know not the influences which induced Secretary Gresham to become an active agent in attempting such a grave offense against American civilization, justice and law. His intense hostility to ex-President Harrison and to the illustrious ex-secretary of state, who passed to his grave in January last, is well known.

"It was that which caused him to betray and desert the great political party whose honors he had shared and brought him to his present attitude toward his former associates and their work.

The Landing of the Marines.

"So far as his manifesto on Hawaiian affairs casts reflection upon my official action I care little except to the degree that his cruel and untruthful words stain an honorable band of men and women who have for 10 months stood so resolutely and unitedly in defense of American civilization.

"Perhaps nothing better shows the character of the secretary's assault than what he says about the hail which the men of the Boston occupied a few days and until better quarters could be procured.

"After I had made my request to Captain Wiltse to land his men as a precautionary safeguard to American life and property, he and his officers informed me that their men must have shelter for the night.

"Without special information in that regard I had supposed that the ship's marines had tents of their own for their customary use in case of emergency on shore. I at once wrote a note and sent it by a messenger to secure a large hall that was supposed to be available, but the man in charge of the hall was several miles away.

"I had no knowledge of the existence of the Arion hall until that evening, when a messenger with my note was sent to the supposed agent of the Arion hall, who was a royalist.

"Queen Lilinokalani inaugurated the revolution by attempting to destroy the constitution by revolutionary means. From Saturday afternoon, Jan. 14, to Jan. 16 there was no government in Honolulu except in the united and self possessed attitude of citizens, who assembled in a great mass meeting on Jan. 16 and consummated their efforts for law and order by the establishment of the provisional government on the 17th, which was promptly acknowledged by all the foreign representatives who were familiar with the circumstances of its creation.

The Time of Recognition.

"It was 50 hours after Lilinokalani and her favorites had destroyed her throne by a revolutionary outbreak when the men of the Boston landed. In the exciting hours preceding and following her fall no representatives, as well as those who formed the provisional government, had equal access to the legation.

"To all proper inquiries my answer was that the United States marines could not take sides, but whatever de facto government might exist would have to be recognized. When I did recognize it, late in the afternoon of the 17th, the provisional government was complete master of the situation, had full control of the city and the government archives, the police station being surrounded and at the mercy of the provisional government.

"It was a small building, in which the disorganized and powerless followers of the fallen queen's paramour, Marshall, took refuge, and they must have surrendered in a few hours by the mere force of hunger. The provisional government knew its power to possess the station at once, but wished not to take a single life of its occupants. It deemed it wiser to admit their surrender.

"An effort has been made to damage my recognition of the provisional government by a dispute as to the hour by the clock at which I gave recognition.

"That is of no essential importance, for in fact all resistance to the formation of a new government practically ceased more than two days before.

"The committee of the house and provisional government constituted the only Hawaiian government de facto existing for 24 years prior to my recognition, the most archical government having completely collapsed several days before. So all unjust imputations on Captain Wiltse and myself will vanish into thin air, and the crime of the Hawaiian provisional government will stand out in bold relief to America's shame."

EVANS' HOME BURNED.

The Negro's Family May Have Been Killed by the Mob.

BARDSTOWN, Ky., Nov. 13.—Phil Evans' home was burned to the ground, and his family either perished therein or were run away by an infuriated crowd. Who committed the act is unknown. All that remains to tell the tale was a part of a chimney and a few burned logs where the house stood. Ed Hall's home, the father of Evans' victims, which is only a short distance from where Evans' house stood, is being guarded through fear that the negroes would attack him and his helpless children. All is excitement, and there is no telling what may yet occur. A correspondent learned the following: Saturday night two loud blasts, sounding like an explosion of dynamite, were heard by a neighbor, followed by about 40 shots in rapid succession.

None of Evans' family, which consisted of his old mother, wife and little girl, can be found or heard of anywhere. Several theories are advanced.

Either an angered mob was there and blew up their home with dynamite, killing all within, or drove them off and then destroyed the house. The authorities will make a thorough investigation today, when it is hoped the truth will be ascertained. In the meantime every road and every house in the quiet little place of Saint Paul is being guarded by men armed with shotguns, who fear the negroes may rise up against them, thinking they had helped in the trouble.

Phil Evans was confined in jail, not knowing the fate of his old mother, who was stuck to him through all his troubles.

A Scheme to Grab Jersey's Senate.

TRENTON, Nov. 13.—The State Gazette, a Republican paper, publishes today an account of a scheme to be contemplated by the Democrats of Camden and Hudson counties to secure an extra session of the legislature and have the senate amend its rules, seat Senator T. What He Was.

Eight little negro boys got on a Niagara street car at the corner of Vermont street about 7:30 o'clock last night. They had been out to St. Mary's to rehearse something or other (they were choir boys), and they were then on their way to St. Paul's. The women in the car talked to them and asked them all sorts of questions. They all talked willingly, except one little fellow, who was as black as coal and who seemed to be the butt of the other seven.

"Do you all sing?" asked one of the women.

"Yep," answered three of the boys at the same time.

"Then you are regular little blackbirds."

"Oh, no, ma'am. Blackbirds don't do nothin but chirp. I'm a canary."

"An I'm a mockin bird," said another, and each boy told what kind of a bird he was until the eighth one, the butt before mentioned, was the only one who had said nothing.

"And what kind of a bird are you, my little fellow?" asked the woman.

"Deed, ma'am," he answered, "I spec's I must be a chicken. I gets it in the neck so often."—Buffalo Express.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

STRANGE HOMES.

The Curious Ice Huts of the Eskimos and the Tents of the Wandering Mongolians.

Away up at the north in Greenland a quaint little fur clothed people have settled themselves into winter quarters in their ice homes. For many months to come they will be cut off from the rest of the world and covered in almost perpetual night. Before the long winter nights sets in the

FISHING ICE HOMES.

Eskimo have abandoned their conical huts made of skins or of wood and with much care have fashioned their ice homes out of blocks of snow, built up much as we build with stone, but with the funniest front door you ever saw. It is a long, tunnellike passage in the snow, through which they grope in on all fours!

Inside their dome shaped ice huts there are several rooms, or compartments. They cleverly put in blocks of ice for windows, to catch what daylight there may be, or else they strain out a frozen the thin tissue of a seal to make a window. The floor is paved with stones and the walls hung with skins. Furniture there is none—a pile of skins for the seat of honor and other piles their beds. They make no fire. In the middle of the hut is a stone bowl, or little trough, filled with oil, which is at once the lamp and the fire. This lamp is everything to the Eskimo. The only water he can get is by melting snow over it. By it he dries his boots and clothing, and by it he cooks all sorts of dishes which we should think horrible, such as "seal blood soup" and whale's fat. But as often as not he prefers his meat raw, raw seal steaks being an especial dainty. The insides of all the huts are very dirty, with masses of oil and raw flesh and dead seals about.

From Greenland to the plains in the western borders of the Chinese empire in the heart of Asia is a very long jump. There we would find roaming tribes that seldom visit towns, except it may be in the way of trade. They dwell in tents, which they pitch wherever they may happen for the moment to be most convenient for working. The tent used by some of the roaming Mongolian folk is made of felt and is unusually low, small and pointed toward the top. The wooden door frame is no higher than half a window frame in our houses. The tent, although not equal to the wants of a large family, is snug and comfortable enough in summer, but cold in winter.

The Wise Men of Gotham.

This the tale, not of the three who "went to sea in a bowl," but of the inhabitants of the village of Gotham in England. As King John was once passing through that place on his way to Nottingham, he proposed to make a short cut across the meadows. The villagers, thinking that whatever road a king took thenceforward became a public road, objected, much to John's annoyance. Shortly afterward he sent some messengers from his court to learn the cause of the villagers' rudeness. Hearing of the coming of the king's servants the villagers hit upon the following plan of warding off the monarch's wrath.

When the messengers arrived, they found some of the inhabitants engaged in trying to drown an eel in a pond, others were busy rolling cheeses down a hill, so that they might run to Nottingham for sale, while a third set were employed in placing a hedge round a bush on which an owl had perched, in order that they might enjoy perpetual spring. The king's servants thought they had come among a village of fools and reported what they had seen John formed the same opinion, and troubled himself no more about what he considered their incivility to him. Hence people have talked about the "wise men," or "the fools," of Gotham. There was much wisdom in their folly, however.

Teddy's Bet.

Teddy (who is in bed)—Mamma, mamma, come quick; there's a bet in my room!

Mother (rushing in with a shawl on her head and a broom in her hand)—Goodness, gracious, child! cover your head up instantly. Where is the ugly thing? I'll try to kill it.

Teddy (enjoying sweet satisfaction)—In the corner, mamma. It's my baseball bat.

A Lesson in Numbers.

I have a little lesson
In numbers, every day;
And, if you like, I'll tell you
The kind I have to say—
I call them play.

There was a little pigeon,
And when he said "Coo-coo!"
Another little pigeon
Close down beside him flew—
Then there were TWO.

Two pretty ships were sailing
As grandly as could be;
And "Ship ahoy!" another
Sailed out upon the sea—
Then there were THREE.

I had a pretty rosebush,
That grew beside my door;
Three roses bloomed upon it,
And soon there came one more.
Then there were FOUR.

Four sets a-gathering honey—
The busiest things alive;
And soon there came another
From out the crowded hive.
Then there were FIVE.

These last were rather hard ones—
The roses and the bees;
But my mamma says, "Numbers
Get harder by degrees."
Harder than these!

WEDDING DRESSES.

Elaborate Garnitures of the Bridal Gown. Bridesmaids Wear Delicate Colors.

White satin of pearly tints remains the favorite for the wedding gown, though a creamy or ivory shade is often used. The wedding gown par excellence is distinguished by an exquisite simplicity and daintiness, in spite of this fact, however, many of the season's gowns are very elaborate with puffings, ruffles and ornate garnitures of lace and orange blossoms. A rich ivory satin worn by a recent bride had a bodice of transparent chiffon edged with pearl embroidery; the picturesque sleeves were composed of white chiffon and satin, the lower part trimmed to correspond with the bodice. The petticoat and round train were draped with a lace flounce and the seam piped with satin.

Evidently the young woman who wore the costume described disdained the old superstition that pearls mean tears for a bride. However, a Marie Antoinette fichu made entirely of crape lisse, which has an indescribable softness of drapery, becomes the average bride much better than the more costly garniture. Just here it should be added that no bride who knows what is truly becoming ever sacrifices beauty to pride of purse by exchanging a tulle veil for one of lace, priceless though the latter may be.

The shaping of the wedding gown includes round waists, circular basques and the princess gown, spreading out to about six yards' width at the bottom of the skirt. This enables each bride to select a style suitable to herself.

While the maid of honor usually wears a white gown, the bridesmaids often choose delicate shades of old rose, yellow and green. All these gowns are made short, just touching, and the bouquet must harmonize or contrast with the chosen color. Accordion pleated ruffles of crape lisse figure upon the satin gowns of brides, and this form of trimming is fashionable on stiffen skirts worn with satin waists by bridesmaids.

Crepon provides an economical material for bridesmaids' gowns, and the Valkyrie skirt of these flounces furnishes a favorite model.

A Dainty Evening Coiffure.

Very attractive and piquant is a French fancy in evening hairdressing, of waved hair with fluffy curls on the forehead and a cluster of irregular soft rolls and drooping curls at the back. This is footcled with a twist of shot or tinsel ribbon carelessly knotted at the side to form an upright loop in harmony with the one of plaited hair conspicuous in the center.

A FRENCH FANCY IN HAIRDRESSING.

The Popular and Effective Trimming.

Braid is the prime trimming — braid straight or wavy, woven more or less fancifully, wide and small combined, fantastically arranged as embroidery, braid of every conceivable kind—in short, black, white or colored. The new jackets are braided in straight lines or stripes on sleeves and plastrons. The new cloth skirts are braided in either horizontal lines or groups of vertical lines to the knee. Of course shaded braids are to be used, and a large amount of shaded metal braids or galons, made of tinsel or silk and tinsel combined. Some splendid effects are obtained in the shaded metal galons. They are sometimes beautifully worked up with silk, or are combined with jet or enameled plates. Many shaded gilt and silver galons are worked up with jet. The jet passementeries are exceedingly handsome, but they are prepared more to represent fanciful braids or rich guipures than the scroll embroideries to which we are accustomed.

Fashion Notes.

The pelisse is the novelty of the season. It is a dress in itself, and a very graceful and becoming one too. It is close fitting, fairly full at the back, and reaches to the feet. The only sort of dress one could wear under it would be a silk skirt and blouse.

Sleeves, they say, were never bigger in Paris than at present. They show no signs of getting smaller here.

The winter wraps are immense—quite overwhelming in fact. One notices nothing of the woman when she puts on a fashionable cloak, only a lot of silk and velvet and a lot of fur. The big fur edged shoulder capes completely hide her figure and make her look pretty nearly as broad as long.

The old style of habit bodice seems to be coming in again.

Small, bright colored rosettes and wings —lace wings, jet wings, spangled wings, feathered wings—are the correct trimmings for bonnets

CONFIDENCE.

A Little of It For a Dime Was All He Wanted.

"You—you couldn't lide a fellow over this little flurry in the money market, could you?" he asked at midnight the other night as he stepped out of a downed car on Woodward avenue and confronted a reporter.

"What has this flurry got to do with you?" demanded the latter as he came to a sudden halt.

"Why, it's smashed more'n a dozen brilliant enterprises I'm in, and I'm hard to been for this flurry I should be handling my tens of thousands tonight. It isn't a real panic, you know, but simply a want of confidence on the part of the public. I think we've reached hard pan, and if you can tide me over for the next few days I'll be all right."

"I've no money to spare."

"There she goes, you see. That's the want of confidence I spoke of, and that's what's led to this flurry. We might as well begin right here. You have confidence in me, and I will in you, and she'll gradually spread over the whole country."

"Where your confidence? Look at the cheek of stopping a man on the street at midnight! How do I know you are deserving of charity?"

"Indeed. What was it?"

A LEGEND OF THE FUTURE.

Wonderful Discoveries Made by Scientists Who Lived Ages Ago.

Many years ago, when the world was young, there lived a race of people who were very wise. They had discovered the secret of perpetual youth, and they had also found out how to make gold. Their wisdom was so great that they could read the thoughts of other people, and they could also make themselves invisible. They had discovered the secret of flying, and they had also found out how to make a machine which would enable them to travel under the water. They had also discovered the secret of making a machine which would enable them to travel through the earth. They had also discovered the secret of making a machine which would enable them to travel through the air. PROCLAMATION.

In accordance with established custom, I, GEORGE T. WERTS, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby designate and appoint THURSDAY, THE THIRTIETH DAY OF NOVEMBER, INSTANT, to be observed as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God.

I recommend that on the day named the people of this State abstain, so far as possible, from their ordinary secular pursuits and devote themselves to appropriate observance of the occasion, and especially to the rendering of thanks to Our Heavenly Father for His continued blessings conferred upon our state and nation, with prayer that peace, happiness and prosperity may attend us in the future.

Witness my hand and the seal of the State of New Jersey hereunto affixed. Done at the city of Trenton, this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-three, and of the independence of the United States the one hundredth and eighteenth.

"CHILD VOICE."

Miss Brunson Says it Should be Trained.

Miss Brunson made an address at the old Grace church, on East Sixth street, yesterday afternoon, on "Child Voice." The audience was small, owing to the inclement weather. But those who attended were well repaid for the effort. Miss Brunson complimented Grace church very highly on its excellent choir of male voices who sing in a worshipful manner. Miss Brunson, in a very able case, and the credit, the speaker attributed to the careful training giving to them by Mrs. Freeman. Miss Brunson advocates the training of a child's voice at the very earliest period, "from the age of five to fifteen," she said, a child should receive careful training in this respect as well as in other studies. To make a good singer a person's voice must be trained from childhood. Then he can be made to think, if there is any thinking power in him, as you instruct. As he grows old his church becomes settled and so it is with the voice. To teach an old person to sing you have to re-construct the voice. Those who are our best singers, have been able to sing well at the age of eight. Every parent should consider the training of a child's voice, as important as any part of the education.

—Justice Mosher has issued summons in the contract case of Bettle vs. Vail Brothers, returnable November 20.

—"The Price of a Soul" will be the subject of Mr. Crane's talk to men, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, this evening.

—It is said that the crank generally picks out some shining mark. That's where the most of us have the bulge on the crank.

—"Under the Bank" is the catchy headline of the new advertisement of Messrs. Van Emburgh & Son. The body of the announcement is of interest.

—Miles Ross, the veteran Democratic boss of Middlesex county, is said to be so disgusted with the election that he contemplates retirement from politics.

—The members of the Plainfield Club of Princeton College are sending regularly to our Free Public Library the Daily Princetonian and the Nassau Literary Magazine.

—A placard is posted in the Electric Street Railway Company's "stables" forbidding employees flirting. The persons who made complaint thus causing the placards to be posted are fortunate because the employees were not discharged.

—Godey's Magazine for December, ready November 15th, promises to be a most attractive number. Theodora B. Wilson—a writer not unknown to novel readers—has the complete story. It is called "Love Conquers," and is vigorous, healthy, and strong. The illustrations are by Florence K. Upton. Rose Cochlin writes about Personal Requisites of the Stage, an article which all who are interested in the modern drama should read; that popular and prolific writer, Margaret Lemon, tells about "A Flying Trip to Florida;" Florence Hull has a charming short story called "Apple Blossoms;" Olive Thorne Miller writes about "The Dove's Doings," and the poems are by Frank Dempster Sherman, Ednah Proctor Clarke, Edward W. Bardard and others. All the departments are up to their standards and the two exquisite water color portraits are of Mrs. John Bloodgood, Jr., and Miss Angelina Schuyler Crosby, of New York.

Singers Organize.

At the meeting of Prof. W. H. Miner's singing class, the following officers were elected:

President—Everett Peck.
Vice President—Fred Bonny.
Treasurer—Fred Tallamy.
Librarian—Frank Rogers.

The name of the class was selected as "Park Songsters," but as all the singers did not agree, it was set aside until the next meeting.

A Wreck at Annandale This Morning

There was a wreck at Annadale at three o'clock this morning. A coal train broke in two and came together with a crash, derailing four cars and spilling the coal over the tracks. Traffic was delayed for some time.

CHARITY ORGANIZATION.

ADVANTAGES OF SUCH AN ORGANIZATION EXPLAINED.

Meeting Last Night of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association—The Matter to be Looked Into.

A MEETING of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Society was held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church last night. In the absence of President Foster M. Voorhees Vice President Mc Allister of Elizabeth presided.

Mr. Robert W. de Forest of New York was present and explained the workings of organized charity in that place. He favored scientific charity as the only means of systematically taking care of the poor. "If, for instance," he said, "you feed a few tramps as they call at your door, they will soon increase in number until you find yourself swamped giving out charity to the worthy and unworthy. By the worthy poor we mean those who are unable to get a living, owing to misfortune, such as sickness. The unworthy poor might be classed as those individuals who won't work when they are offered to them, when they are perfectly able, bodily, to do it. Scientific charity keeps a complete record of all who apply for help, and an investigation is always made to find out if they deserve it. In organized charity there is no danger of fraud. For instance, where you are not organized, one family may apply to, and receive aid, from all the societies at once, at the same time telling each society that theirs is the only one helping them. Then again, if the head of the family become disabled, say he has his leg broken, scientific charity provides for the entire family for the whole period of his disability so as to keep them from begging. In this way we keep the family in their usual circumstances, so that when the head of the family recovers, the family are not broken, and the household goes on where it left off. If the family was allowed to beg, the probabilities are they would always be beggars."

Mr. de Forest was listened to with much interest. Questions were asked and answered, and the whole plan made plain.

On motion, the Board of Managers and Advisory Board of the Relief Association and such others as might be deemed advisable from time to time, were authorized to look into and discuss the matter, and make a report at a meeting to be called at some future time.

PERSONAL.

Mr. James A. Love of East Third street started last night for Succasunna, near Lake Hopatcong, to visit his parents and and spend to-day hunting.

A service of scripture and song has been prepared for Christmas time by the Rev. Dr. Lovejoy of this city. It is entitled "Our Saviour King," and is composed of responsive reading, choruses, hymns, reading by the pastor and solo and chorus.

The opening day of the twenty fifth Annual Convention of the New York State Suffrage Association, held in Historical Hall, Brooklyn, yesterday was a brilliant success. The convention will be in session three days. To-day's programme includes an address by Julia Ward Howe, mother of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall of this city, and speeches by General C. T. Christiansen and Aaron Powell of this city.

What Some of Our Leading Merchants Say.

Edsall—Business is brisk.

Carey says business is growing better already, and that he had the best sale yesterday he has had all Summer. People seem to have more money. He attributes it to the political change.

White has also noticed the marked change for the better, and finds business quite lively.

One of Them Had Three Gold Rings.

The two tramps arrested yesterday as suspicious characters were tried last night and found guilty of being disorderly and with trespassing on the railroad. They gave their names as James Parker and John Clark. A 30 days sentence was imposed by Judge Coddington. One of the tramps had three gold rings in his possession. He said he bought them on the Bowery.

Bowling Last Night.

The bowling in the individual tournament at the C. Y. M. L. club house last night resulted as follows:

Flynn	134	Mack	130
Winn	139	Mack	105
Traynor	143	Curran	140
Flynn	94	Kielty	133
Curran	135	Hibbits	133
Lynch	165	Kiely	149

Captain Lynch bowled 300 in a practice game.

Meeting of the Stockholders.

The Stockholders of the Automatic Feed Bar Company will hold a meeting to Mr. George W. Moore's store, on East Front street, on the 18th of November, at noon. Five trustees are to be elected. Mr. Moore is one of the stockholders.

TO OPEN TWO STREETS.

CONTRACTOR UHDAL WILL BEGIN WORK THURSDAY.

Cutting Through the Two New Streets Across what was Formerly the Crescent Oval.

RECENTLY Mr. A. D Thompson, who purchased the Allen plot on Somerset street, opposite Linden avenue, where the Crescent built ground has been leveled for the past few years, has had the fences and grand stands torn down. The work was done by Mr. Charles Hand.

Mr. Uhdal has been given the contract for opening the two new streets across the property. He will begin work Thursday grading the streets.

Mr. Thompson also speaks favorably of the opening of the Peace street extension, and adds that it would be a great improvement.

ODD FELLOWS IN SESSION.

Meeting of the Grand Encampment To-Day.

This morning there convened in Masonic Temple, Trenton, in annual conclave a branch of the great fraternity of Odd Fellows, known as the Grand Encampment. This body was instituted on the 11th of May, 1863, by Grand Sire Kennedy.

The annual report of the Grand Scribe, Lewis Parker, gives the following figures:

We have now 57 encampments in our jurisdiction. Our statistical record on January 8th, 1893, was as follows:

Number of members per last report, 8,436; initiated, 155; admitted by card, 12; reinstated, 11. Total, 3,614.

From which deduct: Error in last report, 7; withdrawn by card, 14; dropped for non-payment of dues, 223; deceased 62. Total 301. Members, December 31, 1893, 3,013; decrease, 123; number of patriarchs relieved, 467; number of weeks for which benefits were paid, 3,435; amount paid for the relief of patriarchs, $6,253.22; amount paid for the burial of the dead, $1,622.43; amount paid for special relief, $519.29. Total, $11,046.94.

Preparing to Repeal Race Track Laws.

The Executive Committee of the New Jersey Republican State Committee, of which Councilman Fisk of this city is a member, met yesterday afternoon in Newark.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That this committee interprets the result of the recent election as indicating a desire on the part of the people to repeal the iniquitous partisan legislation of the past few years.

Resolved, That this committee desires to co-operate with the Republican legislators-elect in repealing this legislation, and that such a committee will be appointed to represent this committee in consultation with them as to what plans may be conceived to be desirable in furtherance of this result.

Catalogues at the Library.

In response to many inquiries, the catalogues of the Free Public Library are now on sale at the library. In them are catalogued something over 12,000 books, so arranged as to give at once not only all that the library has by any given author, but also on any given subject, the full index giving a fair idea of the resources of the library. These lists cannot fail to be of the greatest value to all who use the library, as borrowers will now be enabled to consult them at home at their leisure instead of waiting until they get to the library to select their books.

Took Bicycles That were Left Outside the Schools.

Two boys, Thomas Barber and Henry Van Ness, were arrested for taking bicycles from one of the public schools, which had been left outside by scholars, and riding around the country. They admitted having ridden the bicycles to Metuchen and other places at different times. They were each sentenced to pay a fine of $5 or spend 30 days in the county jail.

Results Already.

At the men's meeting, conducted by Mr. Crane, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, last evening, seven young men arose and thereby professed to have accepted salvation through Christ. The speaker proved from God's word that an unbeliever is "condemned already because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." He illustrated the absurdity of refusing salvation now in expectation of a further chance in the life to come, or even in this life by supposing the case of a man condemned for murder and refusing a pardon. Mr. Crane painted the picture of a trial scene and carried it through to the execution of a criminal. The meeting was largely attended.

Christopher Columbus Stole a Harness.

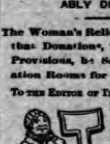
On complaint of Spencer Conway of West Fourth street Justice Mosher to-day issued a warrant for the arrest of Christopher Columbus, a colored man. Conway charges Columbus with stealing a harness from his barn. Constable Mattox served the warrant.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A SUGGESTION TO THE CHARITABLY DISPOSED.

The Woman's Relief Association asks that Donations, whether Money or Provisions, be Sent to the Association Rooms for Distribution.

To the Editor of The News:



THE Plainfield Relief Association begs to suggest to the charitably disposed, that in response to appeals in the papers, they kindly send to it their donations, whether in money, provisions or other articles to the Association, instead of giving them directly to those they wish to benefit.

Much more good would be done in that way, than if, as frequently happens, a number of persons give once and at about the same time, to some family in need of assistance.

If the former course were to be pursued, the proper articles could be retained by the Association and given in proportion as needed to the designated families.

It occasionally comes to the ears of us, the workers in the Association, that some one or more families, not in need (surely) helped from outside sources, but it almost always happens that these persons are shortly again requiring succor from the Relief, if even they have not been receiving it all the time.

The pressure on the poor will no doubt be very extreme during the coming Winter, so that, more than ever, all donations will be gladly welcomed as well as those for any particular case.

Money left at Reynolds' pharmacy for Mrs. H. F. Reynolds, treasurer of the Relief Association, for the benefit of a family in great need, will be thankfully received. The head of the family is ill of an incurable disease, and cannot be moved. Back rent is owing to a widow who has little else to support her, and it is necessary to secure sufficient money to pay the rent for some months to come. Between thirty and forty dollars will be needed.

The Executive Board of the Plainfield Relief Association.

For Comptroller, the Hon. John Ulrich.

The City Republican Executive Committee met at Association Hall last evening, at which meeting resolutions were passed and adopted, endorsing the candidacy of ex Judge Ulrich of this city for the office of State Comptroller. The resolution contained a request urging the Hon. Foster M. Voorhees and the Assemblyman-elect of this county to address the people of Mr. Ulrich towards electing him to this office.

The committee states that "electing of the Hon. John Ulrich to the position of State Comptroller would be a most worthy tribute to a most worthy, capable and loyal Republican. His party services and his devotion to its principles have been of the highest character." They consider that the appreciation of his labors have not alone been confined to this city, but throughout the entire State. They refer to his work as State Organizer of the State Republican League, and consider that he has displayed great aptitude and organizing ability. They point out that through his instrumentality a County League has been organized in nearly every county in the State and much new life installed to the local organizations. He is now in a exceedingly popular among the young Republicans, and if the State League constitution permitted the League to endorse a candidate for any political office there are those here who think that the young Republicans of New Jersey would to a very large degree urge him for this important office.

They consider him able to fill this position, and refer to his record as a member of the Legislature, holding that it won for him confidence and esteem not only of his colleagues but his constituents and the people of this State. His traveling through every part of the State has brought him in contact with many persons and with many different localities, where he has been able to familiarize himself with the requirements of the people.

The committee considers that the election of the Hon. John Ulrich would be a recognition to the services performed by the New Jersey State League; would prove a great inducement to young Republicans of New Jersey who zealously labor in the interest of their party and would reflect great credit upon the Legislature electing him to this office.

Men of Marked Ability.

In speaking of the New Jersey Senate, the New York Tribune, says:

"The next Senate will have a number of men of marked ability among its members, including Voorhees of Union, Bradley of Monmouth, Ketcham of Essex and Thompson of Somerset. It may be said here, on the authority of leading Republicans of the State, that the course of the party will be conservative, and with due regard to the fact that the election was a people's victory, a spirit of fairness will control it."

The Weather.

The weather to-morrow promises to be still colder and clear, followed by sharp frosts.

DID DR. RIPLEY SUICIDE?

THE UNDERTAKER'S ASSISTANT FOUND A SPONGE ON THE PILLOW.

May Have Held Chloroform, but Coroner Schultze declared that Death was Caused by Cerebral Apoplexy.

The New York Herald of to-day says:

"Circumstances that have been developed concerning the death of Chauncey B. Ripley of this city and Westfield, N. J., in the Hoffman House, point strongly to the inference that Mr. Ripley committed suicide by inhaling chloroform or some other volatile poison, notwithstanding Coroner Louis W. Schultze's investigation of the case and his declaration that Mr. Ripley's death was due to cerebral apoplexy.

"Mr. Ripley was found dead in his room on the fifth floor of the hotel about noon last Sunday. He had not been seen about the hotel since the previous Friday, and his door was forced.

"The body was found in bed with the face turned to the wall. The head rested on a pillow, on which, close to his mouth, was found a sponge. The sponge exhaled no odor, but even though it had been saturated with chloroform on Friday night—the probable date of his death,—the drug would have evaporated. The arms were folded and the attitude of the body showed that death had apparently been painless.

"In accordance with the appointments to duty of the coroners on Sunday the case did not come under Coroner Schultze's jurisdiction but under that of Coroner Physician McNulty. Coroner Schultze happened to enter the Hoffman House on Sunday afternoon and on being informed of Mr. Ripley's death remarked:

"'Why, I am a physician as well as a Coroner and I can dispose of this case for you without any further delay. Then I can give a permit for the removal of the body. So there will be no further trouble in having the body in the house.'

"Then the Coroner visited the room where Mr. Ripley's body lay and pronounced death due to cerebral apoplexy.

"Mr. Ripley's body will be taken to day from Taylor's undertaking rooms to Westfield, N. J., unless further investigation of the cause of death is deemed necessary, and a funeral service will be held by the Rev. Newton W. Caldwell in the First Presbyterian church.

"Interment will be in Fairview Cemetery, where Mr. Ripley's wife was buried ten years ago."

A Magazine of Merit.

Mussey's Magazine is an excellent periodical; it is published in New York and is one of the best for any person, especially its reading matter is clean, entertaining and instructive without being heavy; it has the finest illustrations procurable—and plenty of them; and is printed in perfect style.

That many men may use it is proved by the fact that they have defied the monopoly of the all-powerful news companies. Other magazines that tried to exist outside the monopoly's thralldom, were "knocked out."

With energy of a "do or die" kind; an enormous outlay of money; and by making the best magazine that talent can procure, the publishers, Messrs. Frank A. Mussey & Co., would undoubtedly have achieved success. Yet, with all that, they did more by getting out of the long established "run" and reducing the price of the magazine from twenty-five cents to ten cents.

There is not much profit in that—except for the readers, who are multiplying at a rapid rate—but it is clear the step has already proved a success far beyond the publishers' expectations.

HELD UP A BANK.

Gold Robbers on Horseback Made a Successful Raid.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Nov. 14.—A startling bank robbery and attempt to murder the cashier occurred at Milton, Or., 10 miles south of this city. At a time when few persons were on the streets three men, well mounted, rode leisurely into town and dismounted at the door of the Bank of Milton. Two entered the bank while the third stood guard outside. Two pistol shots were soon heard, and the inmates of other stores emerged from the bank, mounted their horses and rode swiftly out of town. They were not disguised, and one was identified as a McCarthy.

President A. Hopson, Cashier N. A. Davis and Assistant Cashier William Hopson were in the bank at the time. Cashier Davis was behind the counter counting out $770 to give to President Hopson.

Two shots were fired by the robbers before making any verbal demands. Both shots took effect in President Hopson, one passing through his left arm and one going through his left side, inflicting painful but not mortal wounds. The revolver was held so close to the head of Davis that the concussion knocked him down.

The robbers then demanded money from William Hopson, and he handed them a key of change containing $654. Taking this, they left immediately without an attempt to get the cash in the vault. Within five minutes an armed mounted posse was in pursuit. The robbers were tracked for some distance, but all trace was lost beyond Dry creek.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Shelving Old People.

They ought to be shelved. The world's verdict is a just one. When a man becomes crusty, bald tempered and slinks into a rut so that he cannot learn anything new, he ought to step down and out to give place to some one who can hustle and keep up with the times. When the brain tissues become so dried up and hardened that a new idea can by no means penetrate the understanding, then nobody has any more use for that brain. Its owner should take it and himself to the corner where they will be least in the way of the active young workers and lay both upon the shelf, only to wait and grumble till kindly death comes and takes them.

This world's work wants active, buoyant, hustling, good tempered persons, with souls fresh and young, ever desiring to learn some better way of doing things. All we can count on with absolute certainty is the fact of constant change and for that to be better, one may hope. This life calls for only

Workers,
Ever learning something new,
That which they have done but earnest
Of the work which they shall do.

So that only young people are wanted in the affairs of life. The youngest people are occasionally found 100 years old, and it is not at all uncommon to find young people 75 and 80 years of age.

New Uses For Aluminium.

Every widening of the field for aluminium is eagerly welcomed by the world. The only problem at present is the cost of the metal. It is 40 per cent 50 times that of the best steel. When the metallurgists succeed in making it as cheaply as steel, there will be such a revolution in civilization that, as one enthusiast has remarked, we shall enter on the age of aluminium.

When that day comes, all water mains, pipes, faucets, gutter spouts and roofs will be made of this metal. It has been found in the city of Canada even in the dirtiest of soft coal cities. It is one-third as heavy as copper. All domestic utensils will be fashioned from it, since it neither rusts, poisons nor tarnishes. Baths will be constructed of this beautiful substance. Ships will be built of it or some of its alloys too. The speed of vessels today is greatly retarded by the immense weight of the iron and steel of which they are constructed. If some alloy of aluminium shall be discovered, as there certainly will be, of which vessels can be made, our ocean steamers will skim across the water as on wings at a rate which would daze and stun the imagination today. Enormous advances all along the line of a cleanly, healthy and prosperous civilization will be made when aluminium has been subdued by man.

A railway magnate announced lately that the west was not likely to see any more railway investments till "hostile legislation in many of the states was removed." Now the west will have time to grow up to and into the railroads that are already built.

This wise observation is from that admirable paper, Mr. Childs' Ledger: "Whatever crushes originality, or tends to cast people in the same mold, or shape them by the same pattern, abridges by so much the happiness and prosperity of the community."

A sentence from the New York Herald on the occasion of the Russian fleet's visit to Toulon shows fully the sad isolation of France in Europe. It is this, "Russia's hand is the first that has been extended to the republic in the last two decades."

WAS IT AN ACT OF WAR?

That Is Minister Hastings' View of the Hawaiian Attitude.

IF SO, CONGRESS MUST REVIEW IT.

The Administration Still Keeping Its Policy Secret and Withholding the Last Dispatch From Minister Stevens—England Sends a Warship to the Islands.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The state department has received a communication from Honolulu telegraphed from San Francisco. It arrived by the steamer China and was written in the navy department cipher. Experts set at work upon the dispatch and labored over it for several hours. After securing the substance of its official communication Secretary Gresham took a copy of it out to Woodley for a conference over the matter with President Cleveland. Nothing was given out from the state department as to the substance of the dispatch.

F. P. Hastings, secretary of the Hawaiian legation, was shown the dispatch from San Francisco containing the news of Minister Willis' arrival in Honolulu and his appointment to present his credentials to President Dole.

This news was obviously a great relief to the minds of members of the legation. They declined to talk about the matter as usual, but the satisfaction expressed at the presentation by Minister Willis of his credentials to President Dole suggested that they might have feared that the minister would be found to have been accredited to the queen.

The plan of the Hawaiian representatives evidently is to stand rigidly on the rights they have acquired by the recognition of their government. Minister Thurston touched the marrow of their hopes when he said that any attempt to overturn the present government by a foreign power would be an act of war.

Congress Will Interfere.

An act of war requires the consent or declaration from Congress, and this will undoubtedly take up the subject of Hawaii in some way immediately upon assembling in December. The flight, it is said, will be made on the administration policy on this line—that it has declared war without the consent of congress and has therein done an unlawful act.

What effect it would have on this proposed policy if the present government should peacefully yield to the persuasions of the American minister is also discussed. The question involved is whether so peaceable a proceeding could be regarded as an act of war. It is argued that it would be an act of aggression on a foreign power none the less because the power peacefully yielded to the threat of so overwhelmingly superior a force.

It still remains an unanswerable problem to those of diplomatic experience how the American minister accredited to the Hawaiian government can immediately upon presenting his credentials, act about to destroy that government.

There is a shrewd surmise in Washington that the restoration of Queen Lilliokalani to the throne may not be followed by the entire withdrawal of the influence of the United States, but that, with the work of the last administration once undone a protectorate may be established over the monarch.

One clear and certain result of the present incident would seem to be that annexation will never be proffered to the United States by the Hawaiians again. If there is ever to be annexation, the movement will originate in this country.

Will Yield Only to Force.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—At the Hawaiian consulate, this city, no word was received by the steamer China which would indicate further action on the situation at the islands. Consul Wilder stated to a reporter that in case the administration should ask the provisional government to withdraw and the request could not be granted, but that in case the use of force should be threatened the provisional government could have but one course to pursue. Resistance to the power of the United States would be useless, but it would protest with all its moral force against such a highhanded outrage. Should a United States protectorate of the monarchy be withdrawn, that monarchy would not last a day. Unquestionably the next revolution would not be as peaceable as the last, and the monarchy would surely be overthrown once and for all.

To Increase the Gold Reserve.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—A plan has just been perfected whereby the gold reserve of the treasury may be increased to its limit of $100,000,000. This is to be accomplished by means of an understanding with the banks of New York whereby they are to increase the proportion of gold in their deposits with the New York subtreasury to cover the certified checks that are presented by the importers in payment of customs duties. As the deficit in the gold reserve now is only $15,000,000 and the associated banks of New York have on hand fully $60,000,000, it is thought that this scheme, which is a result of the recent visit of the secretary to New York, will be carried through.

The Behring Sea Claims.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Sir Julian Pauncefote, British ambassador, has signified upon a negotiation with Secretary Gresham for the settlement of claims for British sealers seized in Behring sea previous to the modus vivendi of 1892. It is said that the amount of indemnity claimed by the Canadian government will not exceed $100,000.

The Statue Home to Be Rented.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—The steamship Mowerea is reported still on the reef in Honolulu.

INSURGENTS GAIN.

Mello's Proposal to Restore the President Was Not Accepted.

Wins Five Fights.

RIO JANEIRO, Nov. 14.—The war has been raging for a week and heavy fighting on Monday and Tuesday of last week by the government forts at Rio Villegaignon. The combat was principally between the forts and the insurgent fleet in the interior of the town is intact. Two men were killed and seven wounded within the fort on Monday.

The troops at Castello opened a heavy fire on Fort Villegaignon from a distance of 1,500 yards. The insurgent warship Aquidaban replied with searching guns, killing two and wounding 19 soldiers and four spectators. The firing continues day and night, and there is an immense waste of ammunition.

On Wednesday two guns at Castello were fired at Fort Villegaignon, and the Aquidaban again replied with her machine guns.

Many shells fell in the business portion of the city, and several persons were injured. This bombardment was, it is feared, the result of the refusal of the government in firing from the town in contravention of the agreement made with the representatives of the foreign powers. There are occasional skirmishes at Nictheroy between the government troops and the insurgent small craft. A torpedo launch was sunk in Wednesday last and the damage done slight. A conference was held last Tuesday between the insurgent leaders, which has changed the situation on the much discussed question of the restoration of the empire. The conference resulted in a decision to shortly hoist the imperial flag. This decision created a good impression. Admiral Saldanha da Gama, the chief of the naval college, who is the ablest admiral in Brazil, hitherto maintained a neutral position, but he has now openly joined the insurgents.

He carries with him the sympathy of many adherents in the army and navy who are related to leading families. Admiral da Gama has taken command of the operations before Rio Janeiro. The Aquidaban has proceeded to sea to search for the new government cruiser Amazonas. There are 2,000 armed and well drilled insurgents at Destorro.

THE COLUMBIA'S FAST RUN.

The New Cruiser Proves to Be the Queen of the Navy.

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—The new United States cruiser Columbia is out for a trial spin today. Tomorrow she will run a preparatory to making her official trial trip on Thursday. Her first run at sea was the quickest ever made by a war vessel in this country, beating the New York's time over two hours.

The trip from Cape Henlopen Southwest lightship to Nantucket South Shoal lightship, a distance of 400 miles, was accomplished in 13 hours and 7 minutes, an average speed of 18.69 knots an hour. The cruiser New York's time for this distance was 14 hours and 30 minutes.

This would make the Columbia's journey faster by nearly 1½ knots per hour. From Nantucket South Shoal lightship to Minot's ledge the speed was kept up.

The distance from Cape Henlopen Southwest lightship to Minot's ledge, through Vineyard sound and Nantucket sound, the Columbia made the trial trip in 21 hours 59 minutes, an average of 18.63 knots an hour. The cruiser New York, when on the way to New York for her trial trip, made the journey in 24 hours 15 minutes, and this had hitherto been the record for this distance. Both runs were made under natural draft.

Edwin S. Cramp, who has charge of the ship, says that she will easily exceed the contract requirement of 21 knots an hour. A speed of 23 knots would earn for her builders a premium of $300,000.

Minneapolis Embezzlers Arrested.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Philip Schieg, formerly paying teller of the Bank of Minneapolis, and Frank Floyd were arrested at Southampton on board the North German Lloyd steamer Saale, from New York. MORRISTOWN WAS A SENSATION

A Stranger Who Looked Over Records Is Missing. Tom Keeps Mum. Mose Proved to Be Much Richer Than Pat.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Nov. 14.—Morristown has a mystery which, if solved, might reveal the perpetration of some famous crime—a murder, bank robbery or swindle, almost. Up to this time, however, not a step has been taken to solve the mystery, although present are all the conditions which detectives long for. An historic room in the old Court House, a stranger prowling with map and chart, the following midnight three strange men at work in a field, and the discovery next day of a deep hole and the remains of a chest, partly filled with stone and cement and not a trace of the strangers.

The country seat in question is now owned by a wealthy real estate agent named Whitney, who resides in Orange. It lies about one mile south of the Morristown green, but its former grandeur now is gone, and it is rented to Jo Dern, but for two generations it was known as the rural residence of the "gentry." The place has been owned by many people in its history and was the property of a New York real estate auctioneer named William Kenyon. Those who knew the latter say that during the panic of 1873 he grew enormously wealthy and died soon after the time of Jim Fisk's death he lost much of his property.

In turn Mr. Kennedy died, and the eldest of his three sons got the Bellevue terrace, as it was called. He sold it to its present owner, Mr. Whitney.

A Mysterious Stranger.

During Mr. Kennedy's proprietorship the terrace was the scene of elegant entertainments. The mansion was large and imposing, and attached thereto were stables and carriage houses, and the like, and many prominent persons figured as guests. The host was an active worker in New York politics. In the last few years a retrenchment has been made in the style of private terrace, and the estate has been divided for the most part into building lots, yet enough land remained unsold to make it worth while for Mr. Whitney to have it cultivated by a farmer named David Porter.

Nobody ever suspected that anything unusual would happen on the farm, and Porter was the last person to look out for such occurrences. He was busily engaged in planting away some land one day the street last Thursday when a well dressed man approached on foot. He was shrewd looking and as he stood surveying the place asked many questions. He had a roll of small maps and charts from his pocket, according to Porter's narrative, and another paper which appeared to be field notes memoranda. The farmer replied civilly enough, and the stranger walked over the place again and finally before dusk walked away.

They Dug at Night.

Just across the street at that point lives Richard Dempsey, and on the same Thursday night he went to see a friend in a hospital in Newark, N. J. On his return he discharged a cargo of three men close to an old walnut tree. They were stooping toward the ground and so intent upon their doings that they did not notice him. Mr. Dempsey did not disturb them. Instead he quietly entered his home, locked the door, saw that all the windows were barred and went to bed.

Since that time nobody has seen the three strangers, but after breakfast on Friday, when David Porter came to the field to resume work, he found three large holes in the ground.

Porter looked into one hole, and there at the bottom was an iron pot of French pattern, securely imbedded in walls of cement.

Over its top was a small flagstone, which also had been tightly sealed, but it had been broken recently by blows with some heavy tool. Its ragged ends showed that. The pot was empty except for bits of cement. Scattered about were parts of newspapers partly burned, which served in lieu of excelsior, Porter says, to aid the men in their work. Further than this nothing was found.

It is believed that the curious pot contained the booty of some robbery and that it was dug up a few nights ago by someone concerned, who had possibly served a term in prison for the crime and who came back at the first opportunity to regain the alleged treasure.

What the latter is—whether gold, bank notes, jewels or bonds—no one in Morristown pretends to know, but Morristown believes it has a great big mystery on hand and is anxiously waiting for somebody to solve it.

A BOOTH ANNIVERSARY.

The Brilliant Lights of the Stage and Literature Were Present.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The sixtieth anniversary of the birth of the late Edwin Booth was celebrated in Madison Square Garden by commemoration exercises. Fifteen hundred people gathered there, among whom were those most prominent on the stage, in literature and in other fields. The hall was appropriately decorated. The New York Symphony orchestra, under the leadership of Walter Damrosch, occupied the entire platform and during the exercises performed "The Dead March From Saul," "Pizzicato" from "Sylvia," "Nocturne" and "Midsummer Night's Dream."

The great actors of the world paid their tribute. Joseph Jefferson acted as president. Henry Irving and Tomaso Salvini were present, as well as all the theatrical men in the city.

The committee of arrangements was composed of A. M. Palmer, chairman; T. B. Aldrich, Charles E. Carryl, John D. Crimmins, Daniel Frohman, Joseph F. Daly, Richard Watson Gilder, Chauncey M. Depew, Elbridge T. Gerry, A. S. Hewitt, Lawrence Hutton, J. Henry Harper, A. L. Hayman, Barton Hill, Henry Irving, Brander Matthews, F. F. Mackay, John Malone, S. B. Olin, General Horace Porter, Bishop Potter, James B. Ruggles, Sol Smith Russell, E. H. Southern, Frank W. Sanger, E. C. Stedman, Charles Scribner, Charles S. Smith, E. S. Willard, Stanford White and Francis Wilson.

Miss Ellen Terry occupied one of the boxes. Mrs. Potter was present, as well as Mrs. Elbridge, Charles Dudley Warner, President Seth Low of Columbia, Elihu Vedder and the members of all the special committees, who were composed of prominent actors, artists and public men.

FATAL FIRE IN MEMPHIS.

Young Men's Christian Association Members Lost.

MANY WERE INJURED BY JUMPING.

Rescued In Their Rooms by the Flames, They Pleaded For Help Which Came Too Late—One Man Known to Have Perished—Others In the Building.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 14.—Many lives were lost in a fire that swept away nearly a million dollars' worth of property in Memphis.

The fire originated in the front of Schmulzreid's store and was caused by the explosion of a lamp. It was witnessed by Frank L. Monteroid, secretary of the company, and John M. Ringold, shipping clerk, who were in the rear of the store and who had a narrow escape in rushing through the rapidly spreading flames, which filled the first story. Both of these gentlemen were painfully scorched.

The fire soon burst out in the front of the building on Main street and up the stairs, which were the only means of entrance to the upper stories and which acted as a funnel to carry up the roaring flames. In a few minutes attention was attracted by cries from the third story in the rear of the building, which was occupied by the Young Men's Christian association. In the dark, overlooking the alley, the outlines of several human forms could be seen at the open windows piteously pleading for help from the stifling smoke.

Jumped From the Windows.

Owing to the great excitement about, it was some time before the firemen could locate the imprisoned young men, and before a ladder could be put in position the best became unbearable that in desperation the colored janitor jumped from the window, followed by three white men, where they fell upon the rough pavements below, sustaining injuries as follows:

A. R. Perkins, secretary Young Men's Christian association, skull fractured, probably fatally; Charles B. White, arm broken and internal injuries; E. K. Boardman, leg broken and severely bruised; Joe Lyon (colored), porter, wrists and head hurt.

Two men, H. M. Sullivan and Frank O. Semper, remained in the windows until rescued by the hook and ladder brigade. These were badly burned and almost suffocated, but soon recovered.

The injured men were taken to St. Joseph hospital, and, it is thought, will recover with the exception of Perkins, who, it is claimed, cannot recover. It is claimed that two young men were in the gymnasium on the floor, and as there was no way of escape it is certain that they perished. They were seen in the gymnasium a few minutes before the fire alarm was given.

The Lemmon & Gale building, adjoining the Schmalzreid building, took fire on the roof at the rear, and while the damage by fire was comparatively small the stock of goods was damaged 60 per cent by water which flooded the building from all sides. Two thousand people were attending a Sam Jones meeting near by rushed to the scene, and these were augmented by thousands of others. The fire was under control at midnight.

It was learned later that a man named Thomas H. Pond lost his life by being burned in the Schmalzreid building.

Fought a Duel With Knives.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 14.—William Haught and Allen Stevenson, both Americans, got into an altercation at Belle Vernon over the relative merits of glassblowing in different countries. The men were both armed with knives, and a savage duel resulted. They cut and hacked each other in a merciless manner. The physicians say both men will die.

TO INDICT ANTI-CATHOLICS.

A Test Case to Be Presented to the Grand Jury in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Nov. 14.—Seventy-five citizens of Buffalo lie under charges of conspiracy, which will be presented to the next grand jury when it meets on Nov. 20. All of them are alleged to be members of the American Protective association, the anti-Catholic secret society.

The case will be in the nature of a test to obtain an opinion from the courts whether this society comes within the scope of a criminal conspiracy and its literature under the ban of the law as matter tending to incite riot. The names of the defendants cannot be obtained at the present writing, but it is known that the proprietor of the news paper printed as the organ of the American Protective association, several attorneys, merchants, business men, some civil officers and even a clergyman are on the list.

It has been a difficult task to obtain these 11 to for prosecution, as each member subscribes on solemn oath never to divulge his own connection with the order or the name of any fellow member. The fundamental principles of the order are boldly expressed. It is stated in the official literature of the society in this language: "As all Catholics hold a mental reservation in favor of the pope which nullifies their oath to the United States, these men should not be permitted to hold any office within the gift of the American people."

It is claimed that the lower crime of treason against the state will be proved, which offense is punishable by 10 years' imprisonment. It is claimed that the American Protective association "printer," the tracts entitled "What Is It?" and "Read and Reflect" and the ritual of the order can be considered matter calculated to disturb the peace of the state and incite to riot the populace by a; pealing to social and religious prejudices and misrepresenting the beliefs and principles of a large body of citizens.

CANADIAN INDEPENDENCE.

Ex-Premier Mercier Urges Revolution In Open Parliament.

QUEBEC, Nov. 14.—Ex-Premier Mercier, being twitted in parliament here with disloyalty, avowed himself as in favor of Canadian independence and an entire cutting away from the mother country. He claimed that if this course was followed out Canada would become what the United States is today. He ridiculed the charge of disloyalty and claimed that the first duty of Canadians was to Canada and not to Great Britain.

He went on to say that Britons claimed the right of free speech, and he would claim that right to speak his mind freely.

M. Mercier's speech created a great sensation, and he was alternately hissed and applauded as his sentiments suited those of his hearers.

FASHIONS

man in the Passing Show.

The neckwear of the near future opens up a glowing vista, as multicolored as a spectacular drama. The shops show every conceivable shade of the color scale, from flaming scarlet to tender gray. The waistcoat, being cut a little lower, offers an opportunity for the display of the tie that makes the taste in selection of color a matter of importance. The ties are nearly all wide of end and narrow in the middle, tied four-in-hand fashion and the knot drawn low for being loosed, sensible, if worn at all, being put in below the knot. Scarfpins are small and dainty rather than gorgeous. The favorite design seems to be a sword or dagger with small jewels in the handle.

Only the colored shirts with white collars and cuffs are worn, and even these in rather quiet colors. Pronounced or striking wear are plaids or bosom, open front, and worn with two studs, which latter should be of the smallest possible style, jewels of no sort worn.

The long frock coat will be popular as ever this winter. With it a silk hat should always be worn.

In the walk for the season there is a faint suggestion of the picturesque styles of 1830.

The soft hat seems to be quite taking the place of the derby for informal occasions. It is very convenient and becoming to most men.

Tan shoes of a heavy quality will be worn.

"Brummel" condenses the forgoing, "in peasant," in Harper's Bazar, with the single word comfortable reflection that the well dressed man is always the man dressed with the greatest simplicity—plain clothes in reasonable conformity to the prevailing styles, and they are perhaps at their height in with a dark suit and very little jewelry

COTTOLENE IS MADE TO EAT

Made from clarified oil, expressed from Cotton Seed—as pure and golden as the Southern Sunshine which produces it.

For convenience in handling, there is added to this oil enough beef suet to make it a semi-solid.

The combination of these two pure natural products makes Cottolene, a shortening and cooking fat, with which in healthfulness, cleanliness, flavor and economy, nothing in the world can compare.

IMITATIONS are MADE TO SELL

To sell on the merits of the genuine. To sell by substitution; or by deception. To sell to the injury of the genuine, to the dissatisfaction of the consumer, to the discontent of the dealer, to the loss of all concerned—except the scheming counterfeiter himself.

If you wish the best food and the best health, you should insist that your cooking be done with genuine Cottolene. Refuse all counterfeits.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

Made only by N. K. FAIRBANK & CO., CHICAGO, and 1 2 & 3, Edwin's Lane, Dublin. Produce Exchange, N. Y.

Science & Progress.

SCIENTIFIC RECREATION.

A Pretty and Instructive Experiment In the Domain of Light and Color.

Take a sheet of cardboard and double it in half along its greatest length. In one of the two leaves thus obtained cut out a four pointed star, the one pair of rays being vertical, and the other of course horizontal. Fold down this leaf upon the other and trace with a pencil the outline of the star upon the second leaf. Mark its center (which will be at the point of intersection of its diagonals) and make this point the center of a second star, also four pointed, but whose diagonals shall make an angle of 45 degrees with those of the first star.

After having traced the outline of the second star you must cut it out carefully and place the perforated cardboard on a table, whereon are two lighted candles of the same height, and in front of a sheet of white cartridge paper fixed to the wall and forming the necessary "screen." You must so regulate the angle formed by the two leaves of the cardboard that in the middle of the shadow which it throws on the screen the luminous shapes of two stars shall lie, one upon the other, producing the effect of a single luminous eight pointed star.

If you now cover one of the two openings with a piece of colored glass—green, for example—you will have a tricolored star. The eight external points will be red and green alternately, and a smaller eight pointed star in white will appear in the center of the image. The piece of colored glass may be replaced by a wine glass filled with variously colored liquids.

The Camel's Hump.

Many of the old time scientists, even down to the date of Buffon, who shared in the belief, supposed the camel's hump to be a badge of servitude, a deformity which had been produced by the harsh treatment and excessive loads to which the poor animal was subjected through the many centuries during which he had been employed in the service of his hard taskmaster—man. Further investigation has proved, according to a writer in Popular Science News that the hump is composed of pure fat, a reservoir laid by in time of plenty, upon whose resources the creature can draw at such times as it finds it difficult or impossible to procure a sufficient supply of food. It is to the hump that the camel is indebted for his marvelous powers of abstinence during long periods of continued exertion, and for the capability of existing for still greater lengths of time upon the scantiest of fare. Under the stress of such need the fatty mass is gradually absorbed into the system, which is thus supported during the absence of other nutriment. While this process is going on the hump gradually dwindles, until its diminished size fills with silent eloquence that the limit of the camel's endurance has been reached.

After such an experience or before starting out upon a journey the Arab gives his camel a period of training. In proportion to the severity of the strain, from two to four months of rest and plenty will be the time required for recuperation. Then the index of the hump will be at its largest, thus indicating that the beast has again attained to its best condition.

Schnebelite, the New Explosive.

Yet another smokeless powder has been invented and put to the test. The inventor is M. Turpin Schnebelle, who recently gave a trial of his new explosive at Nunhead, says an English journal. In the first place the abbe made some of his powder in the presence of the crowd. Taking some of the powder in its manufactured state, the abbe placed it on an anvil. He commenced by hitting the grains with a hammer, but the concussion did nothing but grind the powder finer. Friction, too, was proved to have no effect upon the substance, and then the abbe applied a lighted match to a small heap of it. Not even a blade of grass was blown up. The powder burned with a bright light, but without the least deflagration. Many shots of a hermetically sealed quantity is susceptible to concussion. The cartridges were made up with a government bullet, the range was 100 yards, and the bullet went through an eighth-inch plate of Bessemer steel, and through four inches of the wood against which the plate rested. This, too, was with the sporting powder, which is not nearly so strong as the concentrated or warfare powder.

A Mistaken Idea About a Cyclone.

The theory that a cyclone forms a vacuum is absurd, according to an exchange, which says: Withdraw air from a glass jar with an air pump, and a feather within the vacuum formed will drop with the same velocity as lead, or, on the other hand, you can compress air until it is heavier to the square inch than wood, in which case wood will float in the air. The lifting power of a cyclone is caused (1) by the compression or density of the air, and (2) by its velocity. Combining the power of density with that of velocity, which occurs at the center of a funnel, no power can resist it. The feeling of suffocation or difficulty in breathing when near the track of a cyclone is caused from the compression of air.

Sandpaper on Trees.

Sandpaper grows on trees in Dutch Guiana, for the leaves of the tree known botanically as the Dillenia scabrella are so rough on the surface that they can be used as sandpaper says The Engineer.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

SOME NEW DOILIES.

Pretty Examples of One of the Daintiest Features of the Tea Table.

Many attractive novelties appear in dainty napery for the coming season, and pretty designs and arrangements are specially notticeable in tea cloths, doilies, sideboard cloths, etc. Among new tea cloths is one of white linen, embroidered at the corners in white and pale blue flax. The design consists of sprays of white clematis. The tea doily is hemstitched and has the initial of the owner embroidered on one corner. Another tea cloth is of cornflower blue linen, on which a graceful design of daisies, grass and dragon flies is carried out in white flax. The effect is excellent.

Tea cloths and doilies of brilliant coloring are quite popular, as, for example, a yellow tea cloth, with a border of nasturtiums in oil or Roman embroidery, carried out in shades of scarlet, pink and green. The graceful leaf edge is buttonholed, and the doilies match. The combination of colors is artistic and effective.

In simpler style is an attractive tea cloth of white linen, with a border of geranium pink lawn; sprays of white chrysanthemums laid on with feather stitching and worked in the corners. The same design is also worked most effectively in white and blue on a prettily hemstitched cover of white fancy damask.

Among the more elaborate tea cloths is "The Poppy," worked on rose pink linen, with hemstitched border, the design being put in somewhere with ribbon, carried out in various shades of rose pink and dull green flax. The doilies that are used with this cover are in the form of a large, open poppy, handsomely embroidered to match.

One more cloth, also elaborate, has a center of ivory silk brocade, edged with a deep, handsome border of satin silk to match. Peeping out from the border are bunches of trailing California clematis, embroidered in pale yellow, green and orange silks. The effect is most novel.

Celery on Toast.

In preparing celery for the table much of the fresh, tender green part is thrown away. An exchange gives a recipe for making a most appetizing dish with it. Wash these waste portions and cut in pieces about three-fourths of an inch long and put it in a saucepan with a little water to boil, letting it simmer for an hour and a half or two hours, adding a pinch of salt. Let the water boil nearly out, then add a little cream, a small piece of butter and a little flour or cornstarch wet with water. The cornstarch is much more delicate, although some people seem to prefer flour. When done this should be like a thick batter. Slices of toast may be prepared and the hot celery put upon them, a large spoonful to a slice. A tiny bit of butter and the least possible dash of pepper may be added; then send to the table and serve immediately.

Good For Cleaning White Ware.

The fact that white furs are now all the fashion gives interest to this recipe: Heat bran in a clean saucepan until it is very hot, keeping it continually stirred to prevent it burning or discoloring. Shake the fur well and spread it on the floor or a table, rub the hot bran thoroughly into it with the hand, shake it again, apply more hot bran, rubbing all over and very hard; as the bran appears to be dirty, shake it off and add fresh. After a few applications the fur will look fresh and clean; brush it well when done to remove all the bran.

Sago Pudding In Two Styles.

The "old man of Tobago," who lived upon sago, might have had his pudding in one of two ways, says Good Housekeeping. First boil a cupful of sago in a quart of water. Pour it over apples that have been pared and stewed a little, and bake half an hour. Or if his doctor forbade apples, he might have had 4 spoonfuls of sago boiled in a pint and a half of new milk, sweetened and flavored with cinnamon and baked slowly.

Renovating a Coat.

To remove the shiny look from black coat collars, elbows, seams, etc., where the nap of the cloth is not worn off entirely, ammonia water is excellent. But if the whole coat needs a thoroughly good cleaning, use strong black coffee to which has been added a few drops of ammonia, and sponge with a piece of black woolen cloth.

Effective and Inexpensive.

The prettiest kind of a sachet can be made out of a handkerchief, and will house in the accustomed fashion the sprigs of linen and lace which the fair owner desires to invest with her favorite perfume. Here is how you go about the making of the unique sachet case, as told in Golden Days: Purchase a muslin handkerchief—muslin is preferable to linen, as it is sheerer—with pointed or scalloped edges. The scallops, provided the handkerchief is laid evenly, will meet, and it is these lapping bits that you are to catch together with needle and thread. Sevenpoints from each corner will be enough. This will leave several scallops stanch and free.

Now take the quarter of a yard of china silk reserved for the pad, and having previously cut a cheesecloth cover, in which has been placed cotton batting and powder, draw the silken case over it. It is well to sew up the piece of silk on the wrong side, leaving one end open, so that when turned the pad may be easily inserted. This pad, having been previously measured to fit the bottom of the ready stitched kerchief, may be slipped within, thus providing a tinted background for the white cover. When once the pad is inside, turn back and press down the four unconfined corners. Next perch between each turned down portion a fluffy knot of feather edged Tom Thumb ribbon, matching in hue the silken pad. It takes one bolt of ribbon to successfully furnish the interior. All told, the sachet will cost 25 cents for the handkerchief, 18 cents for silk, 20 cents for ribbon and 10 cents for sachet powder.

Tired from Head to Foot

FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

That's what's the matter with the most of us. What's the reason? Poor circulation of the blood. Cannot be regulated if the feet are cold. We have known severe cases of so called rheumatism, neuralgia, headache, sciatica, backache, to feather in a short time by the use of Anti-Tire. Get up nights with cramps in calves, you will now quick your pains and aches will vanish. One foot bath of Anti-Tire will do it. Tried by the Ladies, Sir. ON WOMAN.

Some Things to Prove That She Is Variable as the Winds.

There are things about the feminine character which completely baffle my somewhat frivolous intellect.

They are only little things, but they are more puzzling to me than the doctrine of supraisparasian preterition or the theory of preadamite existence.

For instance, why does a girl always want a glass of ice water at the most inconvenient times and places?

Why does she want the nearest window opened if it is closed and closed if it is open?

Why does she keep you waiting three-quarters of an hour in the parlor, and then put on her gloves in the street?

Why does she go to a dance with a man she doesn't care for and rely on shaking him after she gets there? Why doesn't she ever choose the right man for her escort?

Why does she never discover that a man is "perfectly lovely" until he has married some other girl?

Why does she never want to walk on the turf until she sees the sign, "Keep Off the Grass?" And why does the warning, "Do Not Pick the Flowers," immediately start her to gathering a bouquet?

Why does she always admire the man you particularly loath?

Why does she act babyishly silly when you want her to be practical, and sternly practical at times when you could not only pardon but gladly welcome a little exhibition of fond foolishness on her part?

Why does she refuse your invitation to an after theater supper when you are flush and accept with alacrity when you are "reduced to your last?"

Why does she come and sit all over you in the horse car, if she doesn't know you, and then insist in keeping three feet away from you on the parlor sofa after you become acquainted?

These problems are, as I have said before, too much for me. Perhaps they have all been thought out by some eminent philosopher, but I doubt it.

I believe they form a valuable addition to the doctrine of the unknowable as elucidated by Mr. Herbert Spencer.—Puck.

Getting It Off His Mind.

"Now, John," he said persuasively, "you will try to do those few errands for me when you get down town."

"Yes, indeed," he replied.

"Don't you shirk?"

"No. I make it a rule now, when I promise to do anything for you, to get it off my mind as quickly as possible."

"Yes," she answered, with a gentleness that relieved the sarcasm, "you do—by forgetting it."—Washington Star.

The Object Partly Attained.

Killjordan (giving it a vigorous kick)—Boy, this is the third morning I've seen that old rubber boot lying on the sidewalk at this corner. What's your idea in keeping it there, anyhow?

Bootblack—I ain't got nothin to do with it. The feller what runs this grocery store is keepin tab on that boot. He says he's goin to find out how many darn fools kicks it in one week.—Chicago Tribune.

An Advertisement.

Hoppers (in the ballroom)—What is Shumley to that paper Mrs. Richley's got planted on her dress?

Mopps—Well, you see Mrs. Richley's diamonds are so valuable she doesn't dare wear them in society, and so she wears this paper. It's an affidavit that she does have 'em.—Chicago Record.

Been There Himself.

Old Pap Brown was mad. He came home from a hard day's work only to find the fires out, the family gone and that young scamp Jim, whom he had ordered last thing to be at home when he came, gone.

He sat and pondered, and the longer he pondered the hotter he got—for it was a warm evening. Then he worried along, breaking the autumn silence with an occasional snort, until he heard the whole crowd coming, with Jim at the head.

"Where've have you been, you young scoundrel?"

"I—I—father? I was at the Case grounds opened if it is closed and closed if it is open?" opened if it is closed and closed if it is open?"

"Hey? Fooling around after a lot of numbskulls playing ball and trying to kill one another, were you?"

"Father, it was a great game."

"Great bosh! I was a college graduate, but boys didn't act the fool then. I'm ashamed of you"——

"But, father"——

"Shutsup! None of your college nonsense. I'm glad I've forgotten all about my college life."

"But, father, the Case boys"——

"Shut up! Confound the Case boys"——

"Won, father, by"——

"Shut up! I tell"——

"A score"——

"Hush, will you?"

"Of 34 to 0"——

"What's that—'34 to 0?' Whoo-oo! Bully for Case! The college boys forever! Zip-zap bang-set-em-up! My college yell! Give me your hand, boy; you're a daisy. Zip-zap"—— and old Brown's anger was gone.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Conkle's Play the Part.

"What's the matter, Footlites," said an actor. "I thought you had a splendid engagement."

"So I did, but I had to give it up."

"Why?"

"You see they cast me for the villain in a melodrama."

"I should think you would make a good villain."

"No. I'm physically incapacitated. I abominate cigarettes."—Washington Star.

Economizing.

"Glory!" exclaimed the long haired rural visitor in the barber shop. "You charge 25 cents for a hair cut? Well, what do you charge for a shave?"

"Fifteen cents."

"Well, gimme a shave, then. It's a hair cut I want, but I'm not going to throw my money away."—Chicago Record.

The Grocer's Little Joke.

Girl (in the service of the stingy wife of the colonel, to grocer)—One penn'orth of sugar, one penn'orth of coffee and a ha'porth of cinnamon.

Grocer (handling her the parcel)—There's the lot. You're having a family party this evening, I suppose?—Fenerabend.

More Presumed.

Chappie—Do you think I'm beginning to show my age?

She—Yes; you're getting to look more and more like an old maid.—Life.

An Outdoor and Visible Sign.

Perdita—Has young Dr. Pellet just started in practice?

Penelope—Just about. There goes one of his funerals now.—Truth.

In Doubt.

"I wish I knew where we were going this fall," said Lucifer to his satellites as they dropped from grace.—Puck.

His Arithmetic.

The kid was taking his first lessons in arithmetic.

"If you eat one apple now and one 10 minutes later, what will that make?" asked the teacher.

"Two," responded the young mathematician.

"Then if you eat two more, what will that make?"

"Four."

"Then three more, what will that make?" The boy hesitated a moment.

"Green or ripe?" he inquired.

"What difference is that?" asked the teacher in some surprise.

"A good deal," responded the boy. "If they're green, three more'll make me have a pain."—Detroit Free Press.

PROCLAMATION.

In accordance with established custom, I, George T. Werts, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby designate and appoint THURSDAY, THE THIRTIETH DAY OF NOVEMBER, INSTANT, to be observed as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God.

I recommend that on the day named the people of this State abstain, so far as possible, from their ordinary secular pursuits and devote themselves to appropriate observance of the occasion, and especially to the rendering of thanks to the Heavenly Father for the continued blessings conferred upon our State and nation, with prayer that peace, happiness and prosperity may attend us in the future.

Witness my hand and the seal of the State of New Jersey hereunto affixed. Done at the city of Trenton, this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-three, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundredth and eighteenth.

GEORGE T. WERTS.

IN TRUE NATIVE STYLE.

A Japanese Entertainment to be Given at Crescent Avenue Church.

Mr. Mitsuye Oi, of Tokio, Japan, will conduct a Japanese entertainment in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church to-morrow night, under the auspices of the Boys' Mission Band. The entertainment includes a wedding ceremony in true Native Japanese style, embracing descriptions of home life in the land of the rising sun. The cast will be as follows:

Bride and Groom—Florence Abbott, Clarence Abbott.
Bride's Parents—Lena Bass, Frank Martin.
Groom's Parents—Mabel Bonnell, Herbert Bonnell.
Intermediaries—Emma S. Miller, Jessie Emillie.
Attendants—May Murray, Grace Wilcox, Harold Dolliver, Edwin Daniels.

BREVITIES.

—Iona Council, Degree of Pocahontas, will meet to night.

—The newspaper having the shortest title is published at Georgetown, Ill. It is called the X.

—The motto of a little advertising leaflet is: "Tell a woman half and she knows the rest."

—The Climax Bottle Stopper Company starts work to-day in its new building on East Fourth street.

—"What" will be the subject of Mr. Crane's address at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, this evening, at eight o'clock.

—Ladies as well as gentlemen are invited to Mr. Crane's Bible readings at the Y. M. C. A. rooms daily at 3.30 p. m.

—"Kick" Kelly was discharged this morning by Judge Coddington, as Mrs. Cunningham, who had caused his arrest, did not appear against him.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the East Third street mission will give their first sociable next Tuesday evening. All are invited to attend.

—"Chris" Weiss was tried last night for fast driving in the borough on Sunday last. He was adjudged guilty and fined $5.

—Several persons professed conversion last evening as the result of the large men's meeting, conducted by Mr. Crane, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

—The large plate glass windows for Mr. C. B. Clifton's new stores, at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, arrived yesterday and were placed in position.

—While the choir boys were practising in the Boys' Club rooms, yesterday afternoon, they were accidentally locked in. The locks had to be removed before they could get out.

—Mr. Crane's address on "The Price of a Soul" was listened to by a large audience of men last evening. He is a very forcible speaker, which is well substantiated by the attention of his hearers.

—There will be a mothers' meeting at the W. C. T. U. rooms, Thursday afternoon, at 3.30 o'clock. Mrs. Hyde will lead the meeting and she would like everyone to take a mother with them.

—There was a light snow squall in this city about eleven o'clock last evening. 'Twas the first of the season. Of course this little squall didn't count. There were twenty-five heavy snow storms last year, the first one being on November 8th.

They Want the Blame put Where it Belongs.

The regular motor-men and conductors on the Somerset street branch of the Plainfield Street Railway Company are all young men, and, because of their unfailing politeness and endeavors to please, are very popular with the patrons of the line.

These young men feel hurt over the charges made against them of insulting ladies along their line, and state, as do several regular passengers also, that the blame should be placed where it belongs; that is, upon the substitutes who take their places.

A Fair Committee Appointed.

At the regular meeting, last night, of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., a committee, composed of Junior Vice Commander Westphal, Senior Vice Commander McVey, Surgeon Stephenson and Adjutant Alpaugh, was appointed to confer with a committee from the Women's Relief Corps regarding the proposed fair to be held by the Post. The committee will meet Saturday night and fix the time and place.

THE BOWLING SEASON.

THE MEN WHO CAN AND THE MEN WHO CAN'T BOWL.

They all Bowl and Those who are Now Defeated Hope Soon to Turn the Tables and be the Victors Instead of the Victims.

THE shouts and wild laughter that victorious bowling team makes to celebrate a victory would be enough to bring out the police-force, only that bowlers seem privileged spirits and have to have room when they bess 'tother chaps.

Several games were bowled last night. They are given below.

THE PARK CLUB WON.

Good Scores Made in a Game at Bayonne Last Night.

The Park's were in a very happy frame of mind last night when they got back from Bayonne, where they had been successful in defeating the Bayonne's, by the following scores:

BAYONNE.		PARK CLUB.
Garrets	177	Lymon	168
Cook	137	Sandford	127

Osborne	163	Matthews	157
Total	1448	Total	1479

Park Club won by 30 pins.

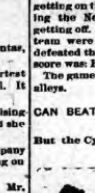
The Roselle Bowling Team Defeated by the Newark Bays.

When the elated Park Club team was getting on the train at Bayonne last evening the Newark Bay team was met getting off. The members of the latter team were also joyful. They had just defeated the Roselle's by 13 pins. The score was: Roselle 1436; Newark Bay 1490.

The game was bowled on the Roselle's alleys.

CAN BEAT THEM RIDING "BIKES."

But the Cyclers Can't Bowl with the Non-Cyclers.



NE game out of three was the best the cyclers could do in the series with the non-cyclers of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum. Each team having won one game last night's contest was looked forward to with much interest. The first half of the game was close and exciting, but toward the last the non-cyclers walked away from their opponents. The score:

LECTURE TO-MORROW.

At All Souls' Church on Park Avenue.

Rev. Dr. Henry O. Berkowitz, rabbi of the Rodef Shalom Congregation of Philadelphia, will give a lecture in All Souls' church, to-morrow evening, at eight o'clock. Dr. Berkowitz is the founder and director of the Jewish department of the Chautauqua, Literary and Scientific Circles. He has devoted the past Summer to completing the plans for the work and made all the necessary arrangements with the National Chautauqua officers, who will put the machinery of their organization in motion for the benefit of the Jewish branch. One of the beneficial features of the new department will be the special course for Jewish improvements, which has been planned by Dr. Berkowitz. The aim of this course will be to aid the new comers in the study of the English language; familiarize them with the peculiarities of the American government and institutions, and teach them how to fit themselves to their conditions.

Arrested for Stealing Dresses.

To-day Alice Robinson, colored, was tried before Justice Nash for stealing dresses from her employers. The charge was made by Joseph C. Neustender, of Cranford. She had stolen two dresses from Mr. Neustender's wife. Chief Grant found the stolen goods at Newark, where Alice said she had left them. She was held for the Grand Jury.

Car No 3 Ran Into No. 1.

Last night, about ten o'clock, car No. 3 ran into car No. 1, on East Front street. The cars were both west bound. There is a slight down grade in front of Casper's Hotel, and as the track was wet and slippery the motormen of No. 3 couldn't stop his car in time to avoid the accident. No damage was done, except to shake the passengers up considerably.

RIPLEY MADE HIS WILL.

HE WAS FOUND BUSILY WRITING SHORTLY BEFORE HE DIED.

His Body was Taken to Woodside Yesterday and Interred Without an Investigation Being Made.

Further investigation into the cause of the death of Chauncey B. Ripley seems to show that between Friday and Saturday last in the Hoffman House Indicates that he committed suicide, says the New York Herald. It came to light yesterday that last Thursday Mr. Ripley told a friend, Lawyer Aaron Kahn, of No. 52 William street, that he was writing his will. Mr. Kahn said yesterday: "I was in the law library in the Post Office Building and saw Mr. Ripley, whom I had long known as an eminent lawyer sitting at a table writing. Occasionally Mr. Ripley would lean back in his chair, bite the end of his pencil for several minutes and then resume writing. His face was always ruddy, but I noticed that it was unusually flushed. I exchanged a few words with him and then remarked that he seemed to be very busy.

"He replied that he was, and Mr. Ripley, at the same time putting his hand over the paper, so that I could not see what he had written, I think it is entirely likely that he was writing his will, because if he had been writing a will for a client he would have naturally done his writing in his own office."

All the drug stores were visited in the vicinity of the Hoffman House yesterday to learn whether Mr. Ripley had recently purchased chloroform or any other volatile poison with which he might have saturated the sponge found on his pillow by Undertaker Sawyer last Sunday. While no such record exists, it was not necessary to suppose in the event of Mr. Ripley's suicide that he had purchased the drug in the vicinity of the hotel. It might have been bought in any drug store in quantities sufficient to commit suicide.

Mr. Ripley's body was taken to Westfield early yesterday morning without an autopsy having been made. Funeral services were held in the First Presbyterian church and the interment was in Fairview Cemetery.

Coroner Schultze said yesterday that there was no need of an autopsy. He had viewed the body and granted a burial permit in favor of Rev. Dr. Ripley, a brother of Mr. Ripley's brother, Dr. John H. Ripley, of No. 305 Lexington avenue, under whom he had studied medicine, and, second, for Subway Commissioner Jacob Hess, who had requested him to examine the body in order that it might be removed.

"While I still hold that Mr. Ripley died of cerebral apoplexy," said Coroner Schultze, "I don't deny that I would conceal the fact that a person had committed suicide if I thought it would spare the feelings of the family, lest the fact should be printed in the newspapers. That's the position I have taken since I was elected."

PERSONAL.

Messrs. Frank L. G. Martin and Philip Macfarlane will start Friday for Hartford, Conn., to be gone several days.

City Clerk Runyon has announced to his friends that he is not nor will be a candidate for re-election next year.

The Rev. Charles H. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, was married last evening to Miss Carter of Montclair. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents, and was witnessed by the officers and their families of Mr. Goodrich's church.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, who held large meetings in this city a few years ago, closed a week of special services at East Orange last night, during which time nearly 1,000 persons signed cards expressing their desire to lead a Christian life. Hundreds were unable to gain admittance to the closing services.

The funeral of John H. Greer took place, at two o'clock, yesterday afternoon, at the home of Elijah Stiles, on Chatham street. The services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church. The pall bearers were Messrs. George and Robert Schlereth, George Ringleman and Charles Van Middlesworth. Interment was made at Hillside Cemetery.

The first regular dance of the season to be given by the Park Club will take place at the Club house, Saturday evening, November 18. Admission will be by ticket only. Tickets may be obtained upon application by members to the House Committee. The House Committee comprises Messrs. A. J. Hegeman, Jr., Chas. A. Reed, and Geo. P. Dupee; and the Junior Entertainment Committee consists of Messrs. Carl Brown, Edward Rushmore, and Clifford M. McGee. The patronesses are: Mrs. Samuel St. J. McCutchen, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. William J. Rooms, Mrs. George C. Evans, and Mrs. William L. Brown.

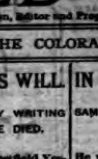
Queer Railroad Rumor.

It is affirmed by Newark railroad men that when the Consolidated Traction Company completes the road from Jersey City to Newark the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which is largely interested in the Traction Company, will take off all its "way" trains to Waverly and a number of the regular passenger trains. The intention is, they say, that the local passenger traffic be as far as possible confined to the electric system. This is the same company that intends extending its road to New Brunswick through Plainfield.

IN THE TOILS AT LAST.

SAMUEL EDWARDS CAUGHT DOWN IN VIRGINIA.

He was Indicted in Somerset County for the Murder of William Brown on the Night of April 21, 1891.



OR over two years Samuel Edwards, a Somerset county murderer, has been at large, but he has at last been caught, and there is a strong probability that a hanging will take place in Somerset county before many months. Wm. Brown, a negro, was murdered by Edwards, another negro, in Bound Brook on the night of April 21, 1891. On that night Brown and Edwards attended a ball in Cook's Hall in Bound Brook. During the night the two men quarreled over the favors of a pretty colored girl, and upon going outside Brown ran and Edwards pursued him along the railroad tracks. Edwards caught him and slashed his abdomen with a razor. He then ran away. Brown died an hour after.

An attempt was made to catch Edwards but no trace of him could be found. A coroner's jury found Edwards guilty of murder, and he was indicted by the grand jury. Last Monday word was received that he had been arrested in Fredericksburg, Va., where he had been employed by a dyer.

Prosecutor William V. Steele immediately asked for requisition papers, and an officer will be sent after Edwards on Thursday. The man will be tried at Somerville for murder, at the next term of court.

THE GERRYMANDER DECISION.

It Will Not Affect the Newly Elected Assemblymen.

It is stated on good authority that the Judges of the Supreme Court who handed down the decision declaring the gerrymander law unconstitutional carefully considered the complications likely to arise and concluded that the decision could have no effect on the recent election, and especially that of Assemblymen.

The Republicans do not anticipate that any action will be taken to prevent the elected Assemblymen, a large majority of whom are Republicans, taking their seats when the Legislature meets.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a regular meeting of Queen City Lodge, No. 84, I. O. O. F., held the 13th day of November, 1893, the following resolutions were adopted by the Lodge:

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to call from earth His our highly esteemed and beloved brother, Past Grand David L. Abbott, whose earth life we believe to be such as to entitle him to the highest place in heaven that could possibly be accorded to him in this life; therefore be it

Resolved, That while deeply mourning his loss as a brother Odd Fellow we extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved widow and family of our deceased brother; also be it

Resolved, That a copy hereof of this Lodge be instructed to drape the charter of this Lodge for the period of thirty days and that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Lodge and a copy of the same be transmitted to the widow of our deceased brother and also published in the daily papers of the city.

Revival Services in the Grace Church.

The revival services at the Grace M. E. church, conducted by Rev. Herbert Randolph, the pastor, are having marked success. Last evening nearly every seat in both rooms was occupied. The pastor impresses his hearers with the fact that he is intensely in earnest. Ready testimonies to the joy and peace of a Christian life are given by many whose voices are heard in public for the first time. "Come and see."—John 1: 39.

The Soldiers' Home Inspection.

The annual inspection of the Soldiers' Home, at Kearny, took place yesterday, by Department Commander Hartshorn and his staff, of which Mr. George W. Moore of this city is a member. Medical Director Youngloves reported that at the close of the year ending October 31, 1893, 849 inmates had been treated, of which 40 had died. When the inspection was made there were 409 regular inmates in the Home.

Mrs. Morse at All Souls' Church.

Mrs. Lucy Gilbert Morse of New York read a paper on "Books and Reading" at All Souls' church yesterday afternoon. There was much interest manifested by the audience. The lecture was very instructive. Mrs. Morse read the same paper before the League of Unitarian Women at a recent meeting in New York.

Christopher Columbus Held for the Grand Jury.

Christopher Columbus was tried to-day for stealing harness from Spencer Conway. Columbus said he had taken the harness but that it was with Conway's consent. He was held in $50 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Four of Them are Grand Army Men.

Four Grand Army men were sworn in as Deputy Sheriffs in Jersey yesterday. They were: George Eyre of Union county, a member of Winfield Scott Post of this city; George Barrett of Camden, Mr. Tolley of Hudson county. The fourth one is the Sheriff of Somerset county.

New Brunswick in Holiday Attire.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Nov. 15.—This city is in holiday attire in celebration of the unveiling of the Washington monument. There was a large parade this morning, in which all the beneficial societies of the city, except the Masons, took part. There is a large influx of visitors from all parts of the State. American flags are placed, amid imposing ceremonies, over the New Park School and the Parochial School. Mr. John N. Carpenter presided over the ceremonies. A poem was read by Dr. David Murray.

Dropped Dead at His Home.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15—John W. Hogg, Chief Clerk of the Navy Department since 1854, dropped dead at his home, Rockville, Md., last night.

A Short Term Decision.

A decision has been rendered in the Supreme Court which has an important bearing on fixing the status of short term beneficial societies under the insurance laws of this State. During the raid on the short term orders by Insurance Commissioner Daryes, Robert Taylor, of the Commonwealth Beneficial Association in the upper end of the State, was convicted of violating the provisions of the Insurance Act by doing business without authority from the Insurance Commissioners.

The case was appealed, and in a decision just handed down by Supreme Court Justice Depue the verdict is reversed on the ground that an association incorporated under the Benevolent Association Act does not come within the prohibition of the Insurance laws so long as it confines its agreements to the payment of sick benefits and burial expenses.

Man the Meat Eater.

Should man eat meat? No; he should not, answers Lady Paget in The Popular Science Monthly. She thinks that the eating of flesh made unwholesome by the long distances over which food animals are transported before slaughtering is the cause of the increase of cancer in recent years. Moreover, the people she knows who come the nearest to perfection physically are vegetarians. In her own practical vegetarianism she permits the use of eggs, butter and milk and merely draws the line on the devouring of food to obtain which it is necessary to take life.

She speaks of a German professor whom she heard lecture in Vienna. He conveyed in his manner the impression of reserve power in an extraordinary manner. His voice, though not raised, penetrated every portion of the large hall. The intellectual clearness and his mastery over his subject were no less remarkable. She invited the professor to dine with her, and when he came next day there was nothing on the table that he would touch, for he was a vegetarian. To this he attributed his power of mind and body.

Lady Paget draws a picture of the horrors of the slaughter house business which of itself would be enough to make us vow to turn vegetarian, only that impressions the most vivid wear off soon from our poor mortal minds. She admits, however, that in order to make vegetarianism a success the art of choosing and cooking fruits and vegetables must be thoroughly understood. In summing up the advantages on the side of the antiflesh she says:

It is certain that the giving up of animal food cures many illnesses which no medicines can reach. Everybody knows the bad effects of butchers' meat in gout and rheumatism. In affections of the heart it is often the only remedy, and the wonderful results are not difficult to explain, in a case where real often means cure, if one reflects that while the meat-eater's heart has 72 beats in the minute the vegetarian's only has 58, therefore 20,000 beats less in the course of the 24 hours. Insomnia and nervousness are affected in the same way: there is less wear and more repose in the constitution.

I could enumerate many other illnesses in which vegetable diet does marvels, but will only mention those of the skin. Most vegetarians have unusually clear and delicate healthy complexions. I need only remind those who know them of the difference between the red Trappist monks, who all have smooth wh ? and pink Fra Beato Angelico kind of faces, which are not found among the Dominicans, who usually live on Lenten fare. The splendid teeth of the Italian peasantry, who never touch meat, are another illustration, and it is the same in other countries where the people live under similar conditions.

Vegetarianism is often called a fad, but it is a healthy and an innocent one, and the natural reaction in the present effect of fashionings. It imparts lightness and elasticity to the body, brightness and clearness to the mind. The vegetarians I know are all unusually strong, active and young looking people for their age. One of them walked without stopping for 24 and another for 36 hours without a rest while on an excursion in Norway—feats not easily equaled by the most inveterate beefeater. They are also remarkably healthy, all seem sober and less fatiguing on this light and soothing diet. They should it not give strength to the limbs and sinews if one reflects that all the strongest animals who do the heaviest work in the world, like horses, oxen and elephants, are entirely herbivorous?

Baltimore felicitates herself that her elevated trolley road is a success, except when once in a great while the current goes wrong and leaves the cars stranded high and dry for a brief time. During such moments the passenger is apt to wonder a little uneasily what would happen if the current should give out upon one of the steep grades over which the road passes. But this never has happened; let us hope never will happen. The cars are heavier than those upon the steam elevated roads and hold each 100 passengers. How with such a load a train finds no difficulty in ascending the grades. The claim is made that these elevated trolley trains are run more cheaply than those of the steam roads. The absence of smoke, steam and cinders is a vast relief, not only to the passengers, but also to persons living along the line of the road. The stations are only two blocks apart.

The Norwegians are more dissatisfied than ever. It does not seem possible for them to get during the present union with Sweden consular representation of their own country as such. Sweden will not grant that. Still Sweden might kindly distribute consular offices in an unprofessional way, giving a good share of them to born and bred citizens of Norway. The complaint of the Norwegians is that the union of Sweden and Norway means only the recognition of Sweden abroad and that they are subordinated in all cases to Swedes. The Swedes do not love the Norwegians, and vice versa. The land that has produced so many literary men and artists would like its citizens to be better known and recognized.

Lobengula knows more than he did two weeks ago. He has found out that trying to oppose the white man in battle is worse than endeavoring single handed to capture and kill a whole herd of elephants. He and his Matabeles can only make the best terms possible with the British conquerors and settle down as dependents who must henceforth walk humbly and behave themselves. For 80 years the old Zulu-caffre nation slaughtered and enslaved the Mashonas and other tribes around him at his own sweet will. He has found his master at last. Whether Zambesia shall become a part of Cape Colony or whether it shall be erected into a colony by itself is a question to be determined leisurely in the future.

WARSHIPS TO HAWAII.

Two Cruisers Ordered Posthaste to Support Willis.

THURSTON INTERVIEWS GRESHAM.

It Is Believed That Germany and Perhaps Other Foreign Powers May Protest Against the Restoration of the Queen. It Would Please England, However.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The meeting which was arranged between Secretary Gresham and Minister Thurston of the Hawaiian government was held, but both of the gentlemen declined to state what was the result of the interview. It was learned from Mr. Thurston that the meeting was very friendly.

There is an entire dearth of any real news from Hawaii or about Hawaii. The speculation as to what has been occurring there in the week past is, however, by no means abated. Nearly every one has taken one side or the other, and is either an earnest wisher for the prompt success of the effort to restore Queen Lilliuokalani or is vainly hopeful that something may intervene to balk the purpose announced by this government.

The fear of the friends of the present government is that Minister Willis will push President Dole to an immediate decision and demand prompt surrender of all his authority on the ground that the provisional government itself put a limit upon the duration of its own authority, and that limit expires when Minister Willis announces to him that there is no possible chance of annexation to the United States.

The Sentiment in Commonwealth.

It is a fact that for several months past the provisional government has recognized that there was no hope of securing annexation to the United States, and they have felt under no obligation upon them under those circumstances of providing a permanent form of government for the islands. The form of the proposed government has been discussed, and it has been proposed to call it a commonwealth.

It is expected that President Dole will advance these facts as arguments against the contention of Minister Willis that his government—the government to which Willis is accredited—has expired by its own limitation.

Should Minister Willis decline to recognize the validity of this argument and President Dole determine to follow out his contention, so far as it lies in his power, his next step is expected to be to formally notify the United States minister that he would not further attempt the deposition of force, and that he would regard the landing of troops from the men-of-war to enforce his deposition as an act of war.

The diplomatic representatives of foreign countries in Honolulu are always looked to with eagerness in a civil emergency, and Premier Hyde declares that he will follow out this contention, so far as it lies in his power, his next step is expected to be to formally notify the United States minister that he would not further attempt the deposition of force, and that he would regard the landing of troops from the men-of-war to enforce his deposition as an act of war.

MRS. HALLIDAY BREAKS OUT.

Tried to Choke to Death the Wife of Sheriff Beecher.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The murderess Lizzie Halliday, now in jail here awaiting trial for killing her husband and two women, attempted to strangle to death the wife of Sheriff Beecher. As Mrs. Halliday is either insane or simulating insanity, a close watch has been kept over her to prevent her injuring herself. At the same time she has been treated with kindness and consideration.

Mrs. Beecher on Monday entered Mrs. Halliday's cell and as usual engaged in conversation. Mrs. Halliday seemed to be in a quiet frame of mind. Mrs. Beecher happened to turn her back to the prisoner, when the latter sprang upon her and caught her by the throat.

The murderess is possessed of great strength, and she quickly bore Mrs. Beecher backward toward the floor. Mrs. Beecher steadied herself against the wall, and although a small woman fought desperately. She threw her hands behind her, seized Mrs. Halliday's dress and turned to one side as she was forced to her knees. This loosened Mrs. Halliday's hold, and Mrs. Beecher kept her away until a jailer came to Mrs. Beecher's rescue. Mrs. Halliday is now closely watched.

Her object, it is believed, was to create the impression that she is subject to sudden impulses of homicidal mania. Mrs. Beecher is utterly prostrated by the assault. Only the jailer is now permitted to enter the cell. Sheriff Beecher says he dreads the time of arraigning Mrs. Halliday in court. He thinks that it may be necessary to arraign her in a straightjacket.

THERE WAS NO BITING.

Captain Mackey Makes Some Remarks on the Football Game.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 15.—Harry A. Mackey, captain of the Pennsylvania football team, was very indignant after reading the stories put in circulation by Yale men accusing his team of roughness and brutality in the recent game at Manhattan field, New York. He laughed at the story of Butterworth's "bite" and said it had no foundation in fact. It would take an ogre to bite through a canvas jacket, a sweater and an undershirt.

When asked about the treatment his own man had received, he said they had no complaint to make. He himself had a bad contusion of the eye from a blow of Murphy's fist. Every one on the field saw Hinkey strike Knipe with no provocation from the latter except that he had made a touchdown. The same Yale player jumped with his knees on Osgood's neck after the latter had called "down." McCrea repeatedly struck Wharton about the face and head and pulled off deliberately the protecting bandage from his swollen and inflamed ear, although doing so caused agonizing pain, but the Pennsylvanians soon accepted those occurrences as unpleasant incidents of an exciting game and had no wish to dwell upon them or ask for sympathy.

He added that even the most scientific football was not a game for nurslings, and that men who had to make such a parade of minor injuries after each contest ought to take up crochet or battledoor and shuttlecock and drop football.

A SUCCESSFUL EXECUTION.

Johnson's Death by Electricity Pronounced Painless.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 15.—It has remained for Auburn prison, which furnished the Kemmler sensation and the horror attending Taylor's death, to furnish at length one of the most decent executions by electricity that has yet been known. The alternating current, traveling infinitely faster than nerve impulse, destroyed the life of John Johnson instantly before he could know any pain and without any revolting features save the strain against the straps, resulting from tetanic action incident to such use of electricity.

The execution was as perfect as the defenders of capital punishment could desire. There was not a hitch in the proceeding, and the spectators were spared even a twinge of the horror which they experienced at the previous slow torture of Taylor. Johnson went to the death with a brave grim on his face. He was the same devil may care fellow who threw inkstands at court officials, whose whole communities, shot detectives on sight and made the savage attack on a room full of convicts, killing two of the number. All hope was gone, and yet the careless smile never left his lips except when he declared his innocence as he was being strapped into the deathchair, when he protested strongly in somewhat rambling sentences that he was not guilty of the crime for which he was dying.

Thief Foses as a Long Lost Son.

LYONS, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Frank Eckert 15 years ago left his father's home. Friday last a man appeared at the home of the father, Philip Eckert, and proclaimed himself the long lost son. The old man had $620 saved up to pay a mortgage. The next day the supposed son took by artifice the money to put in the bank and hasn't been seen since.

The Railroads Are Interested.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—It is gossip that the railroads are taking an active part in the contest for the office made vacant by the assassination of Mayor Harrison. The companies are alleged to have started a large campaign fund, with a view of resisting the election of any man pledged to support the track elevation movement.

NOBLE SACRIFICE OF A TEACHER.

She Might Have Escaped From the Burning Schoolhouse, but Ran Back Into the Flames After a Little Boy, and Both Perished—Helped All the Rest to Get Out.

NUNDA, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Heroine May Porter, the daughter of a widow, paid the penalty of bravery with her life in the little country schoolhouse at Cooperville, two miles from here. Her blackened, charred remains now lie in her aunt's house. Little Willard Johnson, son of Conrad Johnson of Cooperville, is a mass of blackened flesh—arms, head and leg gone. He was left in the teacher's care by his father, who was going away for the day. The Cooperville schoolhouse shelters each day about 50 pupils of all sizes and all degrees, sons and daughters of farmers and railroad men who live near by.

It was built 50 years ago and is a one story frame structure, with three windows on each side. Built out from the only entrance is a woodshed, in which are stored oak logs for the stove in the schoolroom. The school let outside the woodshed were added to by a boy who built the fire. Miss Porter noticed smoke floating by one of the windows and sent a small boy to open the door into the woodshed to see what the matter was.

As he did so the flames, which had enveloped the shed, rushed out into the schoolroom, driving the boy, the other pupils and the teacher into the farther corner. Two older boys, Melvin and Charles Chambers, stationed themselves at the window and passed the smaller children through.

Back Into the Flames.

Miss Porter aided in handing up her pupils, the flames meanwhile rolling through the room above their heads. All the children had been passed out except little Willard Johnson, and when he was sent up he did not understand the situation and ran back into the flames. The teacher darted back after him, and the clothing of both caught fire, while the flames began to lap the window where the Chambers boys were aiding in the rescue. They made one heroic effort to pull the teacher through, then jumped through themselves.

Outside they could see the teacher struggling to save the child by pulling him to the window, but the roaring children was too hot, and they stood back just as the two succumbed and fell into the flames' embrace.

The fire soon burned itself out in the dry, seasoned timbers. Then the bodies were taken out. Miss Porter's clothing was completely gone. She was almost unrecognizable, while the boy had no semblance left to a human being.

Miss Porter's father and stepmother lived in Wisconsin. She lived with her aunt, Mrs. Mary Porter. She was 22 years old, pretty and popular among her associates. She had been here about a year. The whole thing was over so quickly that people could hardly believe it. No fire company could get there from Nunda because the fire lasted only a few minutes. Very few people arrived on the scene until all was over, and then to see helpless.

Miss Porter made no sound, but unflinchingly stuck to her duty until her awful death came. The Johnson boy was not a regular pupil of the school. He was not old enough. He was only left temporarily in the teacher's care.

Another Northern Pacific Suit.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 15.—In the United States court the Farmers' Loan and Trust company of New York brought suit to foreclose mortgages for three sets of bonds on the Northern Pacific railroad aggregating $53,000,000 and asked for the appointment of receivers. Judge Caldwell appointed the same receivers as before and directed that all indebtedness be considered preferred claims.

PROTECTS THE PRESIDENT.

A Mounted Guard Attends Mr. Cleveland When He Goes Out.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Sun today prints a story from Washington which states that President Cleveland, when he rides out, is attended by a mounted bodyguard. The article continues:

"The secret in question, a fine, muscular looking man on horseback, could not properly be called an outrider, as he followed the president's brougham instead of riding ahead, or clear the way. There was a set look on the countenance of the individual, who never took his eyes off the carriage until the chief executive was safely within the portals of the White House.

When the horses dashed through the gates, the guard was close upon the east looking brougham which contained Grover Cleveland, and it was noticed that as they approached the portals of the mansion they up beside the carriage and hurriedly dismounted before the door was opened.

The mysterious man stood beside the president when he alighted, and a keen pair of dark eyes scanned every face in the group of idlers which always congregates to witness the arrival of the president. As the latter was lost to sight in the vestibule the somewhat mysterious person breathed a sigh of relief and strode across the portico, shrugging his shoulders and clinking the spurs attached to his heavy riding boots.

The man thus chosen to guard the president is Mr. Benjamin T. Rhodes, a well known detective of the police force, who has been detailed as a bodyguard for the president ever since the tragic death of Carter Harrison. Mr. Rhodes goes out every day by the president's charge in the city and follows the carriage closely when business is finished for the day. The detective wears plain citizen's clothes, and there is nothing in his appearance to indicate the nature of his mission.

Why American Women Are Beautiful. A Beauty grows as the race develops," says a noted writer, and the many improved refinements of existence are undoubtedly affecting the characteristics of the species. If Mary, Queen of Scots, or any other beauty who has become famous in history, were to walk into a modern ball-room she probably would not attract attention in any way. And not only are the individual types higher, but beauty has become very much more general; no one who keeps his eyes open can fail to be struck with the prevalence of it. Race admixture has also undoubtedly had a great deal to do with this fact, if it is a fact. American women are generally conceded to be the best looking women of the day and it is possibly due in a great measure to their mixed ancestry that they have obtained this distinction.

Preparing for a Funeral Sermon.

An eminent divine on returning from B——, where he had officiated at a funeral, was horrified to find his son of three summers had dressed two blooded puppies in the bath-tub, got at liberty several choice canaries, smothered four kittens in the ash-barrel, hung a pet rabbit to a door-knob, and beheaded a whole brood of little fluffy downy ducklings.

The reverend gentleman was filled with consternation, but when sufficiently recovered to trust himself to speak, called the little culprit to him, where lay the dead victims side by side. "Sammy," said he, "what is going to be done?"

"Why, I'ther a big funeral, I'ther, "'pose sood sine a fu'nel sermon very 'prop'ate."

FOR GOOD CHILDREN ONLY.

THEY ARE THE ONLY ONES WHO WILL READ THIS COLUMN.

They Will Find Items Here That Will Interest, Instruct and Amuse Them—The Matter Is Carefully Selected—Sayings of Little Tots.

The value of exercise cannot be too highly estimated. It is an absolute necessity in gaining and keeping strength and good health.

Some children are naturally very active and exercise enough without any special effort. Others are not inclined to be as lively and should be encouraged to play such games as will bring into play the proper muscles. Before babies walk they kick vigorously when lying down, but as soon as they can run alone the exercise thereby secured is enough for them, although even then they keep their arms flying. Everybody should exercise considerably, even to the point of fatigue. All children should live free, happy outdoor lives while young.

Exercise increases the development of the muscles, but, of course, can be overdone, and when the body actually requires rest it should have rest.

SOME CHILDREN'S SUPERSTITIONS.

Curious Notions that Prevail Among Young Ones in the South.

Children in the South have some very interesting superstitions used in their games, "telling fortunes," &c.

For instance, in making a wish which they are anxious to have come true they pick up a stone that is imbedded in the ground, spit on the underside and replace it, being careful to fit it just where it was; by so doing they think they will "get their wish."

They believe that a tooth that is extracted should always be buried; otherwise the coming one will be a dog's tooth.

They have also many ways of telling fortunes by the moon; the most popular one is this: When the new moon is seen for the first time, three steps are taken backward and these words repeated:

New moon, true moon, true and bright,
If I have a true love, let me dream of him tonight.

If I'm to marry dear, let me hear a bird cry;
If I'm to marry for let me hear a cow low,
And if I'm never to wed, let me hear a hammer knock.

Strange to say, according to their accounts, one of these three sounds is sure to be heard.

On hearing the first wood dove in the spring they will sit down, remove the shoe and stocking from the left foot, and in the heel of the stocking they say there will be found a hair the color of that of the man or woman they will marry.

Then the flight of the turkey buzzard is always noted, especially if flying alone, and the bird is addressed thus:

Hail, hail, lonely turkey buzzard,
Fly to the East, fly to the West,
Fly to the one that I love best!
Let me know by the flap of the wing
Whether he or she loves me or not.

The bird's direction of flight is noted; also the motion of the wings. If they flap in a considerable manner a sign that the lover or sweetheart is true.

There is a superstition common among children in almost all localities in the South that if you kill a snake and hang it in a tree it will surely rain within three days.

Another one is that hair-combings should never be thrown out of doors, for the reason that the birds will use them in building their nests and thus produce constant headache to the person to whom they belong.

LULU TAKES CARE OF KITTY.

They brushed the clothes, they beat the clothes,
One sunny April day—
Their winter clothes I mean—and then
They packed them all away
In paper boxes tied around
With very strongest strings,
First freely sprinkling them with some
Tobacco dust and camphor gum,
And other sneezy things.

And when, their labor done, they took
Their tea and toasted bread,
"Why, where is kitty?" some one asked,
And "I know," Lulu said;
"She's in my dollie's biggest trunk;
I brushed and beated her;
There can't not any moths, I doss,
Del into her nice fur.
She scratched my fingers when I put
The smelly stuff about.
Div me some toast that's buttered froo."
They let Lulu sit to her and dow
To let poor kitty out.

Big Fish Stories.

Perhaps the largest fish ever taken by a rod and line was a tarpon that a lady captured in Florida about a year ago. This aquatic monster measured seven feet and three inches in length and four feet in girth, and his weight was 305 pounds. The same lady caught several other fine specimens of the tarpon weighing from 178 to 145 pounds. It seems as if the gallant fish could not resist the bait that a lady dangles before their noses, for three other ladies are mentioned as having landed big fellows weighing from 108 pounds upward. Of all the tarpons caught with rod and line at Port Myers, Florida, last season, no fewer than 118 weighed upwards of 100 pounds each. One is inclined to wonder if the angler would not soon tire of such heavy sport. And what can be do with so many monsters?—Harper's Young People.

The Superfluous Got.

Got is an ugly word, and should be used as little as possible—never, in fact, when another word can be found to fill its place. As for the superfluous "got," that is totally inexcusable. "I have got." "He or she has got." "They have got." Leave off the "got."

HOW TO TAKE CARE OF LAMPS

Useful Hints on the Use of Oil and Wicks.

To begin with the lamps should be cleansed and the lamp filled up every morning. Once a week the oil container should be thoroughly emptied out and the dirty oil thrown away.

Next see that the burner is clean. When every time lamps burn badly this should be at once looked to, as it is often the cause. If the burners are boiled for a few minutes in soda and water at regular intervals there will be little difficulty in the burning. Next, see that the wicks fit exactly. For this purpose when new wicks are required the lamp burner should always be sent. Some people buy their wicks by guess, but this is a most foolish plan, for not only should the wick be of the right width, but it should also be of the right thickness, so that it will turn up and down easily, and be in all respects a good fit.

Another thing to ascertain is if the wick is worn out. A lamp should have a fresh wick every month at least. Be careful before fitting a new wick to see that the latter is perfectly dry. It should be placed for ten or fifteen minutes upon a hot pan before fixing it into the lamp so as to remove any moisture. Soaking the wicks in vinegar and then drying them thoroughly prevents all chance of smoking; but it makes a little fear if the lamp is regularly and properly cleaned and trimmed. Be careful in trimming the burner, besides giving off an unpleasant and very dirty vapor. Under the title of petroleum or rock oil are also included the benzoline and kerosene.

One more hint. Never turn down a lamp, allowing it just to glimmer. It is meant to burn with the flame at full height, and was allowed to smoulder in this way it will either smoke or smell, possibly both, and will most certainly heat unduly and become a distinct source of danger.

A Handy Work Stand.

In a small house it is often necessary to combine the ornamental and the practical, and to use the one parlor of the establishment as a sitting room. When this is the case much of the sewing must be done in that apartment, and it is highly desirable to have a pretty work stand to hold the basket and the stockings of a seamstress. The table shown in the cut may be of unpolished wood and may be painted a creamy white with enamel paints. Ribbons of any color to harmonize with the rest of the room may decorate the table, which is useful for holding books, magazines and knick-knacks.

The Care of Musical Instruments.

Neither a piano nor an organ should be left open at night, or habitually when not in use. The changes of temperature are very hurtful to the tone of any instrument, and especially the gathering of dampness, which not only interferes with the tone and quality of the strings and reeds, but is very likely seriously to affect the wood. Pianos in particular should be kept in a temperature as even as possible, since they are much affected by alterations of heat and cold, dryness and moisture; if thus exposed they require very frequent tuning and are not satisfactory in action or tone. Care is also equally desirable in regard to other stringed instruments—the violin family, banjos and guitars, and flute. In all of these the strings are much affected by exposure to dampness and great changes of temperature. All fine instruments should be habitually kept in cases lined with baize or flannel.

Kitchen Kinks.

Wash out common oil stains in cold water.

Burnt alum is the best cure for proud flesh in "gathered" fingers.

Pickles may be greened with cabbage leaves. Never use coloring.

When dress silk becomes wet, put it between the hands to dry quickly.

If butter is kept covered tight when put in the ice chest it will not absorb the odor of any food lying near. There is nothing so sensitive as butter.

Nice tablecloths and napkins should not be allowed to become much soiled, as that they will require vigorous rubbing with soap or in hot water.—Good Housekeeping.

Kitchen Weights and Measures.

As in different recipes the quantities given are sometimes in measures such as quarts instead of pounds, and sometimes in wineglassfuls, tumblerfuls, etc., the following table will be found useful if pasted on the fly-leaf of the recipe-book you generally use: A common-sized tumbler holds half a gill. A quart of sifted flour equals one pound. A pint of cornmeal equals one pound two ounces. One quart of butter is equivalent to two pounds; one quart of powdered sugar to one pound seven ounces; one quart of granulated sugar to one pound nine ounces. Butter "the size of an egg," about two ounces.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Remedy for Tender Feet.

A remedy for tender feet is cold water. About two quarts, two tablespoonfuls of ammonia, one tablespoonful of bay rum. Sit with the feet immersed for ten minutes, gently throwing the water over the lower part to the knee. Then rub dry with a crash towel, and all the tired feeling is gone.—Ladies Home Journal.

To make tins shine, wash in hot soapsuds, dip a dampened cloth in fine sifted coal ashes, then polish with dry ashes.

Wash gilding with water in which an onion has been boiled, and dry with a soft cloth.

Green vegetables will retain their color if cooked in an uncovered vessel.

For poison oak, bathe in cream and gunpowder twice a day till cured.

ALAS, TOO LATE!

When They Got There the Pumpkin Was Gone, and He a Liar!

He was at the blacksmith shop getting a measly roan horse shod and giving glowing descriptions of a mammoth pumpkin that was still ripening in the October sunshine.

"But 210 that ere punkin measures 72 inches round its girth and weighs 92 pounds. Yes, sirree, as you daasn't take up, you fellers."

"You're talkin through your hat," drawled one of the loungers.

"I want ter see that air punkin before I name my good money. I ain't goin it blind on any old punkin then I ain't ever not eye on," said another.

"Come on, gentlemen," said the owner of the pumpkin, "72 inches 'round its waist and 90 pounds of clean yaller meat! There's more'n 100 Thanksgiving pies on tap in that punkin."

The men shuffled along after the braggart whose farm was within a half mile of the shop, and they soon brought up in the corn field and began a still hunt for the monarch of the crop.

They searched the field and found no trace of a punkin, large or small. But there was a dent in the ground about the size of a saucer, and over this the farmer hung in a spasm of unmitigated grief.

"It was there, gentlemen, only this morning. Hev any of you seen a four ox team goin along this nayborh'd?"

None of them could remember seeing such a rig.

"Nothin else could hev got away with it. Seventy-six inches around the—oht don't say another word 'bout it! One hundred Thanksgivin pies gone to thunder an nothin left to prove I ain't a liar! Is fetches me, hapd."—Detroit Free Press.

Nothing Serious.

It was obvious that she made her own dresses, and the minister felt the moment she entered his study that he was in the presence of an earnest soul.

When she lifted her veil and disclosed a pair of sad eyes and a crooked nose, he was confirmed in his diagnosis.

"Sir"——

Her voice was gentle and subdued.

"I wish to engage in some employment of a serious nature. Can you help me?"

The clergyman shook his head.

"My dear woman," he said kindly, "I am sorry to disappoint you, but the only opening we have now is in the choir."

And when he saw how hard it was for her to smile the lingering hope that she might possibly choose the work he indicated left his breast.—Detroit Tribune.

Listen, maids and matrons, to a piteous tale of woe.
Produce your dainty handkerchiefs, for your tears are bound to flow.
I'm a bachelor of thirty-five, and a millionaire besides,
But I've spoken unhappy reason I've never found a bride.

I don't think that I'm bad looking, and I know my heart is kind,
But the sort of girl I want to wed is the sort I never find.
The pretty girls are plenty and the clever ones not few,
But to the girl who'd just suit me it's hard to get a clew.

Perhaps you think I'm finicky and very hard to suit,
Likewise you may imagine that I'm more or less a brute.
But the case is really simple, and I think you'll soon admit
That the trouble rests with nature, and I'm not to blame a bit.

I've roamed from Vassar college to the plains of Kalamazoo,
I've searched all over Boston and Kansas City too.
I've sat out dances many with New York's petite belles,
I've been in San Francisco, where the miner's heiress dwells.

In New Orleans and in Denver, in Chicago and Detroit,
In Skowhegan and St. Louis, in Cincinnati and Beloit—
All over this vast country I've been on boats and trains,
But I never found a pretty girl who had an ounce of brains.

A parlor conference in the interest of the Y. M. C. A. building fund, will be held this evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. Fisk. Plans for raising work on the building will be discussed.

The funeral services over the remains of the late James H. Force of Bound Brook, were held yesterday afternoon at that place. The Rev. Lincoln R. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, Bound Brook, conducted the services. The Exempt Firemen of this city, of which deceased was a member, marched to the grave in a body. Interment was made in the North Plainfield cemetery.

The Park Club Extends Sympathy to the Union County Club.

The Park Club of North Plainfield, recently extended an invitation to the Union County Club to bowl a game of ten pins on their alleys, after which the Parks were to give the County Club a supper at the County Club house.

The affair came off last evening, to the satisfaction of the Parks, but not so with the County Club, who fully expected to walk away with the game.

The following scores show how they did it:

UNION COUNTY.		PARK.

To Build a Chapel at Mount Pleasant.

A new chapel is to be built at Mount Pleasant, a county place about three miles from Plainfield. It is to be built of stone, something after the plan of the chapel at Washingtonville. The money needed has been nearly all subscribed for. It will be located opposite the school house, in which religious meetings have so long been held. Speakers are now every Sunday night by the Y. M. C. A. of this city to conduct the meetings there.

At the East Third Street Mission To-Night.

Miss Lulu G. Craft, a well known Christian worker of Bergen Point, will address the meeting at the East Third Street Baptist Mission to-night at eight o'clock. Those who have already heard Miss Craft promise a very interesting service on this occasion. Frazee, the cornetist, will be present. No admission charged.

WHERE'S TOM MARLEY?

HE LEFT HOME THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2 LAST.

And That was the Last Seen or Heard of Him.—He Started for Newark and Said he Would be Home by Night.

Two weeks ago to-day Thomas, (better known as "Tom,") Marley, a blacksmith, living on Richmond street, left his home to go to Newark. That was the last heard from him. He left his home at about eleven o'clock in the morning, telling his wife he would be back by seven in the evening. He said he was going to see some friends.

Marley had always been a hard working man and had managed to build a little home for himself and family. He has four children—the oldest is about ten years old and the youngest two.

Mrs. Marley is very much worried about her husband, and has sent word to some friends in Newark to learn if possible what has become of him.

Those who know say that he wasn't the kind of man to leave his wife and family to take care of themselves. It is feared he has met with foul play. He had a small sum of money with him, as he had just been paid his wages by Mr. Quinn, for whom he worked.

Mrs. Doty Dead.

This morning, Mrs. Amanda Doty, wife of the veteran Samuel Doty, died at her home on West Fourth street. Mrs. Doty, last Summer, was confined to the State Asylum, for awhile, as two physicians had decided that she was insane. Her health broke down and she was brought home, where she remained up to the time of her death. Mrs. Doty's hallucination was that her husband wanted to kill her.

A $54,925.69 JUDGMENT

AGAINST WILLIAM L. PATTON & CO., BROKERS.

No Defence Made to the Allegations of the Craig Executors.—The Value of the Stock was $52,000, and This with Interest Amounts to $54,925.69.

A judgment by default for $54,925.69 has been taken before Justice Andrews of the Supreme Court against William L. Patton and Henry L. Seltzentall, who composed the firm of William L. Patton & Co., brokers, at 6 Wall street, New York. It is in favor of the executors of Robert Craig, who left with Patton & Co. for safe keeping 15 Richmond Terminal Co. 39 Georgia Improvement Co. Tennessee Coal and Iron Company's Division bonds, 200 shares Tennessee Coal and Iron Railroad Company's preferred stock, 100 shares Missouri Pacific Railroad Company's stock, and 200 shares East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad Company's preferred stock. It is charged that this stock and $2,000 in money were embezzled and fraudulently misapplied by the firm, and that it had been used by the firm by pledging it as collateral to secure advances which had been made to them. The suit was brought to recover $60,000. No defence was put in by either member of the firm, and as it was admitted that the value of the stock was $52,000, judgment was allowed to be taken for that sum with interest.

NUPTIALS.

Goodrich—Carter.

A very quiet wedding was that of Miss Josephine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Carter, and the Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich of the Congregational church of Plainfield, last night at the residence of the bride's parents on Park street, Montclair. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Lewis Goodrich, father of the groom. The bride wore a quaint brocade silk and carried white roses. Both were unattended. The parlors were made beautiful with smilax and palms. Immediately following the ceremony the Rev. and Mrs. Goodrich left for the West and upon their return will reside in Plainfield. The officers of the Plainfield church were among the guests.—Elizabeth Journal.

Rabbi Berkowitz' Lecture To-Night.

Rabbi Henry Berkowitz will lecture in All Souls' church to-night. Dr. Berkowitz was present at Chautauqua last Summer on "Christianity Forty Days," and was received with enthusiastic applause. He said among other things "that the fallacy that there is antagonism on the side of a Jew against Christianity should be laid aside once and forever. Let all religionists be united and stand shoulder to shoulder, that we may go forward in a conquering march against vice, *ignorance and superstition. No*where in Jewish pulpits or writings will you find that there is hatred of Christianity. On the crime of Calvary a hundred years be speedily atoned for! The Jew disclaims forever the guilt which has been charged upon him and been the source of woes that may not be retold. We glory in the inspiring example of the life of Jesus as it has been pictured to the world. His nobility was the highest product of Judaism itself. We are one. But, if you ask us to become Christians, what sect shall we join?"

The Substitutes Explain.

A communication from one of the substitutes on the Somerset street branch of the Central Railroad Street Railway Company, states that the majority of the "subs" are sedate married men and that all the trouble about flirting must have been caused by one of the unmarried number.

They, the s. m. s., are only on the job, out for passengers, according to the communication, and do not wish to be thought flirtatious.

Another commemoration from a lady, a Somerset street resident, blames the dear girls, and suggests that the mothers or guardians attend to them.

Old Enough to Know Better.

Annie Meyers, the oldest woman prisoner ever arraigned in Union County court, was convicted at Elizabeth yesterday of grand larceny. She is 74 years old, and was charged with robbing Clement Schwartz, an aged pensioner, of $700, all his savings. The woman was his housekeeper. While he was away, she stole the money from the trunk, and decamped. She was arrested in Brooklyn. Efforts to get information of her family failed. She declared on the witness stand that she preferred death to exposing her children to shame.

Two Plainfielders will Compete.

There will be a shooting match between 20 men teams from Kings county, New York, and New Jersey, on December 5th. The "shoot" will take place in New Jersey. The entrance fee is $10 per man. The winning team takes all the money. Each man will shoot at 15 live birds. On the New Jersey team will be Messrs. Charles Smith and Neal Apgar of this city.

Oldest Man in Union County Dead.

Mr. John Brown, the oldest male resident of Union county, died yesterday of old age at 12.40 a. m. He was in his ninety-first year. He leaves a family of two daughters and one son.

SOMERSET COUNTY FREEHOLDERS.

A Meeting of the Board Held Tuesday.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met at Somerville on Tuesday. All the members were present.

Counsel reported that the Supreme Court had appointed A. A. Titsworth of Middlesex, Andrew M. Frost of Hunterdon and A. W. Cutler of Morris commissioners to establish the line between Somerset and Morris counties and that they would meet at Morristown Nov. 16. The committee appointed was given power in the matter to meet with the commissioners.

Bills aggregating $1,783.15 were ordered paid.

The election bills were referred to the Auditing Committee.

The Collector was authorized to borrow $10,000 in anticipation of taxes.

J. H. Suthpen was authorized to place hand-rails on bridges near J. H. Suthpen's and Jonathan Higgins'.

It May Cause a Big Strike.

A railroad man who stands high in the councils of the Federation of Railroad Organizations said Tuesday that the Grievance Committee which waited upon the Lehigh Valley officials has been met with a refusal by General Superintendent Wilbur, and that when the men applied to General Manager Voorhees he told them Mr. Wilbur's decision was final.

"This," said the informant, "will, I fear, cause great trouble within a month, as it means that there will be not only a strike on the Lehigh Valley, but on the New Jersey Central, and a tie-up most of the roads throughout the East."

A New Walk to be Laid at the Depot.

The flagging in front of the North avenue depot, on the railroad side, has been in a bad condition for some time. In some places the stones have been chipped off until holes remain.

The railroad company's surveyors made a survey yesterday afternoon for a new walk which is to be about two or three inches higher than the old one. It will also reach from the station to the railroad tracks. The present flagging only extends about half the distance to the tracks. A load of sand arrived this morning, which is to be placed under the flagging.

How the Vacancy will be Filled.

The vacancy in the office of county clerk, caused by Mr. Herbert Dane's death at Elizabeth, yesterday, as told in THE NEWS, is a matter that was immediately commented upon.

The election law provides that all vacancies happening in the offices of Surrogate, Sheriff and Coroner of the counties shall be supplied at the general election next succeeding the happening thereof. The Governor has power to appoint someone to hold office until the election next November, when it will be necessary to elect a successor.

Second Election District Voting Place Changed.

As the Emmanuel Baptist church congregation have commenced tearing down the office of the oil cloth factory, which they recently purchased to be used by them as a meeting place, the Second Election District Board of Registry and Election had to seek new quarters. City Clerk Bunyea has therefore received permission for the Board to meet at John Mair's house, corner of Richmond street and North avenue.

His Taxes Paid Now.

Some time ago John Moore of this city was arrested and sent to Elizabeth to the county jail for nonpayment of taxes To-day the taxes, amounting to $16, were paid to Delinquent Tax Collector Nash, and Moore was released.

40 Days for Being Drunk.

Only one prisoner, Thomas Smith, was arraigned in the city court this morning. He was charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Judge Codington sentenced him to 40 days in the county jail.

Effort to Defraud.

Efforts to defraud on the polls this year at last election by giving the people a large variety of nice new goods, at lower prices than ever before. He says that his goods always give satisfaction, and that the citizens of Plainfield appreciate a first-class house.

BRIGHTER PROSPECTS.

The Pond Machine Tool Company Sending Out Work.

The prospects at the Pond Machine Tool Works are becoming brighter. About 150 men are at work in the shop and foundry. A set of sand radial drills, occupying three cars, were shipped to Chicago, N. Y., to-day by the company. Six more car loads are to be sent as soon as completed.

Influence of the New Jersey Central in the Anthracite Coal Situation.

President Maxwell, of the New Jersey Central, has just given an exhibition of his power as manager of the anthracite coal trade by causing a suspension of operations throughout anthracite regions for two days a week. The collieries will be idle on Friday and Saturday of this week and will probably work but four days a week for the remainder of this month.

Mr. Maxwell suggested to the Lackawanna road that this was the proper course and President Olyphant agreed. He did President Olyphant, of the Delaware and Hudson. The Lehigh Valley also fell into line. Throughout the trade the disposition is to look to Mr. Maxwell for orders and his policy is to shut down the production and so maintain prices, which have lately been unsettled.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Opinions About the Elections.

I told you so.—Ex-President Harrison.

It was the laws in favor of race track betting and pool selling that gave the Republicans New Jersey.—Many Citizens.

Please excuse me.—Senator David B. Hill.

It was simply the result of a scare among the masses. The common people are like a man on a raft of sawlogs. As one log sinks he jumps to another and another, hoping to keep afloat. They will finally get on the People's party log, which is big enough to support them.—Jerry Simpson.

The Democratic effort to harmonize with Mr. Sherman on finance proved disastrous.—William J. Bryan, the Silver Tongued Democratic-Populist Representative From Nebraska.

Democratic Senator Martin of Kansas propounds an opinion worthy of Joe Bunsby. "It would look," says Senator Martin, "as if the people were dissatisfied with existing conditions."

Republican Senator Platt of Connecticut says that the election of 1892 was not a Democratic victory, but simply a Republican defeat.

Republican Representative Burrows of Michigan remarks. "The elections mean that the laboring people of the United States and the industrial interests of the country are unalterably opposed to the policy of free trade."

"The financial storm produced great disaster. The cry of bossism had great effect locally," says Mr. Boody, defeated Democratic candidate for mayor of Brooklyn.

Finally the great gun London Times itself condescends to comment on recent elections in the United States as follows: "The result will befelt severely by the rings and bosses whose power is so great in American politics. They will again learn that there are extremes to which it is unsafe to go."

The Level Head.

The possessor of the level head is the most fortunate man living just now. He is happier, even though a poor man, than if he were a millionaire who went all to pieces under the slightest excitement. It is emergencies such as this country is now experiencing that test the quality of every one.

Insanity, murder, suicide and robbery are rife around us. Great fortunes are toppling over like cardhouses. Not a day but some terrible accident or storm is reported that takes off sometimes hundreds of people in an hour. Hundreds of thousands of persons in America are wholly or partly dependent on charity for food. Cranks abound, made crazy by the pressure of the time, ready to shoot, and shoot to kill. Yellow fever still rages in Georgia, with no sign of immediate abatement. It is putting the truth only moderately to say that no generation since the beginning of this government has witnessed such trying months as those the country is now passing through.

Under the circumstances all anybody can do is to do the best he can for himself, help others as much as possible and wait. Above all, each one can keep a level head. He can keep himself from giving way under excitement and shooting or going crazy. Only the weak go to pieces when the day of trial comes. The strong pull themselves together, look misfortune squarely in the face, hold on to the handles and say: "Nothing can shake me, nothing down me, I will keep cool, find a way to live through this trouble and wait for good times to come again, as they surely will."

We have not a complete navy for ourselves, but it seems that the Brazilian government has had recourse to us to fit out a navy for it, that, too, in a hurry, since the rebel Admiral Mello had taken all its original one away from it. It shows that we are getting a reputation as war vessel builders and gunmakers. The fleet announced to sail from New York the middle of November for Peixoto's government consists of seven vessels. Two of them, El Cid and the Brittania, are merchant ships fitted out as cruisers. A third is the dynamite cruiser Destroyer, the other four are torpedo boats, and perhaps may be sailed. Meantime, Mello is said to be trying to buy boats here too. If he keeps the row he has made never to let Peixoto's fleet reach Rio, we may see yet some lively times off the coast near New York city.

Why woman suffrage carried so triumphantly in Colorado is explained by a dispatch that followed close on the heels of the one announcing the women's victory. It is that the honest miners of Colorado who form a large proportion of its citizens want in their home women, refinement, civilization and family life, without which no state, however rich, can be prosperous. Therefore they offer suffrage as an inducement to ladies to come to their commonwealth.

Still investors are at it, trying to find some cheap and clean motive power to take the place of steam and the attendant coal. One company is constructing in Pennsylvania a heavy freight locomotive or one to be run by electricity. The engine wheels are 56 inches in diameter. Meantime in Chicago, also at Neuchatel in Switzerland, gas engines are being used to propel street cars.

DID WILLIS USE FORCE?

He Was Given the Authority to Do So, It Is Said.

PERSUASION TO BE TRIED FIRST.

The Restoration of Liliuokalani Was on Condition That She Should Grant Full Amnesty to the Revolutionists—President Cleveland's Mysterious Trip.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The chief interest in the Hawaiian situation now surrounds the instructions given to Minister Willis and the contents of the cipher message which was received after the arrival of the Alkina. While the same answer regarding instructions to foreign ministers is made at the state department—"that instructions are never made public"—yet it seems that one fact in the affair regarding does come out. A number of people are now quite familiar with some important features of the instructions. There is no doubt of Minister Willis being instructed to make the restoration of Liliuokalani conditional upon full amnesty being granted to the men who engaged in the revolution and overthrew the queen.

Minister Willis, it is understood, was instructed to insist upon this because the president felt that the revolution would have occurred had it not been for the assistance and co-operation of this government through the late Minister Stevens.

Mr. Willis was instructed to say to these members of the provisional government that the president felt that he ought to protect them to this extent because he believed that they had acted for the authority of the United States, used by Minister Stevens, they would never have been led into revolution.

Hawaiian Revolutionists.

The instructions, it is thought, requested the minister to first call upon the queen and tell her the president believed a great wrong had been done her, and after intimating upon amnesty declare it the intention to again place her in control of the government. She was also to be informed that it was the desire of the president that she should placate those who had been instrumental in her overthrow and sustain herself by conciliating the influence of the United States. From the cipher dispatch it is believed that the state department has been informed that these conditions are satisfactory to the queen and had been accepted by her at the time the China sailed.

To President Dole, it is understood, Minister Willis was instructed to say that the president felt that in protecting the noninterference policy of the government he felt it necessary to decide the matter as if a dispute had been referred to him and restore the queen, and in sustaining the queen the president hoped to have the hearty co-operation of the members of the Dole administration, which he felt was entitled to commendation for what it had done to maintain peace on the islands since it had been in existence. After having righted what it considered a wrong done by this government, the United States would assume the policy of noninterference in affairs of other powers.

The Administration's Defense.

It is anticipated that there will be warm debates upon the subject when it comes before congress, which will bring out all the facts. The information upon which the letter of Secretary Gresham was based will soon have been made public, and while it is anticipated that the statements made will be disputed, it is claimed that they will be sub tantially such overwhelming evidence that the people are disposed to look at the matter fairly will be compelled to acknowledge that the administration could do nothing else but restore the queen.

There is no doubt but what the administration feels that it is on the defensive and that there is tendency, especially among Republicans and among many Democrats, to criticise its action. It is said that time will show beyond all doubt that it took the right course with such persistency in various quarters as if with the intention of creating the impression that there is a great deal in reserve for vindication purposes.

Those best qualified to speak for President Cleveland and Secretary Gresham, who have been willing to speak at all, have expressed great confidence that ex-Queen Liliuokalani had already been restored to her throne no later than last Wednesday. The equally confident assertions of those best acquainted with the character and resources of the provisional government that she certainly could not have been restored without force, and there has made no difference apparently in the confidence of those who claim she has been restored. This has led to the inference that Minister Willis' instructions were to use such force if necessary to accomplish the purpose for which he was sent, and that marines were probably landed in Honolulu on Wednesday of last week to strengthen the provisional government to the programme proposed.

Settling Tariff Questions Today.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The full Democratic membership of the ways and means committee has been called to meet today in general conference, and it is expected the meeting will have the effect of clearing up the popularity that has existed for months past with reference to several of the important schedules in the new tariff bill. The members of the committee who have been framing the provision for an income tax feel confident that the results of the series of conferences to begin today will enable the chairman of the committee to favors such a plan. The iron ore and coal schedules will be discussed, and the question of placing these two articles on the free list probably finally settled in the affirmative.

New Politicians, Not Doctors.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The president's visit to New York was the cause of considerable speculation, especially as everybody about the White House preserved such a mysterious silence upon the subject. It is now known, though, that the president has gone to New York to undergo another operation similar to that of last summer, but this is positively and officially denied at the White House. Among all the rumors the most probable story is that there was more or less politics in the visit, and the president desired to meet several prominent New York gentlemen. The meeting is said to have been arranged by Secretary Lamont.

Big Coal Estates at Low Ebb.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The last cash balances in the treasury available to meet the obligations of the government, stated at the close of business Tuesday night to have been $89,276,076, is nothing more or effects to be known figure at which the balance has stood within their recollection. They declare, however, that while their secretary seeing it so low, they feel no immediate or apprehension on the point, and particularly say that the government can act along without any kind of fear other debt until congress shall by legislation directs the replenishment of the public purse.

Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed: Connecticut—Hawthorne, C. V. Wiegand. Ohio—Lima, A. C. Chase.

New York Athens, Frank Nicholas; East Kendall, Mary E. Burrows; Hydesville, John Hanford; Lyons Falls, Mary L. Hescht; No. 45 Orchard, T. M. Webb; Roscoe, J. J. Maybee, and White Lake, C. A. VanWert.

THE PLOT DISCOVERED.

The Plan of the Barcelona Anarchists Was Not Fully Carried Out.

BARCELONA, Nov. 16.—It is stated that Judge Domenech has in his possession the names of all the persons who were connected with the bomb outrages at the Liceo theater last week and that the culprits are already in custody. It is said that the plot was arranged by several anarchists. The plan was not a whole, if it had been successfully carried out, would have involved wholesale destruction of life.

Each of the plotters was to carry a bomb into the theater and to station themselves in different parts of the gallery. One of the number was deputed to turn off the gas lights, and as this night the bombs were to be thrown. The man who was to put out the lights failed to find the meter, and one of his companions, growing impatient of waiting for darkness, threw his bomb down into the stalls. Judge Domenech earned a reputation as a prosecutor by stamping out the Black Hand criminal organization in Andalusia a few years ago, and the prisoners will undoubtedly be rigidly dealt with when they come before him.

STARVED HIMSELF TO DEATH.

A Religious Fanatic Tried to Get This Enough to Walk on Water.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Ira Krum, a religious fanatic living in Snyder hollow, in the Catskills, died there of starvation. According to the verdict of the coroner's jury, too much religion had unsettled his reason. During the last few months he became worse, claiming to have frequent revelations from God. In one of these visions, he claimed, he received the power to walk upon water if he would fast 40 days. This he did, but still found himself too heavy for the water. Then he prayed and began another fasting period of 13 days. During this time he died with these words to his brother, who is also a religious enthusiast, "Dick, I am going, but we will meet in the New Jerusalem traveling on the golden streets." He refused all medical attendance and left six young children without means of support.

A MINISTER ELOPES.

Pastor Bragg Leaves With the Organist of His Church.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 16.—The congregation of Calvary Methodist Episcopal church were shocked to learn that their popular pastor, Rev. W. H. Bragg, had eloped with Miss Jane Phelps, the organist of his church. Mr. Bragg is 42 years old and deserts a wife and family of five children. Mrs. Bragg, who is in delicate health, was under the impression that her husband was in the country on church business until the happened to find a note on his study table with these words:

"I am a ruined man. I am going away and will not return. Tell the children I am dead."

The church authorities held a meeting, but arrived at no final decision. Last week both parties were present at a church social. Miss Phelps rendered her services with alacrity between them. Miss Phelps sent a postal card to her father saying that she had gone with the clergyman.

Big Hardware Robbery.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Nov. 16.—An extensive robbery, involving the boldest job of burglary on record here, was committed in the heart of the city. CHICAGO THUGS BUSY.

Two Successful Raids Made by Daring Thieves.

THE ROOKERY ROBBERS GOT $21,000.

In the Very Heart of Chicago's Business District Held Thieves Handbagged Treasurer Drake and Escaped With a Bagful of Cash.

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—It has just been learned that P. P. Connor, treasurer of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway, was held up by three men on the towpath of the Illinois and Michigan canal Tuesday evening and a package of money amounting to $6,000 taken from him. He was returning to his headquarters from Lockport and had with him the money which was to be used in paying off the laborers. As he neared his camp three men sprang upon him, and he found himself looking down into two revolvers.

He complied with their request to throw up his hands, and the men took from him his money satchel and ordered him to walk on, without looking around. When he did turn, the men had disappeared.

The Rookery Robbery.

No clew has been found of the men who handbagged John A. Drake, treasurer of the Illinois Illinois Central railroad company, and robbed him of $21,000 in the office of the company on the ninth floor of the Rookery building.

Mr. Drake had the money in a little hand satchel and was preparing to go out on the road to pay the employees. He had first placed the satchel in the safe and was about to leave the office when two men stole up behind him and felled him to the floor with several hard blows on the head.

The robbery was the most nearly insensible, and ere he could move a finger in defence, he says, the thieves tore the satchel from his hand and rushed out of the office, slamming the door as they went. They rode down in an elevator very unconcernedly and made their escape.

Mr. Drake notified the central station as soon as possible, and soon every detective that Inspector Shea could spare was put to work on the case.

It was another daring, sensational robbery that has occurred in Chicago in many years. Occurring as it did in one of the best known office buildings in the city, right in the busy hours of the business district, the crime caused the greatest excitement.

Robbers Were Posted.

The early hour selected by the thieves is all that prevented their immediate capture. It has been the custom of the treasurer to pay the employees of the road in checks. Had the custom been continued, the startling robbery would not have been attempted in an office building, but within the past week the officers of the company decided to pay the men in currency.

From the story told by Treasurer Drake it appears evident that the robbers knew of this change. In some way they learned that Mr. Drake intended to call at the office, get the money and take an early train.

They must have followed him into the building, around the north corridor of the ninth floor, and waited until he had secured the money from the vault. They then sprang upon him, struck him several swift blows on the head with a weapon, presumably a sandbag, and when he sank to the floor insensible seized the precious handbag and successfully escaped into the street.

Where they went then the detectives are trying to find out. Every effort was made to keep the robbery a secret. Mr. Whitehead, general agent of the road, refused to give any details of the robbery, but finally said that the amount of money stolen was about $21,000. Mr. Drake has been with the Illinois Central road ever since it was organized. He and his father, the president, are part owners of the property.

Footpads In Massachusetts.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Nov. 16.—Two high way robberies were committed in this town, and the people are terrorized over the fact. One victim was W. F. Baker, a foreman for Ezra Read's jewelry woven company, who was attacked by two men just as he left the depot. He was struck with a slungshot and knocked insensible. He was robbed of $10 and he had in his possession. The other case was the assault of two Polish peddlers near the village of Dodgeville. Two men robbed them of all their money and their packs.

ON PRIVATE BUSINESS.

The President's Flying Trip to New York Still a Mystery.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The visit of President Cleveland in this city was short and mysterious. He reached Washington on his return early this morning. He came here accompanied by Secretary of War Daniel S. Lamont and drove immediately to the Victoria hotel, where a suite of apartments had been made ready for him. His movements were shrouded in mystery. He had breakfast in his apartments, and shortly after that he drove off in a carriage and was absent from the hotel for several hours.

It was thought that the president had some here for the purpose of conferring with prominent specialists in regard to an ailment from which he has been suffering. This, however, Dr. Joseph D. Bryant, Mr. Cleveland's physician denied.

He said that Mr. Cleveland was at present enjoying good health and that any statement to the contrary was untrue. Secretary Lamont also said that the president was not at all sick, but that he had simply come down here for a trip and to transact some strictly private business.

The president made a private call on some of his personal friends and took a stroll in Central park. He had lunch with Dr. and Mrs. Bryant at their residence, 64 West Thirty-sixth street. President Cleveland and Secretary Lamont returned to the hotel, where they spent an hour or two. The president, with the secretary and Mrs. Lamont, dined at Dr. Bryant's, after which the party repaired to the Broadway theater. Dr. and Mrs. Bryant and Mrs. Lamont drove to the theater.

Mr. Cleveland and the secretary walked. They strolled up Sixth avenue and across Fortieth street. Very few people recognized the president, and the few audience did not seem to recognize the distinguished party in the box of Manager T. Henry French for some time. Finally it was whispered about that the president was there. Mr. Cleveland watched the opera to the end and seemed to thoroughly enjoy it. As he passed into the street he was heartily cheered. He and Mr. Lamont stepped into their carriage and drove to Jersey City, where they boarded the 12:30 express for Washington.

TROOPS GUARD HIM.

Citizens Talk of Hanging the Dying Murderer of Miss Baugh.

ALLIANCE, O., Nov. 16.—The murderer of Miss Birdie Baugh by Curtin Davidson, who afterward cut his throat, created much excitement here, and a lynching is imminent. The murderer was reported as near death as not to be worth hanging, but there is a growing conviction among the men who are canvassing the lynching that Davidson is not dying, and that the physicians are giving out these reports of his precarious condition to pacify the people.

The threatening assembly of men at what were apparently designated points in the city during the evening convinced the local authorities that Murderer Davidson was in imminent danger of rope or bullet. The mayor wired Sheriff Krider to come at once from Canton. The sheriff arrived shortly afterward. The guard on Davidson was re-enforced, but in less than an hour the situation became so threatening that Company K of the Eighth regiment of Ohio's national guard was ordered out. They were stationed at the barracks under arms. The men who are eager to finish Davidson are not awed by the demonstration, urging that the soldiers are in sympathy with the scheme to swing the murderer. There is intense excitement throughout the city.

A Massachusetts Man Who Went Into New Jersey After a Bride Has a Lively Time After He Gets Her—It Was the Groom Who Fainted.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 16.—The failure of Nathan Lubjinsky to pay the customary "schatchen" fee to the person who first introduced him to pretty black eyed Sarah Rosenthal, who he made his wife at his father's home in this city, was the cause of turning his wedding festivities into scenes of riot and disorder which required the efforts of half a dozen policemen to quell.

Lubjinsky, who is a dry goods merchant in Worcester, Mass., became acquainted with Miss Rosenthal about a year ago through the efforts of an aunt of the young woman, who succeeded in making a match between the young couple, which culminated in their marriage Tuesday evening.

Nathan desired to celebrate the occasion with pomp and splendor, and engaged Grand Army hall in which to hold the reception. He distributed $300 to meet expenses of the entertainment. After the ceremony at the house 200 guests went to the hall to continue the festivities. After partaking of the sumptuous spread they asked for something more refreshing and were informed that everything in that line could be had at the bar.

Asked to Pay For Drinks.

A rush was made at once, but consternation followed when it became known that each guest had been asked to pay for what he drank. The groom said he had provided for everything to be furnished free to his guests.

An investigation disclosed the fact that Father-in-law Rosenthal had sold the privilege of the bar to outsiders and had taken care that nothing in the drinking line was furnished with the supper. He had, it was said, gone even further by having all the meals highly seasoned in order to create thirst among the guests. He had also rented the privilege of checking hats to another man for $5.

The pandemonium created by these disclosures was increased by the appearance of an elderly woman, who loudly demanded from the groom her "schatchen" fee of $25.

This was too much for Nathan, who fainted and dropped into the arms of his bride. A liberal use of cold water brought him back to a realization of his position. The aunt, failing to get her fee, started in to clear out the place. In a few moments men and women were pulling at each other like mad persons.

Lubjinsky hurried to a window, from which he shouted for the police. Half a dozen policemen hurried to the hall and after hard work succeeded in getting the infuriated persons quiet, but not until the groom had drawn up a note for $25, payable in six months, with which the aggressive aunt left the hall.

Although the festivities were continued, the guests were in a demoralized condition from the effects of the scrimmage they had gone through. Mr. Rosenthal refused to give any explanation of his connection with the bar privilege, but said, with a knowing wink, "Well, I guess I know my business."

Bank of England Irregularities.

THE WARRING KNIGHTS.

Hayes Opens the Fight With a Fling at the Powderly Faction.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—A fight was begun in the Knights of Labor convention between the Hayes and Powderly factions which is likely to continue with great bitterness during the remainder of the session. The members of the order are endeavoring by every means in their power to keep the details from the public, but enough has been learned to complete the story of the day's proceedings. The morning session was occupied in routine business and the appointment of standing committees for the ensuing year by General Master Workman Powderly.

Late in the afternoon General Treasurer Hayes presented a report of the financial affairs of the order for the year just passed, in which he is said to have flatly accused the general executive board with having misappropriated all or part of the fund subscribed for the benefit of the strikers at Homestead and Coeur d'Alene. This report, which was a direct fling at the Powderly faction, became the subject of an acrimonious debate, in which both parties indulged in almost unlimited abuse of one another.

A report was also presented by the general executive committee, the exact nature of which cannot be learned, but it is understood that certain accusations are made in it against what is known as the Hayes faction.

Grand Master Workman Powderly is engaged in marshaling his forces from all parts of the country preparatory to the big fight, which is expected to take place today. It is said that he has summoned his ancient enemies, Robert Buchanan and John Morrison, to his assistance, and that they will come here to try and reconcile the warring elements.

ASK THEM WHY?

Ask the men who are making imitations of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening, why they give up lard and try to trade on the merits of COTTOLENE? Perhaps YOU can guess why.

ASK HIM WHY?

Ask the grocer who attempts substitution, why he tries to sell an imitation when people call for that pure, palatable and popular vegetable shortening, COTTOLENE? Perhaps YOU can guess.

ASK YOURSELF WHY?

Why should not YOU use COTTOLENE, instead of lard or any other compound, for all cooking purposes? It has the highest possible endorsement; from Physicians as to healthfulness; from Cooking Experts as to superiority; from housekeepers as to economy. Use COTTOLENE and stick to it.

WOMAN AND HOME.

THE WIFE WHOSE TACT IS AN AID AND COMFORT TO HER HUSBAND.

Learn How to Rest—Don't Frighten the Babies—How to Properly Air Beds—The Disposition of Household Refuse—Mme. Necker's Conversations.

That the average woman does nothing but attend openings and consider the effect of various combinations of dress materials and bonnet adornments, while her poor, overworked husband drudges in the office or warehouse, is an altogether mistaken idea, notwithstanding the opinions frequently expressed by numerous brilliant writers who would seem to take delight in proving her a useless ornament to society.

The stylish skirt of three flounces is frequently made of small pieces that would never answer the same purpose in any other shape, and husbands could, if they would, tell of more than one natty spring or fall suit worn with jaunty indifference which would have been an impossibility but for the ingenuity of the woman who sits beside him chatting so pleasantly, the envy of other more tactless women, who never suspect that each of the three tiny ruffles on her skirt cover a "piecing," and the sleeves are a standing joke between husband and wife, for she has covered the seams that meet in every direction with the frills of old lace which she has had tucked away for the last two years, knowing that they would come handy. Of course she must manage every way rather than spend a cent on her own costume. But the best part of this does not appear to the casual observer, who only notices the well dressed couple and fancies they have at least a comfortable allowance of this world's goods.

There is a golden thread woven through all this pretty, pleasing life, which lasts long after the garments are threadbare. She has been so happy in the self denial; so grateful for the pleasure which enables her to appear so well dressed while she is, in a manner, helping to earn the handsome suit for the husband of whom she is so proud. She is proving her love for him in the most practical manner, and no wonder her face is wreathed with smiles as they enjoy the results of her industry and economy.

"And is the husband?" As he removes his coat and replaces it with the loose jacket he is wont to wear in the office there is a tender smile playing about his mouth, and an unusually careful adjustment of each fold of the garment his wife has pulled and patted into shape before he left home, as she told him how becoming the new clothes really were and how handsome he looked in them. No wonder he murmurs as he finally hangs up the coat:

"Bless the little woman! She's the best wife in the world."—Ham's Horn.

Learn How to Rest.

The art of good looks is a fine art indeed, and one that deserves the encouragement it seems to be getting on every side. Even those "aids to beauty" in the shape of lotions, cream and what not, which are so enthusiastically urged upon womankind from the back pages of every magazine and pamphlet in the land are not to be treated with toppling scorn. They have their place and use in the general struggle for loveliness. But why not back up these efforts for comeliness by common sense conducted throughout each day's wear and tear?

To begin with, women sit too much, and women stand quite too much. Nothing is so wearisome as "standing about," even to the well trained body that has been drilled into good poise, and sitting is not resting, however cleverly women may delude themselves on this point.

The young girl who desires to keep away crow's feet and that faded look we all know so well and to retain the suppleness and adorable bloom of extreme youth should, when off parade or duty, as the case may be, and in her own room, make the couch or the floor her habitual resting place.

Absolute repose comes to the tired muscles only when the body is in a reclining position, and absolute repose comes to the overstrung nerves only when the muscular system is perfectly at rest—relaxed.

The middle aged woman could, I am positive, woo back much of the freshness and litheesomeness of girlhood if she would be at a little pains to learn how to rest.

Five minutes of rest flat on one's back on the floor or on a hard, smooth couch are worth half an hour of so styled "rest" in an armchair or in that unreposeful tempter, the rocking chair.

Some one has said to the women of today, "Never stand when you can sit, never sit when you can lie down." This exhortation applied with some elasticity is the gospel of laziness preached so consistently by some lives, I do recommend frequent daily lapses into complete fallowness.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Don't Frighten the Babies.

It is no fairy story when it is said of children who are frightened into nervous and hysterical conditions simply because of the awful tales that are told them by nurses—maids whose conscience, if they have any, are so dulled that they feel no compunction in terrorizing their charges, and so long as they can get away for an hour's gossip or to listen below stairs they think nothing of the poor little frightened baby who lies in the dark with a fluttering heart, awaiting in tearful anticipation the awful things that will take him if he raises his voice in protest.

It is no wonder that children grow up to be cowardly men and women when at the outset their lives are shadowed by the untruthful statements of those who think nothing of converting even the best of natures into some horrible bogy for the simple purpose of frightening children almost out of their existence.

Many a mother little dreams that the child whom she thinks so good to go to sleep without rocking lies awake half the night in abject terror, owing to the tales that have been told it by ignorant servants or others to whom the care of the child is irksome. It should be a mother's duty to thoroughly investigate the daily intercourse between the child and its paid attendant, and make so certain of the kind of things that are being impressed on the growing mind that she need never have to look back to the time and wish regretfully that she had known the sort of training that was being given to her little ones.—St. Louis Republic.

How to Air Beds.

The most effectual way to air beds and bedclothing is to throw the clothes over a chair and lift the mattress partly over the footboard in a round, hoopskirt fashion, and if a feather bed is used, pull it off upon a chair. Then open the windows and doors, so that a current of air can pass through the room, and let it remain so for two or three hours or even longer. Beds thus aired are always healthful, and will induce sound sleep in their occupants. Each member of the family should be trained to do this daily, and never allowed to leave the room until it is so arranged. Boys as well as girls can be taught to do this, and they will realize the benefit of it through their lives and be sure to have their children trained in the same way.

A bed that is duly aired occasionally must contract impurities from the body and cannot be fresh and sweet. Some persons hang the pillows out of the window, and it is an excellent plan if you will first brush off the dust on the sill.

Once a week, or as often as possible, the year around, hang the bedding out on the line to air in the sun and wind. This is not only a sanitary precaution, but it is a great pleasure to have the bedding smell as it should. Then, if there is anything detestable and unwholesome, it is a bed rocking with the accumulated odors of washing, frying and stewing, which penetrate to the remotest corners of many houses. There is no need of it. Even the poorest can have fresh air, at least in the country.—Jeuness Miller Monthly.

Disposition of Household Refuse.

"If all housekeepers followed my example, the ashman would have most of his work cut out for him," remarked a clear headed woman as she dumped a bundle of odds and ends into a kitchen range. "I never have anything for the ashman except daily loads into complete fallowness. Occasions save the ashes and cinders. I have several reasons for this. One is that I extensively dislike the smell of kitchen refuse, and never allow it to stand about if I can help it. After my meal is prepared, I gather up everything that is useless and put it into the stove, where it is consumed, and the drafts full. In 15 minutes, all other things being equal, there will not be a scrap of objectionable material left. Everything is reduced to clean ashes. I consider it an actual waste to throw out the refuse into the garbage can.

"It is just so much good fuel to me, and I never think of doing it. I can keep a fire for hours on corncobs, potato parings, apple-cores, peachpits and similar stuff, which are ordinarily thrown away. I never allow the yard or areaway to be cumbered up by trash of any sort. Dust sweepings, leaves, dried-up flowers, everything goes into a range, and in the course of time finds its way into the capacious throat of the kitchen range. I find that this sort of thing makes quite a bit of difference in my coal bills, and that, to me, is an item of some importance."—New York Ledger.

Mme. Necker's Conversations.

A curious anecdote was told me lately about Mme. Necker, the clever mother of a still more illustrious daughter—Mme. de Staël. It seems that a certain M. de Chastellard was invited by her to a dinner party, and he, by some mistake, arrived at the house too early and sat down in the salon to wait till the hostess appeared. While waiting, he wandered about the room, and presently found behind a cushion a little book, which he took up, supposing it to be a book of extracts copied in. But, to his great surprise, he read a long resume of the subjects upon which Mme. Necker intended to talk the evening, and which were actually labeled, "Talk with Mme. So and So on such a thing," every expected guest being mentioned by name, with the particular topics suited to the tastes and caliber of each.

M. de Chastellard's own name was of course in the list, and he had just time to see what he might expect in the way of conversation at dinner, when the mistress of the house came in and he quickly put the book back, whence he had taken it. No one would think for a moment that a woman so much above the average as Intellectual Mme. Necker required such aids as the small pages of manuscript contained, and it only shows that it does not do to get too much behind the scenes under any circumstances whatever.—London Gentlewoman.

Fashion Notes.

Feminine "Don'ts."

Don't have many dresses, etc., at a time. Let quality—not quantity—be the motto of your wardrobe.

Don't run like a sheep in following extreme fashions or a particular mode, which may suit a few but certainly not the generality of women.

Don't neglect to put a certain amount of thought and care into the smallest details of your toilet.

Don't, unless you have a very long purse, buy startling and conspicuous garments, of which you will become heartily weary long before they are worn out.

Don't fail thoroughly to analyze yourself, in order to find what you can and what you cannot wear, and grasp your good and bad points.

Don't slavishly copy the costumes of your dearest friends. You have something individual in your appearance which must be emphasized into a personality that will cover, if necessary, a multitude of deficiencies.—Chicago Times.

Aimless Dreaming.

Dreaming is the poorest of all grindstones on which to sharpen one's wits, and to my thinking the rust of woman's intellect, the dullness of her mind, the "worst half bad" of her noblest possibilities, has been this aimless reverie, this rambling of the thoughts, this vagueness, which—when it is finished—is vacuity. Let us turn our gaze inward, those of us who are not thoroughgoing workers with brain or hand. What do we find? A mild chaos, a glimmering obsolete of fancies, an insipid brain soup where a few lumps of thought swim in a watery gravy of dreams, and as nothing can come of nothing what wonder if no brilliancy of achievement is to be ours, nor our future with its light? Frances Willard thinks that few women growing up under the present order of things can claim complete exemption from this grave intellectual infirmity.—Ram's Horn.

Hasty Prejudice Against Women Doctors.

Medicine as a profession for women is less than 50 years old. Dr. Mary Zakrzewska of Boston has recently published an interesting account of the early struggles of the pioneers in this particular field. Harriet Hunt and Elizabeth Blackwell were stirred by the idea that an important work might be done by well instructed medical women. The materialisation of this view resulted in complete social ostracism, impossible to be endured by any but the strongest and most courageous women. No woman doctor ever earned a living before 1860. No respectable family, in any commonly respectable neighborhood, would consent to a woman physician. Even when friends gave her shelter, a business card or sign was not allowed. The lack of practical training was really the stumbling block and the cause of all this prejudice.—Medical Record.

Rich Real Coverings.

Ladies interested in needlework are giving much attention now to bedspreads. White coverings are no longer sufficient for people who luxurious tastes. Some of the recently fashionable appointments of bedrooms have a real significance. In the first place the bed stands on a dais and commands the room, and in addition to its own richness of carving and inlay of precious woods, it is hung and covered with the richest of stuffs. A very elegant covering for one of these regal beds is of canary colored Tussah silk, embroidered with straggling branches of the wild rose, wrought with embroidery silk and fine crewels. The combination of the silk and crewel is a very happy one. The lining of the spread is turquoise blue silk and the edge finished with a heavy blue silk cord.—Good Housekeeping.

Artistic Salt Cellars.

Old fashioned salt cellars are here again, but in such artistic designs that we greet them as novelties. The silver cats and dogs, with their perforated heads, no longer stand guard over each plate at the table. Their successor is much more artistic. The very latest salt cellars are bought by the dozen. They are shaped like a pansy, with the curled over petals in frost tipped silver and gilt. The salt spoon is a tiny affair. Its handle is twisted gold, with the bowl set exquisitely shaped enamelled pansy, which looks like a nick in with a deep center. Tinted glass salt cellars encased in silver filigree are used by the ultra fashionable.—Exchange.

Useful Little Paper Bags.

Save the small paper bags carefully which groceries come in; they are useful in many ways. Slip the hand in one when you blacken the stove and you will not soil it. When flies abound, slip them over the clean lamp chimneys and fasten with a pin. After fruit is canned draw them over the can and label them plainly. The action of the light causes more fruit to spoil than any other one thing.

A Useful Toilet Table.

An exceptionally useful toilet table article is thus made and ornamented: Stuff a large cushion with curled hair, cover it with silk and then with any pale silk. Sew a narrow ribbon diagonally across one end and thrust metal hooks at each corner through it. Make four long pouches of the gathered silk at the four sides of the cushion to hold cuff buttons, scarf pins, etc.

There is nothing which the average husband better appreciates than a tidy, well ordered home, with a place for everything and everything in its place. On the other hand, there is no more potent source of domestic unhappiness than disorder in living apartments.

It pays well to do the mending before the article goes into the wash, since the process tends to which it is there subjected materially enlarge the holes, and it is better and more agreeable to wear if the washing follows the mending.

Felt is especially desirable for decorative purposes. A pretty table cover may be made of white felt, painted in old rose, bow knot and yellow chrysanthemum design. The border may be of fringe or done in ribbon loops.

The only ornament worn by the widowed Archduchess Stephanie of Austria is a locket containing on one side the portrait of her little daughter and on the other that of her mother, the queen of Belgium.

It is not considered correct to use the expression "making calls." One should say "paying visits." One goes to pay a visit, not to make a call.

A novelty in the embroidery line for cushions is one huge flower, without a trace of leaf, worked in the center of the square.

The World of Chance.

If young Higgor had not been reading "Lady Fitz-Maudlin's Dark Secret" until 2 o'clock in the morning, he would not have arrived at the dry goods store with his head full of Chesterfieldian and elegant phrases with which to regale the girls at the glove counter.

If he had not had those phrases in his head, he would not have made an impression of whose and education upon the wife of the proprietor, who happened to call in and pause near the bargain counter to ask a question.

If he had not made such an impression, the wife of the proprietor would not have expatiated about him to her husband for about 10 consecutive breakfasts.

If she had not thus expatiated, her husband would not have been led to place young Higger in a position where he could look through the eyes of his employer's boss, from which position he was successively pushed up to higher places and at last to a partnership in the firm.

If young Higger hadn't been reading "Lady Fitz-Maudlin's Dark Secret," he would still be salesman in the silk department. But the world says he is a man of wonderful enterprise and a Napoleon of finance.—Chicago Record.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1893. PRICE TWO CENTS.

TWO SMALL FIRES.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT CALLED OUT TWICE LAST NIGHT.

The First Time a Freight Car was on Fire, and the Second Call was for a Fire in a Store on the Somerset Street Bridge.

FIRE in a freight car filled with oil barrels called out the fire department at about six o'clock last evening. It was not known at first whether the barrels were filled or empty, and it seemed rather risky to get close to it. The barrels, however, proved to be empty. The car was on a siding near the gas house.

The car was opened and a stream of water thrown upon the flames. The fire was soon extinguished. The car and some of the barrels were slightly burned before the flames were subdued.

For a few minutes after nine o'clock last night there was much excitement on Somerset street, occasioned by loud cries of "Fire." Alarms were sounded in both city and borough, bringing out all the apparatus on both sides of the brook. In a few minutes about two hundred people gathered in the vicinity of the bridge. The cause of all this commotion was a fire in Mr. Ralston's candy store in the middle of the bridge block. It was caused by the explosion of a lamp, which set fire to the curtains and stand in the window. Two lines of hose were laid, by the Plainfield firemen, but before the water was turned on Chief Sloane put the fire out with a patent fire extinguisher.

After the fire was out the hook and ladder truck arrived upon the scene. Warren's steamer also arrived, and for a time the street was filled with engines, hose carriages and hose. The damage was slight.

BREVITIES.

—To-night the Scotch Plains Knights of Pythias will give an entertainment at Excelsior Hall, that place.

—New boards have arrived at the North avenue depot for the new walk to be laid between the tracks.

—The pay car on the New Jersey Central made its monthly visit to the employees along the road to-day.

—"God's Reaping" will be the subject of Mr. Crosby's address to men at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening.

—The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed church will hold an entertainment to-night.

—A few days ago Mrs. H. H. Hoffman of West Front street was gored under the arm by a cow. The wound, which is a very painful one, was dressed by Dr. Probasco.

—The Montreal Daily Star of Thursday, Nov. 14, gives a quarter of a columns to Tuxedo, which is playing in that city. This is the company Mr. George Thatcher of this city is in.

—In another column Mr. Charles Arnold, the hustling advertising park and manager, chickens, turkeys and ducks at cut prices. Mr. Arnold calls special attention to his Jersey pork and poultry.

—At the meeting of Mr. J. M. Harper's creditors, Wednesday afternoon, the proposition was made to them to accept 25 cents on the dollar. The First National Bank refused the offer and the meeting adjourned for further consideration of the matter.

—Work is still in progress on the cutting down of sidewalks to grade on West Fifth street. It seems a shame to cut down those noble old elms that have offered a shade for so many years to pedestrians. But down they must go to establish a grade according to the city map.

—The manager of C. Schepflin & Co's retail clothing store says that the reason several of the police and city conductors have such a smile of contentment adorning their faces is because they are clad in ulsters that cover them from head to heel. The ulsters are of Schepflin and Co's make.

An Electric Car Collides with a Hay Wagon.

At about half-past ten o'clock last night a hay wagon was run into by one of the electric cars, on West Front street. The horses attached to the wagon were, by the car, scared beyond control of the driver. The animals in plunging about managed to get one corner of the wagon across the track so suddenly that it was impossible for the motorman to avoid a collision. The damage was slight.

The Fox Escaped.

A large gray fox was purchased from James Longstreet, of Carr's Tavern, near Asbury Park, by W. W. Granatt, Geo. Patterson and others on Saturday last and turned loose for a chase. A big lot of men and dogs chased the animal all the afternoon but at nightfall returned without it; the fox made good his escape (good for him).

Hot Ashes Almost Cause a Blaze.

Yesterday afternoon an employe of Mr. Hooley's on Central avenue emptied hot ashes in the back yard, up against Mr. Casey's barn. Mr. Casey happened to be in the barn and saw smoke issuing through the cracks. He notified the man who had emptied the ashes, which were given a cold water bath.

$7,000 PLEDGED.

Toward the Fund to Finish the Y. M. C. A. Building.

A number of gentlemen interested in the building problem of the Y. M. C. A. met with the Building Committee of the Association by the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. J. Fisk, at their residence last evening. After hearing the report of the committee on the present situation, it was unanimously agreed that the work should not be stopped, but that immediate steps be taken to provide the amount needed by subscription. The gentlemen present pledged themselves to the amount of $7,000 providing the balance needed be raised. Among those present were:

Mr. Chas. Potter, Mr. S. A. Glass, Mr. Chas. J. Fisk, Mr. Pliny Fisk, Mr. J. W. Murray, Mr. C. W. McCutchen, Mr. H. A. McGee, Mr. J. D. Runyon, Mr. S. Osborne, Mr. J. W. Jackson, Mr. H. O. Newman, Mr. F. S. Kimball, Mr. A. S. Beers, Mr. W. L. Kaufman, Mr. Wm. D. Murray, Mr. D. E. Titsworth, Mr. E. N. Erickson, Mr. H. B. Newhall.

Contributions for the work may be sent to J. W. Jackson, Treasurer.

PERSONAL.

The Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, formerly of this city, has patented an anti-friction composition.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tunison of Fourth street was brightened last night by the arrival of a little daughter.

Letter Carrier Dunn, who is enjoying his vacation, left to-day for Hatlingen. Letter Carrier Hand resumes his duties on Tuesday next.

The Rev. Dr. Barnes preached at the Monroe avenue M. E. chapel last night. There was a very good attendance. Dr. Barnes will conduct the services there again to-night.

The Rev. Dr. Ketcham, formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian church, has gone to Kansas, where he will preach two Sundays in the First Presbyterian church of that city.

Mrs. Charles H. Flanders of Scotch Plains died this morning. She had been ailing for some time, but only confined to the house a short while. She was a sister of the Misses Henrietta and Harriet Manning of Perth Amboy.

The boys of Holy Cross church choir were entertained last night at the residence of the rector, Rev. T. Logan Murphy. The evening was pleasantly passed in the enjoyment of music, singing and the playing of amusing games.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Bunn of Evona celebrated the fifth anniversary of their marriage last evening. Guests were present from Plainfield, Westfield, Somerville and Bound Brook. The presents *consisted of beautiful and useful ar*ticles. Dancing was the feature of the evening's enjoyment. Music was furnished by Prof O'Reilly.

Probable Candidates for City Councilmen.

There is much speculation as to who will receive the nomination for the city councilmen at the coming Republican convention. In the First Ward Councilman Silas Bird will probably be re-nominated. There are two men talked of in the Second Ward—Councilmen Frost and Mr. Lovell. Councilmen Marsh will no doubt receive a re-nomination in the Third Ward. In the Fourth Ward Councilman Weber is a candidate for Councilman-at-large, and Messrs. Andrew McCardell, William Westphal, and Wood Titsworth are mentioned as probable candidates for ward councilmen.

The Awning Still Stands.

Mr. Tunison's wooden awning, which he recently had erected in front of his store on Watchung avenue, is still standing, although the Street Commissioner was ordered to tear it down by the Common Council at its last meeting. It seems that the awning was erected before the superintendent of Fire Marshal Doane, who gave permission to build it with wooden posts, when iron ones should have been used.

After Appointments as Marshals.

Last night applications were made to the Marshal Committee of the Borough for appointments as regular night marshals during the Winter. There were seven applicants, Isaac Lees, "Jack" Wilson, Mark Lees, Edward Leland, Daniel Connor, Conrad Broski and John Overland.

Two are to be appointed by the Borough Council, at a salary of $60 per month.

Collided with a Wagon Wheel.

Tuesday night as Patrick Powers was crossing West Front street, he ran into a hack being driven by James McCormick and was knocked down. The front wheel of the wagon ran over Powers's legs. Mr. McCormick says he called to *Mr. Powers to look out, but that he ap*peared to be intoxicated and walked up against the wheel. The matter is to be brought up in court.

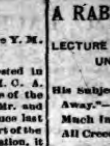
An all Day Prayer Meeting.

At the Y. M. C. A. rooms, to-morrow, arrangements have been made for an all day prayer meeting. There will be a change of leaders every hour from 10, 10 a. m. All ladies and gentlemen having the spiritual welfare of any young man at heart and desiring the prayers of God's people, are urged to make a request for prayers even though they can remain no longer than five minutes.

A RABBI AT ALL SOULS.

LECTURE LAST NIGHT IN THE UNITARIAN CHURCH.

His Subject was "Barriers Breaking Away."—His Talk Listened to with Much Interest.—He Believes that All Creeds Will Yet Unite.



HERE was a very good attendance at the lecture, by Rabbi Berkowitz, in All Souls' church, on Park avenue, last night. It is the first time that a Jewish Rabbi has ever occupied the pulpit of a church in Plainfield.

In introducing the Rabbi, the Rev. Dr. Clark said as Dr. Whiting, who was to have lectured, could not be present, he was pleased to announce that in the Rabbi one able to take his place had been secured.

The subject of Mr. Berkowitz's lecture was "Barriers Breaking Away." Among other things he said:

"The fact that I, a Jewish Rabbi, have been summoned to talk in a Christian church, demonstrates that the barriers in religion are breaking away. The history of the world is divided into two volumes—ancient and modern. From the earliest time man was always trying to obtain a point vantage above his fellowmen, and once having attained that coveted point, he put forth all his energies to sustain it. He has tried to keep others from taking possession of.

"In the old times cities were surrounded by walls, and the Jews kept by themselves and the Gentiles by themselves. All in the synagogue were Jews and all outside were called Gentiles. Jerusalem was captured and the name changed. Jehovah was dethroned and Jupiter put in his place. Then we see there were efforts of the very strongest kind to exclude all who were not of a certain religion. But exclusion has now, thank God, given way to expansion. Go back with me, in fancy, many years when *all Europe was in arms. Every settle*ment was a camp; every city a barricaded wall; every wall was as high as the hill top, and every highway was guarded. In your imagination, let a solitary man leave the Rhine and pursue the pathway to one of the castles on the hill. A baron and his guard leave the castle and pass along until they confront the traveller. They are armed; he is unarmed; they demand his money and it is given and he is allowed to pass. In this way he also passes the sentinel at the gate, and enters the castle. He is a Jewish merchant, carrying his wares and precious stones to sell. So you see commerce always makes the pathway for peace.

"Let us now open a new volume, the barriers have been overriden and all nations have done away with their walls. We ride over the great wastes, and tunnel the mountains, and use them as a means of international commerce. The World's Religious Exposition was the beginning of the breaking away of all religious barriers. The great dream of the Jewish prophet will yet be realized, that the nations shall not lift up their swords against each other again, and that every one shall sit under his own vine and fig tree, and know no fear. He must have referred to the social barrier, which is gradually passing away.

"Four thousand Jews and one thousand *tongues are busy in their different meth*ods working to undermine the old-time barriers. The hero of the present day is not a soldier. Our hero is a philanthropist; he is a General Booth; he is one who will travel for souls to a foreign land, and the old walls built of superstition is fast crumbling down.

"I hear that it created considerable comment when it became known that a Jewish rabbi was to occupy a place in a Christian church in Plainfield to-night. Some have, no doubt, held up their hands in holy horror. This is some of the hatred that keeps men apart. In this city there was organized a great educational society—the Chautauqua Society. I succeeded in having one of the ministers preach in my synagogue in New York last Sunday. It was formally opened by a former Plainfield pastor, Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut.

"Suppose you and I visit Russia together. We are both Americans. Your American would be inspired into, but your religion would not be mentioned. On the other hand my Americanism would not be inquired into, but because of my religion I would be given twenty-four hours to leave the place or be banished to Siberia. This is the difference in which people look at religion. I believe the day is coming in the twentieth century when all creeds will be united."

SUSPENDED FROM THE CHURCH.

Because They Voted to License the Linden Race Track.

James W. Hope and Melton C. Crane, members of the Linden Township Committee, have been suspended from the First Presbyterian church of Roselle. The reason given is that they voted for the licensing of the Linden track. The action suspending them was taken by the Board of Elders at a meeting held Thursday.

The Weather.

The weather to-morrow promises to be warmer and generally fair, followed by cloudiness.

CONVICTED THE WRONG MAN.

Found Guilty on Circumstantial Evidence and Another Man Confesses.

A case of circumstantial evidence convicting the wrong man has just come to light in Union county.

Louis S. Reibble, an ice dealer of Summit, was indicted by the Grand Jury for stealing 400 feet of wire fence belonging to Mrs. Elizabeth Langdon. He was tried and convicted of Tuesday last. The jury was out twenty-four hours, and during that time stood eleven to one for conviction. The obstinate juror finally gave in.

The chief witness against Reibble was Mrs. Langdon, who swore positively she saw him pull down her fence and carry it away. Reibble showed by witness that he was visiting his brother a mile distant, with his sister, at the time the woman swore she saw him steal the fence. The jury did not credit this evidence and convicted him. He was to be sentenced to-morrow.

William Brady Wednesday night called at Justice Kelly's office, in Summit, and made an affidavit that he was the thief. Brady said he stole the fence for spite, while intoxicated, and threw it into the Passaic river. He said his conscience would not allow him to see an innocent man suffer, and he decided to tell the truth and give himself up. The Justice held him for the Grand Jury. Reibble will be discharged.

Reibble says he will bring a suit for damages against Mrs. Langdon.

A CRYSTAL WEDDING.

Celebrated by Mr and Mrs. Henry Angleman Last Night.

A crystal wedding was held at the residence of Mr. Henry W. Angleman, on Madison avenue last night. A large number of friends were present and enjoyed themselves until a late hour. The host and hostess received many handsome as well as useful articles. The following were present:

H. G. Van Camp and wife of Newark, Geo. Welch and wife of Newburg, Mr. Hartpence and wife and Mr. David Moore and wife of Orange, Mr. Case and wife of Hoboken, Mr. Burgess of Flemington, Mr. George Allen and wife, and Mrs. Pine of Somerville, Mr. Geo. W. Taylor of Rocktown, Mr. Thorp of Sergeantsville, and Mrs. Raddin and daughters, W. Ayres and wife, Mrs. F. Wenzel, Mr. J. Hartpence, Mr. A. Mattis and wife of Plainfield.

Who Will Be His Successor?

As stated in THE NEWS yesterday Mr. Gerber's successor as county clerk will be appointed by Governor Werts and will hold the office until the November election. Several are named as the probable successor. Among those not connected with the office are James B. Marlow, ex-County Clerks Howard E. Cannon and John L. Crowell. The precedent established when County Clerk Vosseller died was the appointment of one of the attaches of the office, and John L. Crowell, who was Vosseller's deputy, was appointed. It is the impression that Mr. Werts will follow the precedent. There are two gentlemen in the County Clerk's office who are spoken of in connection with the probable honor of promotion. Mr. Herman Norman and Mr. Elmer D. Moffett. Mr. Norman was the law partner of Mr. Gerber, and has for ten years acted in the capacity of assistant county clerk, having responsible duties in the Court. Mr. Moffett has also been a chief clerk in the office for many years, and is thoroughly acquainted with the duties.

Something New Under the Sun.

Mr. William Hawage of Madison avenue has a prospectus of the Inter-national Bible Society, explaining that teachers reformed Bible with marginal references, an altogether new plan, consisting of parallel passages so arranged as to be explanatory of the text—scripture explaining itself.

The references are especially prepared and selected so as to present the best and most concise Biblical explanation of scripture, making this Bible, a Bible, and, with the best possible minimum of human thought in connection with it—a concordance in one volume.

There is a valuable manual accompanying it which has been specially prepared by the best European and American scholars, among whom are two citizens of Plainfield, Bishop Vincent and Dr. Hurlbut. It abounds in the most advanced thought and experience in the study of the scriptures on all subjects of Biblical knowledge—historical, chronological, geographical, textual, etc.

A Stone Thrown Through a Glass Door.

Last night as some people were rushing to see where the fire was, after the gong had sounded, a stone was hurled through the glass door of the Sherman Cottrell Company, making a good sized hole in the glass, besides cracking it from corner to corner. Fred Durand was arrested on suspicion and taken before Judge Coddington, where he pleaded not guilty. He was released on $100 bail to appear for trial Saturday, Nov. 25.

Meeting To-Night of the Woman's Relief Corps.

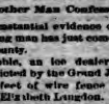
HOW 'TIS DONE IN JAPAN.

IMITATION OF A JAPANESE WEDDING LAST NIGHT.

At the Crescent Avenue Church, Under the Auspices of the Boys' Mission Band.—It was Conducted by Mr. Mitsuye Oi.



OR the benefit of the Boys' Mission Band, Mr. Mitsuye Oi, of Tokio Japan, conducted a Japanese entertainment under the auspices of the Boys' Mission Band, in the Crescent Avenue church, last night. The novel entertainment included a representation of a Japanese wedding, and of home life in the Island Empire. Between the scenes Mr. Oi gave a description of the one following, that the audience might imagine they were viewing a regular Japanese wedding. Mr. Oi, in a short address before the last scene, said, Japan though only having been open to foreigners a few years has attained nearly everything. Of your 50,000,000 people one fifteenth have gone to foreign nations. There is indeed one missionary to every 700 people and 300 ministers to 40,000,000 people.

"The Japanese are sometime without bread and starve. How can these people be saved? Christ died for sinners, and they shall be saved by God. But how can they be saved if they do not know God? In 1872 there was one church in Japan, to-day there are 200 of which three-fourths are self supporting."

The speaker also said that in his country it was considered a very important thing to get married, and, that the wedding ceremony lasted from eight in the evening until six the next morning. The following is the cast of characters:

How Walks are Being Laid on Fourth Street.

Recently in East Fourth street property owner had a new flag walk laid in front of his place. Before having it laid he went to the street Commissioner and accompanied from his own exact position the walk must occupy. This the Street Commissioner informed him was four feet from the curb line. To-day a walk is being laid at the end of the above-mentioned walk by his next neighbor. It is being put down but 18 inches further out than the first man's walk, thus making it look very irregular. It is said the Street Commissioner did not give permission to lay the walk in that shape.

Mr. Pearce's Employees Enjoy a Dance in the Barn.

In Mr. T. B. Pearce's barn, on Rockview avenue, last night, his employees gave a dance and entertainment to their friends. About sixty persons were present. There were songs, recitations and dancing. About midnight all partook of refreshments. The music for the occasion was furnished by Prof. O'Reilly. Mr. Pearce's coachman, Thomas Boorham had charge of the festivities.

New Houses in the Borough.

THE NEWS has before mentioned the addition to the number of private houses in the borough by the erection of one by Mr. N. B. Smalley on Mountain avenue. The first story, of blue stone, is finished. The other story and a half will be of wood.

Ground was broken yesterday for a new house on Grandview avenue, adjoining Mr. Edgar Schenck's pretty house, for Mr. Jacob Vechi.

Still Looking Upward.

The Food Machine Tool Works yesterday received more orders, several of which are from the government. The prospects of more business are improving. The number of employes have increased to 200.

Be Thorough.

In lawful pursuits, whatever you do—building a house, making a bonnet, or a coat—be honestly earnest in all of your work. Never attempt anything that is not right. Never use cheap, flat, dark or burned, or such thing constantly; always be thorough.

You hear a great deal about oatmeals as good as H-O. Do you ever hear that H-O is as good as some others?

Two Daring Robberies in New Brunswick.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 17.—Mrs. John Buchanan, wife of the former owner of the Park House at Perth Amboy, while watching the unveiling of the firemen's monument, was robbed of a pocket-book containing $700.

As Mrs. Tice, the wife of a conductor on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was getting on a train to go to Rahway, just after the monument unveiling, two men crowded against her on the car step, one in front and one in back, and turning suddenly upon her, robbed her of a diamond pin, a gold hair-pin and her pocket book. It was all done so quickly that the men escaped before she could recover from the shock.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Brazil.

The United States may be involved in the Brazilian imbroglio in two ways: First, the undoubted enlisting of Americans for service in Peixoto's newly bought warships, done on the quiet though it is, may bring on a difficulty. Second, it is observed that the agents of the rebel Mello now in this country are endeavoring to purchase supplies are well supplied with money. South American revolutionists are always bankrupt to begin. Where, then, does the rebel Mello get his money if not from Europe?

It seems not only possible but probable that behind the Brazilian revolution is a movement to restore the empire and seat young Prince Louis of Eu upon the throne. This young man is a lieutenant in the Austrian army and nephew of the late Dom Pedro. Both the Bourbon and Austrian sympathies, not to say those of all the monarchies of Europe, would be in the direction of restoring the empire and putting this young man upon the throne. Any open attempt toward this end the United States would feel bound to resent and prevent. The British minister at Washington says officially that Great Britain will under no circumstances give any aid to Mello. The British minister at Rio, on the other hand, declares privately that England would be glad to see the empire re-established.

Meantime, when the historian describes this phase of Brazil's existence, will he ever be able to find out really what the Peixoto rebellion was about? Usually in the South American republics matters would run along with comparative smoothness if the army and navy would agree to obey the congress. But they will not. They desire to boss the president and congress and endeavor to do so by force. They are not educated beyond the idea of a military despotism. In Brazil it happens just now that the navy is in revolt against Peixoto, while the army mostly sides with him. Mello has no army, Peixoto has no navy, so thus far they have not been able to do much else than sit back and glare at one another.

A curious custom exists in most of the South American republics of allowing by courtesy a retiring president to nominate his successor. The Brazilian congress, in order to oppose Peixoto's design, passed a law that a vice president should not be eligible to succeed a retiring president. This law Peixoto vetoed. A motion was then introduced into the Brazilian congress to impeach him. It failed to carry, however. Thereupon Admiral Mello broke out into open rebellion and attempted to blockade Rio Janeiro with a fleet of six vessels. He bombarded the city. Peixoto fled at first, but soon returned. The alleged charge of Mello against Peixoto is that he is using the army to strengthen himself and make himself a military dictator.

Previous to the rebellion of Mello there had been in one of the Brazilian states—Rio Grande do Sul—a revolt, which, however, the Peixoto government seems to have been able to suppress without much difficulty, but it began again when Mello revolted.

Among the torpedo boats fitted out at New York for Peixoto are the two fast steam pleasure yachts Feiscen and Javelin. They are being fitted up for a purpose their owners and builders little dreamed of when they were first constructed. One of them, the Javelin, belonged to Norman L. Munro, the fiction publisher.

The Ericsson dynamite cruiser Destroyer carries a gun which is to be fired under water. Neither submarine guns nor dynamite guns have as yet been tested in actual warfare, and if it comes to fighting all the world will learn the value of them without any preliminary tests. The contingent which sails for Brazil from America has already received the name of the torpedo fleet.

The purchase of war vessels, arms and ammunition by the Brazilian government from private American citizens has brought up the question whether citizens can make such sales without involving the government in international complications. It has been settled that there is no law whatever to hinder them. Our citizens may not enlist on foreign ships of war in waters within the jurisdiction of the United States, but they may make any of the implements of land or naval warfare and sell them to anybody they please. For instance, the same firm of American citizens might sell ships or guns to both Peixoto and Mello at the same time on the go-it-husband-go-it-bear principle, and the United States would not be involved in any way, neither be called on to interfere.

It is a devilish plan the rebel Brazilian admiral has formed to destroy the fleet Peixoto purchased in New York. It is said that Mello is attempting to buy two powerful seagoing tugs that can be fitted with rams. Then, after El Cid leaves New York with the rest of the vessels purchased by Peixoto, these two rams will steam toward El Cid as if to offer to tow her or some of the smaller vessels. When they come near enough, they will throw their powerful bows against her with all their force and drive clear through and run her down out in the open sea with all on board. The same method will be tried with the other vessels. This is frightful, but this is war.

THE SOUTH PROTESTS.

A Word of Warning to the Tariff Adjusters.

FREE IRON AND COAL MEAN RUIN.

"We May Not Always Kiss the Hand That Smites Us," Was the Message of the New South to Chairman Wilson of the Ways and Means Committee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The new south has sounded a warning to the ways and means committee. It came from the manufacturing interests of Alabama and Tennessee, whose representatives were refused a formal hearing by Chairman Wilson some days ago, but who secured the privilege of making an informal argument before the Democratic members of the committee. As the delegations present were also Democratic in politics, the conference was very amicable until near the close, when the chief spokesman of the southerners broadly intimated that if iron ore, coal, lumber, rice and sugar were all to be placed on the free list under a Democratic administration, "the Democrats of the south might cease to kiss the hand that smites them."

The delegation which appeared before the committee is interested especially in the iron ore and coal industries—the great manufacturing commodities of the south—and was composed of F. G. Bush, president of the Mobile and Birmingham railroad and of the Clifton iron company; Nat Baxter, Jr., president of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Railway company; Colonel Mc Droy, president of the Alabama Mineral Land company; R. F. Moore, president of the Birmingham Commercial club; Chappell Cory, secretary of the Birmingham Commercial club; F. Y. Anderson, land commissioner of the Alabama Great Southern railway, and Dr. W. Phillips of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Railway company. Mr. Bush acted as spokesman for the delegation.

It Means Ruin to the South.

He declared that he believed it was not the intention of the Democratic national committee in Chicago, in forming its platform, to declare a policy which would prove ruinous to any of the great interests of the country. Neither did he believe that it was the intention either of the president or the committee to willingly do any such injustice.

"You can base your argument," interrupted Chairman Wilson, "on the hypothesis that neither does the committee nor the Democratic administration desire to do anything to endanger any of the great interests of the country."

"I am glad of it," said the speaker. Continuing, he protested against the injustice of placing iron ore or coal on the free list. The protection on iron ore and coal had gridironed Alabama with railroads and developed these industries until Alabama now annually produces 1,000,000 tons of pig iron and 5,000,000 tons of coal.

"In case of free ore, where would you be distressed by it and where would it come in competition with you?" replied Mr. Wilson.

"We would be cut out of any sale of iron in the eastern states. The effect would be to restrict our market to the south and exclude us from the eastern market, where we would have to meet the low competition of Cuban and Spanish ore low down."

"If this committee, as reported," continued Mr. Bush, "is to put lumber, rice, sugar, coal and iron ore on the free list, then they of the south might as well give in. It would be the deathblow to southern prosperity." In conclusion Mr. Bush made a strong plea. "We are not politicians," said he, "We are plain business men. We are Democrats from principle, and we do not expect to suffer in the house of our friends. It is a Missourian question to ask how long will we continue to kiss the hand that smites us. If you bring in your bill with the articles on the free list, you will, I think, have a very democratic senator and representative from Alabama opposed to it."

Absolutistion Disappointed.

There is disposition in the administration circles to say but very little on the subject of Hawaiian affairs pending the arrival of the next steamer. It seems to be the course of all officials to say nothing further, although it is confidently asserted that when the news from Hawaii arrives the position of the administration will be set forth in a favorable light.

From those who are in touch with the White House comes the intelligence that the administration is disappointed that the conservative element in Hawaii has not awakened to sympathy with its act, which is claimed by the administration to be one of justice to Queen Lil. There has also crept into the department of state a feeling of doubt as to whether the provisional government will yield so readily to the mere suggestion of the minister of the United States as was hoped when he was dispatched to Honolulu.

It is learned that the forces of the provisional government, though small, are well organized and disciplined and are most of them sharpshooters. It is said that there are 2,000 picked men provided with arms in Honolulu and enrolled in drilled companies.

They have been trained for two months past as a safeguard against any royalist uprising in the islands, since it was realized that the provisional government must depend upon its own resources without hope of aid from the United States. These companies are made up of white men largely. Eighteen rapid fire guns are included in the militia equipment, the arms being Winchester rifles. This force would be superior to what the men-of-war at Honolulu could put on shore. But no one seems to believe that any resistance would be made should the marines actually be landed.

Cuttlale Urged to Resign.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The Press prints today a Washington dispatch which says: "A report is current of a serious disagreement between Mr. Cleveland and Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle. This report cannot be confirmed further than that it is an ascertained fact that Mr. Carlisle has been fairly deluged of late with letters urging his immediate resignation as secretary of the treasury and the entire management of his withdrawal from the cabinet because of his disapproval not only of Mr. Cleveland's financial policy, but also of his foreign policy, especially in the treatment of the Hawaiian question.

Clarkson Not a Senatorial Candidate.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—It is stated positively by a friend of General Clarkson that he is not in any sense whatever a candidate for the United States senate from Iowa.

Willis a Naval Commander Yet.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—In anticipation of the abolition of offices which would take effect should the provisional government give Mr. Willis his passports, the administration adopted the extraordinary course of providing him with an independent authority to command the naval forces of the harbor of Honolulu.

Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The fourth class postmasters appointed were:

New Jersey—Perkasie, Edward Kuehl, New York—Canton, G. B. McMillan; Granville, W. E. Clark; Canajoharie, James Doyle; Harrisville, Fred E. Palmer; Prospect, C. D. Harris; Richmondville, E. Isaac Curtis, O. A. Sheppard; Washington Mills, J. Simmons, and West Camden, H. F. Winchester.

Picking Still Commands at Rio.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Secretary Herbert is quoted as saying for the first time that there will be no immediate change in the command of the naval forces at Rio, which devolved on Captain Picking of the Charleston when Admiral Stanton was recalled about a month ago.

Steel Will Make the Stamps.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Bids for furnishing adhesive postage stamps to the government during the four years commencing July 1, 1894, have been opened at the postoffice department. Charles F. Steel of Philadelphia is the lowest bidder.

Satolli In His New Home.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Archbishop Satolli, the papal delegate, moved in from the Catholic university and took possession of the handsome new home which has been secured for him at the corner of Second and I streets.

Cherokee Commission Instructed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—The Cherokee commission has been dissolved owing to the exhaustion of the appropriation for its work.

GOV. MATTHEWS' CRANK.

Man Arrested Who Has Also Annoyed the Protégent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 17.—Recently Governor Matthews has received numerous letters from a White county man who signed himself Hiram Collins and conveyed by his threats that he was a crank of a bad variety. A few days ago a letter reached the governor from Collins which was full of vile language, in which he (Collins) asked for relief. He stated that he was not a South or a Guiteau, but that he would raise h—l if something was not done in his behalf. The governor then decided to hand Collins off and began an investigation.

It was learned that Collins was a crank of a dangerous disposition, who had also been writing letters of a like character to President Cleveland.

He had endeavored to buy a pistol, but the merchants refused to sell him one. It was feared that the idea to call on the governor Tuesday night was to put into execution. Proceedings were instituted by the authorities of White county, and the governor was notified that Collins had been taken into custody at Logansport.

How England Deals With Africans.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Dispatches received at Liverpool say that the natives have become of the troubles with the natives in West Africa. They say that the British barque Bonetta, assisted by a land force, attacked and bombarded Ourika, on the Old Calabar river, and that many natives and one British officer were killed. The chief of the Ourika natives gave himself up and was hanged.

A Moonshiner's Revenge.

LAFAYETTE, Ga., Nov. 17.—John Sheehan's house, 12 miles from here, was blown up by dynamite. The house was wrecked. Sheehan and his wife, who were in bed, were hurled 50 yards, but both escaped serious injury. Sheehan is a deputy marshal and has been raiding illicit distilleries. The dynamiter was undoubtedly a moonshiner.

A Reminder For the War Lord.

BERLIN, Nov. 17.—The evening papers made favorable comments upon the emperor's speech opening the reichstag. The Vossische Zeitung, however, referring to the passage in the speech dealing with the new military law, recalls the fact that the reichstag refused, a year ago, to sanction the bill on which that law was founded.

Two Wanted to Resign.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Standard, in its financial article, says that the directors of the Bank of England held a protracted meeting. It is reported that there was a long discussion over the question whether the alleged resignation of two members of the board should be accepted.

An Extraordinary Amalgamated Society.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 17.—For the first time in the history of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers an extraordinary session is being held here to consider matters of vital importance to the organization.

Wrong Man In the Mayor's Chair.

POWDERLY'S AMBITION.

Wants to Be Chief of the Amalgamated Labor Unions.

HAYES WILL BE ASKED TO RESIGN.

The Labor Conference Now Going on In Philadelphia to Be the Beginning of a Grand Revival of Workingmen's Organizations—Politics Will Be a Factor.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 17.—The row in the ranks of the Knights of Labor, which started with the filing of the report of Grand Treasurer Hayes, was continued with great bitterness. There are no evidences of an amicable settlement.

The morning session of the convention was taken up with routine business. In the afternoon the Hayes action was renewed again, and very bitter addresses were made by A. W. Wright and John Devlin of the general board disclaiming the charges. Mr. Wright accused Mr. Hayes of having a false system of bookkeeping, and said that if any unlawful expenditure was made it was owing to that fact. He intimated very strongly that Mr. Hayes had been carried away by his enmity to the general master workman to the extent of deliberately falsifying the accounts so as to mislead the delegates.

Devlin Defends Hayes.

Mr. Devlin continued in the same strain, reviewing the circumstances attending the Knights' assistance to the Cœur d'Alene and Homestead strikers, and he said that, even if all the money collected had not been sent them, the balance was simply held as a loan to the organization, to be used hereafter as a part of the strike fund.

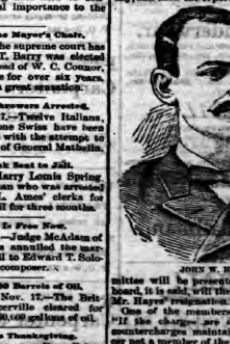
At the morning session resolutions, whose chief features were as follows, were referred to appropriate subcommittees: Recommending political action by members in the interest of organized labor; advocating the restriction of immigration so as to shut out undesirable persons; that the saloon clause of the constitution which prohibits saloon keepers from becoming members of the order be modified so that barkeepers may be admitted under certain conditions; concerning the relations of the order with several establishments upon which boycotts have been declared; that consideration of the amalgamation of all into one powerful organization; providing that general officers be selected from four parts of the country—north, south, east and west; on special work in New England and providing for the consolidation of the order there into one district; urging the enforcement of the contract labor law; asking for an increase in the pay of letter carriers; on the organization of a political body to be known as the United Army.

When the assembly adjourned in the evening, the delegates were as noncommittal as on previous days. The scene in the corridors, however, was not as animated as usual, the delegates as a rule seeking the seclusion of the upper floors or privacy of committee rooms. Members of the executive board gathered in Conwomaugh Jarvis' room, where they were closeted an hour.

Accounts Reported Correct.

Members of the finance committee were secreted in Mr. Hayes' room with a guard at the door. Here for two hours they were engaged in scanning his accounts. Subsequently it was stated that the finance committee met and agreed that the charges were not well founded.

It is understood that Mr. Powderly will occupy the floor for the opening of all today, and then the report of the finance committee will be presented. The executive board, it is said, will then formally demand Mr. Hayes' resignation.



JOHN W. HAYES.

Later in the afternoon the members of the board said, "If the charges are dismissed and the countercharges maintained, a general officer not a member of the general board will be forced to resign."

Mr. Hayes, it is said, will have documentary evidence to back up his charges before the general assembly today. A strong effort is being made to secure an organization in order to make it a pivot in the proposed consolidation with other labor organizations. That Mr. Powderly aims to be the head of the amalgamated orders there is no doubt.

One of the leading Knights said that the outcome of this assembly will be the beginning of the greatest movement for organization of labor that this country ever saw. Whether or not Mr. Powderly will be the head of the movement he could not say, but he did not think that any one could wield more power. The power once accepted by Mr. Powderly, said he did not think he would be for the good of the organization to have so much power vested in one head.

ELECTRIC CANALBOATS.

Test Is Being Made Today With Trolley Wires at Rochester.

ALBANY, Nov. 17.—Superintendent Hannan of the public works department says that today's trial of electricity as a motive power on the state canals has attracted attention all over the country. The test is being made at Rochester. The plan that is being tested today provides for the use of trolley wires suspended on either side of the center of the waterway from poles erected along the banks.

The electric current passes from these to a motor in the stern of the boat through flexible wires attached to travelers, which move on the upper side of the trolley. The flexible wires are placed on an automatic reel on the deck of the boat, from which they pay out and thus provide for the lateral motion of the boat. The motor is attached directly to the propeller shaft, and the whole equipment is said by experts who have examined it to be very compact and simple.

This is the first application of electricity power to the propulsion of commercial vessels, although it has been very successfully applied to pleasure boats. The experimental canalboat is christened the Frank W. Hawley of Rochester, in honor of the vice president of the Cataract General Electric company, under whose direction and supervision this first commercial application of electric power is made. The tests will be witnessed by Governor Flower, Comptroller Campbell, Superintendent Hannan, State Engineer Schenck and several other state officers.

Incendiaries In Fall River.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 17.—This city was thrown into a state of excitement by two more incendiary attempts to start a conflagration in the center of the city. Fire was discovered in the rear of 67 South Main street and squelched by the department with small loss. Half an hour later a second blaze, which had gained considerable headway, was discovered in the rear of No. 27 on the same street. This was also extinguished with little damage. In both cases a large quantity of burlap had been saturated with coal oil and then fired. Extra police are now patrolling the district.

Hidden For Ten Years.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 17.—Albert W. Southwick, whose disappearance 10 years ago created such a sensation and whose whereabouts since has been the subject of no end of speculation and a lengthy lawsuit, it is now claimed is in the vicinity of this city. Mrs. Southwick, who has twice brought suit for $30,000 damages against her mother-in-law for alienating her husband's affections, has declared all the time that the mother had her son in hidding, and if the story of his being seen near here is true it appears that she has grounds for her statement.

A Government Defeat.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—In the house of commons Mr. McLaren, member of the Crewe division of Cheshire, moved that a clause be added to the parish councils bill enfranchising all women, who would be entitled to vote in local government elections under the same rules pertaining to men, and although it met with government opposition Mr. McLaren's motion was adopted by a vote of 147 to 126, amid opposition cheers and laughter.

Shot In a Burning Mine.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The explosion of a paraffin lamp in the engine room of the Shumeckie-Kirkwood mine at Airdrie, in the county of Lanark, Scotland, set fire to two of the shafts. Only 52 of the 200 men usually employed were on duty. These 52 are entombed in the pit and are in danger of being suffocated, as the ventilating fans are stopped. Later—The fire in the colliery was extinguished, and all the miners were rescued.

Dervishes Killed Saleh Bey.

CAIRO, Nov. 17.—Osman Azrak, at the head of 300 dervishes, left Dongola recently and attacked Murat Wells on Nov. 10. A desperate fight followed and lasted for 24 hours, at the end of which time the dervishes were repulsed, with the loss of 29 killed. Egyptian Commanders Ross, Saleh Bey and Khalifeh Bey and 11 others were killed.

Made His Will Before Killing Himself.

HE SHOT AT RICH FOLKS

Diners at Delmonico's in New York Under Fire.

FUSILLADE BY A DANGEROUS MAN.

He Deliberately Fired Five Shots Into a Crowded Restaurant—No One Was Hurt. Said He Wanted to Teach the Rich a Lesson.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Five bullets were fired by a crank into the restaurant at Delmonico's, Fifth avenue and Twenty-sixth street. The large plate glass windows on the Fifth avenue side were demolished. Although there were many persons in the restaurant, not one was hurt. The man who did the firing was caught and taken to the Thirtieth Street police station, where he gave his name as George A. Roeth. The only explanation Roeth gave for his act was that the rich people did not treat the poor fairly, and he wanted to scare them.

Roeth made his appearance on the sidewalk on Fifth avenue, near Twenty-sixth street, just before dinnertime. From the pavement he could see the diners feasting at the tables in the restaurant.

His presence aroused no attention until he pulled a revolver of a large caliber from his pocket and began firing into the restaurant through the windows.

Five Shots Through the Windows.

He fired three shots as rapidly as he could cock the weapon and pull the trigger. The first bullet passed through the fourth window north of the entrance, shivering the glass and scattering the fragments and splinters over tables near by. The second went through the second window north of the entrance. The third bullet struck the ironwork of the storm doors outside the entrance and glanced harmlessly off.

The restaurant was well filled. Most of the tables were occupied. The first shot startled the diners, and there was a rush to get out of harm's way.

They ran hither and thither in fear and excitement, without waiting for their hats or wraps. The gentlemen hurried the ladies out of the restaurant. The waiters and attendants were panic stricken and hid behind chairs and under tables. The crank, with the revolver still in hand, stalked through the storm doors and into the vestibule of the restaurant.

All fled out of his way, and for a little while he held possession of the place. For a moment he stood in the doorway, with a wild look in his glittering black eyes, glaring at the people who were making their escape from the place.

Then he raised the revolver and fired in the air, and the bullet lodged in the ceiling of the vestibule. The fifth shot he fired into the restaurant, which was almost deserted by this time.

The firing attracted a large crowd to the scene, but for a time no one interfered with the man. There was a line of carriages along the curb in front of Delmonico's, but none of the drivers seemed anxious to take the risk of tackling the maniac. Engineer Felix Jewel of the fire department came along and held Roeth until a park policeman arrested him.

Wanted to Scare the Rich.

On the way to the station house Roeth said he had done right. He was glad that he had not hurt any one. He only intended to frighten the people whom he saw in the dining room fenstingf like kings, while there were thousands of poor workingmen going about hungry, without a cent in their pockets. Those people in the restaurant, he said, never earned a cent in their lives, and he thought it a good plan to scare them.

Sergeant Lane, before whom he was arraigned at the police station, asked Roeth what he meant by his conduct. He answered:

"I don't like the way the rich people are treating the working class, and that's why I got the revolver and bullets, with the idea of frightening the rich people into changing their ideas and to make them give work to the poor people. I thought I'd give them a good scare."

Drank Poison and Died After Her Friend's Funeral.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 17.—Last Tuesday Mabel Hipple, aged 17 years, drank carbolic acid in mistake for whisky, which she was taking as a medicine, and in a few hours was dead. Her funeral took place Thursday, and among the mourners was Lizzie A. McDonald, a 15-year-old schoolmate.

Before the casket was closed Lizzie took a last look at her school friend, and as she was leaving said: "Mabel, dear, I will meet you in heaven tonight." After the funeral Miss McDonald purchased 3 cents' worth of carbolic acid and drank it, dying from the effects of the poison in less than an hour.

Triple Murder and Suicide.

DEADWOOD, S. D., Nov. 17.—Joseph Tha, an Italian, killed his wife, his cousin and the latter's mother-in-law and killed himself. His wife deserted him and went to live with her cousin, Josieo Tametta. Neighbors discovered the deed. Lying around the room, amid a horrible confusion of broken and scattered furniture, lay Mrs. Tha shot through the mouth, Tametta with a bullet in his temple and Mrs. Tametta with a frightful gash in her forehead inflicted with an ax—all still in death. In the woodshed Tha lay gasping for breath with a bullet through his head. In the midst of all this bloody horror Mrs. Tametta's two little children, 1½ and 3 years old, were playing.

An Incident In Cripple Creek.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Nov. 17.—A double murder was committed in a saloon on Bull mountain. A girl named Irene Good was drinking at the bar when an ex-prize fighter named Lear entered by the back door and opened fire upon her with a revolver. The barkeeper—named Rodgers—applied his gun to the head of Lear, who staggered over to the prostrate girl, shot her in the temple and then fell over dead by her side. Jealousy is the supposed cause.

A POOR RICH WOMAN.

THOUGH WEALTHY SHE HAD NEVER A BIT OF MONEY FOR HER OWN.

A Role That Is Opposed to Every Sense of Independence—The Other Side of the Picture—The Model Woman as Portrayed In the Book of Proverbs.

To go to her house, you would say that she undoubtedly had everything that heart could wish. She lived on a farm, and the necessaries of life were at the door. The house was large and well-appointed, and the master took pride in keeping it well painted within and without. More than that, the rental from other lands allowed many luxuries not common in the neighborhood. "A kind husband," would be the verdict, "who provided a high priced range for the kitchen, a handsome parlor carpet, a silk dress for his wife, and who furnished, he believed, all the hired help she needed."

Yet I learned to pity Mrs. Appledore when I had known her better. Her husband drank? Oh, no! He was of good character and respected among his associates. But this woman had never a bit of money to call her own. She could buy absolutely nothing without first asking for the "wherewithal," and so saying "by your leave." Did the tin peddler come? He must go his way, however much a utensil was needed, if Mr. A. chanced to not be within reach. If the notion came that she must unexpectedly, ten to one he could not be persuaded even to the amount of a spool of thread. Any project of housefurnishing must be laid before the same masculine eyes and have met his approval before it could be purchased. The need of a garment must be explained that the possession of its price be made possible.

Nor was such a rule, opposed as it was to every sense of independence, the worst. It would be too much to expect that the money would be always forthcoming, for however well-to-do a farmer may be he is not always ready money at hand or, having it, he many times has other uses for it. It could not be strange, therefore, if sometimes more than one request was necessary to secure a desired article, if, indeed, it were allowed and the expenditure considered a wise one.

I asked this woman to join a society of which I was a member. "I should like to," was the answer, "but, really, I have not the amount for the payment of the fee. I have promised a little missionary money, and it must be paid soon. However, if you have a mind to take my name and advance the money, you may do so, and I will pay you as soon as I can."

And I, knowing her honesty, and that it would be finally repaid, advanced the trifle for the individual far richer than I. Then I determined that I never could bear to not have money of my very own to drop in the collection basket, if I wanted to, when it came around, or to give to any charitable purpose, or to buy a new book occasionally, or a hairpin. And I became sorry for the friend that I might have envied, satisfied that one-half the value, in money, of the gold watch that was a present, or the year-ly interest on the principal invested in the unused plate, would give a feeling of greater wealth, certainly a sense of power at present unknown.

Now if it was meant that this marriage compact be in business affairs more like the relation of father and child than of partners, then the husband ought to have acted the part of a generous father and have given the wife a regular allowance. Or better to have set aside some one thing that she could manage for her own benefit, and then learn the value of money by its use and the management of it against a possible day of helplessness.

Different is the model woman as portrayed in the book of Proverbs, who buys and sells and gets gain. She deals in merchandise, provides for her household, gives to the poor. Yes, "she considereth a field, and buyeth it. With the fruit of her hand she planteth a vineyard." Yet knowing the pleasure of purchase and ownership, her children admire her none the less, and her husband is constrained to praise her.

If Mrs. Appledore and those in like condition, with Mr. Appledore and his kindred, would study the foregoing picture and be profited by it, no one would be the loser; but many would gain in nobility and happiness.

How can one who owns nothing enjoy the blessedness of giving, whether it be help to the needy, or a gift to loved ones? How, then, can there be surety that the benefit craved may be obtained, or that the good will be done that the soul chooses? As individuals, each of us has peculiar delights, requirements and duties. Each must live his or her own life. And although money is not the principal thing, it is a powerful means to almost every good this earth affords; and the refusal of it, to the extent at least of that which a certain brain or pair of hands in reality earns in this workaday world, ought by sheerest justice to bring with their owners a feeling of contentment.

For the sake of her own life for which she must account, let the mistress of a home, as well as the spinster, have the fruit of her hands. For the sake, also, of those to whom her character will fall as an inheritance, let that character be fearless, open, self respecting, rather than timid, dependent and self repressed, and free from the temptation which leads some wives—to somebody's shame be it said—to wheedle and prevaricate to obtain money which wanted or to take it slyly lest a storm be raised.—Emma E. Valentine in Minneapolis Housekeeper.

A Japanese Tea Room.

Huge Japanese umbrellas are serviceable for many things, but one seen recently is as peculiarly striking as to deserve especial comment. It hangs from a hook in the ceiling of a small room in an artist's home and forms the entire ceiling. Beneath it is the tea table and all its paraphernalia, together with a bamboo settee and five chairs, all set upon a Japanese rug. The tea served is of the Japanese ware and the tea itself comes from Japan. The entire room is complete and one feels on entering that it is a veritable bit of the land of chrysanthemums.—Chicago Tribune.

And the Hostess Was Surprised.

Two lady travelers in Maryland recently were spending the night in a little village, at the one hostelry of the place. The room allotted them was reasonably tidy, but there was a suspicious lack of freshness in the linen of the bed. One of the guests inquired, "This bed hasn't been used since it was made up, has it?" The good landlady turned from trimming the gaslie with a lenient smile for such notional folks. "Why, only by our girls," she answered, and was surprised to find that most sheets and pillows were required, even after her explanation.—Exchange.

Her Mission and Throne.

Woman is the highest, holiest, most precious gift to man. Her mission and throne is the family, and if anything is withheld that would make her more efficient, useful or happy in that sphere she is wronged and has not her rights.—John Todd.

Good Inventions.

One of the most valuable inventions was made by a New England woman who lived for many years in Washington. In 1843 Mrs. Nancy M. Johnson sold her patent of an ice cream freezer for $1,200. She was the first to utilize the idea of turning a handle for churning the cream, and the later improvements are modifications of her patent. Before this a spoon was used. Mrs. Johnson lived on Twelfth street, and at her death she bequeathed the proceeds

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

As the Opening of Two Streets Across the Fidelity Title and Deposit Company's Plot was Objected to, the Company Withdrew its Application—Means. Conrad Brokt and Zachariah Wilson Appointed Marshals.

The Borough Council held an adjourned meeting last night. All the members were present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Communications were read from Mr. Edwards, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Charles Hyde and others objecting to the opening of two streets through the property opposite Linden avenue, recently purchased by the Fidelity Title and Deposit Company.

The following communication was received from the Fidelity Title and Deposit Company:

To the Honorable the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—The subscribers on November 8d, instant made application to your honorable body to accept the dedication of a portion of Fairview avenue which was laid out in 1869 across lands now owned by the subscribers, but which has never been opened, worked or graded.

It was the intention of the said application to dedicate, to lay out two fifty foot streets across the said lands in such a way that said streets would be one hundred and twenty-five feet in depth from the middle of the street.

Said streets would have been so laid as to connect one with Fairview avenue at the point where the same is open through the lands of Edward N. Johnson, and the other at the most eastern point to Westervelt avenue to the two streets we proposed to lay.

It was our intention to open, grade and macadamize these streets and to restrict the purchasers of the lots on the same that they built nearer the street than fifteen feet nor which should cost to build less than seven hundred so fences should be built in front of said lots, so that on each lot there should be a strip of lawn fifteen feet wide.

We deem that such a plan would enable us to build a very desirable class of houses, handsome in design, comfortable, and having all the modern improvements, and which could be rented for about $25.00 to $30.00 per month. Such property is very scarce in Plainfield and is in great demand by people who cannot afford to pay the high rents now asked.

The secret of the difficulty we believe to be that ordinarily too much value is in the lots and too little in the houses.

Our plan was to furnish cheap lots and desirable houses and we are confident that such properties would be eagerly sought by a most desirable class.

However, by misrepresentation by people who know nothing of our plans, considerable opposition has been developed and, as it makes no particular difference to us, only doubling the price of lots to the purchasers and making them pay for a hundred and fifty feet of back yard which we have agreed to forego, we withdraw our application for vacation and request your honorable body to accept the dedication to open, work and grade Fairview avenue from Somerset street to Westervelt avenue as required by law.

Dated, November 17th., 1893.

Conrad Brokt, Zachariah Wilson, John Oberland, Mark Lees and James Lines were recommended by citizens of the borough for the positions of night marshals. Messrs. Edwin A. Leland and Daniel O'Connor applied for appointments as marshals. The names given above were referred to the Committee on marshals.

Mr. Frank Curtis, in a communication, called the Council's attention to the poor condition of the sidewalk on Mercer avenue at the junction of Sycamore avenue. The matter was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The Council's attention was called, by Mr. D. M. Secordyke, to the condition of the sidewalk on Mercer avenue beginning at Grove street. Referred to the Committee on Streets.

Mr. Edward C. Mulford petitioned Council to property turnpike Park place. Mr. Neal, to whom the matter was referred, stated that the work could not reasonably be expected of the borough when Mr. Mulford's gutter had filled up with dirt washed from his own grading. He stated that it was not the fault of the borough.

As the electric lights on Somerset street, between Craig place and Chatham street had been out for several nights, Mr. William E. Honeyman respectfully called the Council's attention to the matter, and asked that the evil be remedied.

The following claims were presented and referred to the auditing Committee:

F. Kelleher	$10 00
C. Stuber	14 00
D. Sodine	7 25
R. H. Stevens	1 50
L. Fiering	2 20
G. H. Fairchild	2 25
D. A. Woodhouse	2 50
Plainfield Gas & Electric Light Co.	1 40
P. Seader	11 00
W. Meehan	2 00
Manchester Locomotive Works	12 25
G. Satterlin	1 75
T. W. Morrison	24 15
F. W. Runyon	15 70
H. E. Crowley	25 00
J. Strang	6 00
Edison Electric Light Co.	$285 50
W. Lewis	3 00
F. M. French	19 50

The bills were ordered paid except those of the Electric Light Company, Gas Company, T. W. Morrison and Frank W. W. Runyon, which were held over.

Mayor Saunders suggested to the Council the necessity of taking up vigorously the matter of sewerage. "The city of Plainfield," he said, "has taken up the matter in such a shape now that North Plainfield cannot afford to be left in the present matter. It is only a question of time when Plainfield will establish a system, which I have investigated on my own book, and have come to the conclusion that it is the best in the country. It would be a great disadvantage to North Plainfield for Plainfield to have sewerage and the borough none. Now is the time for us to let Plainfield know we want sewerage too." Mr. Saunders suggested that a committee be appointed to take the matter of sewerage up.

The mayor also called the Council's attention to the poor service the borough is receiving from the Electric Light Company. He read the contract and stated that it was the duty of the Council to see that it was carried out. "The use of the contract," he said, "provide that we shall have 25 candle power lights. I took the trouble to have an expert examine the lights at my own expense. He reported to me that the lights are not 25 candle power. This matter must be investigated."

Mr. Neal reported that the Street Committee was having Summit avenue repaired.

An ordinance was passed on its first reading, in reference to repairing sidewalks, when property owners refuse to lay them.

The Marshals and Licenses Committee was authorized to have the "court house" repaired.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the Street Committee to have a sidewalk laid on Grandview avenue, in front of Mr. Vondi's property, if the owner himself did not attend to it.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee to secure bids on what terms the Electric Light Company would furnish light for the borough for a year from January, 1894.

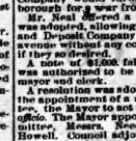
Mr. Neal offered a resolution, which was adopted, allowing the Fidelity Title and Deposit Company to open Fairview avenue without any cost to the borough, if they so desired.

A note of $1,000 falling due Nov. 25, was authorized to be extended by the mayor and clerk.

A resolution was adopted favoring the the appointment of a sewerage committee, the Mayor to act as a member, ex-officio. The Mayor appointed as such committee, Messrs. Needham, Neal and Howell. Council adjourned.

AT VINCENT CHAPEL.

Books and Authors the Subject of an Entertainment.



VINCENT chapel last night, the friends of the Epworth League were delightfully entertained by a programme of charades arranged by the Literary Committee, comprising Mr. Oscar Campbell, chairman. Miss Grace Barnes, Miss Jennie Crossley, Miss Gertie Sharp, Miss Lillie Chandler and Mr. David Dunavan. The charades were on the titles and authors of different books. A short sketch of an author's life and acts would be read and an answer was then expected giving the author's name.

It was novel, but very instructive, as it impressed the name of authors and their works on the minds of the young people.

Those who took part were:

Miss Grace Barnes, Miss Jennie Crossley, Miss Gertie Sharp, Miss Lillie Chandler, Miss Etta Rayhert, and Messrs. David Dunavan, James A. Stafford, Clarence Smith, Ralph Campbell, Robert Davis, and Oscar Campbell.

FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Entertainment Last Night in Trinity Church.

The Missiary Committee of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church gave an entertainment last night in the lecture room for the benefit of the fund for foreign missions. The programme consisted of songs, recitation by Miss Bessie Wilson; solo, by Miss Bessie Blair; recitation, "Katy Did," by Fred Donavan; Junior Endeavor Missionary concert exercises, by David Wickoff, Charles Dunlap, Henry Wyman and Robert Meeker, song, "Do Good to Others," by Clarence Rittenhouse, George Reynolds, Fred Donavan, Frank Denckiaw, and Robert Meeker. In the dialogue, entitled "Gems of Christianity" the following took part:

"Gems of Christianity"	Oliver Wickoff
"Prayer"	Laura Wickoff
"Affection"	Kay Williams
"Kindness"	Minnie Wyman
"Benevolence"	Mabel Lance
"Mohammedan"	Eva Lance
"Motives"	Maude Van Dyke

Refreshments were served by Miss Oliver Wickoff, Eva Lance and Frank Denckiaw.

—Thanksgiving eve the Gesang and Turn Verein will give an entertainment in their hall, on Somerset street.

—The Winter time table of the Central Railroad of New Jersey will take effect on Nov. 19th. For changes see advertisement in advertising columns.

—Hugh Sousse, an Elizabeth football player, received injuries recently in a contest, from which he died. The club to which he belonged has cancelled all games for the remainder of the season.

—A meeting for men only will be held in the Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, on Monday night, at 7.45. Rev. C. S. Hyman, D. D., of Elizabeth, will deliver an address. There will be good singing. All men are welcome.

—No questions about it, says Mr. White. There never was a time in the history of the dry goods business where such values were offered as at the present time, and that all be sure is a visit to his store to prove the statement. There will be good reasons why. Read his ads each week.

—Considering that the North Plainfield firemen have not the improved apparatus that their more favored brethren "across the brook" have, the borough workers certainly accomplish good results when they "turn out" to a fire. Every man takes great pride in his company.

Justice Mosher's Court.

The suit of Miss Anna Miller against Mr. Joseph Allen for $75 claimed as due for rent was before Justice Mosher and a jury yesterday afternoon, and, under circumstances, which seem to be to say the least, strange, the case was decided against Mr. Allen. He has taken steps to appeal it to what he terms "a court of law."

BEDROOM THIEF AGAIN.

A BURGLAR IN MR. STOUT'S HOUSE LAST NIGHT.

When Discovered he Crawled Out of the Window and Slid Down one of the Piazza Posts and Escaped—Nothing Missing—Left His Overcoat.

HERE was an attempted robbery in this city early last evening. At about seven o'clock when Mr. William Stout, of the New York firm of Stout, Spencer & Co., and his son reached their home on East Front street, Mrs. Stout met them at the door and told them she thought there was a burglar upstairs. The son sprang out of the carriage and hurried upstairs.

Before he reached the rooms above a man opened one of the bedroom windows, crawled out and sliding down one of the piazza posts made his escape.

William Douglass, the policeman, was not surprised that he failed to find that the man had disappeared across the lawn.

The man left his overcoat behind. In it were clues that make the police hopeful of his capture.

Nothing was stolen. The man gained an entrance by climbing one of the piazza posts and thence through the second story window.

A GOOD BEGINNING.

FUTURE WORK FOR DOCTORS.

The Men will Give a Green Tea and do all the Work Themselves.

Next Friday evening a green tea is to be given by the men of Trinity Reformed church, that is, all the arrangements and men made to time. Next week will be rather a busy week among the men and the ladies are beginning to worry them with all sorts of questions as to whether they will have a caterer, or do it all themselves. One of the committees is there by going to do all the work themselves, even to washing the dishes. The ladies not long ago gave a pink tea.

Common Council to Hold a Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the Common Council is called for Wednesday, November 22, at eight o'clock p. m. Among other matters to come up for consideration is a petition and communication from the Missionary Association of Plainfield, asking that the ordinance relating to petitions that may be presented, and to act upon the same, and to introduce and pass a new ordinance relating to the posting of objectionable show bills.

SIX INCHES NARROWER.

PROPOSED NARROWING OF THE STREET RAILWAY TRACKS.

The Matter, it is said, is being Considered by the Company—This would Make the Tracks the Same Width as is Use by the New Jersey Traction Company.

THE Plainfield Electric Street Railway Company is considering the advisability of making the tracks of the cars six inches narrower. It is said. This would make the tracks the same width as in other cities. It would also make the tracks less of a nuisance, and could be easily done by the changing of one rail. It is thought this change in the gauge of the tracks will have to be done sooner or later and it might as well be done now before any more track is built.

The New Jersey Traction Company, which proposes to build the already mentioned road from Paterson to New Brunswick, is laying all its tracks six inches narrower than the Plainfield tracks. If the company builds its road to New Brunswick it will pass through this city, and if the tracks are the width of the Traction Company the companies could use each others tracks as is done in other cities.

It has been suggested that, as the Street Railway is to be extended to Dunellen, one of the tracks be taken up through West Front street and used on the Dunellen line, which is also to be only one track. This would make the entire line uniform and would give West Front street merchants more room in front of their stores.

O'HARA HELD UP THIS TIME.

The Man who Said he Had Been Robbed in this City, in Jail.

A few days ago James O'Hara, who claimed he lived at Elizabeth, reported to the police that he had been held up and robbed near Netherwood.

The investigation showed that O'Hara was a tramp, and that his story was wholly imaginary.

Thursday night O'Hara materialized in Elizabeth. He was drunk and disorderly on Broad street. He assaulted Patrolman Howe by throwing a stone at him, and in the presence of several persons threatened the officer's life. Officer Howe arrested his assailant. When O'Hara was arraigned in the police court he denied the policeman's story. He said he was born in Newark, but had not been there in twenty-one years. He blubbered a great deal, and said it cost to jail it would be an innocent man punished. He was held for a further hearing.

Judgment of $6,922.5 for Mr. Scott.

The sheriff has taken possession of the place of business of the F. M. Edwards Company, printers, at 411 Pearl street, New York, on an attachment for $6,922 in favor of Mr. Walter Scott of this city for balance of account due. The attachment was granted on the ground that the company had disposed of its property, with intent to defraud creditors, by transferring on October 26, while insolvent, a large part of its assets to Edward J. Merriam, a creditor, to give him a preference over the other creditors. Owen C. Edwards, Treasurer of the company, was formerly State Printer of Iowa.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Cold Facts About Indian Territory.

Rezin W. McAdam, in Harper's Magazine, shows up the red man's capacity for self government in a way not flattering to copper colored intellectuality. It certainly was the desire of this government when the tribes were sent to Indian Territory to give them a large body of fertile land, which should be theirs inalienably. There they could govern themselves, feed themselves and civilize themselves, showing they were equal to the white man in all ways, if they really were so. So secure did the United States make the title to the ground that it was pronounced unlawful for an Indian to sell his land to a white man.

In spite of all this the men who now control the whole Indian Territory are either outand out white men or men with only a tinge of red blood in their veins. Long ago insinuating white rascals prevailed on the red legislators to pass a law providing that any white man who took an Indian wife should be adopted fully into the tribes, with all an Indian's rights and privileges. The number of men who have been tempted to marry squaws because of this arrangement is very great. These husbands are called "squawmen," and by those of their own color "equivalent citizens." It is these men and their descendants who have secured the upper hand in the Indian Territory. They are the politicians and maintain their control by all the arts known to politicians elsewhere.

The five civilized nations are the Cherokees, Creeks, Seminoles, Choctaws and Chickasaws. Their total population is 60,000. Of white men living within their limits there are not less than 150,000. In spite of every precaution to protect him, the Indian is doomed. There is only one way for him now to hold his own, says Mr. McAdam. It will be to take land in severalty and civilize himself as fast as possible. The old untamed Indian will never do this. The only hope is that the youths educated at Hampton, Carlisle and the other Indian schools will take to the work and ways of civilization, thus saving the remnants of our aboriginal race, even though it is only to be finally merged into the white race. The old fashioned Indian will not work. He allowed the white man to get foothold in his domain as a mere tenant and farmer, and the rest followed of itself.

Future Silver Production.

President E. D. Andrews of Brown university, a recent convert of the silver commission, is certain that free coinage of silver at a ratio of 20 to 1 would be a perfectly safe policy for this country. He reasons out this conclusion from an investigation of the present and probable future production of our silver mines.

In a paper published in The Review of Reviews he writes that the western silver mines will never again be able to equal the extraordinary output of the last 15 years. The cost of silver mining will rather increase than decrease. No new railroads will be constructed into mining districts for years to come. "The railways tributary to the silver industry are now trembling for their existence."

The deeper down into the earth a vein goes, the poorer the quality of the silver and the more difficult to mine. The cream of the western mines has already been skimmed off, and since every acre of the Rocky mountains has been prospected over already, it is not at all likely that any undiscovered mines are yet hiding a fabulous richness in either gold or silver. Not only is the cost of mining the white metal becoming greater, but also that of smelting it. Finally, under the exceptionally favorable conditions of the last 15 years only 344 times as much silver as gold has been mined in this country. With coinage on the basis of 20 to 1, therefore, Mr. Andrews believes bimetallism would be safe.

The magic power of water in the home is about to be demonstrated in a mechanical as well as hygienic way. A small motor has been perfected which, by connecting it with the flowing stream from a washstand tap or faucet anywhere else, next to that in the kitchen sink, can be made to run sewing machines, washing machines, coffee mills, ice cream freezers or churns. In the dead heat of summer it can be attached to fans and made to cool the house in the living rooms. It can also be used for lathes, scroll saws and dental machines. The boys and girls can buy a small printing press and operate it by this tiny and useful motor to their great pleasure and profit. The motor is made in two sizes—one, with a 5¼ inch wheel, is for the lightest kind of work; the other, with a 15 inch wheel, is adapted for heavier machinery.

Forty railway trains going to and from London are provided through and through with electric lights. America ought to be, all of them. The railway mail superintendent recommends that the use of oil lamps in mail cars be stopped, both because of the danger and because of the scaling of the mail matter from the dripping and spilling of oil. Electric lighting on the cars of all mail trains would doubtless be an expense, but it would be no expense that both the government and the railway companies could well afford.

WILL NOT WED AN ACTOR

Miss Helen Gould's Brothers Say She Is Not Engaged.

HARRY WOODRUFF SAYS SO TOO.

The Golden Haired Young Actor and the Millionaire's Daughter Are Very Good Friends, However, and Woodruff is to Leave the Stage to Study Law.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—A story, now positively denied on both sides, has been current for some time to the effect that Miss Helen M. Gould, the eldest daughter of the late Jay Gould, is engaged to be married to Mr. Harry Woodruff, a young actor now engaged with the "Charley's Aunt" company at the Standard theater. The story has been the talk of actors and their friends, who were presumably all the friends of Mr. Woodruff.

Particular impetus has been given to it lately by the announcement made by friends of Mr. Woodruff that he contemplated leaving the profession to take a two years' course at Yale Law school. Many of the persons who have repeated the story believed that they spoke with a degree of authority.

An actor of national fame who has been associated with Mr. Woodruff in a professional way and has acted as his adviser and friend says he learned all about the Gould-Woodruff affair before Jay Gould's death. In discussing the matter he said:

Not at a Tea Party.

"I never knew that the friendship between Mr. Woodruff and Miss Gould had been a matter of common gossip among theatrical people, though I knew that this friendship existed. Mr. Woodruff and I used the same dressing room in New York theater, and became intimate. I learned in a confidential way that he had become acquainted with Miss Gould and had become very much interested by her.

"They met first at one of the tea parties given by Miss Gould's friends. At these parties several young actors of good family and good breeding are usually invited. Mr. Woodruff among the others. The meetings referred to occurred nearly two years ago. I do not know that Mr. Woodruff ever visited Miss Gould's house, and I learned that Mr. Jay Gould before his death knew of the friendship between his daughter and Mr. Woodruff and endeavored to break it off.

MISS HELEN GOULD.

"Mr. Woodruff heard of Mr. Gould's efforts and wrote a friendly letter to the financier, stating that under no conditions would he attempt to win the daughter from her home without her father's consent. Mr. Gould did not reply to the letter, although he did not succeed in inducing his daughter to break off the acquaintance.

"Mr. Gould disapproved when Byrnes had been sought after by Mr. Gould to prevent Woodruff from continuing his acquaintance with Miss Helen. Byrnes went to Woodruff and told him in effect that he had better give up all communication with the young lady. Woodruff told Byrnes to mind his own business, and Byrnes hedged. I never heard that other members of the Gould family opposed the friendship between the young people. They exchanged letters, and I knew long ago that something more than friendship existed between Miss Gould and Mr. Woodruff.

"Concerning Mr. Woodruff, I may say that he is not only one of the most promising young actors on our stage today, but a fine, manly fellow, worthy of the love of any good woman.

Family Opposed It.

Others who have told the story of the alleged engagement with considerable particularity have asserted that Mr. Woodruff and Miss Gould have been acquainted for a number of years, and that there has been until very recently a most determined opposition to anything in the nature of an engagement by the family of the young woman. They have said further that very recently an understanding was reached with Mr. Woodruff, and that by it, after two years on probation, if matters were then satisfactory, the objections would be waived.

The two years' probation was to be spent in Yale completing an education and learning a profession other than that of the stage. It has been said that $50,000 was to be given to Mr. Woodruff to pay his expenses in college.

All these stories elicited emphatic denials yesterday from Mr. Edwin Gould and Mr. Howard Gould, two of the brothers of Miss Helen and coexecutors with her of her father's will.

Mr. Woodruff said himself: "There is not a word of truth in the story that Miss Gould and I are engaged. It is not true in whole or in any part."

Mr. Woodruff made arrangements yesterday with Mr. Charles Frohman to sever his connection with the "Charley's Aunt" company.

Harry Woodruff has a beautiful head of blond curls and a pink and white complexion, and moreover is in no calculable young man—off the stage—and especially very popular. In the Lambs' club, where he spends much of his time, everyone calls him "Harry," and treats him as a good deal of a boy. He usually plays juvenile parts.

AFFAIRS OF THE NATION.

Foreign Naval Powers May Pay Respects to Rio.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A dispatch in cipher was received at the navy department from Rio de Janeiro signed by Picking, commander of the United States naval forces at Rio. The translated dispatch reads as follows:

"Naval representatives of eight nations, including our nation, have decided not to permit surrender of war to be handed at Rio. Santos still being in possession of the Brazilian government and connected with Rio Janeiro by railway, smallness of water for ships can be landed at Santos. Yesterday the insurgents dressed ship, and the Brazilian government forts fired a national salute in honor of the anniversary of the establishment of the republic."

Secretary Herbert, in response to inquiries as to the significance of the action of the naval representatives, said:

"It looks to me that this means that Mello is being very much crippled. The dispatches I have received, taking them all together, indicate that Mello should not have any cause for firing on Rio. This is a concerted effort on the part of the naval representatives to prevent any firing on Rio by Mello or any fleet from the other side. The object of the naval representatives in making this declaration is for the protection of commerce. They do not consider Mello as a belligerent, and therefore object in the interests of commerce to firing by either side. If Mello cannot fire on Rio he cannot stop commerce, he will not effect much."

"Do you think that this decision will prevent the landing of the El Cid at the port of Rio?"

"I do not think there will be any interference, except perhaps Mello will attempt to delay the advance of the El Cid in the bay."

Princess Anne of Hohoken Calls.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The woman who styles herself Princess Anne of Hoboken, niece of Queen Victoria, again appeared at the white house yesterday and demanded audience with Mr. Cleveland. The usher at the main entrance politely informed her that it would be impossible to see the president unless the nature of her business with him was known. She refused to give any information on this point and informed the usher that she thought she had been treated very badly, "severely," said her highness. "I go, but not to return. I will go back to Hoboken, there to tell my people that my aunt's subjects how I have been used."

THE LONG STRIKE ENDED

Truce Effected Between English Miners and Owners.

REJOICING IN THE MINING TOWNS.

Work to Be Begun at Once, and Thousands of Suffering Families Will Be Relieved. The Board of Conciliation Will Fix the Wages.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The great miners' strike, which has now been on for months, and during which thousands of families have suffered, is at an end. The conference brought about by the government adopted the following resolutions:

First—That a board of conciliation be established forthwith, which shall last at least one year and consist of an equal number of delegates, shall endeavor to elect a chairman, if possible. If they fail to do so then the speaker of the house of commons shall be asked to nominate a chairman, who will have the casting vote. The board, when constituted, shall have the power to determine from time to time the rates of wages of the miners from Feb. 1, 1894. The first meeting of the board shall be held in London on Dec. 16.

To Resume Work at Once.

Second—That the men shall resume work immediately at the old wages until Feb. 1, and it is agreed that all the collieries as far as practicable shall be reopened forthwith and no impediment placed upon the men's return to work.

The representatives of the owners proposed that the men resume work at 10 per cent reductions until March, when their wages should be fixed by the board of conciliation. The miners declined to accept these terms and insisted that they should recommence work at the old rates. They agreed, however, that any new rate decided upon should commence in March instead of in April, as they originally demanded.

At last a solution was arrived at by the adoption of the above resolutions. Lord Rosebery then suggested that the operatives should make a speech upon a minimum rate of wages. This proposition was not accepted by the mine owners, and it was agreed that the question should be left for settlement by the board of conciliation.

The result of the conference was at once telephoned to Mr. Gladstone. The news of the settlement of the great struggle gives great satisfaction in all parts of the country.

Victory For the Miners.

Mr. Burns, the labor leader, in an interview, said that the success of the government's fair-vention was most important, as it would establish an appeal to similar influences when strikes occur in the future. He said that the result kills the confiscation of employers that wages must follow the fluctuations in prices, because, as he explained, the conciliation board can arrest the fall in prices or increase wages. The miners, he said, had won a magnificent victory.

The news of the settlement of the miners' strike created the greatest joy in the mining districts of Lancashire and Yorkshire. The relief funds had been most exhausted, and the people had become almost desperate. In some places the rejoicings over the good news last become almost frenzied. Church bells were rung, and the people gathered together and indulged in dancing, singing and other modes to express their jubilation at the end of the long struggle.

The Chronicle says there will be rejoicing throughout the country at the treaty of peace arranged at the conference and says that it is peace with honor. It declares that the men have been able to force a triumph for labor such as the world has never seen before and opens a new chapter in industrial history. If Lord Rosebery's intervention means anything, it means state recognition in the support of citizens in the maintenance of a decent and progressive standard of living.

The Atlantic Is Boisterous.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Captains of vessels arriving at Londonderry report fearful weather off the coast.

The steam trawler Ruth Bolton was caught in a squall during the storm off the mouth of the Tyne, and four of her crew were washed overboard.

POWDERLY'S PLAN.

Steps Taken to Put Him at the Head of 1,500,000 Men.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—The fourth day of the Knights of Labor general assembly was the liviest yet. General Master Workman Powderly made a scathing denunciation of the methods of certain men in the order and a general denial of the charges made by Secretary-Treasurer Hayes. He talked for a long time about the state of the order and its future prospects. A committee was appointed to confer on the amalgamation idea, and it held a secret session.

A meeting was held for the purpose of considering ways and means for the amalgamation of all the existing labor organizations. It is asserted that representatives from all the large bodies of workingmen were present and that plans were formed which, if carried out, will bring about the consolidation.

These present are said to represent a membership of from 750,000 to 1,000,000. The result of the meeting will depend upon the action the general assembly may take, but as the meeting was attended by representative Knights close to Mr. Powderly it is claimed that the general assembly will favor the movement of amalgamation.

This movement, it is claimed, has been worked up for six months and is the result of Mr. Powderly's effort to secure a unification of labor interests. Just what organizations outside of the Knights of Labor and the Federation of Labor were represented could not be ascertained, it being explained that the representatives at the meeting, while being men of influence in their orders, were not officially authorized to act.

If the Knights of Labor representatives at the meeting have any say, however, Mr. Powderly, it was stated, will occupy a prominent executive position in the new order. The matter will be brought before the general assembly, and the friends of Mr. Powderly think that they can carry it through.

A SUCCESSFUL TEST.

The Electric Trolley Combine Takes a Near Rochester.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 18.—Electrical propulsion of commercial boats on canals is no longer a theory, but a demonstrated success. Mule and steam power are allowed by the new power, which was successfully tested alongside the village of Brighton, four miles from Rochester, on a waterway of the Erie canal. The old steamboat Ceres, how the Frank W. Hawley, named after the promoter of the scheme, was fitted with an electrical motor of the Westinghouse company instead of boiler and engine.

Taking power from the trolley wire overhead, she started off without hitch or hindrance when Mr. Hawley himself pulled the lever on the controller and set the current pulsing through the machinery to the propeller shaft below.

When the boat was placed under the wires and the lever pulled, away she sped faster than the law allows—six miles an hour. There was no hitch, no break. No drawback occurred. It was a grand success. Every difficulty encountered in canal navigation was successfully overcome. This one mile of wire contains the shortest curve in the whole length and has lock and wide waters. The curve is rounded as full speed, the lock taken as quickly as could be possible, and the wide waters made no difference in speed or deflection.

A Big Steel Project.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 18.—The Commercial Gazette says today that the Standard Oil company is preparing to engage in the manufacture of steel on a gigantic scale and outdo the Carnegies and all other concerns in the country. They are to use a new process of steelmaking, by which, it is claimed, steel can be made directly from the ore.

Buffalo Half Snowed Under.

BUFFALO, Nov. 18.—Fifty men have been at work shoveling snow on two of the thoroughfares in the southern part of the city. Drifts four feet deep were encountered by funerals passing out to a suburban cemetery, and several horses elapsed before they could proceed. In the northern part of the city scarcely a snowflake fell.

Fatal Hand Car Accident.

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 18.—By the breaking of an axle of a hand car at Weatherly, Beskeman Frank Enke and five laborers were thrown into a ravine. Michael Dolisky was instantly killed, and Andrew Konita was fatally injured. All the others were badly bruised.

Mrs. Lease Indorses Lewelling.

THUG HUNT IN CHICAGO

The City Practically Under Martial Law After 1 a. m.

OFFICERS PUT IN PLAIN CLOTHES.

Chief of Police Brennan Signs a Dragnet For Footpads In That City—Treasurer Drake's Story Is Doubted by the Police Officers.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Beginning this morning at 1 o'clock the city was practically put under martial law. Chief of Police Brennan has informed the inspectors that he intended to adopt rigid measures and that after 1 a. m. each night until such a time as the order is rescinded he desired that half the force be put in citizens' clothes and thrown upon the streets.

These men are to stop and question every individual found on the streets after that hour. If satisfactory answers are given, the citizens will be allowed to go in peace. If their answers are not satisfactory to the police, the men accosted will be taken to the police station. The measure is made necessary by the large number of highway robberies and sandbaggings which have occurred of late.

Drake's Story Doubted.

The police tell a queer story in regard to the $30,000 robbery of Treasurer Drake of the Illinois and Iowa railway. City Detective Flanders said:

"While I was questioning Mr. Drake he suddenly grew angry and said that he did not see why the city police took so much interest in the robbery. He then went on to tell us that he thought it did not concern people at large and that the matter might as well be dropped, as the loss fell on the 'Three I's' road and only affected his father and himself. The case, I understand, has been turned over to the Pinkertons by General Pitt Ives."

Detective Conway, after making a thorough examination of the floors of the railroad office in front of the safe where the robbery took place, finds no marks of a scuffle. The floor is of polished hard wood, and he sees no reason why it should not be scuffed by the slipping feet in a struggle.

Other city detectives say that a man can inject cocaine into a part of his body and deaden the sensibility of it to such a degree as not to feel the painful effects of heavy blows of a club or other instrument administered by himself or others hired for the purpose, and that they have known this to be done in several cases that have come under their observation. The police are now largely devoting their attention to tracing up several of the stories regarding young Drake's past.

Police Will Investigate.

"The police department is not to be misled in a case of this kind, and we shall not cease work on this alleged robbery until it has been established whether actual robbers did click or not," said Assistant Superintendent Kipley. "No outside influence can call the police off the case. It is our duty to find out whether sandbaggers are really holding up citizens in their offices in the heart of the city in broad daylight.

"The fact that the loser does not care to prosecute the search makes no difference with our duty. Every body is interested in knowing if such a crime was committed, and the paid police must find out. We are not a private agency employed at so much a day to prove certain things."

The Tools Poisoning Case.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—Michael Toole, who was jointly charged with his brother Stephen with poisoning his mother and sister Margaret by placing cyanide of potassium in a bottle of porter, was discharged at the request of the counsel for the prosecution. Michael testified he purchased cyanide of potassium at his sister's request to destroy vermin. The daughter became hysterical on the stand, and counsel refrained from cross questioning her.

Celebrated Bank Case Decided.

BUFFALO, Nov. 18.—Judge Lambert of the supreme court has handed down a decision in the celebrated case of the trustees of the Empire State Savings bank against the trustees of the defunct National Savings bank to recover $438,000, holding the trustees liable for the amount.

A Crew In Danger.

THEY'RE AFTER HER.

Dr. Mary Walker Says Some of Them Want to Kill Her.

PLYMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 18.—Dr. Mary Walker appeared before Judge Carpenter of the eastern judicial district of Grafton county court, in session here, and presented the following petition:

"To His Honor, Justice A. P. Carpenter:

"Dear Sir—I am Sick.—The undersigned respectfully requests your honor to recall the grand jury that she, according to common law, may have her right to go before that body to state grievances that have been denied her in consequence of threats, and to such extent that she was not safe in the state of New Hampshire for over 13½ years, and in the past six months has sought in vain for such privilege and right as she now asks. She is not now entirely safe in this or any other state because of men being at large who have attempted to take her life."

Judge Carpenter accepted the petition, but denied it on the grounds that the grand jury was never recalled in this state except under extraordinary circumstances. Dr. Mary tried to convince the judge it was an extraordinary occasion, but he could not see it in that light.

SUED FOR HIS BRIDE.

In Massachusetts a Man Must Not Marry His Half Niece.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—Judge Hardy decided in the case of Simon Levy against Simon Miller that a man cannot lawfully marry his half niece in Massachusetts. Both plaintiff and defendant were suitors for the hand of Nancy Goldstein, whose mother was a half sister of the plaintiff.

Miss Goldstein and Mr. Levy were married, but did not live together, and Mr. Miller, by advice of counsel, maintained his correspondence with her. The plaintiff then brought suit against Mr. Miller. The court decided that the marriage between the plaintiff and Miss Goldstein was illegal and gave a finding for the defendant.

It's Right Against Common Sense

to suppose that an imitation offers the customer any guarantee like the original does. Take Cottolene for example, FAIRBANK & Co. discovered it, perfected it, and spent thousands in making its merits known. It is plainly to their interest to make and keep it what it is to-day—the most popular shortening in the world.

But when you come

To accept any Counterfeits for Cottolene

these guarantees all disappear, and the housekeeper is at the mercy of an imitator who deals on others' reputation and who profits only by others' loss.

To ensure having good cooking and healthful food stick right to COTTOLENE and let all imitations severely alone.

They Couldn't Eat In Public.

A tender blade, with a blush on his cheek and down on his lip, drove up to a Lewiston hotel on Tuesday and hitched his horse. Then he helped out a pretty veiled lass in hat with white feathers, and with a blush on her cheek that defied the setting sun to match. "Kind lady, may I have wife we eat dinner?" said he. The clerk said they could; or he would send it around to the stable. He signed his name and then scratched something out, and when it finally was complete the better half of it read, "and wife."

In the dining room they attracted universal attention. The head waiter not catching sight of them immediately, he began to edge to the door, but she pulled his sleeve. Their attack on the bill of fare was intense. The one dainty and didn't want anything but lemon pie. He preferred soup, but didn't care for anything else. He was doubtful and summoned when he asked for anything, and in getting away from the table he was awkward and knocked over a glass of water on the table. In the office he simply said: "Don't tell! They all knew we were just married. Where is there an all fired good s'loon where we kin get a square meal an nobody lookin'?"

The girl was right. Lewiston's and the restaurant man says that the young bride ate a sirloin and a slab of custard pie, and the groom got away with two oyster stews and an eight inch segment of unadulterated mince.—Lewiston Journal.

HOW TO READ THE SKY.

Suggestions That Will Enable One to Make a Neat Little Map of the Stars.

A few particulars to enable a reader to identify the more prominent stars may be given as starting points from which some few excursions into the spangled heavens may be attempted. But the suggestions must be considered with reference to the ever varying directions of the supposed lines in consequence of the daily revolution of the sphere. This is illustrated in the cut wherein the Lesser Bear is shown as swinging round the polar star in different positions. Sometimes the lines of direction will be vertical, sometimes inclined, but all retaining their relative positions.

The "pointers" of the Great Bear indicate the polar star in the Lesser Bear, and we can roughly estimate the distance between the pointers at five degrees. This will give us the distance between the pointers and the polar star as 30 degrees. By following an imaginary line through the two northern stars of the Wagon (the Bear) away from the Horses, we shall find Capella about 50 degrees away.

If we pass from the first star next the Wagon of "Charles' Wain" to the pole star and past it, we shall arrive at an irregular W. This is Cassiopeia, about as far beyond Polaris as the Bear is below it. When the latter is low, the former is at the zenith, and so on.

A line drawn from the pole star through the end star of the Great Bear leads to Arcturus. A line taken from Arcturus for about an equal distance will, with the pole star, make a triangle with Vega. The polar star may be called the apex.

Regulus may be found southward by drawing a line through the first two stars of the square in the Bear (opposite the pointers). From Vega almost opposite the pole star, and through it about twice as far away on the other side, is Sirius, a brilliant "sun." Procyon will be found to the westward of Regulus about 30 degrees. From Procyon to the pole star a line will pass through Pollux and Castor.

From the pole star through Capella, passing between Betelgeux and Bellatrix, we shall describe a line leading to the three stars of Orion's belt. Between it and the Pleiades is Aldebaran. There are many other stars which could be indicated; but on a fine evening, if the observer will mark them upon a piece of paper, placing the pole star in the center, he will be able to add to his star map very rapidly.

Incombustible Wash For Walls.

Slake stone lime in a large tub or barrel with boiling hot water, covering the tub or barrel to keep in all the steam. When thus slaked pass 6 quarts of it through a fine sieve. It will then be in a state of fine flour. Now, to 6 quarts of this lime, add 1 quart of rock salt and 1 gallon of water. Then boil the mixture and skim it clean. To every 5 gallons of this skimmed mixture add 1 pound of alum, one-half pound of copperas, by slow degrees, and three-quarters of a pound of potash and 4 quarts of fine sand to the hickory ashes sifted.

The National Builder, which gives this recipe, supposes that any kind of hardwood ashes will answer as well as hickory, and says this mixture will admit of any coloring matter you wish, and may be applied with a brush. It looks better than paint and is as durable as slate. It will stop small leaks in a roof, prevent the same from growing over and rotting the wood and render it incombustible from sparks falling upon it. When laid upon brick work, it renders the brick impervious to rain or wet.

A Novel and Simple Fire Protector.

Fire and Water states that one of the cheapest, simplest and most efficient devices for the protection of shingle roofs from fire is being introduced in some cities. It consists of nothing more than a water pipe running along the ridgeboard of the roof and connected with the water service of the building. The roof pipe is perforated at short intervals, so that at a moment's notice the roof can be flooded and rendered impervious to sparks and blazing fragments blown from burning buildings in the neighborhood. The device is at once so simple and effective that one wonders why its introduction was not coeval with that of water mains and hydrants.

The Kinetograph.

Everybody may not yet understand the purpose of Mr. Edison's new instrument, the kinetograph. The Industrial World explains that the apparatus consists of an optical lantern, a device by which a moving image is projected on a screen simultaneously with the production by a photograph of the words or song which accompany the movements pictured. Thus the photograph of a prima donna could be shown on the screen, with the movements of the arm, the head and the body, together with the changes of facial expression, while the phonograph would reproduce the song.

GOOD HEALTH

CURING A COLD.

The Directions of a Physician—They Do Not Accord With Popular Notions.

The following from an eminent physician found in an exchange may prove valuable, and is at least equally interesting because in part it controverts some generally received ideas, as, for instance, those of "getting into a good sweat" and "covering the feet up warm." He says:

When the first symptoms manifest themselves is the time for action, and this should consist of a hot mustard footbath before going to bed and a hot draft of milk. The covering of the body should be linen and wool—the former in the way of the sheet, and the latter in the blanket. No attempt to get up an active sweating should be made. The footbath and the warm drink will give a sense of warmth and facilitate the natural excretion of materials which should pass away by the skin, and any effort to aggravate this will be not only superfluous but harmful.

The blanket should never be worn next to the night robe, and should not be so thick as to confine the air next to the body. It is useless, often advisable to lighten the covering of the feet, and to preserve a certain amount of weight over the loins, and to have the shoulders protected from the external surroundings in general. The last measure is not to be underrated. A sensitive lung carries with it susceptibility to take to itself everything that could possibly affect it to its detriment. Lung diseases belong to sensitive persons, and may or may not be the sequence of a cold. The majority of them, however, can be traced to imprudence in dress and exposure.

Color Blindness Thad Is Rare.

According to The Medical Record, Dr. A. E. Wright states it to be a fact that total color blindness is very rare; also, that yellow blue color blindness is very rare. The common form is the green red blindness. It so happens that in the establishment of signals green and red lights form the most commonly used colors, hence from 2 to 5 per cent of men capable of doing work as pilots or engineers are kept out of such employments, often with results that are almost cruel. Most color blind men can readily distinguish yellows and blues, and she doctor proposes that the red lights should have a distinct yellowish tone and the green lights a distinctly bluish tinge. In this way the difference between signals could be readily made out by almost all the color blind.

Boric Acid For Boils.

A physician is quoted as having obtained good results in an outbreak of boils by the administration for eight to ten days of 10 to 15 grains of boric acid a day, divided into two doses. At the same time, four or five times a day, the inflamed areas were washed with a hot solution of boric acid in the proportion of 4 per cent. Between the application of this lotion, compresses were applied to the diseased parts, which had been wet with the same solution. In this way he claimed to have been able to reduce the boils which had already formed, and to do much toward preventing the other outbreaks. By this means he thinks it possible to avoid surgical intervention.

Nervous Exhaustion.

What is nervous exhaustion? It is carrying too much pressure on too small a boiler. Dances and clinch pheads are never troubled with it, but ambitious men, whose will power exceeds their physical strength, are particularly subject to it. Look out that you are not attacked, advises The Engineer.

ETIQUETTE

POLITE CORRESPONDENCE.

The Correct Thing This Season In Stationery For Men, Women and Child.

One of the small annoyances of everyday life is the arising of circumstances requiring immediate action when one does not feel exactly certain how to correctly meet the question in hand. The fashion of polite correspondence, for instance, is constantly changing, and one wants to know the latest form. Concerning this, the following is found in Harper's Bazar:

For ladies' correspondence the paper favored by the best usage is the smooth and vellum finish in white or cream tints. Delicate shades of rose, azure, heliotrope or all ver gray are permissible, but any inclination toward the outre or eccentric is decried.

A small and dainty monogram, crest or coat of arms is used in plain or embossed gold, silver, bronze or colors, and also the initials, full name and address. Where the initials are used, the tendency is toward small and delicate lines, combined in a circle with background. When used alone, the address is generally engraved in the center of the sheet, though it may appear at the right. It may also be stamped on the flap of the envelope. The name of a country residence should precede the address, as Nestledown, Lenox, Massachusetts. People living in town employ the number of house and name of street only, as 27 West Fifty-seventh street. To spell the name of street is preferable to using the figures.

The prevailing fashion in stationery for gentlemen is the same as for the opposite sex, except that the design and lettering follow a stronger, more severe style.

For persons in modest circumstances plain white stationery of good quality without ornamentation is advisable, the address and date inscribed by the writer's own hand.

The prevailing sizes of paper are the letter or packet for ladies' familiar correspondence, the billet for polite correspondence, the billet for notes or messages, the paignon for regrets or acceptance. The note card has been superseded by these two last named sizes. For gentlemen's use the commercial is adopted for general correspondence, the billet for notes.

For children's use paper comes in delicate tints alone, no white being introduced. The sheets are small and stamped with suitable devices. Not only do the little ones use this it whatever correspondence they may engage, but all invitations to children's parties of entertainments are written thereon.

For mourning purposes dead white, smooth and unglazed, is the chosen material, with a black border ranging from a quarter of an inch in width to a thread line, according to the nearness of the bereavement.

The fashion of securing the envelope with sealing wax and seal engraved with mono- or crest is returning into favor.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

ANIMALS OF THE CAT TRIBE.

They Are Found In Every Part of the World Except Australia and Madagascar.

The group of cats, wild and domestic, constitute one of the most natural and closely allied families in the whole animal kingdom. They are so remarkably alike in structure, although varying much in size and color, that zoologists at the present time consider them as constituting what they term but one genus or group, to all the animals in which they give the scientific name of Felis, the different animals or species composing it being each distinguished by a second or specific name.

The characters of the animals of the cat tribe are strongly marked. They are the most purely carnivorous of all quadrupeds. They feed in the natural state on warm blooded animals, which they themselves have killed, one species only, an Indian kind, preying habitually upon fish. They may be regarded as the very type of destructive flesh eaters, being furnished with the most complete and powerful mechanism for the capture of living animals.

Cats, large and small, are to be found in every part of the world except Australia and Madagascar. The largest are confined to the tropical regions of the globe, the lion being common in Asia and Africa. The tiger is exclusively Asiatic and, contrary to the usual belief, is even larger than the lion. So closely are these two animals related that their skulls can hardly be distinguished from one another except by a very skilled anatomist.

The next largest of the group is the leopard, a native of both Asia and Africa. The leopard is frequently termed the panther and regarded as a different animal, but there is no real distinction between the two. The puma, which is sometimes, but erroneously, called the panther in the United States, and the jaguar are the largest of the American species.

The lynxes, which are common to the old world and the new, are distinguished by their short and stumpy tails. Their habits, however, and structure are otherwise exactly like those of the ordinary cats. The different species of the wild cats that exist in various parts of the world raise the total number of the whole tribe of felidæ to rather more than 40, according to the naturalist who is authority for the foregoing.

The Most Remarkable of Weapons.

It is singular that the most wonderful of weapons should have been the result of the ingenuity of the very lowest type of humanity—the Australian aborigine. Another strange fact is that, regardless of years of practice, the white man does not become an expert in the use of the boomerang.

The boomerang is the simplest of all weapons. It is made of hard, tough wood; curved—not in the form of the segment of a circle, but in the form of a parabola. A bent root of a tree, having an angle of about

A BOOMERANG.

45 degrees, makes the best of boomerangs. A branch grown at about that angle is also good. A good boomerang may be cut from a board of hard pine, observing the proper angle. It is cut flat below, and slightly convex on the upper surface.

All boomerangs are not alike, nor are they all made for the same purpose. Some are intended as playthings, others for hunting and fighting. A typical boomerang is 19 inches long from tip to tip, 2½ inches wide in the broadest part, one-half inch thick and weighs 8½ ounces.

A native can do almost anything with his national weapon, and in such hands it is nearly equal to a gun. A man or animal behind a tree, rock or house, where perfectly secure from bullet or arrow, cannot escape the boomerang when thrown by an expert.

Even when thrown to a distance of 200 to 300 feet, which a native does with ease, it returns to the feet of the thrower unless it strikes something in its flight. But when aimed at something, so soon as it strikes that object, it either falls or assumes an entirely different flight, but does not return to the thrower. The foregoing in regard to this curious weapon is gleaned from an interesting account of it in Popular Science News.

The Cobra's Jewel.

We all have heard of the jewel situated in the head of a toad—in fact, Shakespeare alludes to it, saying, "Which like the toad, ugly and venomous, possesses yet a precious jewel in its head."

In India there is a common superstition to the effect that the jeweled cobra, a most poisonous reptile, carries the light concealed in the female firefly. This he lays upon the ground immediately in front of his mouth, and as the winged insects approach they become an easy prey to this most venomous reptile.

Beer In the Civilized World.

Some notion of the enormous consumption of beer in the civilized countries of the world may be gained from the fact that last year no less than 3,000,000,000 gallons of beer were imbibed in Europe alone. A foreign journal says: Germany of course headed the list of consumists with 1,031,000,000 gallons, Great Britain being a good second with 858,000,000. Third came Austria with 300,000,000 gallons; while France and Belgium were "knocked fourth" with 200,000,000 apiece. Denmark "tells" the list with a miserable 145,000 gallons. Of extra European countries the United States of course came first, with an annual consumption of 800,000,000, Australia taking second place at 22,500,000. The above figures of course represent round numbers.

The Oldest Prescription.

Professor Macalister, in the course of his studies in ancient Egyptian literature, has deciphered and translated from soiled and scored papyri some of the earliest medical writings. Among the earliest prescriptions was one for a "hair wash," for "promoting the growth of the hair," for the mother of King Chata, second king of the first dynasty, who reigned about 4000 B. C. It is as follows: Fat of a dog's face, 1; fruit of date palm, 1; ass' hoof, 1. Boil together in oil in saucepan. Directions for use: Rub thoroughly in.

PARK CLUB DANCE.

A Large Number of Guests Present Saturday Night.

DANCES on Saturday night at the Park Club that were so popular last year, have been resumed with increasing popularity among the friends and members. The first one of the season 1893-94 was given Saturday night. There was a larger assemblage than at any of those of last year. The floor was uncomfortably crowded during the dances.

An unusual number of guests from out of town were present.

The dances went off with a vim and were kept up continuously until midnight.

The patronesses were: Mrs. Samuel St. J. McCutchen, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. William J. Roome, Mrs. George C. Evans, and Mrs. William L. Brown.

LOOK OUT FOR THESE GIRLS.

They Claim to be Stranded in the City, and Solicit Money to get Home.

Yesterday and the day before several citizens of Elizabeth were imposed upon by three girls, who succeeded in getting various sums of money by representing that they were from Newark and that the only one who had had money for their fares lost her pocketbook. They were well dressed and appeared like respectable young women.

Mr. Crane's Meetings.

The Rev. Mr. Crane, the New England evangelist, preached an able sermon to a large number of young men, in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, yesterday afternoon. The speaker took for his text a portion of the 9th verse of the third chapter of Genesis: "Where art thou?" Said the speaker: "It was the voice of God calling on Adam, while he, in his nakedness, was hiding to avoid being seen by God. So to God calling to us now, 'where art thou.' Mr. Crane also preached in Trinity church early in the evening and again at 8.45 in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. Every evening this week meetings will be held in the association rooms, to which all men are cordially invited. Every afternoon Bible readings will be held to which both men and women are invited.

Ran a Nail Into its Foot.

Just at dusk last evening, as a mail from Dunellen was driving through East Fourth street, the horse stepped upon a nail, that emerged from the other piece of board walk, which had been recently torn up and left lying almost in the middle of the street. The nail was withdrawn from the horse's foot with difficulty, and the animal was quite lame from the wound.

Accused of Stealing.

Saturday night a colored woman was arrested on complaint of her employer, who charged her with stealing. Goods were found at the colored woman's home, bearing the employers initials. Shawls, etc., were exhibited in Justice Nash's court, until the casual observer would have taken it for granted that they were having washing "done by law."

Making Arrangements for their Fair.

Saturday night a joint committee, consisting of members from Winfield Scott Post, No. 23, G. A. R., and the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, met in the Post rooms, and appointed sub-committee to make arrangements for the fair. It was decided to hold the fair during the week beginning December 11th. It will be held in the Republican Association rooms.

A Snow Storm Last Night.

While the moon was shining brightly here last evening, Somervillians report that about one inch of snow fell there. The fall was heavier in the northern part of the State, where in some places the snow lay fully three inches deep.

JOHN ENGLISH MET WITH A ROUGH EXPERIENCE YESTERDAY.

He Says he was Taken Into an Empty House, at Terrill Road, and Unmercifully Beaten by William Adams and George Shay.

A MAN named John English reported to the police early this morning that he had been brutally beaten by William Adams and George Shay, yesterday afternoon Mr. English said that he had been taken by Adams and Shay into an empty house at Terrill road, and unmercifully beaten until he was almost insensible.

Mr. English's face bears evidence that he has been pounded badly. It is a mass of bruises, and both his eyes are blackened. He is a machinist and has been employed at Scott's Press Works for about seven years.

Adams and Shay were arrested and given a hearing before Justice Nash. Adams pleaded guilty, but Shay pleaded not guilty and asked for trial.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Edwin A. Conch of Lane avenue, this city, has been granted a patent on a fire escape.

Mr. Perkins, who has been away for some time for the benefit of his health, has returned with his family, to his home on Central avenue.

Justice of the Peace Mosher received word Saturday night of the death of his wife's sister, Mrs. Lydia S. Lorring, at Barnstable, Mass. She was buried yesterday.

The Rev. Dr. Barnes, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, will preach a Thanksgiving sermon in the First Presbyterian church, on Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. William Townsend, son of Mr. John E. Townsend, proprietor of the marble works on Somerset street, is ill with pneumonia. He is one of his father's most skillful workmen.

Father Stafford, formerly assistant at St. Mary's church in this city, but now vice-president of Seton Hall College, Orange, was the guest of Father Smythe yesterday. Father Stafford conducted the masses in the morning in St. Mary's church.

Mr. and Mrs. David W. Pond, who formerly lived at the corner of Seventh street and Union avenue, but who have been boarding at Miss Green's on Park avenue since their return from the World's Fair, to-day, took possession of their new house, at the corner of Seventh and Dudley street.

The friends of Mrs. John Shirley will be grieved to learn of the sad news of her death. She had only been married about two years, and was formerly Miss Mary Brennan of Dunellen. About a month ago Mr. Shirley was called to a child. She went outdoors too soon and took a heavy cold from which she never recovered. Inflammation set in and death resulted.

There is not a druggist in this vicinity that has better earned, or more decidedly made a success in business than Mr. L. W. Randolph, the druggist, of West Front street. Mr. Randolph may lay his prosperity to two things. The following remark made by one customer to another in his store explains what methods he uses, "Did the customer, "His clerks emulate him in diligence, and willingness to oblige. There is no store I like to patronize better."

After a long and painful illness, resulting from parturition, Mrs. Emma L. Hollenbeck, wife of Joseph and beautiful wife of Mr. William R. Rider, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Simpson of Grove street, died this morning. The news of her death will cause sadness to a host of young people in Plainfield with whom the young couple were exceedingly popular. The blow is the severest to the children, who have a band and the parents. The young couple had but recently fitted up most elegantly their home, and had everything that could be desired to make life happy. When danger was first apprehended the most eminent physicians were secured from New York to assist the family physician, Dr. Fritts, and all that medical aid could do was done, but without avail, for death overtook the sweetest and brightest of women, and made desolate the loveliest of homes, leaving an orphans two little ones too young to realize their sad loss. The sympathies of a community go out to the bereaved ones. Mrs. Rider was one of the valued members of the Melopoia Choral Society, which meets at the Casino of the Union County Country Club, of which Mr. Rider was a member. Her friends in the Melopoia frequently regretted her illness and hoped her recovery would be speedy that she might again be with them in the rehearsals. Mr. Rider is a regular commuter to New York on the "night train" and holds a responsible position in one of the largest importing houses in the country.

At the Theatres.

The beautiful Empire Theatre which has been the model followed by all theatres of recent completion in New York in the matter of interior decorations, has another charm in excess. It is "The Councilor's Wife," a charming humorous treatment in three acts of certain phases of modern life that are known to all who are familiar with the multi-colored aspect of metropolitan existence. The success is one of the most pronounced made in New York since "The Girl I Left Behind Me" was produced about this time a year ago.

Christening at St. Mary's Church.

At three o'clock yesterday afternoon the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Frey of South Second street was christened at St. Mary's church.

THEIR "DIAMOND" PINS.

JEWELRY THAT WAS BOUGHT ON THE INSTALMENT PLAN.

Two Jersey City Constables Visit Plainfield and Serve Two Deliquents—Is Paying What They Owed an Instalment House.

Saturday night two Jersey City Constables called on Justice Nash and asked him to indorse three warrants that they had for the arrest of three Plainfielders. Justice Nash indorsed two of the warrants, but would not indorse the other one because it stated that the amount of bail be fixed at $500. Justice Mosher also refused to indorse it. It seems that the men were acting in this street on this person who had bought jewelry which they thought to be diamond pins from an instalment house that had failed before the whole amount had been paid. The purchasers claimed that the pins were glass and refused to pay the balance.

The constables soared itwas the duties to indorse squaring up, but as the third one refused he was taken before Justice Mosher and given a hearing. The constables refused to give their names. Lawyer Hetfield appeared for the defendant.

The men left, stating that they would be back to-day. They did not put in an appearance, however.

NUPTIALS.

Karet—Cohen.

THE marriage of Mr. Jacob A. Karet of this city to Miss Laura Cohen of Newark took place at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Henry Cohen, 31 Grand street, Newark, at 5.30 o'clock last night.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joseph Leucht.

Mr. W. E. Lehman of Newark was best man and Miss R. Lehman was the maid of honor.

The bride wore a pretty dress of white satin with lace trimmings. The maid of honor was attired in white silk.

After a short honeymoon the bridal couple will locate in Plainfield, on Grove street. About fifty guests were present.

BREVITIES.

—France is going to try the plan of printing postal cards in blocks, with stubs like a check book, so that the writer can keep notes of his correspondents.

—There are about 6,000,000 leaves upon an elm tree 30 feet high. That is in its season. Just now the limbs are bare, the leaves having been leaving for parts unknown.

—Messrs. Doane & Edsall say: "Those cork sole button boots arrived in town just in time for those damp cool days, and that they are sold only by Doane & Edsall."

—The Board of Freeholders was to pass upon the claims for expenses of the recent election, and the members assembled Friday afternoon. Out of respect for the deceased County Clerk, James J. Gerber, an adjournment was declared.

—The men's meetings, at 3 p. m., and bible readings for men and women, at 3.30 p. m., conducted by Rev. Mr. Crane, at the Y. M. C. A. rooms will be continued until Friday inclusive. The readings have been largely attended and found very interesting and instructive.

—The three-year-old son of Frank Vanderhoof of West Front street met with a serious accident Friday afternoon. The little fellow had placed a chair alongside the stove and climbed upon it. The chair toppled over and he fell with both hands on the stove. His hands were badly burned.

—A little girl named Delia Herlick had a narrow escape from being run down by a heavy delivery wagon on the Dunellen road yesterday afternoon. The little one was playing about the kitchen at her parents' home on Somerset street, when a heavy door fell, narrowly missing striking her on top the head. She received a glancing blow, from the effects of which she was unconscious for awhile.

—C. R. Howard, of Somerville has patented a fire escape. This device comprises a folding skeleton framework, which is anchored flexibly to the floor directly adjacent to the window in such manner as to permit of being thrown over upon the sill and lie horizontally thereon. A pivoted rail is turned outwardly in a rigidly horizontal manner, forming a safety rail, within which the escaping person adjusts himself to start down the flexible ladder, which latter is formed of side ropes provided with step bars.

State Aid For Parish Schools.

A determined effort, it is said, will be made during the coming session of the Legislature to have a bill passed providing for State aid for parish schools. A number of prominent Catholics have the matter in hand, and will try to have the bill introduced by a Republican leader in both houses. A monster petition will accompany it.

"Not Dead, but Married."

Because a Park avenue merchant went away yesterday to get married some one placed upon the door of his store a sheet of paper bearing the following:

"Not Dead, but Married."

The sign was taken down this morning.

WOLVES GOT FREE.

STAMPEDED AN ELIZABETH THEATRE CROWD.

Brave Work by a Stage Hero, and the Manager Made a Great Show for the Galleries—Is Plainfield to be Exposed to the Same Townfoolery?

A thrilling scene on the boards was presented Saturday night at Library Hall, Elizabeth, during a Bowery style of play "Across the Grave," in which a horse and cart around the leading role.

The theatre was crowded. The curtain had been rung up for the third act and the scene showed the hero and his sweetheart, who had been pursued by wolves, standing in a circle of dozen while four wolves, gaunt and hungry, after a long ride in boxes from Pueblo, were leaping about snarling and trying to get at the hero and the girl.

A high net had been stretched across the stage.

Suddenly the hero began to fire off his revolver and the girl to scream. This frightened the half-tamed wolves and they began to make frantic attacks at the netting to get out among the audience.

The manager of the show saw that the wolves were now beyond control and shouted to the stage hands to lower the curtain, but all the hands were getting out of the way as fast as possible.

One of the brutes gnawed a hole in the netting and jumped through the aperture to the stage, followed by three more, which also escaped.

This was too much for the audience, and they arose panic stricken from their seats, and most of them fled from the theatre.

The big brute, after showing fight for a short time, jumped into one of the private boxes, where it was met by a stage hand, beaten back to the stage and soon subdued.

Another beast was found under a pile of stage grass, and was soon beaten into submission.

During the thickest of the battle the musicians had fled. The incident occupied over half an hour. The play was finished before empty seats.

Fortunately none of the audience were injured in the excitement of getting out of the theatre.

PLUNDERED BY TRAMPS.

Farmers in the Vicinity of Rahway Suffer Excessive Depredations.

The bold and wicked tramp has again made himself known in Union county, and this time he has settled himself well on the outskirts of Rahway, where his presence is being acutely felt by the farmers who live in the neighborhood.

The tramps have called upon R. A. Shotwell, a wealthy farmer and dairyman in the vicinity, several times. The retreat of one of the gangs was discovered accidentally by one of Mr. Shotwell's men, who reports that he saw at least a dozen fat, lazy looking fellows lounging about. A large fat turkey was roasting on a spit, while vegetables of every sort and description were plentiful.

All the farmers in the neighborhood have suffered by their depredations to a great extent. Several young shotes which were being fattened for Thanksgiving dinners by some of them have mysteriously disappeared.

County Clerk Gerber's Funeral.

The funeral of the late County Clerk James J. Gerber, in St. Mary's church, Elizabeth, Saturday, was the largest for several years. Politicians from all parts of the county were present. The hearse was escorted from the residence of the deceased to the church by the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association, the Union County Board of Freeholders and the Bar Association. The pall-bearers were County Collector Meyer, Judge McCormick, City Treasurer Whelan, Jerman Forman, Surrogate Parrot, James Martine, J. Desmidines and President Kean, of the Elizabeth City Council.

Among those who attended the funeral were County Attorney McClure of this city.

Justice Nash married, Saturday, the nuptial knot for two young people, who came by one train and left by the next. There names were Walter Seargent and Sophia Roser.

SERMONS BY THE WAY.

THE THEMES IN TWO LEADING CHURCHES YESTERDAY.

Rev. Dr. Richards on "The Master Saith," and Rev. Mr. Cornwell on "India."

THE usual high character of the sermons of the Plainfield ministers was maintained yesterday in all our churches. A big squads of two gf them given below, may serve as a sample.

Rev. Dr. Richards preached with his usual power to a large congregation which habitually attends that beautiful edifice of public worship. His text was from Matt. 26: 18 and on the words, "The Master saith." In the course of his sermon he said in substance:

Dr. Richards's Sermon.

"Many most helpful lessons come from people whose names we do not know. This man, a householder in Jerusalem, who offered Christ the hospitality of his home on the night before the crucifixion, it was message enough for him that 'the Master' sent to request it.

Christ speaks to all men with a tone of masterful authority Men generally feel it; but this man obeyed it. It was at no small risk that this house owner threw open his house to Christ at a time when the rulers were seeking to put to death 'the Master said' and that was enough for him.

We often ask what it is to be a Christian; this might be taken as one form of answer: "to take Christ's word as the word of a master, and at once obey it."

It is a perversion of Christian worship if we come to church only for something pleasant to hear. A good servant ought to be a good listener; but if it stops with listening, he is a very poor servant.

When the gospel is preached we need a call to immediate action men feel its power. Peter the Hermit preached the crusade, with all Europe for a congregation. Two college lads started the student volunteer movement for foreign missions. An evangelist called men action, when there is no simple a matter as rising for prayers. In the regular church work there ought to be the same definite authority applied over a broader range of useful service, so that the preaching would bring the hearer up against obligation to be done for the good of men.

The church ought to be more like a veritable army, whose orders are obeyed. In the early days of the late war before the men had learned discipline a private came to his colonel and said: "Jim, I think I'll go home for a couple of weeks." "What for?" "Oh, I want to get in the hay and see the folks." "All right, come back as soon as you can." We should laugh at such a thing for an army; but in the church how many make excuses, "I have bought a piece of ground, five yoke of oxen. I have married a wife."

When the Master speaks, men ought not to make excuses, but obey."

Mr. Cornwell's Sermon on "India."

Mr. J. G. Cornwell of Pennington Seminary preached an eloquent sermon in the Congregational church last evening. His subject was "India." He said in part: "Perhaps you know that in that far away country most all of the people are, or have been sick and so now are dead. Therefore, why was it that I was born in this Christian country instead of India? Might I not have been born there as well as here; but I thank God to-night that I was born here, as that I might give to the gospel to the heathen. When Livingstone died, fifty miles away from the nearest white man, the Africans cut out his heart and buried it under the black soil of that country. I wish I was in India to-night, and also hope that I may die there and that my heart may also be placed under the soil of India. England has compelled the natives to give up their heathen customs in public, but in secret the heathen of India are the same as they were a thousand years ago. How can this be remedied? The gospel of Jesus Christ can alone convert those heathen and the way of Christianity." The speaker also said that Christianity in India had advanced 500 per cent. in the last year.

EDITORIAL NOTES

One Hundred Thousand Enough.

Expert opinion is to the effect that it requires $100,000 a year to live suitably in the social swim of New York city, without extravagance or ostentation. A man must keep at least 12 horses, all for purposes of pleasure, with carriages, grooms and stablemen in a swarm. There must be a servant maid for each one of the children, to dress them and wait on them at every turn. If there are grown daughters, each one must have her own maid, so that she herself does not so much as mend a tear in her gown. The governess for the small children gets $40 a month, while the cook gets $75 a month at the very least, and is much more respected and feared than the governess is. There must be two hall boys to answer the door bell, and each of them is paid nearly as much as the governess. There must be a butler, with several assistants, and these lord it over the $100,000 household.

Result of all this expenditure—there is not a hole or corner in the mansion safe from the eye and ear of a spying hireling. The children of the family will be brought up for all purposes of real life much as if they had had their arms tied fast to their bodies in infancy and never had them loosed. Of what use on this earth is a human being who cannot even dress himself? Queen Victoria's daughters were not brought up so foolishly helpless as many silly and snobbish American parents are bringing up their girls. The royal princesses were taught to wait upon themselves, so that they at least know how to do so, and each was made to learn some useful occupation.

The Ideal Newspaper Again.

Walter Morton Payne, associate editor of The Dial, thinks he knows what it ought to be. Like most gentlemen who live upon an exalted moral plane and edit weekly religious or æsthetic papers, Mr. Payne knows exactly the needs of a daily newspaper. He tells us in The Forum. Most men know more about editing a daily paper before they have tried it than they ever do afterward.

Many of Mr. Payne's ideas are good, however. For instance, he says to the editors: "Don't lie. Don't use illiterate English. Don't pander to the tastes of the depraved." That is very good, but many will disagree with the gentleman when he declares that a newspaper, "to be wordly partisan, must abandon self respect altogether." Much better are the three aims he lays down as those which lie behind the conduct of every well conducted newspaper:

First—As a collector of news, pure and simple, its work should be done in the scientific spirit, placing accuracy of statement above all other considerations.

Second—In its selection and arrangement of the news of the day its editors should have regard to real rather than sensational values. It should present its facts in their proper perspective rather than, of course, in a very different perspective from that required by permanent history), and it should carefully exclude, or at least minimize to the utmost, those facts which it cannot possibly benefit the public to know, or which it knows to be likely to pander to vulgarize popular taste and lower popular standards of morality.

Third—In its comment upon the happenings of the day or the week it is bound to be honest, to stand for well defined principles, to express the sincere convictions of its intellectual head and of those associated with him in the work.

Dr. Bruno Terne's idea for disposing of city garbage and sewage

He would have all garbage and sewage treated in vast laboratories. This could be done without any offensive odor being attached. The material would be separated into fat and fertilizer. The grease could be used for soap making and for lubricating oil. The residuum, after drying, constitutes an admirable fertilizer, which is 17 per cent of the weight of the original material. It contains ammonia and phosphoric acid, exactly the substances which agriculturists bring at large expense from Florida, South America and elsewhere. Heat kills all the microbes that would be dangerous to health in this way of treating the city refuse. Leibig calculated that in a city of 1,000,000 every year 45,000,000 pounds of fertilizing material are produced and mostly go to waste.

A ship canal of much importance to European commerce will be opened next year. It connects the North sea with the Baltic and has been constructed jointly by Prussia and the German empire. "This great waterway is 66 yards wide at its bottom and has no locks, the water flowing through it on a level with the Baltic sea. Sluice gates at each end regulate the level.

An invention has been perfected which will enable musical composers to tick off their notes on the typewriter instead of putting them down one at a time in the old, slow, painful pen and ink way. This will be a great boon to composers, though it will be rather hard on the rest of the world if the result of it is to let loose upon us more floods of variety concert hall songs.

If the silver bullion in the United States treasury were coined, there would be enough gold to the government through seignorage to amount to $4,481,000 silver dollars.

LOST IN WINTRY GALES.

Hundreds Drowned on the English and Irish Coasts.

SHORES STREWN WITH WRECKS.

The British Isles Visited by a Terrific Storm Which Disabled Railroads and Telegraph Lines—Fishing Fleets Migling—Steamship Helvetia May Be Lost.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Over 200 lives are known to have been lost during the gale which has now swept over the British coast, and the crews of several boats are still missing.

The news arriving every hour records further fatalities and details the great damage done by the storm. It is generally agreed that the weather which has just visited the coast of England, Scotland and Ireland is the most severe in many years. Dispatches received here from Banff say that the seashore for 30 miles is strewn with the wreckage of three vessels.

Owing to the severity of the weather, the railroads and telegraph lines in the north of Ireland are virtually stopped. Some idea of the force of the gale can be gathered from the fact that two heavy railroad engines were blown off the track near Inverurie, blocking all traffic north and necessitating the dispatch of two wrecking trains to clear the track. The wrecking trains have not since been heard from, so it is supposed that this work has been impeded by a fall of snow.

Many Fishing Boats Missing.

Only four of the twelve members of the crew of the steamship Salacia, which was wrecked near St. Ives, Cornwall, escaped. The coast guard has been on the alert night and day all along the beach since Friday morning, and many exciting rescues by means of the rocket apparatus are reported. During these rescues the coast guardsmen brought ashore the seamen of the Spanish steamer Besaid and four men saved from the Cintra.

The steamer Rosedale entered the harbor of St. Ives, but after landing go her anchors both chains carried away, and she drifted toward the rocks. The coast guardsmen manned their lifeboat and were preparing to go to the rescue of the Rosedale stranded on the rocks, and the guardsmen with difficulty managed to rescue the crew by means of the rocket line.

Tremendous damage has been done at West Hartlepool by the storm, which will cause much loss and consequent suffering to the residents of that locality. Considerable anxiety is expressed for the safety of the crews of 100 fishing boats, which were last seen being driven northward by the force of the gale.

From all parts of Ireland where there is telegraphic communication come reports of the severity of the gale, which has been accompanied there by a heavy snowstorm.

During the height of the fury of the gale the steamer Hampshire was driven ashore in St. Ives' bay and was pounded to pieces near Bernard's head. Twenty-one of the Hampshire's crew were drowned. Only one man managed to reach the shore alive.

The most disastrous effects of the storm already since the commencement of the gale rescued 40 seamen and officers by means of the rocket apparatus.

Owing to the severity of the storm, the mailboats running between Dover and Calais have been compelled to suspend their trips, which is a very unusual occurrence, as these vessels venture across the channel in very heavy weather. Many vessels have sought shelter, badly damaged, under the lee of the high, jutting cliffs of the channel, and at least two vessels are known to have perished on the Goodwin sands.

The steamship Lucania, from New York to Liverpool, was unable to land her passengers at the latter port until Sunday. Nine vessels were reported stranded between Dover and Gravelines, and two of these were dashed to pieces. So fearful was the sea that the lifeboat was unable to leave the harbor, though its crew made repeated attempts to do so, and the lifeboat's cockswain during one of these attempts, the lifeboat man being crushed between the pier and the boat.

The schooner Wicklanes has been wrecked near Yarmouth, and five of her crew were drowned while the boat lay on a ledge of rocks pounding to pieces in full view of thousands of spectators. It was impossible to launch the lifeboat on account of the tremendous sea dashing upon the coast, and the schooner was too far out to be reached by the rocket line. While people on shore saw the poor sailors drowned one by one, while thousands stood praying for them upon the shore,

Enacting the Scene Over the Dead.

Two tourist steamers on Lake Windermere foundered during the gale, but no lives are reported to have been lost by these accidents.

The streets of Scarborough, the well known watering place, are filled with debris. Seventeen fishing smacks have not returned, and the greatest anxiety is felt for their safety.

Amid the driving storm a large vessel was seen standing before the gale, with a tar barrel blazing on board of her as a signal of distress.

After a long and exciting pursuit along the coast station after station of the coast guard being notified to be on the lookout for the vessel in distress—the steamer was finally driven ashore and made out to be the Rose of Abercorn. The steamer went ashore near Spreedon cliff, where the coast guardsmen managed to fire a rocket line over her, and after hauling the heavier hawsy tackle on board, they were rescued just as the steamer seemed upon the point of breaking up.

The vessel quardsmen had hardly got the 17 men belonging to the Rose ashore through the breaking surf when the Norwegian three masted vessel Aral was driven by the fearful sea and wind pressure sailing and began to pound to pieces on the rocks, the sea making a clean sweep over her and washing the new overboard and her masts only the stumps rose of the crew of nine being saved.

The fishing boat Vine during the gale was driven from her moorings and was lost to sight while thousands of people saw the crew struggle terribly in the waves and sink after being completely exhausted.

At midnight, the reports received made the total number of deaths from drowning during the gale 124, and the wrecking of scores of the several vessels which have been seen to founder off the coast, and the total fatalities, irrespective of the numerous disappearances, will be reached at quite 200, according to the most conservative estimates.

The packet boat Killarney, from Milford arrived at Cork early and reports that when 15 miles out on Friday morning she sighted the disabled National line steamship Helvetia showing signals of distress. The Killarney stood by the Helvetia for five hours, but was unable, owing to the tremendous sea, to take her in tow and was obliged to leave her to her fate.

Dispatches from Calais say that a terrific gale has been blowing there.

It is added that 22 fishing boats have already been driven ashore, and that 19 fishermen have been drowned.

Reports received here from all parts of the north of France say that the most severe weather has prevailed along the coast, and that there have been many wrecks near Havre, Cherbourg and Fecamp. Telephonic communication throughout all England is impeded.

It is reported that hundreds of lives have been lost during the storm in the northern part of France. Many bodies have been cast ashore in the channel part of France. The pier at Calais suffered badly.

Calais in Mourning.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The entire town of Calais is given up to general grief owing to the fact that it is known that 29 fishing boats owned by residents of that place have been wrecked in the storm and that many of these boats carried more than 20 fishermen in each.

KILLED THE CANDIDATE.

Fatal Results of an Initiation Into a Dime Novel Founded Society.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Nov. 20.—Carlle Willis, 18 years of age, was shot and killed while being initiated into a secret society composed of boys between ages run from 12 to 15 years. The society was called the "S. S. S. S.," the letters standing for Seven Secrets, Silent Shades." The boys, whose minds had evidently become inflamed by bloodthirsty literature, had a cave on the outskirts of the city, the walls of the recess being hung with pistols, old muskets, a few swords and other warlike arrangements.

Lewis Barker and Thomas Winter, two leading spirits in the "S. S. S. S." invited young Willis to join the band. He consented and was formally initiated after being blindfolded.

When the ceremony was over, young Barker pointed a pistol at the Willis boy with the intention of scaring him. Just as the trigger was jerked from the eyes of Willis, Barker pulled the trigger, and Willis fell with a bullet close to his heart. He was quickly carried to an adjoining house, but died inside of 30 minutes.

The entire "S. S. S. S." was arrested, but most of them declined to say anything concerning the killing, as to do so was contrary to their oath. Some of them, however, were frightened into telling enough of the occurrence to enable the coroner's jury to bring in a verdict of accidental death.

TORTURED A GIRL.

An Arabian Sorceress Who Doctors With Redhot Irons and a Knife.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 20.—Physicians having given her up as incurable, the parents of an epileptic, Mary Moore, aged 11 years, of Maltby, this county, called in an Arabian woman, who said the girl was possessed of an evil spirit and could not recover until the evil one was driven out of her. In case of a cure, the girl's parents were to pay the sorceress $600.

The woman took the girl to her home and with a redhot iron branded her with crosses. No part of her body escaped. Her hair was also cut off and a cross branded on the scalp. The girl was taken home more dead than alive. The doctors say the patient will die.

The Columbia's Fast Trip.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—The Columbia has fairly won the title of queen of the ocean. Faster than ever sped a warship or merchant vessel, she steamed over the coast from Cape Ann to Cape Porpoise on her trial trip, and the United States board of inspection on board. Her average speed for the 44 knots was 22.81 knots, but she steamed 74 knots of her run at a rate that averaged 23.51 knots an hour. It was a magnificent display of speed. By her little four hour spin she won for her builders, William Cramp & Son, the neat bonus of $250,000.

Brutal Pennsylvania Robbers.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 20.—A bold robbery was perpetrated in Lawrence county a short distance from Enon Valley. The victim of the outrage was Mrs. Mary Williams, the aged wife of Joseph N. Williams, a farmer. Williams was away from home. Three masked men bound and gagged Mrs. After ransacking her house for what they thought was her money they left. It was an hour the old lady finally disclosed the hiding place of the money, and the robbers secured $200 in gold, after which they fled. Mrs. Williams was found in the morning still bound and gagged.

Fined For Cruelty to a Skunk.

GEORGETOWN, Mass., Nov. 20.—Pastor H. R. McCartney of the Baptist church was fined $15 for cruelty to a skunk. The pastor confined the skunk in a box and applied fire by means of redhot irons. Some of the congregation objected to this exhibition, and the preacher was arrested and fined by Judge Fenn.

Killed in a Football Game.

TOLEDO, Nov. 20.—Raymond Carew, halfback of the Toledo high school football team, was caught in a jam in a game in Aldrich, Mich. A score of players piled on top of him, and his neck was dislocated. He was brought to his home here and died soon after.

MAY DEPORT THE QUEEN

The Hawaiian Government Has Already Contemplated It.

ANOTHER RESOURCE FOR DOLE.

Disappointed by the Reports From Honolulu, the Administration Has Nothing to Offer—Previous Speculation May Have Been Wrong.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—A newspaper correspondent at Honolulu sends the following, which was written a few hours before the steamer Australia left Honolulu for San Francisco on Nov. 11:

The new minister has made no sign as to the Cleveland-Willis policy in regard to us, but he gives mysterious hints of some unpleasant duty yet to perform. What this is we cannot learn. I know that the government has received nothing from him up to the steamer's leaving, either officially or otherwise.

The papers also contains the following interview with H. W. Severence, ex-United States consul general at Honolulu, who arrived here on the Australia:

"What will the provisional government do when a demand is made that the queen be restored?"

Mr. Severance replied, "They will probably ask me to cancel the exequatur of the minister making such an absurd demand and cause him to return to this country."

"And as a last resort?"

"Oh, she will have been disposed of."

"What do you mean—that she will have been killed?"

"No, nothing of the kind," said Mr. Severance, "There will be no bloodshed. She will be out of the country. She will have been deported. This move was contemplated before the news got out in the newspapers, but it was considered inadvisable, for then it was believed that the great United States would listen to reason and order the lamb trampled on would be necessary. The provisional government stands ready to carry out the suggestion at the moment it seems necessary for the safety of the powers that now rule the island."

"What effect will the letter of Secretary Gresham have on the government's action when it reaches Honolulu?"

Mr. Severance said, "I should not be surprised were the queen deported the next day."

No News at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The state department is less di-posed now than ever to take the public into its confidence on the Hawaiian question. In copdeiring the news by the Australia it should be understood that much that has been published during the past two weeks has been pure conjecture and without any part that is an indubitable fact is that those in the confidence of the administration have felt and expressed the utmost assurance that the provisional government will be overthrown Liliuokalani had already been restored to the throne. Assertions as to Minister Willis' instructions have been almost wholly inferences from this and from the expressions in Secretary Gresham's published letter.

The information as to these instructions sent out 10 days ago was received from what was believed to be a thoroughly trustworthy authority. This was that Minister Willis was to go to Honolulu the provisional government to give way to the restoration of the ex-queen, but was to employ no force, waiting for further instructions if he found it necessary.

Did Dole Have Warning?

It is possible that Minister Willis had become convinced to his entire satisfaction, before leaving Honolulu, that before President Dole, that the provisional government cannot be displaced without force, and so has determined to wait for further instructions.

It seems certain at all events that President Dole had no suspicion when the Australia sailed that it was the purpose of Minister Willis to demand the queen's abdication. It is not possible that Mr. Thurston, Hawaiian minister here, could have given him warning, for Secretary Gresham's letter announcing the decision of Mr. Harrison was not published and left no opportunity for him to warn his government. It has been the chief fear of the friends of the provisional government in this country that in its ignorance of public sentiment here and the first shock of the threatened action by the United States it would yield its authority.

It is true, however, that for some time past the provisional government has abandoned all hope of favorable action by the present administration toward annexation and has been considering means to put itself on a permanent footing.

Mrs. Van Reed Reinstated Today.

It may be that the publications and the press have come to a wrong conclusion as to the extent of Minister Willis' instructions. The fact that Secretary Gresham's letter declaring what he thought ought to be done, and President Cleveland's declaration that he agreed with the secretary's opinions, reached Honolulu and determined to proceed with what they declared ought to be done. Some people believe that the publications must have been intended as an appeal to public opinion for information as to the course to pursue. The choice seems to lie between this opinion and the one that Minister Willis has found it impracticable to carry out instructions to restore the queen without using means he was not prepared to employ.

The popular impression on the first news of Secretary Gresham's letter would reach Honolulu by the steamer which left Vancouver on Thursday or the one which left San Francisco on Friday.

But on last Sunday or Monday a chartered steamer left San Francisco for Honolulu, having on board newspaper men and doubtless also some communications from Minister Thurston to his government. This chartered steamer should arrive at Honolulu today. This would be after the royal steamer to arrive at that President had sailed from Honolulu on Thursday of last week. It is considered that the chances of success of Minister Willis to restore the queen will be lessened after the news of the reception accorded Secretary Gresham's letter in this country is read in the islands.

WILL DODGE MELLO.

The New Brazilian Fleet Will Try and Avoid a Battle at Sea.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Brazilian Minister Mendonca visited the Nictheroy before she sailed. He said he was satisfied that the boats which are going from this country to Brazil would reach their port of destination without trouble. He, however, is of the opinion that if the Nictheroy chances to meet one of Mello's vessels, such as the Aquidaban, she will undoubtedly be sunk. "We do not expect any such thing, however, for the Nictheroy will do her best to keep out of the way. She is not fit to battle with a warship like the Aquidaban, but I am sure that she could defeat most of the other vessels belonging to the insurgent fleet."

The second cruiser of the new Brazilian fleet will, according to Minister Mendonca, be ready for sailing some time the latter part of this week. She will follow directly in the course of the Nictheroy, and until she sails the Brazilian minister will remain in this city looking after the arrangements.

On Saturday he received a dispatch from the governmental party in Brazil stating that the situation had not materially changed within the past few weeks. He did not, therefore, believe that there is any truth in the report that Mello has already put out to meet the new cruisers.

The Brazilian minister stated that the cruisers which were recently been purchased by the Brazilian government would rendezvous in one of the northern ports of Brazil, and that they would be met in all probability by two of the largest warships there. The Brazilians expect to reach port in safety more through their speed than their fighting qualities, as the ships which go from here are capable of a speed of 18 knots, while Mello's vessels cannot steam faster than 14 or 15 knots, at least those which could offer any practical opposition to the Nictheroy or the Britannia. The precautions taken in supplying the vessels so extensively undoubtedly mean that they will seek safety rather than face a battle with any of Mello's bigger warships.

RAILROADS SWINDLED.

Counterfeiters Worked Off Over $100,000 Worth of Bogus Tickets.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—It is alleged here that counterfeit tickets to the amount of over $100,000 have been accepted since Oct. 1 by the Baltimore and Ohio, Erie, Nickel Plate, Pittsburg and Western and other eastern railroads. The counterfeit in each case was so good that not only were the tickets accepted without question, but were passed by the auditors of the roads.

The first intimation of crookedness was discovered in one of the offices through the duplicate numbering. In one day nearly 300 duplicated tickets showed up in the collections, and a panic reigned in the auditing department.

Each of the tickets read from Chicago to New York and was worth $18. The one day's collections showed the company had honored at least $5,400 worth of tickets, for which it had not received a cent of revenue.

The roads are determined to bring the criminals to justice and are bearing the cost jointly. Up to date they have expended over $11,000 in securing proof which, it is confidentially believed, will land the criminals in the penitentiary for long terms.

There is no way of knowing how many tickets were sold by the counterfeiters. The railroads now have in their possession about $200,000 worth, more than half of which were honored for transportation.

The Powderly-Hayes Feud.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—The committee on finance of the general assembly of the Knights of Labor was in session nearly all day Sunday at official headquarters. During the session both Mr. Powderly, against whom serious charges have been preferred, and Mr. Hayes, who in his capacity of secretary-treasurer made the charges, appeared before the committee and answered the questions put to them in relation to receipts and expenditures. It has been semi-officially stated that this committee would make its report on Tuesday, at which time some sensational features are expected.

Escaped Through Libby Prison Tunnel.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Dr. Charles Warring-ton Earle, one of the most prominent of Chicago's physicians, died here. He had a distinguished record during the war and had been severely wounded in every battle. He was captured at the battle of Chickamauga and sent to Libby prison. From there he escaped through the famous tunnel.

A Wolf In the Audience.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 20.—The escape of a wolf from a net stretched across the stage of Library hall during the play of "Across the Trail" created a panic in the audience. The wolf was attacked by the manager of the troupe with a club, and the animal jumped into one of the boxes and was captured.

Forced to Drink Poison.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Mrs. Mary Karsten is in the Harlem hospital suffering from carbolic acid poisoning. Her husband, Henry, is under arrest on the charge of having administered the poison. The woman was unconscious when removed to the hospital, and her life is despaired of.

Drowned in Cayuga Lake.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Dr. Lucius Merriam, instructor in political economy at Cornell University, and Miss Mary L. Vearing of Laurens, S. C., are supposed to have been drowned in Cayuga lake since Saturday afternoon. Their boat has been found by a searching party.

MANY FREIGHT TRAINS STALLED.

Five Organizations of Railroad Men Go Out Today, and the Strikers Say Not a Wheel Will Be Turning Tonight.—No Violence as Yet.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—Reports received by the general grievance committee at the Bingham House indicate that the Lehigh Valley railroad strike is of a much graver nature than the railroad officials are willing to acknowledge.

Vice President Theodore Voorhees stated that his information was to the effect that all trains on the road were tied up. The only desertion from the ranks of the employees, so far as he had learned, were two telegraph operators, several firemen and one or two engineers. The small number of men who had quit on account of the refusal of the company to reinstate a discharged operator had not hampered the road to any considerable degree. When questioned as to the alleged omission of certain clauses or paragraphs in his official bulletin posted along the line last summer, which is said to have stated the company would respect certain alleged rights of the employees, he denied the assertions in the most emphatic manner.

Calls Wilkins a Liar.

"Tell Mr. Wilkins, with my compliments," he said, "that he lies when he says any such statement has been made. We do not apprehend much if any trouble from now on, as it does not appear to be as much of a strike as one might be led to believe from the manner in which the men have acted."

When Chief Wilkins, who is chief of the grievance committee, was informed of Vice President Voorhees' statements, he said: "We have documentary evidence to sustain us in our statements, and will say further that I most heartily return the compliments of Mr. Voorhees which have been transmitted to me. Never at any time have we asked the reinstatement of Mr. Hughes, the discharged operator. But when he (Voorhees) was asked to receive the committee, he exclaimed, 'Ask me to do anything in reason, but do not ask the company to back down from the stand it has taken.'

"He doesn't want the company to back down, but he does want us to do so. Well, we won't. We are in the field to stay and will win in for the men. They failed to have the promises made by the company fulfilled and came to the grand officers as the last resort to assist them."

Said Assistant Grand Chief Youngson, who is the personal representative of Grand Chief Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers:

"We intend to help them all we can."

Chief Wilkins has received congratulatory telegrams from lodges of railway employes of the Reading and Pennsylvania lines, pledging them moral and financial support in their strike.

Only Mails May Pass.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 20.—There is no change in the situation on the Lehigh Valley railroad here. The tieup of the freight and coal traffic is complete. Since 10 o'clock Saturday night not a single freight or coal train has passed over the Wyoming division of the road, and if the strikers are to be believed none will pass over until their grievances are adjusted.

The strikers are not interfering with the running of mail trains, but they object to the company attaching passenger cars to such trains. They say that this must cease. When the Philadelphia flyer pulled into the depot last night, she was not allowed to depart on her western trip until the passenger cars were detached. The train then proceeded on its way with mail cars only.

The railroad officials were powerless in the matter. They either had to consent to "cutting" the train or cancel its western trip. Two baggage cars were attached to the rear end of the train when it arrived here from the east. The strikers say the cars are filled with rifles. Superintendent Esser says the cars are empty.

The men feel confident that in the end they will win. Committees were appointed to guard railroad property. The strikers fear that their enemies may damage property, which would give the company an excuse to call upon the governor for the militia.

A Systematic Strike.

BUFFALO, Nov. 20.—A trip through the Lehigh yards at West Buffalo revealed nothing of a riotous character. It was learned that the engineers and operators will be ordered out first and that the strike is now only in its incipiency. The five organizations comprising all the men on the road, except the switchmen who are not federated, will stick together. If the ordering out of the two classes of employees named is not sufficient to tie up the road, others will be called out. It is predicted that by tonight not a wheel will be turning on the Lehigh between Buffalo and Philadelphia.

This strike is being arranged more systematically than that engineered by Sweeney last year. It is not thought that any act of violence will be committed here, but Sheriff Beck has been called upon to swear in deputies to protect the Lehigh's property.

Excitement at Sayre.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 20.—All the Lehigh freight trains that have reached Sayre since 12 o'clock Saturday night have been abandoned, and the yards are now filled with cars. The crews have simply deserted their trains, and the strike includes engineers, firemen, conductors, brakesmen and telegraph operators. It is a mammoth tieup.

At Sayre there has been great excitement. Five hundred strikers hung about the tracks all day Sunday. Two passenger trains were got through, but the strikers say they are the last that will run over the road until the trouble is settled. There is much perishable freight now in the yards, and the other roads refuse to assist the Lehigh by helping it. No violence has yet been offered.

Engineer Killed In a Collision.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 20.—David Green, a freight engineer, was killed here in a rear end collision. The fireman was seriously injured.

SPOILING FOR FIGHT.

A Mutiny Reported to Have Occurred on the New Brazilian Warship.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—It is reported that there was a serious riot, which amounted to a mutiny, on board the Brazilian warship Nictheroy while she was lying at anchor in the lower bay just previous to sailing.

Whisky is said to have been smuggled aboard, and the sailors indulged in a drunken fight, which soon became general. The officers took a hand and tried to quell the disturbance, using cutlasses and belaying pins.

The decks ran red with blood, according to the report, and many of the volunteer heroes who went to fight for Peixoto and glory had a touch of war even before passing Sandy Hook.

The affair was kept as quiet as possible so that none of the crew might be arrested and the sailing of the ship delayed. The refusal of some of the drunken sailors to cheer for the Brazilian flag is said to have been the cause of the mutiny.

Tramps Hold Up a Freight Train.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Nov. 20.—A second attempt to hold up a freight train by tramps occurred near here. Freight train No. 204, bound to Boston, was stopped just outside the city limits by a force of tramps, who made a savage assault upon the trainmen, armed with clubs and stones. The trainmen were driven into the caboose, where they were held close prisoners for nearly an hour. The attacking party rained down stones and clubs upon the car until it was a complete wreck and were only driven away by the timely arrival of a second train. Several of the trainmen were hurt by the flying missiles.

Sure That Monkeys Converse.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Professor Robert L. Garner has returned here after a residence of nearly six months in cages in the heart of Africa, where he went in order to study the simian language, to which he believes he has found a key. He said: "I have accomplished all that I hoped to in the time and with the means at my disposal. I am satisfied that the apes have a language. The natives are all right. Monkeys converse. They use a language which is invariable and constant. Many of their sounds I am able to imitate, of course I have not yet obtained a complete knowledge of the language."

Prince Alexander's Funeral.

VIENNA, Nov. 20.—Prince Alexander of Battenberg will be buried at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Gratz, the capital city of Styria. The funeral promises to be of a most imposing character. Gratz is in deep mourning. The condition of the Countess Hartenau, Alexander's widow, is very serious, owing to the shock caused by the news of his death.

Cheered McKinley In Church.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 20.—The hour at the close of the service in the Hanson Place Methodist church yesterday morning was broken by a cheer. It was such a cheer as is heard at a political meeting. Its cause was the announcement from the pulpit of the presence in the church of Governor-elect William McKinley of Ohio.

Duel In a Billiard Room.

ATLANTA, Nov. 20.—W. E. Hickey and W. W. Bryant fought a duel in a billiard room at Cumberland, Ga. Bryant began firing on Hickey. The latter dodged behind a stove, pulled his pistol and emptied it. He fired more than three times. Bryant is dying. Hickey was wounded, but will recover.

Found Dying on the Tracks.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 20.—F. W. Cordingly of Chicago was found lying by the tracks of the Consolidated road near Grand avenue unconscious with a fractured skull. He was taken to the hospital, where he died soon after. It is supposed he fell or was thrown from a passenger train.

Caught After Three Years.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Francisco Gregiolio, the Italian who was arrested in Buffalo, was brought here by Deputy Sheriff Hulvin and locked up on a charge of murdering Gaetano Carpini, a fellow countryman, at Glasgow, Ulster county, in August, 1890.

A Brew Brought Low.

It is really marvelous at times to find how little men know about the wares they are attempting to sell.

Quite recently an Italian with a basket full of plaster images over his arm entered a downtown business office and attempted to make a sale.

It was a dull afternoon, with no business doing, and the clerks and salesmen were engaged in reading the newspapers and in idle conversation. They turned their attention to the Italian as he entered, and one of the number began to guy him.

The Italian understood little English, and his replies to the crowdire of questions were decisive of laughter. This he took in good part, and finally he began to exhibit his merchandise. Among the images was a plaster bust of Mars.

"Mars, Mars," said one of the men to him, as he read the name on the bust, "who in the world was Mars?"

"Oh," replied the vender, not willing to admit his ignorance, "don't you know? Why, Mars is chief of police in Paris."

"Chief of police in Paris? Is he living now?" continued the gentleman.

"Yes," replied the other. "He is a famous man. A great man. As great as your great Hyrnes. Won't you buy a bust of Mars, gentlemen? It's an excellent likeness."—New York Herald.

Slightly Mixed.

A few years ago, when it was the custom for the groom to kiss the bride at the altar after the marriage ceremony, a young lady made a very laughable remark. It was on the occasion of a cousin's wedding in one of New York's most fashionable churches, and when the happy man kissed his bride, this youn, lady exclaimed quickly to a neighbor in a shocked voice:

"I didn't know it was customary to cuss the bride!"—Harper's Bazar.

FASHIONS

PREVAILING MODES.

Fanciers and Bisques—Silks in High Favor—A Sensible and Stylish Gown.

Panniers appear to be gaining ground, and many of the skirts are trimmed with one deep flounce across the front breadth, put on in rounded form and caught up at the sides with rosettes of ribbons.

Basques are used on most of the dresses, and some of these are shaped to the bodices in such a way that they form a point in the middle of the back, and one at each side. Some of the skirts are stiffened, an arrangement rendered necessary by the fashionable long cloaks, as without this they would not stand out well at the feet.

Many winter dresses are made with a bolayenne. It keeps the dress out and can be renewed when soiled.

Woolen gowns trimmed with fur are intended for useful wear, but for visiting silk is the fabric.

Whatever the color of the gown, and whatever the material, you cannot do wrong if you use jet. Many colored beads are also employed for galons and flounchings, nearly all with straight edges, unless they follow the novelty of this year—namely, the vandyke border. Herringbone galons in beads and tinsel threads and in plain beads, velvet and satin ribbons are intended to surround many skirts.

PRACTICAL, BECOMING AND NEW.

Buttons, which have been set aside during the past year, are reappearing under happier auspices, and some beautiful kinds, like painted miniatures, with steel or silver, are to be seen; also iridescent buttons of many kinds, having rainbow and serpentine effects, but they are better suited to ornament than use.

An eminently practical gown that exemplifies most becomingly the newest ideas in the cut of a dress has a polonaise with long points, verging on the popular peplum, diminishing the size of the waist, and breaking any undue lines of the figure. It can be produced in any of the new stuffs, and has the pretty revers, which suit stout and portly forms. The basque at the back is cut on the cross and is full. The skirt is velvet, and the bodice of a contrasting material.

The Sleeves of Outside Garments.

The sleeves of the new garments are a study. Some of them are gathered full like a bishop's, and have a shaped cuff which turns down on to the hand. A black satin in this style was embroidered all over with jet in distinct renaissance patterns, composed of jet and velvet appliqué. The full cape on the shoulders had a ruche of feathers, and the collar, which was not high, had a quilling of black satin beneath it. All these outdoor garments give importance to the upper portion of the figure, especially the shoulders and the sleeves.

Laces of the Season.

These are exquisite. They are copied exactly from old guipure and rose point designs for the heavy laces, also from point de venise and lighter laces of a rare old age. Colored laces have come in, colored thread laces and blonds and a great quantity of metal laces. One delightful novelty is a broad flounce of crepe lisse, figured with lace appliqué—lace of a subject character. The applications either match the lisse or form a color contrast with it.

The New Thing In Cloaks.

This cloak—semifitting at the back—is loose in front, so as to be left open or crossed over at will. It is of reversible cloth, displaying a bronze nouveau on a wood brown ground, faced with plain pink cloth, and finished off with coat, collar and revers in dark velvet. The gauntlets of the 1830 sleeves buttoned on the slant are made either in old pink or dark velvet, according to whether the garment is intended for day or evening wear. Velvet muff, with satin pocket for the purse and handkerchief. Velvet hat trimmed with ostrich tips, clasped in the center with a jet buckle.

Some new bonnets are of plaited felt and ribbon, trimmed with wings and small, bright velvet rosettes.

THE HOUSEHOLD

FOR THE THANKSGIVING FEAST.

Cranberry to Right of Us, Pumpkin to Left of Us, Turkey In Front of Us.

Here is a famous New York caterer's recipe for roasting the Thanksgiving bird: When the bird is done, take, washed and wiped dry, chop its liver fine with two shallots. Stir these a little in a buttered pan over the fire to cook the liver, and then mix with a pound of sausage meat and about three dozen chestnuts cooked whole; stuff the turkey with this, truss nicely, and roast two hours or more. Dish the turkey, with gravy made in the usual way with a dozen roasted chestnuts stirred in. Serve with cranberry jelly.

To cook the cranberries add a teacupful of water to a quart of berries and put them over the fire. After cooking 10 minutes, add 2 heaping cupfuls of sugar and cook about 10 minutes longer, stirring them often. Pour them into a bowl or mold, and when cold they can be removed as a jelly.

Should you prefer that most appetizing arrangement, boiled turkey, with oysters, try the following, by which even an ancient fowl will be rendered tender and juicy:

For a good sized turkey take 25 large oysters and cut them into small pieces. Stir them with a quart of bread crumbs, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and one of butter, a teaspoonful of sweet marjoram and pepper and salt to taste. Stuff the bird and truss it carefully. Rub it all over with lemon juice to whiten the skin. Sew a cloth, tie the bird in it and put into a kettle of boiling water. Cook it very slowly, allowing half an hour to each pound of the turkey's weight. Serve with oyster and celery sauce.

For the pie which graces every well regulated Thanksgiving board, the following is a good recipe, though, as to sweetening and spices, it must be said that these points are largely a matter of taste and family tradition: Boil the pumpkin and take out the seeds without scraping the inside, stew and strain through a sieve. To every quart of milk add 5 eggs, and stir the pumpkin into the milk and eggs until of the proper consistency. Sweeten with sugar or the best syrup; molasses makes it too strong. Add some salt, powdered cinnamon, powdered ginger, and the grated peel of lemon. Bake in a hot oven.

English Wedding Cake.

The English wedding cake is made in tiers, each tier of cake being topped by a thick layer of almond paste, or marzipan, as it is called. Here is a London recipe for marzipan: One pound of ground almonds, one pound of fine sifted loaf sugar, the whites of two new laid eggs and a few drops of essence of almonds. Mix the sugar and the ground almonds well together, then add, little by little, the whites of the eggs beaten to a froth, until the mixture assumes the appearance of a stiff paste. As some eggs contain more white than others, a little less than the whites of two is sometimes sufficient, for the paste needs to be quite firm. Make it up into a thick block, and let it dry very slowly in a moderate oven.

What Everybody Likes.

Everybody ought to own a pen-wiper and whoever knows it not is usually delighted to have one provided for him or herself. That is why the simple one here illustrated makes a most little gift to be included in the list of trifles for holiday remembrances by those skilful in fancy work. This lily and its leaves are of white and green felt. The stem is rubber tubing, such as is used for artificial flowers, and the stamens are of yellow enamel. In spite of these prosaic facts it is quite a natural looking lily.

Crawling Rugs.

These are made in lovely shades of art linens and worked in washing crewels. Some have a quarter of a yard deep frill all round, piped with white linen. The ordinary size is one yard and a half square.

In a very cosy nursery the baby had a crawling square of quilted sateen, with little bells attached to colored ribbons at irregular distances round the edge. When dirty, the rug was taken away, and the bells put on the fresh one. The bells were for the baby to handle. There were three widths of sateen of the ordinary length.

How to Make a Paper Chrysanthemum.

Narrow strips of pink paper (uncrinkled) are wound slanting over a thin pencil. When the petal is long enough the top is just twisted, the pencil is slipped out and the petal is pinched at the end so that it shall not untwist. Each petal looks uncommon like a small pink paper. When sufficient are made they are tied together into balls, and leaves and stems are added.

Silver and China.

There is no doubt that pierced silver will be the fashion for many a long day to come. The large fruit baskets are magnificent.

Cups with silver mounts carry all before them. Very chaste are the pure white china cups, slipped into two silver bands, to which the silver handle is attached.

Cosiport china of a delicate yellow tone is most effective with the pierced silver mounts.

Low small dishes of decorated china or of cut glass are used for bonbons, and longer low dishes for celery.

A turquoise tinted bowl with a flat cover of enamel is a pretty salt cellar.

Fluted bowls of china or cut glass are liked for sauces.

Glass vases of green and gold, white and gold or violet tinted are pretty for flowers.

"I want to get a divorce."

"Have you sufficient reasons for separation?"

"You just bet I have."

"Well, kindly tell me your troubles and I will let you have my opinion."

"Five years ago I married a country girl because I thought I'd get a sensible one. Got that down?"

"Yes."

"Well, things went nicely for two years, then came the rub."

"Yes."

"The first thing she did was to go and buy a lot of lovesick novels to find out how society in London was carried on."

"Yes."

"I didn't mind that, but after she had nosed around a bit she began to get her high falutin ideas."

"Yes."

"Well, she commenced with makin me get two servants. Then she made us have breakfast off the mantelpiece—that is, get up to help yourself."

"Yes."

"Then she made me belong to three or four clubs as made it hot for me if I came home earlier than 1 o'clock. Got that?"

"Yes."

"Next, she made the servants call her my lady. But she capped the climax by sayin one day that she was sufferin from enwe. I went to a doctor an asked him what the deuce that was, an he told me it was French for that tired feeling. That settled it. From then on it was enwe, an enter nous, an bullyung, an soiceng, an parlay vou, an—well, then she went in for music. She called Wagner 'Vogner,' Liszt 'Leest,' and ended the whole business by calling me her charmsangin. Say, don't you think you could fix it up right off, before she takes to runnin around with Italian singers an running for school commissioner?"

The lawyer smiled a sad smile.

"I'm afraid you can't get a divorce on these things. Will you pay your $10 for my opinion now, or shall I send in my bill?"

And the other took out 10 silver circles, and went over to the police station and asked for a night's lodging.—Syracuse Journal.

An Aside.

You call me fickle, dear.
Because I seem to see
In every pretty face a charm
That breathes of love to me.

I am not fickle, dear,
Because my heart seems stirred
By every pretty face I see,
But Fickle is not the word.

If I should show you, dear,
How much I love you when
I'm looking at another's face,
You'd weary of me then.

If you knew too much, dear,
Your love for me might pall.
Am not fickle, dear,
I'm foxy—that is all.

Quite True.

The paintings on the walls never cost less than $10,000, but the love of the sweet girl in the green silk was not less intense than it would be if they were only silver tinsing chromos.

She had repeatedly assured the scion of a noble family, who sat beside her, that she would always feel the same way, and now the conversation had drifted to general topics.

"Of course," he was saying thoughtfully, "we do not learn our most valuable lessons in school."

Without a moment's hesitation she made reply:

"Well," she rejoined positively, "I should say not. Why, papa!"——

Involuntarily her eyes turned toward the portrait of a man with a large neck just above the mantel.

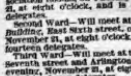
PROCLAMATION.



In accordance with established custom, I, George T. Werts, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby designate and appoint THURSDAY, THE THIRTIETH DAY OF NOVEMBER, INSTANT, to be observed as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God.

I recommend that on the day named the people of this state abstain, so far as possible, from their ordinary secular occupations and devote themselves to appropriate observance of the occasion, and respectfully tender their thanks to the Most Heavenly Father for His continued blessings conferred upon our State and nation, with prayer that such happiness and prosperity may be attended us in the future.

Witness my hand and the seal of the State of New Jersey hereunto affixed, [L.S.] at the city of Trenton, this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, and of the independence of the United States the one hundredth and eighteenth.

GEORGE T. WERTS.

By the Governor,
JOHN R. McMASTER,
Private Secretary.

THE MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

A Meeting Held Yesterday Afternoon at the Casino.

THE Monday Afternoon Club met yesterday afternoon at the Casino. There was a large attendance of members.

Miss Isabella Hap, good lectured to the ladies upon the peasant life in Russia. Her lecture was very interesting. She described the peasant's life and habits.

"The peasants," she said, "work hard. They commence work at four a. m., and continue their labors until 10 p. m. They are a patient, long suffering class of people who are to be pitied. But our interference would do no good, and would only serve to make matters worse."

Miss Hapgood exhibited a number of articles made in Russia.

BREVITIES.

—Republican primaries to-night.

—The Somerset county courts convened to-day at Somerville.

—"Jack" Mortimer, who left Plainfield about three years ago, is again in this city.

—The men of Holy Cross parish will meet to-night to organize a guild for church work.

—Justice Nash has issued summons in the case of Waldron vs. Hooley, on contract, returnable Nov. 28.

—Justice Mosher to-day issued an attachment to Mr. William Brett on goods belonging to Mrs. C. A. Brett.

—Queen City Lodge, No. 298, I. O. O. F., held a meeting last night and conferred the second degree on one candidate.

—"The Serpent of Dust" will be the subject of the Rev. Mr. Crane's address to men at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night.

—Justice Nash to-day issued summons in the contract cases of Boyce vs. Jahn, and Laire, et al vs. Barnett. Both are returnable Nov. 28.

—A meeting of Jerusalem Lodge, F. & A. M., will hold a regular communication to-night. It is expected that the grand officers will be present. A collation will be served.

—The ladies of Union Village will hold a donation for the benefit of their pastor, Rev. Mr. Vanderhoof at the residence of W. H. Buckman's, on Nov. 22, South Stirling.

—"Jack" Morecraft was arrested last night for being disorderly. He was only recently released from jail. Judge Codington sentenced him to pay a fine of $6 or spend twenty days in the county jail.

—William Adams and George Shay, who were arrested yesterday on the charge of assaulting John English, were held for the Grand Jury. They gave $200 bail each for their appearance when wanted.

—A business concern nowadays must have genuine merit back of it, when its volume of trade ever reaches that of a year ago. Edsall's says his books will show a decided increase in his trade all through the year up to present date. His twenty-five years' experience in the dry goods business gives him great advantages which he has been wise in utilizing to the profit of his patrons as well as his own. His merit is good, capital and sure to win success.

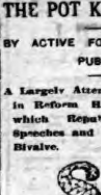
Had a Fit while in a Cell.

Rose Jackson, colored, who had been arrested for stealing and placed in the lockup, had a fit last night while in a cell. She was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital.

THE POT KEPT BOILING.

BY ACTIVE FOURTH WARD REPUBLICANS.

A Largely Attended Oyster Supper in Reform Hall Last Night at which Republicans Listen to Speeches and Enjoy the Luscious Bivalve.



SURELY the Fourth Ward Republicans never do anything by halves, as was evidenced by last night's oyster supper in Reform Hall. As President Herman A. Weber was called away to attend the meeting of the City Executive Committee, Lawyer Winfield S. Anderson presided.

He called the meeting to order and explained the absence of one of the expected speakers—Assemblyman-elect Charles Codding—by reading a telegram received from that gentleman stating that he regretted to say he would be unable to be present.

It was expected that Senator-elect Foster M. Voorhees and Sheriff Kyte would attend, but they also were unavoidably detained elsewhere.

Mayor Alexander Gilbert was called upon to make an address. Notwithstanding the Mayor said he had attended to hear some one else speak and to eat oysters, he was told that those present would like to hear from the head of the city first, so he made a short speech.

His Honor praised the Fourth Ward for its activity in political matters. "While the other Wards," said he, "are quiet, the Fourth is keeping the Republican pot boiling. The air is full of rumors regarding the building, by them, of a club house. I hope they will build. All honor to the men who are making a strong Republican Ward, where the Democrats were securing a foothold."

Mayor Gilbert told a little story to illustrate the present situation, which he said, while not a Republican victory, because many Democrats favoring good moral government had voted for the Republicans, the Republican party had furnished the "knocker," that knocked out the other fellows. The story was: "A man, one night going home rather dazed, stood in front of his own house for awhile, and then went across the street and raising the 'knocker,' knocked until a head was thrust from the third story window, enquiring what was wanted. The man who was dazed replied: 'Don't be alarmed, I was only using your knocker to wake up the people across the way who haven't any knocker.'"

"That," said the Mayor, "is the way with the Democratic party. They need our 'knocker' for morality in New Jersey, because they hadn't any of their own."

Several jokes were told by the Mayor at the expense of Councilmen Marsh and Fisk. He said that Councilman Fisk was a typical Chicago man because he was the picture of health and was always jolly. In conclusion the Mayor said that one of them (Councilman Marsh) had grown gray in doing service for the party, and the other (Councilman Fisk) hoped too.

After the Fourth Ward Glee Club had entertained the audience a few moments with their songs, Councilman Fisk was called upon for a speech. He only spoke for a few minutes, and in conclusion he said that while he might look like a Chicago man he was first, last and all the time a thorough Plainfield man.

Councilman Frank E. Marsh and Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh both made short speeches. The former said among other things that he used to be proud he lived in the Third Ward; but now because it was the Third Ward; but now he was proud he lived in the Third Ward, because it was next to the Fourth Ward.

This concluded the speeches and all lovers of oysters were then where oysters were being dispensed, and all ate heartily to the success of the Republican party and the Fourth Ward.

During the evening music was furnished by the Plainfield Cornet Band.

A Small Fire This Morning.

Shortly after eight o'clock this morning the fire department was called out by a small fire on Watchung avenue. The fire was in a house owned by Mr. Charles Sebring, and occupied by Mr. Emery Robinson. A Baltimore heater had set fire to the mantel in the parlor. The flames were extinguished with a few pails of water, and the fire apparatus was not needed. The damage was slight.

Mr. A. D. Shepard Appointed.

At the meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee last night, Mr. A. D. Shepard of Front street was appointed a member of the committee to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Sheriff George Kyte.

Arrested for Begging.

Last night Marshal Pangborn arrested Thomas McCarty for begging in the streets of the borough. Borough Magistrate Crossley sentenced McCarty to 20 days in the county jail.

The Weather.

The weather to-morrow promises to be from fair to partly cloudy and slightly warmer, followed by rain.

EQUESTRIANS COLLIDE.

A BADLY MIXED AFFAIR DUE TO RECKLESS RIDING.

Two Boys on Horseback Run into a Butcher Wagon.—The Queer Predicament of the Driver.—Young Runkle Slightly Injured.

Butcher boy "Jimmy" Martin was leisurely driving one of Butcher Smalley's wagons along Park avenue at dusk yesterday afternoon. The curtains were drawn down at each side, so that he could not see into the cross street.

Suddenly his wagon received a blow which was of such force as to throw him astride the shafts, and startle the horse. It broke into a gallop and went tearing along Park avenue, with the driver seated in a helpless and perilous position astride the shafts and between the horse and the wagon. Young Martin was able to regain control of the horse only after the animal had reached Campbell's Club house and was tired out. Neither the driver nor the horse was injured, nor the wagon damaged.

It appears that the trouble was due to two boys named Harry Runkle and Charley Fisk. They were feeling hilarious and riding horseback, probably racing at a dangerous pace through Fifth street, and going too fast to prevent their horses making a turn into Park avenue.

Young Runkle was thrown from his horse, and, it was feared, had sustained serious injuries. He was taken home in a cab and put to bed. A doctor was sent for, but found that outside of a few bruises the boy had escaped injury.

The boy himself answered inquiries by telephone during the evening, saying that his injuries were only slight.

It was a most fortunate escape.

Young Runkle is a son of Mr. H. G. Runkle of Eighth street, and young Fisk a son of Councilman Fisk of Seventh street.

The Society of Friends and Temperance.

The half yearly meeting of the Society of Friends, held the 16th inst. in the old meeting house, on Watchung avenue, memorialized the Legislature as follows:

To the Senate and Assembly of the State of New Jersey:—

The Shrewsbury and Plainfield half yearly meeting Temperance Committee, respectfully and earnestly ask that you will provide by appropriate legislation, for the introduction in the public schools of this State of scientific instruction concerning the effects of alcohol and narcotics upon the human system.

PERSONAL.

Miss Ella Keely of Newark has returned to her home, after a visit with her mother, Mrs. John Smalley of Maple avenue.

Councilman F. E. Marsh has decided not to run for councilman in the Third Ward and Harry Stockton is talked of as a candidate.

Miss Millie Marsh, daughter of Mr. J. M. C. Marsh of Westfield, and Miss Lizzie Coombs, also of Westfield, were guests Saturday of the Misses Bearing of Madison avenue.

Miss Lillie Walker, formerly of this city, was married at Philadelphia last month to Mr. Harry Klepler of that place. She is a cousin of Mrs. Fred Walker of New street.

Mr. Thomas Burns, who was formerly in the employ of Mr. F. L. G. Martin, has secured a position as telegraph operator at an office in Boston. He will leave for that place Monday.

The following persons were baptized at the South Plainfield Baptist church Sunday: William Clawson, Berthine Dunham, Loy Dayton, S. Field, Elmer Manning, Bert. Manning and Arthur Hankins.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Vanderveer of Chicago, Ill., returned home yesterday after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walker of New street. Mr. Vanderveer has charge of the Oregon fruit exhibit at the World's Fair.

Alice Robinson Sentenced to Two Years.

Alice Robinson, a colored girl, who stole from her employer at Cranford, and who was tried by Justice Nash in this city, was sentenced to the State prison for two years by Judge McCormick. Judge McCormick commented at some length on the alarming frequency of robbery by servant girls, and as the prisoner had been convicted before, an example was made in her case, which may deter others from commission of similar crimes.

The Number of Delegates the Wards are Entitled to.

Last night the City Republican Executive Committee to re-apportion the Ward as to the number of delegates they are now entitled to. At to-night's primaries the Wards respectively will elect delegates as follows: First 12, Second 14, Third, 11; Fourth, 18.

A TROLLEY ACCIDENT.

MILKMAN RANDOLPH'S WAGON RUN INTO AND SMASHED.

By Car No 8, Early this Morning.—Considerable Damage Done to both Car and Wagon.—The Driver Painfully Injured.

HERE was another accident caused by the trolley cars this morning. At 6.45 o'clock a milkman Herbert Randolph was crossing the tracks in front of the First Baptist church, on West Front street, car No. 8 came bowling along and crashed into the side of his wagon.

The wagon was upset and pushed some distance before the car was stopped.

Mr. Randolph, housed up in his wagon with the doors shut, was placed in a sitting position on the cushions without any warning went tumbling over. The shock sent him against the glass in the door with such force that one of his hands was jammed through the glass, cutting a painful gash in his wrist.

Milk cans and bottles were flying into the street, and probably 25 glass bottles only two remained whole. Fortunately his horse was very gentle and did not attempt to run away or the results might have been very serious.

Mr. Randolph's wagon was a new and handsome one and but few days have used a month or two. It was badly damaged.

Motorman Martin, who had charge of the car, says he rang his bell, but Milkman Randolph says he did not hear it.

ELIZABETH'S SMALL-POX EPIDEMIC.

The Disease Spreading Rapidly in Spite of the Health Officers.

The alarming spread of small-pox at Elizabeth caused the Board of Health to adopt extraordinary measures at a special meeting last night. The Board appointed Capt. William Bant special health warden, and to-day Dr. Joe Rankin and many special policemen. House-to-house sanitary inspection began to-day in the Italian district revealed an alarming state of affairs.

All Italian children will be excluded from public schools, and Italians will be vaccinated. Those refusing or neglecting rapidly among all classes, and the conditions is pronounced that Elizabeth is in a terrible condition. —By Dr. O'Reilly, a member of the State Board of Health.

THE BOARD NOW A DEADLOCK.

Board of Freeholders of Union County Fills Vacancies.

Ex-Sheriff William Skiles was elected County Collector by the Union County Board of Freeholders yesterday, to succeed William M. Oliver, who resigned and was appointed County Clerk.

Sheriff Dennis Dalton Hapgood resigned as a member of the Freeholders. The Democrats refused to fill the vacancy with a Republican, thereby causing a deadlock in the board.

The candidates are Ex-Sheriff Francis Westcott, Republican, and George C. Miller, Democrat, both of Fanwood. The township is largely Republican, and there is considerable feeling owing to the Democrats' action.

That Wolf in Jersey City.

One of the wolves attached to the aterial company got loose in the New Jersey Central Station in Jersey City yesterday.

It ran up the yard, and, and poking its head into the door of a Blue Line passenger car, surprised the passengers. A crowd of railroad men, armed with clubs, captured the wolf.

The same animal, or a wolf that caused such a time in Elizabeth the other night.

Afraid of Notes made by Coal.

A horse belonging to Mr. Ellis Cassell bolted while standing on the Park avenue this morning, became frightened at the noise made by coal being unloaded, and threw itself. A crowd soon gathered, and it took several minutes to get the horse upon its feet again.

One for a Laugh.

About a dozen young people of this city, some of whom are pupils of the Evelyn Hill school, enjoyed themselves on steeds last evening and enjoyed a fine night's sport. The ride, besides being exhilarating, was somewhat amusing.

NO TROUBLE EXPECTED

ON THE NEW JERSEY CENTRAL RAILROAD.

Its Men are Satisfied, and its Officers are not Concerned by the Lehigh Valley Strike.—President Maxwell Popular with His Men.

FROM some considerable interest has been expressed concerning the attitude of the Central Railroad of New Jersey toward the Lehigh Valley Railroad during the strike. It cannot be learned positively whether the Central officials propose to adopt a course of extreme friendliness toward the Lehigh Valley or not. Judging, however, from the guarded statements made yesterday by the Central's officials, it seems that they have not decided on any definite course of action, either for or against the Lehigh Valley. J. Rogers Maxwell, president of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, said yesterday that he did not expect any trouble with the employes of the Central. He said that they were well satisfied, and that none of the Central officials would give them any cause to become dissatisfied. Mr. Maxwell is popular with the men employed on the Central. He is always ready to listen to their complaints, and his office door is always wide open for any committee from the employes of the road. Within the last twelve months such committees have called there. They had grievances when they entered the office; they went away satisfied.

Ahead of a Year Ago!

Notwithstanding the great cry of "Hard Times," our trade up to the present date is considerably in excess of last year.

The result we believe of FAIR DEALING—giving the very best goods possible for the least money. In other words, REAL MERIT.

The people of Plainfield have found out that in the filling of a memorandum of a dozen or more articles in our lines, they can depend on us as well at EDSALL'S, in price, quality, style and variety, as to any one store in New York.

Patrons often remark in our store: "Well, if I can't get it here, there is no use of my looking for it in Plainfield, for I will have hard work to find it in New York.

We have now so many good things to advertise, that it is impossible to mention them in our space, and urge buyers to call at our store and see for themselves the many new things we offer.

EDSALL'S.

LIKE HOT CAKES!

On a frosty morning. That's the way those Cork Sole Boots are going. These are not the old-fashioned clumsy boots, but are neat as the quickest sewed boot—just the thing for getting around in the snow. Also the Oil Grain Boots, with cork soles, very warm and comfortable. Ladies' heavy wool, calf skin, Stocker Boot, $1 and $1.25; Ladies' Over gaiters, No. 4 pair and up.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Co-operative Farming In France.

Every step in the direction of co-operative farming will be welcomed by agriculturists, since farming is almost the only industry that has not been able to profit by the present great syndicate tendencies. It is agreeable to know therefore that syndicated agriculture is now established on a firm basis in France.

The movement began very quietly 10 years ago. Its organization consists of separate societies called agricultural syndicates. Of these there are now 1,300 in all parts of France, with a membership of 600,000. The business they do amounts to $30,000,000 a year.

There seems, however, in the rural skull an insurmountable obstacle to the successful selling of the products it can raise in abundance. Co-operative selling has not yet brought favorable results. But with buying it is different. The greatest success of the syndicates has been in the matter of purchasing cheaply and in quantity all the supplies needed. Fertilizers cost immensely in France, and by means of the syndicates the poorest farmer has equal advantages with the richest.

The societies are organized and managed by the method of shares and stockholders. The members elect their officers. These, it must be confessed, are usually selected from the rich class. But, on the other hand, many of these wealthy officers give their services gratis to the syndicates. Of the large advantages already gained Mr. H. W. Wolff writes in The Economic Journal:

The syndicates help the vine grower and the sugar beet grower, the horse breeder and the market gardener; they help the land in the destruction of noxious insects, the embankment of watercourses, fumigation for keeping off the frost. They have even provided French agriculture with boards of conciliation and arbitration, and insurance of laborers against accidents; and above all things, they have, in M. Gataller's apt words, wholly "democratized" the use of artificial manures, insecticides feeding stuffs, etc., making what was formerly a luxury reserved for the rich within the easy reach of the poor, improving the quality, reducing the market price by from 20 to 30 per cent, and yet increasing the annual consumption from the paltry figure of 92,000,000 francs—barely more than £3,000,000 for all France—to 120,000,000 francs.

The further purchase and use of machinery and implements, the provision in some districts of winter employment by means of domestic industries, banking and insurance, arrangement of technical lectures, provision for analysis and field experiments, prizes for the best manured fields, are all possible results of the introduction of improved machinery and the construction of liquid manure tanks are among other services rendered by the syndicates.

The County Road System.

Governor Roswell P. Flower of New York believes that the system of county road repair and building is superior to any other. He tells us why in The North American Review. He thinks it gives exactly enough local option in road management, not too much nor too little. A county board of road supervisors in connection with an engineer should have full charge of all roads in the county. They should say which were county roads and which not, should lay out new roads and turn others out to be abandoned, as they saw fit.

The law in New York state already recognizes the county supervisor system of road management. Under the board's jurisdiction fall all roads outside of incorporated villages and cities. Road repair is provided for by an appropriation of the supervisors out of the county funds. They are the ones who appoint the expert engineer. In New York the supervisor's term is three years.

To build new roads or meet extraordinary expenses in repairing old ones the New York law permits the supervisors to borrow money and issue county bonds at a rate of interest not greater than 5 per cent. The main difficulty in the way of persuading farmers that this plan is the best one will be the apparent greater cost of it. The governor has found that the money wasted under the present system would annually build seven miles of macadamized roads in every county.

A fourth great tunnel is to be put under the Alps, this time at the Simplon pass. Ever since the time of the first Napoleon tourists have traveled by diligence over the great military road which he built over the Alps at that point and have duly admired the engineering genius of the military conqueror. But now the greatest mechanical achievement of the greatest general of the world is to be brought to naught by the simple, quiet study and experimenting of men who never planned a battle and could not do it if they wanted to. The new railway tunnel will convey trains directly beneath Napoleon's road over the Simplon pass. The old fashioned diligence and stage riding has been hunted down to its last refuge. Travelers will cross the Simplon by going under instead of over it, but picturesquely they more comfortably and speedily. The picturesque diligence will, however, continue to carry tourists across the mountain for five years yet, at the end of which time the tunnel will be completed. It will be 12½ miles long and will cost $10,000,000.

The Independent contends that the world is better than it was at the beginning of the century. "Is it a crime or a shame to get richer now than it was then? Is it not then illegal to hold slaves now than it was? "Our halls of legislation are purer than they used to be," continues The Independent, "and as to Party now we could not find an entrance into politics easily."

Strikers Have Effectively Tied Up the Road.

OTHER LINES MAY BE INVOLVED.

Today the Officials of the Road Are to Make an Effort to Run Trains With Non-union Men and Given Battle—South Side Say the Struggle Will Be Short.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 21.—Quiet reigns in the yards of the Central railroad here. Hardly a striker is to be seen, and scarcely a workman is anywhere about the big freight department. The strike on the Lehigh Valley roads now complete. The men at Jersey City had no grievance whatever, or at least they say they had none, but when they abruptly quit under orders from the Federated Order of Trainmen, under the superintendence of which the strike has progressed all along the line of the road.

Hardly a wheel turned over the tracks in the Central yards yesterday. But one shunter was needed to transfer the various trains of freight cars which have been piling up since Sunday morning. The railroad officials claim that the men who left her on that day simply quit under orders from the Federated Order of Trainmen, under the superintendence of which the strike has progressed all along the line of the road.

requesting them to stand firm and not to believe any reports sent out from Buffalo and Philadelphia that the strikers were weakening. The train-loss from that a great many tramps to town, who pass themselves off as railroaders.

It was impossible to take out the eastern train to leave here at 5:30 last evening until 8 o'clock. An engineer from a southern road who had just arrived and applied for work was put in charge. He had as a pilot an old engineer. An attempt was made to move a freight train at Coxton, but it proved a failure. The engineer was persuaded to leave the cab by the strikers' committee.

Tempted by Detectives.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—The general grievance committee says that overtures were made to Chairman Wilkins by two alleged detectives, who offered to burn bridges and blow up roundhouses. They were ordered out of the Bingham House, in which the committee has its headquarters.

Acting General Manager Theodore Voorhees has returned from Bethlehem, where he has been in consultation with President Linderman of the Lehigh Valley railroad. Mr. Voorhees said that President Wilbur was confident that the difficulties would be over, then two or three days, as plenty of reliable workmen have been hired. It was for the purpose of securing the most competent men that Mr. Voorhees went to Bethlehem. He said that two carloads of engineers, firemen and trainmen from here and Jersey City had left Philadelphia for Bethlehem.

Laborers Hired to Run Trains.

TUNKHANNOCK, Pa., Nov. 21.—Passenger trains on this division of the Lehigh Valley railroad are run at irregular intervals, it being impossible to maintain schedule time. The trains are manned by nonunion men, but no great attempt is to make speed time. Common laboring men are leaving the village and going to Sayre, where they are offered positions as brakemen, firemen, etc., as soon as it is possible to move trains out of the yards. Coal dealers and merchants have only a limited supply of stock on hand, and if the strike should continue long a famine would result. The milk train was not allowed to run.

Strikers Warned.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 21.—There have been no new developments in the strike here. The Lehigh Valley officials sent out notices to all strikers that their places will be filled by others if they do not return to work by this morning.

A striking engineer from Easton attempted to board several engines here which were standing in the yards and to induce the crews to quit work. He was ejected from the last engine with a run and got out of town. Passenger, freight and coal trains are moving over the Lehigh division only a trifle delayed.

Hudson Road Tied Up Too.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Nov. 21.—The sheriff will swear in 500 special deputies for duty at different points on the Lehigh Valley road. The Hudson road is tied up, and most of the crews are out in sympathy with the strikers and the Hudson line. A few local trains are being sent through. The railroad men sympathize with the strikers.

Hiring Nonunion Men.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 21.—Between 40 and 50 nonunion men were hired here and distributed at various points on the line of the Lehigh division. Sixty strikers applied them with food. Superintendent Donnelly says the company will never surrender to the strikers, whatever may occur.

No Troops Needed.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 21.—Adjutant General Greenland received a message from an official of the Lehigh Valley railroad informing him that everything was quiet along the line and that no trouble was anticipated from the strikers.

Almost Killed by a Burglar.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—Mrs. G. H. Randall, the wife of a member of engine company No. 1, was almost killed by a burglar at 15 Indiana street shortly after 1 o'clock this morning. She is now lying in an unconscious condition, her skull being fractured, and there are also awful cuts on the side of her head which were inflicted with an iron bar torn from the gate in the rear of the house. The perpetrator of the deed was an unknown man who is still at large and of whom the police have but a meager description.

A Maine Vessel Wrecked.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 21.—The bark A. C. Berry, a well-known old fish carrier, was a Portland vessel, and her owner, John W. Musgrave, thinks that all of her crew, which hailed from Portland, were drowned. She was commanded by Captain Dunyn H. Mountfort of 45 Waterville street, one of Portland's oldest and best known sea captains.

Strikers" Are Hanged.

NORTH ENID, T. T., Nov. 21.—The white caps and vigilance committee are spreading terror through the strip to "sooners" and lot jumpers. At Round Pound the mayor has been notified to leave, and two "sooners" are reported to have been hanged seven miles east of here for driving settlers off their claims.

Will Close the Club Bars.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 21.—Director Brown of the department of public safety has secured a list of all the social clubs in Pittsburg and says he will stop the sale of liquors in all clubs without charters and will close the doors of clubs under the same restrictions as saloons.

Forger Tagg Art Sentenced.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 21.—Wilson S. Taggart, the Sunday school superintendent of Barton, near Martin's Ferry, O., who secured $80,000 on forged papers, was sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary for two years and six months.

Smallpox In Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—At the hospital at West Roxbury there are eight patients suffering with smallpox. Up to this time none directly or indirectly from the diseased patients brought over by the Catalonia about a month ago.

Paying Teller Pardon Acquitted.

TRENTON, Nov. 21.—The jury in the case of Abram Paxton, on trial for embezzlement while acting as paying teller of the First National bank of Paterson, returned a verdict of not guilty.

Iron Mills Reopen.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 21.—As a result of the settlement of the scale question the mills of this city resumed work after a shutdown of 28 weeks.

Typographers' Union Convention.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 21.—The New York State Typographical union began its third annual convention in Brooklyn. James A. Lewis presided.

HAWAIIAN REPORT MADE PUBLIC.

The Commissioner Says That a Great Wrong Was Done to the Islanders—Tariff Bill to Be Ready Next Monday—Other Washington News of General Interest.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Secretary Gresham has decided to make public all the correspondence and the report of James H. Blount, the special commissioner sent to Hawaii by President Cleveland to investigate the revolution which dethroned Queen Liliuokalani and the establishment of the provisional government. Mr. Blount arrived at Honolulu on March 29. In beginning his report he calls attention to his reception by Minister Stevens, who, "accompanied by a committee from the Annexation club, came on board the vessel which had brought me. He informed me that this club had reated an elegant house, well furnished and provided with servants, and desired to place it at my disposal. This I could pay for this accommodation just what I chose, from nothing up. He urged me very earnestly to accept the offer. I declined it and informed him that I should go to a hotel."

Why He Lowered the Flag.

The committee renewed the offer, which was declined, and refused to accede to proffered favors from the ex-queen.

Concerning the position of the United States in the islands he says: "The troops from the Boston were doing military duty for the provisional government. The American flag was floating over the government building, over which the provisional government conducted its business under an American protectorate, to be continued, according to the avowed purpose of the American minister, during the negotiations with the United States for annexation. My instructions directed me to make inquiries, which in the interest of candor and truth could not be done when the minds of thousands of Hawaiian citizens were full of uncertainty as to what the presence of American troops, the stripes and the flag and the American protectorate implied.

"It seemed necessary that all these influences must be withdrawn before those inquiries could be prosecuted in a manner befitting the dignity and power of the United States. Inspired with such feelings and confident no disorder would ensue, I directed the removal of the flag of the United States from the government building and the return of the American troops to their vessels. This was accomplished without any demonstration of joy or grief on the part of the populace."

Mr. Blount says, in closing, that the native race feel that a great wrong has been done them and their queen. The queen resigned under protest and did not believe that the action of Mr. Stevens would be indorsed, which, after all, was true.

"Indeed, who could have supposed that the circumstances surrounding her could have been foreseen and sanctioned deliberately by the president of the United States? Her uniform conduct and the prevailing sentiment among the natives point to her belief, as well as their own, that the spirit of justice on the part of the president would restore her crown." That is the only thing in the nature of a recommendation made.

The special commissioner closes with a description of the industries of the islands, statistics, comparisons of the races, changes in the conditions of the natives and information to show that they have been badly treated.

Tariff Bill Next Monday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The ways and means committee will probably give out the new tariff bill on Monday next, the 27th inst. A meeting of the full committee will be called for that day, as it is necessary that the bill be spread before the entire committee and a formal vote taken on its adoption before the measure is given to the public.

The Democratic members are now devoting most of their formal executive time, attempting to discover, with the aid of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hamlin and the treasury officials, the exact amount of revenue raised by the present law and various schedules under the revision contemplated by the committee. This involves detailed calculations, and until this labor is ended no final action can be taken on any of the reports of the subcommittees.

STILL HATE NELSON.

Three Young Montreal Frenchmen Tried to Blow Up His Monument.

MONTREAL, Nov. 21.—Three French-Canadian law students—Honore Mercier, son of the ex-Premier of Quebec; Paul de Martigny and Alphonse Pellard—were arrested while attempting to blow up the historic monument to England's great naval hero, Admiral Nelson, which stands at the top of Jacques Cartier square facing the city hall. The police had received private information a few hours before that a plot was on foot to blow up the monument with dynamite, and they secreted themselves in the neighborhood to await the arrival of the trio of conspirators.

The young men affected indifference when seized, one of them loudly declaring that the thing had no right there anyway and should be made away with at once. They were taken to the Central station and locked up after giving their names. On the person of Paul de Martigny was found a dynamite cartridge nearly a foot long and about 30 feet of fuse. The three young men vary in ages from 18 to 20 and belong to good families. They are all law students. Young De Martigny is the son of Dr. A. L. de Martigny; young Pellard the brother of J. O. Pellard, advocate, and young Mercier the son of the ex-premier, who is out of France at present.

The accused were admitted to bail in securities for a large amount, their friends being willing to put up any quantity of money to have them liberated. Their trial was postponed until the 28th inst.

There is little doubt that the young men were incited to attempt this outrage by the fierce articles which have been published in the French papers here during the past few months against the monument. Their innate hatred of everything British was fired, and they determined that the statue of the hero of Trafalgar should bite the dust. There is a great deal of suppressed excitement throughout the city, and while the French papers make light of the affair there is plenty of bad blood on both sides, which needs but a spark to rekindle the racial flames which, it was hoped, had died out some time ago.

KNIGHTS STILL AT ODDS.

Grand Master Workman Powderly Accuses Wright of Revealing Secrets.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—The general assembly of the Knights of Labor held a short stormy session, and the lie passed more than once between the administration and antiadministration delegates. General Master Workman Powderly accused James A. Wright of giving away the secrets of the order. He declared that Wright had furnished the information for the reports printed in a morning paper.

Wright denied the accusation vigorously. The delegates looked anxiously for the report of the finance committee, which was promised yesterday, but it was not yet ready.

It is stated that the committee is divided upon the report, three of the members desiring to vindicate Powderly and two opposing this and threatening to present a minority report, and the report is delayed in order that the differences may be adjusted if possible.

The committee has gone carefully over the books and accounts of General Secretary-Treasurer Hayes, with special reference to the charges of misappropriation of funds made, and has besides heard evidence from the accused in explanation of certain points upon which information was desired. A resolution requesting the resignation of all the general officers was presented. It was promptly referred to the committee on resolutions, although the delegate presenting it asked for immediate action. Powderly, however, would not have it that way, and it was referred.

MUST RULE THE SEAS.

England Urged to Spend Many Millions of Pounds on Her Navy.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The new British naval programme outlined by Lord Charles Beresford was published today. Lord Beresford says: "We must by declaring that the navy of Great Britain must be a third stronger than any two combining fleets of her two possible enemies."

He proposes the expenditure of £22,000,000 for the construction of six ironclads of the royal sovereign class, 12 battleships of the Barfleur class, seven of the Blake class, 50 vessels of the Havock class, 30 torpedo boats and 19 of new class ironclads, designed specially to destroy the enemy's torpedo stations.

Half a million pounds should be expended for a reserve ammunition supply similar to that maintained by the French government at Toulon, and £634,000 should be used for the strengthening of the moles at Gibraltar.

It is proposed that the programme shall be executed within 3½ years. It is also proposed that Great Britain acquire from Turkey the island of Lemnos for use as an eastern Mediterranean station.

A Convict Fought Desperately.

THE REBEL FLEET SEEKS SHELTER.

Minister Mendonca Hears Some Welcome News From the Insurgent Government Troops Pressing the Insurgents Very Closely—Firing on Rio Stopped.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Senhor Mendonca, the Brazilian minister at Washington, who is stopping at the Hotel Brunswick, told an intimate friend that he had received a cable dispatch saying that the government considered there had been an improvement in its position. The reason for this belief was the fact that the fire from the fort on the island of Villegagnon, which is in the hands of the insurgents, had been weakening.

Villegagnon is in the harbor opposite Rio and not far from shore. The fort commands the entrance to the harbor and has been one of Mello's strongholds. One-half of the fort is now in ruins, Mr. Minister Mendonca said.

The fortifications on the east side of the island have been ruined by the fire from the government forts of Santa Cruz and Sammonos, which are on two promontories inclosing the harbor and which face Villegagnon.

It was learned also that Minister Mendonca said that for five days the insurgent Admiral Mello had been hiding with his fleet behind the point Armuco. This point is across the harbor from Rio and close to the city of Nictheroy. Encouraged by their success in exploding the magazine and by Mello's withdrawal, the government forces have recently been moving their fortifications and zone down the bluff to get in closer range of Mello's fleet.

Perhaps the most decisive advantage gained against Mello, according to Minister Mendonca's remarks to his friend, has been the repulse of Mello's forces in the state of St. Catharine.

The state of St. Catharine is on the coast about half way between Rio and Rio Grande do Sul, the most southerly state of Brazil. Lying off the mainland is the island of St. Catharine, which Mello seized and where he established his provisional government.

For some time his forces had been planning to effect a landing on the mainland and gain a footing there. Last Thursday they tried to carry out their plans, and they made an attack on a point on the mainland. The government forces met them, and after a hard struggle repulsed the insurgents and drove them off.

These latter disasters, the minister remarked, argued an improvement in the government's position.

Minister Mendonca also expressed the opinion that the attempt to restore the empire would be one of the most powerful causes in bringing about the crushing of the revolt. He said it would arouse the people of Brazil and would create a powerful outside sentiment against the cause of the insurgents.

Crushed by a Caving Bank.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 21.—Goat island, the site of the United States government torpedo station, was the scene of another disaster. Seven workmen engaged in making an excavation for the erection of gun cotton factory No. 6 were buried under a dozen feet of earth through the caving in of a bank. One was killed almost outright, and two more will die from their injuries, while the remaining men are all painfully hurt. John McGregor is the name of the man who was killed.

The Great Storm Continues.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—There was some abatement in the great storm which swept over the British Isles. The fall was brief, and then the gale was renewed with apparently increased fury. Many steamers have reached Dover with their smokestacks gone. Reports received from many points along the coast show that the gale has spent its force, although heavy seas are still running. The list of disasters grows rapidly.

Excitement In a Mining Town.

PITTSBURG, Kan., Nov. 21.—C. E. Elliott, a pit boss, shot and killed Will McKover, a negro miner, during a quarrel. The town is full of negroes armed to the teeth, and every citizen carries a whichester. Excitement runs high, and should a gun be fired on either side a terrible race war would result.

Lobengula Wants to Surrender.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—A dispatch from Cape Town says that King Lobengula has written that he is anxious to discussing terms of surrender. He says that he will not do anything underhandly, but that it is difficult to control the young men with him, who wish to fight.

Social Leaders Stranded.

A MISLEADING REPORT.

Ex-Consul Severance Denies Commissioner Blount's Statements.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—H. W. Severance, late United States consul general at Hawaii, was asked what he thought of the report of Commissioner Blount. "In the main," said Mr. Severance, "the report as published seems to be entirely misleading in regard to the events of January last, which resulted in the overthrow of the queen and establishment of the provisional government. It was not the result of a conspiracy on the part of a few men, but a genuine revolution.

"There is no just ground for the charge that Minister Stevens conspired with the organizers of the provisional government. His actions under the circumstances were entirely regular and in accordance with diplomatic custom.

"The statement that the landing of the troops from the Boston was unreasonable and unnecessary is unjustifiably false. Blount's own report shows that there was reason to expect disturbance and bloodshed, endangering the lives and property of peaceful Americans. The occasion certainly warranted the landing of the troops for the protection of American interests.

"Much stress is laid in Blount's report on placing troops opposite the government building. Admiral Skerritt is quoted as saying this position was a wise choice if the intention was to support the provisional government. The admiral must have been unaware that the troops were not quartered in Arion hall until efforts to secure an available place at a distance from the government building had failed. As to the nature of Blount's investigation, I have nothing to say except that he did not appear to make any discrimination in regard to the credibility or standing of the persons whom he questioned.

"I made that remark to him, and he replied that it made no difference what area of position or standing the witnesses had."

SEIZED CITY LOTS.

A Big Trust of Railroad Land In Spokane "Jumped" by Boomers.

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 21.—When the city awoke Monday morning, it was confronted by an extraordinary spectacle. During the night 250 boomers had rushed in and located lots on the tract known as Shantytown. Recent decisions by the secretary of the interior adverse to the railroad respecting lieu land sections started a rumor that this tract had reverted to the government, and this led to a stampede for lots. Daylight brought renewed activity, and before 9 o'clock at least 700 men had staked out lots.

Policemen caught the infection and joined in the work of grabbing. During the day Shantytown was a scene of great activity.

Hundreds of shacks and cabins were begun in a day, and hundreds of men stood guard over their claims. At night tonfires dotted the site, and lanterns gleamed in every direction. It is believed the jumpers have a ghost of a show.

Continues Solos a Fishing Tug.

SANDUSKY, O., Nov. 21.—The fishing tug Oggel, belonging to the Sandusky Fishing company of this city, was seized near Pelee island by Canadian authorities. The boat and crew of six were taken to Amherstburg, where they are held on the charge of fishing in Canadian waters. Great excitement is manifes ed among fishermen here.

A Village on Fire.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 21.—At this hour (2:30 a. m.) Jonesville, a thriving suburb of this city, is on fire. A dozen costly villas are in ashes, others are on fire, and the wind is blowing 30 miles an hour. The fire is out of the wind continues, will reach $600,000. The fire department is powerless to handle the flames.

Three Fatal Months.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—Reports just filed show that July, August and September were bloody months in the history of railroading in this state. During that period there were recorded 318 accidents. The accidents involved directly 350 persons. Eighty-seven were killed, and 263 were injured.

The Omen and What Followed.

"Tell me there's nothing in signs!" said Uncle Allen Sparks, looking meditatively into the fire. "I remember a young friend of mine named Smudgins who once laughed at the idea that anything disastrous was going to happen to him merely because he had seen the new moon over his left shoulder."

"Well, did anything calamitous happen to him?" inquired one of the group.

"Yes," replied Uncle Allen, with a sigh. "He went the same evening and proposed to the present Mrs. Smudgins—and she accepted him!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Sad Truth.

"Are you good at conundrums?" asked Kitty of Mollie.

"Pretty good," answered Mollie cautiously.

"Well, here's one," said Kitty. "Where do the sweetest cherries always hang on the cherry tree?"

"In the sun," replied Mollie promptly. "That isn't the answer," said Kitty severely.

"Well, what is it then?"

"They always hang just out of reach!" declared Kitty, with a mournful sigh.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE FLOWER PICKERS.

They Birds, Bright as a Spark of Fire, That Build the Daintiest of Nests.

Few of the people who live in the great Island of Australia have ever seen a flower picker, although they may have lived for years beneath the lofty trees upon which this little bird builds its pretty nest. The fact is the flower picker lives so high up among the topmost twigs of the tallest trees and is so small and so seldom descends even to the lower branches that, in spite of its rich scarlet breast, it never attracts notice and indeed cannot often be seen by the naked eye at the distance from the ground at which it usually builds its nest.

AUSTRALIAN FLOWER PICKERS AND NEST.

Sometimes a person standing beneath one of the great trees growing upon the bank of a creek or river, where these birds are to be found, will hear a pretty, warbling song, unlike any he ever heard elsewhere, but unless he knows the habits of the bird and is a skillful hunter he can scarcely hope to catch a glimpse of the singer snugly hidden away among the thickly growing leaves far above him.

The nest of the flower picker is very beautiful. It is made of the cottonlike linings of the seed pods of Australian shrubs and is perfectly white, so that, as it swings in the breeze, it looks like a snowball hanging on some wild vine or climbing plant. St. Nicholas, which gives this little account and so prettily pictures the bird and its nest, says there is another kind of a flower picker that lives on the island of Borneo. The little birds belonging to this species, unlike their timid Australian cousins, make their homes in low brushwood and are so fearless that they will allow themselves to be almost touched before they take flight.

The Malay people, who live in the part of Borneo where the birds are found, call them "sparks," because the male bird, when darting about among the bushes, really looks as bright as a flash of fire. The nest of the flower picker of Borneo is about the shape and size of a goose egg. It is built of fine green moss and a sort of brown silky mass of threads or fibers from a plant and lined with a few small feathers.

The Real and Only Mermaid.

An animal called the dugong frequents the bays of the Red sea, the east coast of Africa, Ceylon, the isles of the Indian archipelago and the west coast of Australia. It lives on the seaweeds growing in the shallow waters and is never found on land. About 12 feet long—though specimens 20 feet in length are not very rare—with a rounded head and fishlike tail, the dugong is the creature which gave rise to the stories of mermaids. And certainly when standing upright in the waves, holding its baby in its arms, it offered a close enough resemblance to a kind of human being to explain the too lively fancy of the ancient sailors of the east.

The young are caught for "the table," and are said to taste like veal or pork, which may account for the name of "sea pig," by which they are known in some places. They are so much hunted for food and oil that they will one day be extinct. The dugong is an excellent mother, and the capture of the baby leads to her capture also, for she never deserts her offspring.

The Proportions of Our Flag.

It was recently asked of some public school children to give the exact proportions of the American flag and they were unable to do so. Some one, referring to this incident, says he has tried cyclopedias, officers of the navy and various lights of the educational world, but all in vain, and cannot find out. He asked enlightenment from the Brooklyn Eagle, which answers that there is not surprising that public school children could not meet the demand for information as to the dimensions of the American flag. That does not belong to the educational routine. It is a kind of knowledge which must be acquired in the practical part of life. If a flag is 8 feet long each stripe should be 1 inches wide, which would give a width of 4 feet 4 inches to the flag. The union should cover 7 stripes, and be one-third the length, or 32 inches wide. If the flag is 6 feet long it should be 3⅕ feet wide.

A Youthful Army Officer.

Prince Frederick Karl, second son of the German emperor, recently celebrated his tenth birthday, and on that occasion was made a lieutenant in the First regiment of Foot Guards. He is the youngest officer in the Germany army.

Waiting For Breakfast.

Old Tib and young Tib,
There they sit and wait;
They know their master's coming,
Although he's rather late.

Old Tib and young Tib,
With fur as soft as silk,
Waiting for their breakfast—
A saucer full of milk.

Old Tib's a great cat,
Young Tib is gay.
One likes to go to sleep
The other likes to play.

He Was Correct.

"Please, ma'am," said the boy, "can't you help me? I has to support a wife and three children."

"You? Why, you're not old enough to be married."

"No, but me father is. It's his wife and three children I has to support."—Harper's Bazar.

Force of Habit.

McSmith—Reins has a queer habit. Whenever he is out driving, and he sees a man standing on a corner, he whips up his horse and passes him in a hurry.

O'Jones—It's force of habit. He used to be a street car driver.—Puck.

Timely Caution.

"If you ever 'spect to go to heaven, my dear," said the little girl, sewing up a gaping rent in her doll's back, "you'll have to take better care of yourself. They don't have any sawdust in heaven."—Chicago Tribune.

Strange.

"It's funny about bridal pairs. They're not like other pears at all."

"Why not?"

"They're softest when they're green."—Retailer and Jobber.

How She Brought Him to Time.

"I think the way Blanche Biggerstaff brought her young man to time was a little about of anything I ever heard before," said Mamie Stivetts to a bevy of girls.

"Oh, has she landed him at last?" said one.

"Tell us about it," demanded the rest.

"You know he's been going to see her for years, and they are dead in love with each other."

"No doubt about that."

"He was too bashful to propose, and at the same time he was crazy to get married."

"Yes, go on with the story."

"Well, the other evening he was at the Biggerstaffs' as usual, when Blanche remarked:

"'The girls are all wearing guards to their engagement rings now.'

"'Indeed!' replied Mr. Linger.

"'I have never given me a guard for mine, Charlie,' says Blanche.

"'Why,' stammered Charlie, 'I never gave you an engagement ring, you know.'

"'Yes, I know,' replied Blanche, as meek as Moses.'

"'Well, what then?' demanded the girls impatiently.

"'Why, he took her an engagement ring and a guard, too, the very next evening.'"—New York Mercury

Both Sides of the Question.

He—I know I am not very strong, but they say it puts new life into an old man to marry.

She—Yes, I suppose that's the serious obstacle.—Life.

Not the South American Kind.

"There," said the Chicago wag, pointing to a round shouldered young fellow in a greasy jacket and overalls, "is a man who has taken part in some of the greatest revolutions of the age."

"That man? Impossible! Who is he?" ejaculated the eastern visitor.

"Oh, he was one of the engineers at the Ferris wheel."—Detroit Tribune.

Still Another.

"There seem to be two classes of people in your country," said the observant foreigner on a tour through the United States, "those that have wealth and those that are struggling frantically to get it."

"There is a third," replied young Asa Sparks, "the class of rich men. They struggle frantically to spend it."—Chicago Tribune.

Reason In It.

"Mrs. Salibi is taking a great interest in church work now."

Mrs. Frost—I didn't know that she had got her new [illegible] yet.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Indeed! Why?"

"Because Washington's dead."

OUR NEXT DOOR NEIGHBOR'S CAT.

Tho' a lover of all animals,
I'm bound to tell you pat,
I nurse a secret hatred for
Our next door neighbor's cat!
His coat is black, his mind's as dark,
He's full of wicked ways,
He turns my happiness to grief,
Both nights as well as days!

He killed my dear canary bird,
He stole my breakfast fish;
And when I left a cold fowl
I found an empty dish!
He breaks down all my favorite flowers,
And rolls upon my bed;
I'm glad at night he's to sleep
He howls upon the shed.

He fights my little pussy cat,
And sits upon the wall,
And blinks his wicked eyes at me
While I in anger howl;
And when I shake my fist at him,
You'll doubt it I suppose,
I almost fancy that he puts
His paw up to his nose!

Of all the cats that ever were
He is the worst I know,
And oh! how thankful I should be
If he would only go.
Oh! yes! I like all animals,
But still I tell you pat——
I nurse a secret hatred for
Our next door neighbor's cat!

SAYING AND DOINGS.

Of Children, for Children and About Children.

"I'm going to have a party on Jennie's birthday," remarked Ethel, "and I've invited twenty-five boys and girls."

"What a nice mamma you must have!" said the visitor.

"Oh, mamma doesn't know anything about it," answered Ethel; it's going to be a surprise party for her."

FUN IN THE NURSERY.

"Pooh!" sneered the India-rubber doll to the jumping-jack. "You're no good."

"That's all right," retorted the jumping-jack, pleasantly. "I'm always dancing and laughing, while you cry if anybody squeezes you."

IN SCHOOL.

During an attempt to "develop" the idea and use of the superlative degree of the adjective, the following conversation took place:

Teacher—I see a pretty girl, and you see one who is better looking than the first. Now how can you describe the second girl by the use of the word pretty.

Pupil—The second girl is prettier.

Teacher—Very good. Now, suppose you see a girl who is better looking than either of the others, what would you call her?

Pupil—I should call her a daisy!

A QUEER RUMOR.

I have a dog. Have you? I have a cat too. My dog's name is Ned; my cat's name, Nick. Nick and Ned. Their names go well together, but not better than do the owners of them, for Ned, as black as coal, and Nick, as white as snow, have always been the best of friends. But let me tell you about them.

One morning Nell came running in with her eyes as big as saucers. Nick was in the box of shavings in the shed, with three of the cunningest kittens you ever saw.

"Now Ned's nose is broken!" cried Nell.

But it wasn't, for pretty soon Nick came in, ran up to Ned, and purred and talked swahlie; then he followed her out to the shed, and they stood looking at those kittens for as much as five minutes, Ned wagging his great tail, and looking as pleased as a dog can look. Then what do you suppose he did? He took two of those little blind kittens in his big mouth, and started for his kennel. Nick looked at him a moment, then snatched the other, and followed him, and they are there yet.

It looks queer to see a big dog taking care of kittens, but Ned does it every day while Nick is hunting mice. Isn't he a noble fellow?—Harper's Young People.

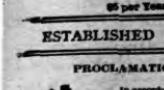
PROCLAMATION.



In accordance with established custom, I, George T. Werts, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby designate and appoint THURSDAY, THE THIRTIETH DAY OF NOVEMBER, INSTANT, to be observed as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God.

I recommend that on the day named the people of this State abstain, so far as possible, from their ordinary secular pursuits and devote themselves to appropriate observance of the occasion, and especially to the rendering of thanks to the Heavenly Father for his continued blessings conferred upon our State and nation, and to pray that peace, happiness and prosperity may attend us in the future.

Witness my hand and the seal of the State of New Jersey hereunto affixed. Done at the city of Trenton, this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-three, and of the independence of the United States the one hundredth and eighteenth.

Country Delicacies and Pretty Girls.

Mrs. Schwenk, wife of General Schwenk, the Misses Holly and several other charming young ladies, being very much interested in Sunday-school work, are to give a fair and supper to-night in the Bamboon house opposite the Gentlemen's Driving Park, on Park avenue near the city limits. Country delicacies in abundance, and flowers, candies and many articles will be served by charming young ladies. Young people will be made especially welcome. The proceeds of the fair will be added to a fund for building a new chapel.

FOR CHURCH WORK.

A NEW SOCIETY FORMED LAST NIGHT IN HOLY CROSS CHURCH.

It is to be Known as the "Holy Cross Brotherhood," and is Composed Entirely of Men of the Parish—Officers Elected.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather last night, a goodly number of the male members of Holy Cross church assembled in the parish building for the purpose of organizing a brotherhood for the encouragement of church work. The meeting was opened with prayer by the rector, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, who presided.

The rector then explained the purpose of calling the meeting and the object of the brotherhood. He said that the best and most efficient church work was often the result of organization, and that if members of a special branch of church work assigned them, and if the work was well distributed among the proper persons, the prosperity of the church would be greatly augmented. The object of the meeting was the organization of the society, the election of officers, and the appointment of committees which would set with those ladies appointed by the Ladies' Auxiliary Society for the same work.

The proposition was favorably considered by all present and it was decided to call the society "Holy Cross Brotherhood," which was then organized with a membership of thirty-two.

The following officers were chosen:

President—Rev. T. Logan Murphy.

Vice President—Joseph R. Hall.

Secretary—Bradley Hall.

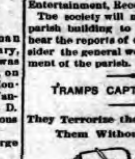
Treasurer—Charles Western.

The various committees appointed were for the following branches of church work: Missionary, Relief, Ways and Means, Altar Committee, Visiting, Entertainment, Reception and Ushers.

The society will meet monthly in the parish building to transact business, hear the reports of committees and consider the general welfare and advancement of the parish.

TRAMPS CAPTURE LINDEN.

They Terrorize the Citizens and Rob Them Without Hindrance.



RAIDING through the streets, twenty-five tramps Monday night took possession of Linden. They robbed henroosts and woodsheds, broke into cellars in search of liquor, and stole the clothes from several lines.

Scarcely any of the residents dared to sleep, as they feared the tramps might set fire to their dwellings. The tramps, shortly after midnight, became drunk and yelled and cursed. No one dared to interfere, as some of the tramps were armed with revolvers, which they frequently discharged.

Not until daylight did the tramps depart. They went into the woods toward Cranford. The citizens of Linden are exercised over the invasion and steps will be taken to organize for protection against the marauders.

The gang secured and drank two cases of wine, which they took out of the cellar of Mr. Hoepli's lumber merchant doing business in New York.

Entertainment at Third Street Mission.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the East Third street mission gave their first sociable of the season last night. It was a very stormy night, but their friends turned out and entirely filled the large main room. The following is the programme:

Address of welcome	Mr. Randolph
Piano solo	Miss Harriet Peck
Recitation	Miss Ida Randolph
Recitation—"Fin's Letter"	Miss Ida Randolph
Piano solo	Miss Harriet Peck
Vocal solo—"The Hands of Time"	Master Albert Ford
Piano solo	Miss Harriet Peck
Dialogue—"Handsome is That Handsome Does"	Miss Flo Young, Miss Annie Randolph
Vocal duet—"Sweet Spirit Hear My Prayer"	The Misses Manning
World's Fair views given by magic lantern	Mr. J. A. Robinson, assisted by Mr. Charles Dunn
Vocal duet—"Master and Page"	The Misses Manning

The solos and duetts of the Misses Manning were exceptionally good and the recitation by Albert Ford would have done credit to one of twice his years.

The members of the Christmas Committee of the society are preparing to give a Christmas entertainment about Christmas, and they are planning to make every child in reach of the mission happy on Christmas day. Gospel meetings are held in the mission every Thursday and Sunday evenings.

Mr. Crane at the Y. M. C. A.

The address by the Rev. Mr. Crane on the "Serpent of Brass," at the Y. M. C. A., last evening, was a clear and forcible presentation of the truth. His illustrations, as usual, were very striking. After Mr. Crane's address the Rev. Dr. Yerkes following with a short earnest talk in line with the speaker's remarks. An interesting feature of the other meeting was the testimonies of some of those who had professed Christ in these meetings. Another young address may be expected to-night.

The men's meetings and bible reading for all will be continued until Friday inclusive.

STRIKING A WINNING GAIT.

Park Club Bowlers Down Everything that Comes Before Them.

Last night the Cranford bowlers turned out in full force and barged the Park bowlers in their own den. The game ran monotonously close until the eight frame when the Park Club pulled themselves together and won by 39 pins.

The Quarreling Editors and the Pictorial Posters.

One who didn't know any better might think that the present hubbub over the kind of posters posted about Plainfield was something new. Is he reminded that THE NEWS several years ago by its criticisms caused not only some of these posters but also the fences themselves to be torn down by the indignant owners of the fences when they saw the uses to which their property was put. This occurred in respect to the fences in front of the Somerset street public school, where posters had been placed so that the subjects were forced upon the attention of the boys and girls coming from and going to school. It was a high board fence. It is now a picket fence.

THE NEWS, except when such an outrageous purpose to especially entice children drawn, has never considered the posters half so harmful as the plays they represent, which it would be ridiculous to charge on Mr. A. L. Force, the bill poster, although Mr. A. L. Force the editor may be to blame for allowing in his paper such fierce puffs of the plays. THE NEWS declined to insert such puffs without credit that the public could take the statements for what they are usually worth, and not as given of our own knowledge. We declined to knowingly delude our readers by publishing what we did not know or believe to be true. In this respect, however, we do not see how Mr. Force is any more to blame than Mr. Runyon, or in fact how any bill poster is to blame. The common rule, for such things as are complained about, we regret to say, are commonly done. Pubs are lowered regardless of whether they are true or not, or believed to be true.

Music Hall has had to suffer. "You may deceive some of the people all the time, and all the people some of the time, but you can't deceive all the people all the time," self-respecting people, after being repeatedly hoaxed, have remained away from the hall altogether. This occurred before either Mr. Runyon or Mr. Dumont became the managers. The previous manager tried to give only well-known plays which ladies could safely attend, but now and then, when his regular business would not permit him to investigate as closely as he otherwise might, objectionable plays would creep in.

The Hall became a losing investment in consequence, for which the people upon whom it depended largely for support withdrew their patronage, and put up a theatre of their own which they could control—hence the Casino, which is always kept clean, and which is free of a doubtful character is allowed there.

But even when proper entertainments are at the hall, the barrooms across with which it is run tends to make it unpopular.

Councilman Fisk says he considers it a regular fire-trap, and that even ordinary precautions are so neglected the fire department must always be ready to exercise vigilant when entertainments are in progress from four or five.

This fire-trap evil extends to the heating, the place being usually so cold that public exhibitions are found necessary in the winter, for which heat is right to redress. This was the case Monday night when a lecturer apologized for the cold condition of the hall. The employes say the hall is with the management's consent kept cold purposely. A cheerless condition is one of many reasons for keeping the people out of the public's headquarters, which make the owners only a comparatively slight part of its dependency.

There are no two worse than the pictures in cigar stores, and these are now so common that they are all. If anybody pays for attention to them. However, their object is clearly enough to degrade the public morals, and the people of Plainfield have a right to be protected from those who use these things for dishonest purposes.

Mr. Force claims that it is quite which actuates Mr. Runyon to attack him as he does, because Mr. Runyon, he says, was considered undermost candidate on the part of the former partner, Demorest, who favors none of the present Board of Music Hall. It is only a short time now, however, since Mr. Runyon was the attacked of the very man he helped to settle the score, and perhaps no one will weep if out of the evil good may come.

Mr. John S. Gibson for State Treasurer.

Mr. John S. Gibson, manager of the Newark Advertiser, is a candidate for the position of State Treasurer, with good prospects of success. If his claims are based on party services, he stands almost without a peer, but aside from these he has qualifications which point eminently at him for the position. The State will be benefitted should he succeed, as THE NEWS hopes he will. The editor of THE NEWS has known Mr. Gibson for a number of years as a able and ever faithful servant of the people.

Stage Driver Allen Fined $15.

Stage driver Allen was arrested yesterday afternoon for being drunk and disorderly while in front of the post office. He was put out of Smith's saloon, but refused to stay out and go away. Hence his arrest. In court this morning Judge Coddington fined Allen $15.

ALMOST SUFFOCATED.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A FRONT STREET FAMILY.

Fire on the First Floor Filled the House with Smoke, and Almost Suffocated the Inmates while Asleep.

FIRE last night endangered the house No. 611 West Front, and it was only by hard work and quick and prompt action that the flames were extinguished at the start by Thos. Van Ness. The house is occupied by the families of Theodore Van Ness and David Bird. Between twelve and one o'clock last night Mr. Van Ness was awakened by the smell of smoke in his room. Hastily dressing he aroused his family and rushed down stairs to find out if possible where the smoke emanated from. He found that the smoke came from Mr. Bird's apartments.

Mr. Van Ness's first impulse was to send an alarm, but not knowing where he could get a key to the fire box, he went back into the house and determined to fight the fire himself.

By this time Mr. Bird had become aroused and the two men went into the room where the fire was, and by hard work, with the help of several pails of water finally, headed off a conflagration.

It seems that the pipe from Mr. Bird's stove runs through a piece of sheet iron directly back of the stove and so into the chimney. The sheet iron is used to to shut off the fire place. This iron it is supposed got hot and set fire to the woodwork around it. When discovered the smoke was burned, and the flames had eaten into the frame work of the house. Mr. Van Ness's family narrowly escaped suffocation from smoke.

RISKED SMALLPOX FOR HIS BOY.

Austin F. Knowles of Elizabeth Goes with His Son to a Pesthouse.

The Elizabeth Board of Health was forced to admit yesterday that smallpox had become epidemic. During the past twelve hours four new cases have been reported. The malady is no longer confined to Italian families.

Ex-Freeholder Joseph Nolte was stricken, at his home, 324 Elizabeth avenue. A son of Austin F. Knowles was attacked by the disease at his home, 284 Elizabeth avenue.

Mr. Knowles insisted upon going to the pesthouse with his boy to take care of him.

Two additional cases were reported from an Italian tenement on Third avenue. A suspicious case was also found on Magnolia avenue. There are thirteen cases in the city.

DETERMINED LYNCHERS.

A Brute Taken From Court and Hanged In the Very Building.

OTTUMWA, Ia., Nov. 22.—Fred Gustavson, a laborer, aged 32, who recently came to this city, was hanged by a mob on the main street of Ottumwa for as a result on a little girl committed Monday night.

When Gustavson was brought to Justice Trudo's office for preliminary examination, a fight ensued between the father, grandfather and other relatives of the child and the officers.

The latter finally wrested from the hands of the officers and dragged out of the office door. Here the mother of the child stood with the rope and gave it into the hands of the mob. It was immediately placed about the wretch's neck, and he was hanged to the balustrade of the outside stairway leading to the office. A great crowd had by this time collected.

No effort was made to cut the villain down. After hanging 12 minutes the rope broke, and the body fell to the pavement. It was then seized by the officers and hurried to the jail. The mob, fearing life was not yet extinct, followed and demanded the body. Mayor Lafferz assured them that the fellow was dead and ordered them to disperse. Still they refused to do so. Finally a committee for the crowd was selected to view the remains, which was done. Upon a report from the committee that life was extinct the mob dispersed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Liquid Fuel.

Two plans have been proposed by which steamships may avoid carrying such vast quantities of coal. One is to have coaling stations at sea at proper intervals along the great lanes of ocean travel. Another is that liquid fuel shall be used instead of coal.

The success of the liquid fuel system at the Columbian exposition encourages the idea that this kind of steam producing material may in time take the place of the grimy, smoky coal everywhere. The great boiler plant at the World's fair would have required no less than 550 tons of soft coal a day to keep the machinery running.

Instead of coal, however, the directors used a liquid which was even cheaper than crude petroleum. It was a by-product of the refining of kerosene for illuminating purposes and was piped to the exposition grounds from Whiting, Ind. It poured into burners directly under the boilers by means of half inch pipes. A globe valve cut off the supply of oil altogether when necessary and the supply was regulated perfectly at the burners themselves by means similar to those that regulate the flame of a kerosene lamp. Ample precautions were taken to secure perfect connection and guard against fire and explosion Result—entire safety and no smoke.

The employees of the Great Eastern Railway company of England think it is a model corporation. Among the institutions which it has founded for its employees are a pension fund, accident fund and a savings bank. The pension fund and accident fund are maintained equally by the company and the men. The company allows the men 4 per cent on their deposits in the savings bank. Besides this the company maintains a large construction shops a technical school, science and art institute and a library containing 7,000 volumes. In this way it shares with the employees its profits. The men themselves maintain a contagious discomfort, whereby a man will be ill if not each ailment or who has any member of his family to ill is supported till the danger of infection is past.

Many of the revolutions in the South American republics start over the question of allowing a president when he retires from office to nominate his successor. The vote is cast for his candidate by the army. In this way, and this one party would be able to perpetuate itself in power if anything, even republican government, could perpetuate itself in a South American republic. The last revolution in Chili came because Balmaceda insisted on the right to name his successor, while the present trouble in Uruguay arises from the same cause. The opposition has been dead against the nominating power of the president, and so far as he has this party has managed to keep their choice secret before election day.

The commanders of ladies who had registered and prepared to cast their votes for officers in New York were disappointed when the clerk in charge of the registry books, in Chamberge county shook his head and said:

WILBUR IS WEAKENING.

A Proposition to the Strikers Made by Lehigh's President.

OTHER ROADS MAY BE TIED UP.

The Proposal of President Wilbur Is Met With Prompt Refusal—The Strike Extends to Other Divisions, and Seven Mail Trains Are Not Run.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Through traffic on the Reading line has been greatly impeded by the Lehigh Valley complications. No through trains are being run from either Buffalo or Jersey City. The employees of the Lehigh system claim to have matters all their own way now. Recent intelligence from representatives all over the system indicate a stronger feeling in favor of the strike. A dispatch from Buffalo states that 36 more men have quit, and one from J. W. Rice at Wilkesbarre says that the men in that neighborhood are all showing a stronger front in favor of the strike.

On the other hand, the officials of the company say that before many hours have elapsed they will be ready to put new trains with full complements of men. John J. Hannahan stated that his advice to the Reading officials would be to let the Lehigh alone in this fight, as it may have the effect of tying up that line also.

He says he does not mean this as a threat, but the organization among the Reading men is just as strong as that on the Lehigh Valley.

A. P. Bedford of Scranton, the superintendent of the Farmers' Dairy dispatch, called on the strike committee for the purpose of entering a protest against side tracking a train loaded with 14,000 quarts of milk consigned to this city. The committee refused to do anything for him. This circumstance and similar ones have had the effect of creating a milk famine here. Wholesale dealers were getting 10 cents a quart.

President Wilbur issued the following bulletin, which is understood to be the company's ultimatum:

The Company's Ultimatum.

TO ALL EMPLOYEES—To correct any misapprehension regarding the position of the officers of the company, I wish to state that we are at all times ready and willing to give patient hearing to complaints on part of its employees or any member of them in any department. If dissatisfied with the conclusions reached by the division superintendent, the president will hear their cases and decide. But we decline to confer with organized committees composed of the several branches of the service for the reason that we cannot know that such committees fairly represents its employees. Engineers of course cannot represent the grievances of telegraphers, nor can firemen properly represent trainmen. The company maintains the right to employ upon such terms as may be agreed upon, and settle all complaints only with its employees, and to discharge men for cause, with the right to appeal, but without reference to the judgment or action of any organization.

All employees who may fail to report for duty on or before Wednesday noon will be regarded as having left the service of the company, and all such will be filled in fill as soon as the payrolls can be made up. Men failing to come forward and receive their wages will receive no consideration in reorganizing the train service.

When the strikers read President Wilbur's bulletin, they looked upon it as a sort of olive branch, and the grievance committee, in session at the Bingham House, was particularly jubilant over it. The members of the committee announced unofficially that they would not accept Mr. Wilbur's proposition to present their grievances in the manner suggested by him, and E. H. Clark, grand chief conductor of the Order of Railroad Conductors, speaking for the committee, issued a counter bulletin this afternoon, in which he argues the entire question at issue between the men and the company. Mr. Clark's bulletin reads in part as follows:

An Answer to Wilbur.

Had the officers of the company treated their employees with the same spirit of fairness, action accorded them by Mr. Voorhees last spring, the difficulty would not have come, even though a reduction in wages was inflicted. Finally small as compared with that accorded by the average general manager. It was only after the employes had utterly failed to secure an audience with their officials that their organizations were called in. I presume there is no question as to the right of employes to be come and remain members of the organizations. That right being conceded, they have a right to call upon the organizations in their trouble for such assistance as the organizations can afford during the efforts of the officers of the organization had failed to secure audience with the officers of the company. The right of the organizations to confer and deal with their employees is not questioned, and it is only after they have failed to so adjust that the organizations will take any cognizance of the complaints from the men.

Trouble Is Expected.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 22.—Colonel Kook, commander of the Ninth regiment, national guard, is a very nervous man. He says he has trouble ahead. If his regiment is called out, he knows what the result will be. It is safe to say that nine out of every ten in the regiment sympathize with the strikers. In fact the whole regiment is made up of men who toil in mines or on railroads.

Trouble is expected at the Lehigh Valley station, and Sheriff Walters has sworn in 25 deputies. Some of them are desperate looking fellows. They are all armed and under the command of Detective O'Brien. Superintendent Esser expects to get an order to move freight soon. If the strikers should interfere, then the deputy sheriffs will be called upon to protect the crews in charge of the trains. As time progresses the situation becomes more critical at Port Bowkley. Last evening all the signal lights were broken, which prevented passenger trains from running. The act was done by boys. The strikers disclaimed all responsibility for it.

Other Roads Threatened.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 22.—Only one train was moved on the Rochester division of the Lehigh Valley road. Representatives of the 24 brotherhoods—conductors, trainmen, engineers, firemen and telegraphers—held a meeting at the strike headquarters here, and a general order was issued, which was promptly obeyed by every employee of the Lehigh road. The order included not only the Rochester branch, but took in the Batavia and Niagara Falls branches, and on these branches it was as promptly complied with as on the Rochester division. Not a wheel is turning on any of these divisions. This completes the drop of the road west of Sayre.

The strike leaders here say that the claim that the New York Central road is not a brotherhood road is false. They say that were an order issued to the operatives on that road similar to the one just issued the road would be absolutely crippled. They also say that the Lehigh Valley road does not encumber itself to a reasonable state they will tie up the Erie, the New York Central, the Delaware and Lackawanna and all of the other roads one by one.

The strikers claim that Superintendent Wilson, at Hazleton, in addition, to a Canadian from the provinces, and that he came thither to work under a contract with the Lehigh company. Should Walters persist in bringing in people from Canada he will be taken against him under the United States contract labor law. Other operators here working are said to be in the same fix.

Trains on the Rochester branch of the Lehigh have not been working since 5 o'clock last night. The strikers who are assembled at the depot are under police surveillance. All is quiet.

A Runaway Engine.

BUFFALO, Nov. 22.—There was an exciting time at the Dingens street crossing of the Lehigh Valley railroad. A runaway engine, drawing 44 freight cars of oil, came tearing toward the crossing. Not a soul was aboard. The engine swayed from side to side with the great momentum gained, and people who saw the coming thought it would jump the track. It ran on, however, and dashed straight toward engine No. 573, which stood on the main track. The runaway engine was No. 279. It ran into the rear of No. 573, lifted it from the track and made a complete wreck of it. No. 279 was pinned fast by the wreck. It was locked. Twenty-three men from the roundhouse near by were put to work clearing away the wreck. It was said that the runaway engine had come alone from Scott street and that it had a clear road until it reached Dingens street.

When full details were learned, it was ascertained that the strikers had had nothing to do with the runaway engine. The runaway and wreck resulted from an accident.

Mail Trains Abandoned.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 22.—All mail trains on the Southern Central and Ithaca divisions of the Lehigh have been abandoned. An attempt to make up a train in the yards here evening failed, the men refusing to work.

STEVENS BREAKS DOWN.

The Ex-Minister to Hawaii Arrives In Boston Almost Ill.

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—Ex-Minister John L. Stevens of Hawaii arrived in this city and went to the home of his nephew, Elmer Stevens, at 84 Morrison street, West Somerville. On arriving last night he almost immediately retired. The strain he has been under the past few weeks has begun to tell upon his constitution, and it was a physical impossibility, it was said, for him to receive callers. Mr. Elmer Stevens stated that his uncle had retired very much fatigued. Said Mr. Stevens to a reporter: "My uncle wished me to say to you when you arrived that he should have waited to greet you but for his exceeding fatigue.

"He will continue his position on the Hawaiian question this evening in a lecture before the West Somerville Baptist church and will in a day or two have nearly a reply to Mr. Blount's charges in detail."

On the train Mr. Stevens entered into a conversation with an acquaintance and talked some regarding the Hawaiian question. He seemed, however, to fail as soon as the position taken by the administration as the policy of the Democra ic party, holding that the Democratic party will be true to the historic policy, which is to be summed up in these words, "We must have the Hawaiian islands." He stated that he was misquoted, and that the matter is one others might do, not to treat the subject from a political, much less a party standpoint.

Fight Among Mountaineers.

GREENVILLE, S. C., Nov. 22.—A regular battle occurred in the mountains near the line between Greenville and Spartansburg. There were about 500 in the mob, and a large number of the mountain people assembled. Whisky flowed freely, and there was more or less fighting all day. The owners of the whisky wagon and the state dispensary officers who had tried to seize it came together. One of the owners of the wagon was shot through the heart. Henry Finley, one of the dispensary officers, was also killed. Several others were wounded, three seriously.

Died on Her Husband's Grave.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 22.—Margaret Murphy left her home at Onondaga Hall, near Syracuse, to visit the graves of her husband and children in a cemetery about two miles distant. She fell and broke her leg. Being unable to summon aid, she died from exposure. Her body was found the next day on her husband's grave.

Fourth Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed: New York—Avon, Y. P. Post; Columbus, M. F. Hopkins; East Florence, Anthony Whipple; Jacksonville, Abram Pickard; Lee Center, Carol Stevens; Perryville, Joseph Howell; Valeria, Samuel Fergerson; Westerville, G. W. Hawkins.

New Jersey—Delaware, W. M. Craig; Pennsauken, Sarah Wetke.

Clerks Plot to Rob Stores.

ALBANY, Nov. 22.—A concerted plot to rob the large merchants of this city was unearthed here. Five clerks in as many different stores were in the scheme. With the aid of express messengers they were enabled to send goods out of town and exchange and trade them off in various ways.

Town Swallowed by the Earth.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—A special from Mexico City says that a shock of earthquake that occurred Friday at Kuchan, in the northern part of the province of Khorasan, has completely destroyed the town, and the loss of life was immense.

Sailmkl Must Not Fight.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Captain Edward L. Zalinski has been ordered to appear before the retiring board in New York. This would thwart any plan of his to go into the service of the Brazilian government.

Options Smugglers Caught.

BUFFALO, Nov. 22.—Charles Gould, William Carmichael and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Burke were arrested on a charge of smuggling opium. Mrs. Burke was soon after released, but the others have been held.

A Supposed N. Y. Yorker's Suicide.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Nov. 22.—A man supposed to be William Barens of Norwich, N. Y., was found dead in bed at the Marshall House. He was without funds and is supposed to have taken poison.

Boy Killed While Fox Hunting.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Edward Bangert, a son of William Bangert of Davenport Center, was killed under a train Sunday by the accidental discharge of his gun.

Ministers Aid the Unemployed.

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—The ministers of all denominations have organized to find work for the unemployed during the winter months.

May Preserve the Water City.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—There is a possibility that the principal World's fair buildings will be retained another year.

GENERAL RUSK'S DEATH

Many Mourn the Big Hearted Ex-Secretary of Agriculture.

THE END CAME AS EXPECTED.

It Was Thought That Mr. Rusk Began to Recover—General Harrison Expresses Deep Regret—Acts of Respect to His Memory In Washington.

VIROQUA, Wis., Nov. 22.—The death of General Rusk came like a bolt of lightning from the sky. There was not the slightest indication of the approaching end. Colonel Henry C. Cannon, his private secretary, left his bedside at 9 o'clock Monday night, and gave to an assembled crowd of the general's friends the most positive assurance that the latter would survive. General Rusk himself said to his physicians during the evening, "Boys, I'm better."

Dr. Gott and Mrs. Craig, the general's eldest daughter, remained with him during the night. He took an unusual amount of milk and nourishment and slept a good portion of the night. He had talked freely and appeared more reconciled to his condition than at any time since his sickness. Monday was the first time he admitted his apparent improved condition.

Up to 10 minutes of dissolution he talked with his wife, and he appeared to drop into a peaceful sleep. Death came without a struggle and with no warning whatever. Only Dr. Gott and two members of his family were present to watch the flickering light go out.

The surgeons seem disinclined to offer any reason for the sudden and fatal change in the patient's condition. A post mortem will be held to determine the cause of the general's death. Colonel L. J. Rusk, who had been constantly at his father's bedside for two weeks, departed for his home in Chippewa Falls Monday night.

Funeral Will Be Friday.

Messages announcing the death of General Rusk were sent to ex-President Harrison, members of the cabinet who were associated with him and many other prominent persons throughout the country. The funeral will occur Friday.

General Rusk's death was due to a complication of disorders, the origin of which dates back several years. Nearly 10 years ago, while governor of the state, General Rusk had a first attack similar to that which prostrated him on his last bed of sickness. The physicians then decided that the trouble was disorder of the stomach.

The house where General Rusk died has been the family residence for many years. Here the progressive agricultural and horticultural ideas of the deceased statesman were developed. Here he was visited by many prominent persons in the country. The funeral will occur Friday.

A HOTEL HORROR.

Six Men Burned to Death While Struggling to Escape.

BEAVER, Pa., Nov. 22.—A frightful disaster occurred at the government dam, two miles below the city, in which six men were roasted to death and several were badly injured. The disaster occurred at the Morrill House, a three story frame building used as a hotel and boarding house to accommodate the employees of the new government dam which has been under course of construction for the past year. The hotel caught fire while the men were asleep.

The dead are: Jerry Wrenn, boss stonemason, aged 60, and his son Dan, aged 34, of Pittsburg; John Kelly, a laborer, of Woods Run, aged 40; Robert Stanley, an engineer, of New Brighton, aged 35; Barney Wilkes, a stonemason, of East street, Allegheny, aged 60; James Hughes, an engineer, of Chartiers, aged 33.

As most of the bodies were found close together under the stairway, it is thought that the poor fellows, suffocating as they struggled to reach the usual means of escape, had approached the stairs either singly or together, and they only gave up the fight for life when they found the stairway a blazing furnace. The coroner will hold the bodies until noon, and those that are not identified will be buried at the county's expense. There were no fire escapes, and it is probable that some measures may be taken to punish the alleged violation of the law's requirements in the matter.

Mr. Powderly Is Now Vindicated and Plans a Revenge.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—The finance committee of the general assembly of Knights of Labor has made its long looked for report. The general executive committee was exonerated, and the order finds itself in a fair financial condition. In the report, among other things, the committee recommended that the order dispose of its political headquarters building at 814 North Broad street, this city, at the highest possible figure and erect a new but less expensive structure at some more central point. Indianapolis is one of the points suggested.

In a vote taken in the assembly on the report a minute was entered fully exonerating the grand master workman and his associates on the executive board, thus relieving them of the stigma which Secretary-treasurer Hayes' charges of misappropriation of relief funds implied.

It was unofficially announced that at the session today all the grand offices will be declared vacant and a new election ordered. This, it is said, will be done for the purpose of putting new men in office instead of Mr. Hayes and those of his friends who are now holding official positions.

Brave Trainmen Rewarded.

CENTRALIA, Ills., Nov. 22.—In the presence of 600 men Engineer Ben Young, Fireman Charles McDowell, Conductor Andrew Odlin, Brakeman Fred Stacy, Express Messenger Cornelius Boyle and P. I. Saunders, an ex-employee, were each presented by officials of the Illinois Central railroad and the American Express company with gold medals and three shares of stock each in the Illinois Central road. This was in the nature of a reward for the gallant service performed by these men in defeating the attempt of bandits to rob an Illinois Central express train near here on the night of Sept. 30.

Public Pardoning Is Cruel.

CHARLESTOWN, Mass., Nov. 22.—Warden Hedges of the state prison has signified to Governor Russell his disapproval of the custom of pardoning two life convicts in the institution on Thanksgiving day. The warden believes that no one is to be cruel, and he suggests that if life prisoners are to be pardoned on that day the best way would be to visit them quietly in their cells, rather than to make known their good fortune before all the other prisoners, as is the present custom.

The Coghlan Affair.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—That Rose Coghlan has sided against her brother Charles and with his first wife is shown by the fact that Mrs. Coghlan No. 1 has found an asylum in Rose Coghlan's house, 47 West Ninety-sixth street, and that she is staying there with her adopted daughter. The announcement is also made that Charles Coghlan and Kuhne Beveridge will leave the Coghlan company.

Young Stevenson Married.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., Nov. 22.—At the Presbyterian church Lewis Green Stevenson, only son and secretary of the vice president of the United States, was wedded to Miss Helen Louise Davis, eldest daughter of William H. Davis, publisher of The Daily Pantagraph, a Republican newspaper, which has always politically opposed Mr. Stevenson. One thousand persons witnessed the ceremony.

Boston's Tea Party Tablet.

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—A handsome bronze tablet is to mark the site of Griffin's wharf on Atlantic avenue, the scene of the throwing overboard of the tea into Boston harbor in 1773. The tablet measures 5 by 3 feet and is a bas relief. It presents a full rigged ship, from which men are throwing overboard boxes of tea.

A Bill and a Husband.

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—John Mackie was arrested today on suspicion of being the man who beat in the head of Mrs. George Randall. Mrs. Randall untched a portion of her assailant's turban, and in it was a bill from the firm where Mrs. Mackie works. The woman is dying.

Cardinal Gibbons Visited by a Crank.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 22.—Cardinal Gibbons received a visit from a crank named Frank Streckins. Cardinal Gibbons stated the case to Streckins as he made his demand for $50 in cash and soon got rid of his unwelcome caller. Streckins was afterward arrested.

Accidental Death of a Yale Junior.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 22.—Silas Hurlburt Goodenough of Winchester, Conn., and a Yale junior, died at the Yale infirmary of internal rupture. Goodenough received his fatal injury a week ago by running into an open gate.

THURSTON'S ANSWER.

His Retort to Blount's Charges May Cause Trouble.

THE ADMINISTRATION IS ANGRY.

A Report That the Hawaiian Minister May Be Given a Diplomatic Bounce — He Flatly Denies Many of Blount's Statements.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Lorrin A. Thurston, the Hawaiian minister, has given out a detailed and lengthy statement denying many statements made by Mr. Blount in his report. He says:

"A large portion of the published extracts from Mr. Blount's report consists, however, of personal attacks upon me and those associated with me in the provisional government, impugning our veracity, good faith and courage and charging us with fraud and duplicity. I deem it proper, therefore, to make a personal reply to such charges.

"First, before stating such facts, I desire to call attention to Mr. Blount's method of constructing his report. Although in several places he states that I was the leader of the revolutionary movement, he has never asked me a question concerning the same nor given me an opportunity to make any statement, although I have at all times been ready and willing to do so.

"Mr. Blount charges that the American troops were landed under a prearranged agreement with the committee of safety that they should so land and assist in the overthrow of the queen. In reply thereto I hereby state that at no time did Mr. Stevens or Captain Wiltse assure me or the committee or any subcommittee thereof that the United States troops would assist in overthrowing the queen or establishing a provisional government, and, as matter of fact, they did not assist. I can produce witnesses in support of this state ment of the highest responsibility and in overwhelming numbers.

"Mr. Blount's statement that the community was at peace and quiet was grossly inaccurate. It was at this juncture, two hours after the adjournment of the above meetings, that Captain Wiltse and Mr. Stevens, acting upon their own responsibility and discretion, and irrespective of the request or actions of the committee, landed the troops, which were distributed in three parts of the city, instead of being massed at one point, as stated by Blount.

"The reason that the queen's government took no action was that they were overwhelmed by the unanimous display of indignation and determination shown by the citizens and were cowed into submission."

Angry at Thurston.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The Sun today prints the following from Washington: The reply of Minister Thurston to some of the more flagrant misstatements contained in the Blount report and his bold accusations of unfriendliness against the ex-commissioner have given great offense to certain officials of the administration who are supposed to represent the views of the president and the secretary of state.

The indignation of these gentlemen is so great that they do not hesitate to intimate that Mr. Thurston's passports will be returned by the post office. He is accused of violating all known rules of diplomatic etiquette, and there is a loud demand from the state department clique for his punishment.

Big Snowstorm Coming.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—A belt of territory 300 miles east and west of the Mississippi and from Canada to the gulf of Mexico was buried under a fall of snow. The storm has been heavy over the whole area. There is heavy snow in the northwest, due to a fall in temperature. The snow ceased in Chicago and moved rapidly eastward. Its effects will be felt as far east as the Atlantic coast.

Crank at the White House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Among the callers at the White House was a young man who explained to the usher that he had come to ask President Cleveland for $25, with which to purchase a horse and wagon. He gave his name as John W. Kortum and stated that he was a farmer living at Mantua, Gloucester county, N. J. He is being held awaiting the arrival of friends.

Spain Cries For Revenge.

MADRID, Nov. 22.—The government has impressed upon General Martinas, the Spanish commander at Melilla, the necessity of an immediate advance against the Moors. He has been informed that the Spanish positions captured by the Moors should be retaken in order to satisfy the national sentiment before the brother of the sultan is permitted to open negotiations for peace.

Died In an Opium Den.

DENVER, Nov. 22.—At 5 o'clock this morning Mrs. Hallie Caldwell died in an opium den on Wazee street. Annie Jones, who was with her, cannot live. The man who kept the den disappeared through the trap into a cellar when the police raided the den and escaped.

Houses Lectured and Flood.

TRENTON, Nov. 22.—Herbert W. Fitzgerald and William H. Fulper, Princeton college students, recently indicted for hazing Robert Leopold of Washington, pleaded not guilty. Judge Woodruff lectured and fined them $100 each.

Some Other Boynton.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Nov. 22.—A letter has been received from C. E. Boynton, postmarked Buena Vista, Polk county, Or., which denies that he was captured while aiding the insurgent fleet at Rio Janeiro. He says he was not there.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Schaefer and Ives, the billiard players, began another five nicht contest at Music hall for $5,000.

FOUR BLOCKS BURNED.

A Big Fire In Springfield Does $300,000 Damage.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 22.—The most disastrous fire in recent years broke out at midnight in the five story block at 92 Worthington street, owned by J. K. Dexter & Co. The flames leaped with fury through the floors and completely took possession of the building before the firemen arrived. Then the flames burst through the three adjoining blocks and were licking the rear wall of the Hotel Glendower when one after another these walls of the four buildings collapsed, leaving a monster pile of burning debris. This served the locked and the further spread of the flames.

As it was, four five-story blocks, with a total value of nearly $300,000 and containing merchandise and stock valued at fully twice that sum, were destroyed. The loss will reach $300,000.

A Pair of Kings In Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—A pair of genuine African kings are in town. The elder of the two, S. E. Jowett, is a native of the island of Sherbro, off the coast of Sierra Leone. The other is Momodu Massaquoi, king of Jalacon and hereditary prince of 10 tribes. Prince Jowett has sacrificed his kingdom for Christianity, but it is his intention to return to Africa with his kingly neighbor and reign in his own land. Together they will form a federation and spread the gospel by degrees.

Escaped From a Burning Car.

LANCASTER, Pa., Nov. 22.—A passenger car attached to the rear end of a train on the Lancaster and Downington branch of the Pennsylvania railroad jumped the track at Brookfield station and plunged over a high embankment, turning completely around and standing on end. The stove set the car on fire, and the imprisoned passengers were compelled to escape by breaking the windows.

Lobengula's Reported Victory.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—A news agency in this city gives publicity to a report that another engagement has been fought between the British South African company's forces and the Matabeles under King Lobengula and that the natives defeated the whites.

Busy Days at Creede.

CREEDE, Colo., Nov. 22.—From 24 to 30 cars of ore a day are shipped from this camp. The Enoma mine has become a shipper. The recent strike of gold ore in the Ethyl mine has set other companies to developing deeper in search of this new find.

A Terrible Prairie Fire.

GUTHRIE, O. T., Nov. 22.—A terrible prairie fire has been raging east of here in Lincoln county, devastating many farms and destroying timber, crops and buildings. Mrs. John Hall, aged 55 years, was burned to death and others were badly injured.

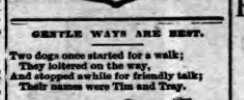
GENTLE WAYS ARE BEST.

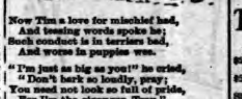
Two dogs once started for a walk;
They loitered on the way,
And stopped awhile for friendly talk;
Their names were Tim and Tray.



Now Tim a love for mischief had,
And teasing words spoke he;
Such conduct is in terriers bad,
And worse in puppies yes.

"I'm just as big as you!" he cried,
"Don't bark so loudly, pray;
You need not look so full of pride,
For I'm the stronger, Tray."

Then half in fun began a fight,
How rough and fierce it grew!
Their every look full of rage and spite,
Their howls were dismal, too.



"Now who is strongest, bravest, pray?"
Said angry Tray to Tim;
"Just please to take those paws away,"
'Twas thus Tim answered him.

And so the foolish fight went on,
Although 'twould never cease;
Oh, children, let your fights be won
By kindness, love, and peace!

At last they both began to see
How wrong such quarrels are;
"Come, we'll shake paws, and friendly be;
It would be wiser far."

Such were the words of Tim and Tray
And soon in right good-will
They wagged their tails, and here to-day,
You see them peaceful still.

An Explanation That Explains.

Recently a girl in one of the schools was asked by her teacher to explain the difference between the words balance and remainder. Her answer was: "You can say 'a man lost his balance and fell,' but you cannot say 'a man lost his remainder and fell.'"

Nonsense Rhyme.

A man named John Benjamin Rutter
Once tripped up and fell in the gutter,
His head struck a stone
And he injured his back,
And there lies John Benjamin Rutter.

Are You Insured?

If you are 21 years old $68.40 paid annually for fifteen years would entitle you to $1,000.
If 28 years old, $67.
If 33 years old, $67.20.
If 34 years old, $67.30.

This sum of $1,000 is payable to the insured, if living, at the expiration of fifteen years, or at his death if prior.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Curious Experiment.

A most singular and interesting experiment can be easily tried by the use of a round goblet or tumbler and a piece of tulle of fine mesh. Fill the glass to the brim with water. Then after moistening the tulle thoroughly with water, place it over the mouth of the glass, pressing it down tightly to the sides of the glass, where it will adhere. Then press the palm of the hand firmly over the mouth of the glass, so that no air can enter, and invert the glass quickly. Now, by drawing the glass slowly and laterally from off the hand (do not lift it), it will be found that the water will remain, as if suspended, without support in the air. Not a drop will escape through the openings in the mesh of the tulle.

Her Best.

Mrs. Molesworth, who writes a moving article in the volume entitled "Woman's Work," concerning the necessity of obtaining "fun, food and fresh air" for all classes of children, says that there are among London's poor thousands of little ones who never had a toy.

Yet still the child's instinct to "make believe" surmounts every practical obstacle, and there is a true story of one little sufferer from a chronic disease whose only playthings were the spots of damp on the wall beside her bed. She played they were real and alive. She gave them names and imaginary qualities.

Another true story shows how far the little candle of a wise and loving world may throw its rays. A teacher at a Sunday school for London's poor was trying to impress upon her little pupils some idea of the real meaning of giving.

"Whatever it may be," she said, "our offering to God should be of our best, of what we prize most."

In one baby heart her words found ready response. Next day a little creature confided her offering to the teacher. It was a carefully tied package, containing a few grains of rice. This was her most precious and perhaps her only treasure.—Youth's Companion

Webster's Encyclopædic Dictionary.

It contains Webster's Unabridged Dictionary with Dennison's Patent Finger-tip Index.

"NOTE.—In the revision of Webster's grand work it has become the fashion to throw out what they are pleased to call "obsolete" words. Well, as the Dictionary is a "Work of Reference," we kept the original work intact.

It also contains a supplement of about 3000 pages with a complete finger-tip index. This supplement not only contains every word in the latest editions of both Webster's and Worcester's Unabridged Dictionaries, but 25,000 more than are contained in either, and 25,000 more than are contained in the latest issue of any other.

Endorsed by Judson E. Keeler, President of Amherst College; E. G. Robinson, President of Brown University; Thos. W. Bicknell, President of Chautauqua Teachers' Reading Union, and other leading educators.

Couldn't Fool the Boy.

Dr. Hanford of New York state was much annoyed by a small boy peddling peanuts, who called frequently at his office. One morning the doctor saw the boy coming with his basket of peanuts, evidently steering in his direction. Above his office desk was a case containing a skeleton, which for convenience was so arranged that by a slight pressure the man of bones came out into the room as natural as life. As the boy opened the door and yelled, "Peanuts!" the doctor, without looking around, pushed the button, and the grinning skeleton promptly responded. With one scream the boy dropped his basket and fled. The kind hearted doctor picked up the basket and hastened after the fleeing boy, who was half a block away. "Here, boy, come and get your peanuts!" cried the doctor. With one scared look over his shoulder the frightened boy replied: "Not much. I know you if you have got your clothes on."—California Review.

What the Shark Spares.

It is hard to believe that the greedy and cruel shark spares anything, dead or alive, but sailors declare that "it flies a feather." This fish follows ships from sea to sea and will swallow all sorts of refuse—even knives—that may be thrown overboard. Seamen say, however, that it will not touch the pilotfish—a small fish with the look of a mackerel that used to be supposed to earn the shark's gratitude by guiding it to its prey—or a fowl, living or dead. In short, the shark avoids sea gulls, petrels and every feathered thing. That is what sailors tell us from their own observation.

Carrying Out Instructions.

Grocer (to new boy)—You must tell people we are very busy, James, whether we are or not. They like to buy of a firm that they think does a large trade.

New Boy—All right, sir.

Grocer (a little later)—Did old Mrs. Benson want anything, James?

New Boy—Yes, sir. She wanted a couple of tins of biscuits and 10 pounds of brown sugar, an' I told her we was so busy we didn't know which way to turn, and so she said she was in a hurry, an she'd get them round the corner.—London Tit-Bits.

Pass the Cheese, Please.

Mouse Outside (to mouse inside)—Excuse me, but could I trouble you to hand me out a piece of that cheese?—St. Nicholas.

Sequel to an Old Story.

Mary had a little lamb,
Which grew to be a sheep;
The wool upon its back became
Too thick and warm to keep.

Then Mary's sheep did with the rest
Down to the brookside go,
And soon again it well could boast
"A fleece as white as snow."

The shearer came, and with his shears
Cut off the heavy wool,
Till every sheep was shorn at last
And all the bags were full.

The wool that came from Mary's sheep
Was spun and woven, dears,
And made into a nice warm coat
That Mary wore for years.

THE PLAGUE OF HIVES.

Marion Harland Tells How to Remove Them Forever.

Our baby and his mamma sometimes meet at this time of year that wretched enemy to infant comfort, hives, writes Marion Harland in the Housekeeper's Weekly. While these burning red polka dots are (unless chronic) no more dangerous than flea bites, they are equally disagreeable.

With many children hives appear first upon the abdomen, and cause intense itching at night when the pressure of the clothing is removed and the air touches the bared surface. Then the poor little sufferer's hands become unmanageable, and, in spite of nurse's protest and mamma's mandates, he must scratch. A frenzy seems to be upon him, and he tears at the terrible eruption until it becomes hot and inflamed, when the burning sensation is well-nigh intolerable.

As hives are nearly always caused by indigestion, the diet of a child thus afflicted must be rigidly restricted. The mother should prohibit all rich and heating foods (oatmeal coming under the latter category), and not allow the little one's system to run through canning or other violent exercise. The hives themselves may be bathed night and morning with warm water in which a large tablespoonful of bicarbonate of soda has been dissolved. But there can be no better or more quieting ointment than castor-oil. After the child has been washed with the soda water, let the mother dip her fingers into the castor-oil bottle and anoint each hive freely, rubbing the oil gently in. I remember seeing a suffering baby subside into a sweet slumber under this treatment. Yet for days the poor little fellow had hardly been able to sleep or rest.

A dose of castor-oil taken internally is often of service in removing the cause of the unsightly hives. When the skin is in the tender and irritated condition caused by the presence of hives, care should be exercised as to the kind of powder used, as some highly perfumed preparations but serve to inflame the affected parts. Pure cornstarch, while containing no medicinal properties, is at least absolutely pure.

STYLES IN FURNITURE.

How to Distinguish Two of the Most Similar Designs.

CHIPPENDALE WRITING TABLE.

We are having a revival of old styles in furniture, as well as novelties or more sensible designs, until one is bewildered by the variety offered a purchaser. The styles, however, which will always lead quieting those resurrected from the past are the two shown herewith, taken from the Decorator and Furnisher. For lightness, elegance and beauty of design they are not likely to be surpassed even by modern ingenuity.

The chippendale furniture, it will be noticed, is distinguished from the Louis Quinze by the square lines and straightness of its lines. The French design being almost entirely made up of graceful curves. This curvature is particularly noticeable in the legs of the table, and the distinguishing mark is carried out in the chairs and, in fact, all Louis Quinze furniture.

LOUIS QUINZE WRITING TABLE.

When one is buying furniture they should see to it that whatever the design, it be pure through, or otherwise there will be lack of harmony.

To Whiten the Hands.

Melt a pound of white castile soap over the fire with a little water. When melted, perfume slightly with any one of the extracts, and stir in half a cupful of common oatmeal. Use this preparation when washing your hands, and you will be surprised at the improvement in their appearance.

Hot Water for Housewives.

Dr. Hutchison recommends for the treatment of bleeding at the nose the plunging of the feet and hands of the patient in water as hot as can be borne. He says that the most rebellious cases have never resisted this mode of treatment.

A Valuable Remedy.

For nasal catarrh, make a weak brine of salt and tepid water and snuff up the nostrils, allowing it to run down the throat. If persistently used it will in a sufficient length of time cure the nasal catarrh.

Tonic for the Hair.

A good tonic for the hair is of salt water; a teaspoonful of salt to a half pint of water, applied to the hair two or three times a week. The effect at the end of a month will be surprising.

Mix Pastry Flour With a Knife.

The flour for pastry should be of the whitest and finest quality. It should be mixed with a bread knife, as the moisture and warmth of the hand makes it heavy.

Tired from Head to Foot

FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

That's what's the matter with the most of us. What's the reason? Poor circulation of the blood is the cause! The neglect of the liver. We have known severe cases of so-called rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, weak joints backache, to famish the longest sleepless night in a short time by the use of Anti-Tire. Get up good circulation, healthy action of the liver, quick pulse and color will result. One foot bath of Anti-Tire will do it. Trial size, 25c. family size, $1. All druggists. Ahead of a Year Ago!

Notwithstanding the great cry of "Hard Times," our trade up to the present date is considerably in excess of last year.

The result we believe of FAIR DEALING—giving the very best goods possible for the least money. In other words, REAL MERIT.

The people of Plainfield have found out that in the fitting of a man exactly as he wants it, and in the making of a garment as it should be, we are head and shoulders above all competitors.

The chippendale furniture, it will be noticed, is distinguished from the Louis Quinze by the square lines and straightness of its lines. The French design being almost entirely made up of graceful curves. This curvature is particularly noticeable in the legs of the table, and the distinguishing mark is carried out in the chairs and, in fact, all Louis Quinze furniture.

Patrons often remark in our store: "Well, if I can't get it here, there is no use of my looking for it in Plainfield, for I will have hard work to find it in New York.

We have now so many good things to advertise, that it is impossible to mention them in our space, and urge buyers to call at our store and see for themselves the many new things we offer.

FACTS FOR THE HOME.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO THE PRACTICAL HOUSEKEEPER.

The First Step Toward Making Home Happy Is to Make It Comfortable—Hints Toward That Object—Greek Border Designs.

The advisability of giving every apartment a vigorous "broom cleaning" at least once a week has been so strenuously insisted upon by some notable housekeepers that it has by many been converted into an imperative duty. But look at the matter in an unprejudiced light, one cannot closely see why a drawing-room, inhabited, perhaps, only a few hours of the afternoon and evening, or an unoccupied guest chamber should require the same amount of purification demanded by a sewing, sitting or dining room. The dustpan and brush are labor saving machines that do not receive due appreciation. By their aid in removing a little dust here and a little there, the evenings of a whole room may be deferred at times, when at the first glance anything less than a complete routing out of furniture and dirt together would seem impossible.

THE WISE DOCTOR.

What He Says About Eating at Night and Its Superior Effects.

The wise doctors grow wiser with each year. Time was when they were wise enough to tell us that lots of eating against one's stomach was to give it work to do before putting it to bed. This was deemed to be the fruitful source of dyspepsia and nightmare and other unholy afflictions. They are wiser now and tell us that so far from being a wrong to ourselves to eat before going to bed, it is a wise and desirable thing to do.

Many a person has found this out for himself or herself by personal experiment. There are a few persons so unfortunate as to be unable to eat even a light relish before sleeping without having a stupid headache the next day. But the majority of people are only the better for a little food at bedtime. It should not be rich or of great variety. A few biscuits and cup of hot bullion is excellent; so is a glass of beer or of hot milk, sipped slowly, and both induce sleep. Cheese, meat, fruits and pastries are not good guides through dreamland. They know where the ogres dwell.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

DECORATIVE GREEK BORDERS.

They Are all Variations of the Antique Greek Fret.

One of the oldest, as well as one of the best, of all decorative forms is the Greek fret or border, and, like all relatively good things, it is always new and always admirable.

THE SIMPLEST FORM.

It is used in a hundred different ways, in painting, in carving, in the decoration of the home and of the apparel, and in every way it is sure to give good results.

It orientated, as we all know, with those centuries that have made the history of civilization. In its simplest form it is a continuous line that makes a border in which no break is seen; but like a favorite tune, it has a multitude of variations.

A BORDER IN SQUARES.

As a design for embroidery any one of the forms given will be found as good as good can be; and the woman who decorates her gown or any of the accessories thereof with the fret or one of its modifications can never go amiss.

Executed in needlework of silk, it is peculiarly dignified and elegant; braided it gives an even more satisfactory and artistic effect, and embroidered with beads which suit the color of the foundation cloth it makes as decorative a border as any one need wish. Altogether the Greek fret and all the variations of its simplest form are highly to be commended, and the taste of the woman who selects it as a pattern is beyond all dispute.

Take Care of Wrapping Paper.

Wrapping paper is an article of which there is generally a lamentable dearth in most families, an inexcusable one in the city where parcels come up in all grades of nice wrapping paper are almost daily sent home. Smooth and fold it and lay it in some cubbyhole where you will always know where to look for it.

Good Effects of Turpentine.

As an inhalation turpentine has proved of great service in bronchitis, pneumonia, pleurisy and other throat and lung affections. If you have a cough sprinkle a little turpentine on a handkerchief and hold it to your mouth and nose for a few minutes, breathing the vapor, and note the relief.

Biscuit Flour Ready for Use.

Five or six quarts of biscuit flour can be prepared at a time by taking one teaspoonful of soda and two of cream of tartar, or three of baking powder, to every quart of flour, sifting it thoroughly three times, and put away for use.

Incombustible Dresses.

Dresses may be rendered incombustible by dipping them in a solution of tungstate of soda, one pound in two gallons of water. The most delicate color will not be affected by it.

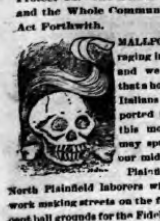
IS SMALLPOX HERE?

WAS IT IMPORTED THIS MORNING BY A CONTRACTOR?

Heroic Action Demanded at Once to Protect Us.—The Board of Health and the Whole Community Should Act Forthwith.



SMALLPOX is now raging in Elizabeth and we are told that a horde of dirty Italians were imported from there this morning and may spread it in our midst.

Plainfield and North Plainfield laborers who were at work making streets on the former Crescent ball grounds for the Fidelity and Deposit Co. say they were discharged to make room for them.

Those discharged are all men of families living among us, and deserving. They came in a body to The News office this morning to ask us to draw public attention to the matter done them. They feel that as residents it was not right to treat them so shabbily.

Only some three or four of the men they say are allowed to remain at work. They are reported to have made this appeal: "For God sake don't discharge us. We have large families who will starve." (Some of them have eight and even ten in family.)

When the men were put to work yesterday they were not told what pay they were to receive, and seemed afraid to ask.

To-day they were each given one dollar for their hard day's work, and for that they say, "we were compelled to submit to being treated like slaves and cursed the whole day long, for if we were getting five dollars a day." This is what they must accept or starve.

We don't know who is responsible. Let there be an investigation. The men say they were paid by Mr. A. D. Thompson, whom we can scarcely believe would allow such a thing as is complained about. They were employed by a man named Michael Uhdal, who appears to be the overseer.

The laborers blamed both of these men very bitterly this morning.

The News wants to arouse the whole community to immediate action to protect ourselves, and see that these Italians are sent away before they spread smallpox among us. If the facts are as reported. We can't afford to take chances.

We could not reach Mr. Thompson yesterday whom he pleases ordinarily, although we may not think well of him, if his action in this case is correctly given to us, but we can through our Board of Health stop anyone exposing us to such danger.

The disease is epidemic in Elizabeth where these Italians come from. Let our Board of Health send them away at once, and, even if the Board stretches its authority a little bit, in so doing we do not doubt that the whole community will stand by it. REGARD FOR THE PUBLIC HEALTH DEMANDS IT.

If Mr. Thompson expects North Plainfield to show favor to him, he is, if guilty of the acts complained about, going a very poor way for it, and we hope he will see the wisdom of at once restoring our own men to the work, small as the pittance may be. They would probably take it rather than that they and their families should suffer.

The cause of humanity is here that ought to be worth more than the few dollars to be saved by a niggardly policy, and under the circumstances the community ought to have some say in the matter, and that immediately. It may be too late already.

Court Closed to Avoid Smallpox.

The Union County Court for the November term was brought to an abrupt termination yesterday morning by Judge McCormick, who said, after a consultation with his associates, that it was deemed a wise precautionary measure, owing to the prevalence of smallpox in an epidemic form, to suspend the sessions of court until June 15, when the disease will probably have abated.

DUNELLEN'S BIG SCORE.

Their Competitors Left in the Lurch Over 300 Pins.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

A SPECIAL MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

Communications Read from the Ministers' Association and from the Women's Christian Temperance Union Regarding Indecent Posters.—Other Business.

PURSUANT to call the City Common Council held a special meeting last night. Councilman Bird, Erickson, Pint, Frazee, Ginns, Millington, See and Weber were present. Councilman Frost, Johnston and Marsh were absent.

The following was received from the Ministers' Association:

WHEREAS, it is our duty as the chosen teachers of the people to consider all questions of moral and religion, to note all influences which tend to corrupt the public life and especially the life of the young; therefore

Resolved, That we look with shame and alarm upon the increasing tendency to foster public entertainments in Plainfield which are opposed to good taste and purity of morals; to posters which is strangely marked by indecent handbills scattered broadcast in the streets, billboards and in the windows and places of business.

That we deem any advertisement of any entertainment or of any exhibition which appeals to the human form in any costume or attitude which would be improper for the human form worn or assumed by men or women in public, as unfit for use, and worthy to be suppressed by law; and we hereby request the City and Borough Councils to take such action as will accomplish this result.

That we hereby request the legal guardians of the city and borough to carefully supervise all such advertisements, and to give purity and good morals, the benefit of the doubt in every instance where the character of the proposed entertainment is in question.

W. R. RICHARDS, Secretary.

The following communication was read from the Women's Christian Temperance Union:

To the Members of the City Council:

GENTLEMEN:—The members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union desire to call the attention of your honorable body to some objectionable features of the bill-boards and posters that appear on the streets of this city. We do not ask that you will take such measures as are within your power to control the display of these which appear conspicuously and offensively to the community, but simply to lend your influence and material to you in the interests of our homes, and especially of the best welfare of the young of both sexes in our community. In behalf of the Union.

ANNIE RICE POWELL,
MARY D. VAILLIEND,
HELEN S. CAHOONE,
Committee.
SUSAN G. YATES,
CLARA L. FOX,

A communication was read from Corporation Counsel Marsh stating that he had received a copy of the set of resolutions passed by the Ministers' Association in regard to an ordinance regarding bill posting in the City. The ordinance holds a licensed person responsible for the posting of bills on bill boards, and for violation such ordinance a $20 fine may be imposed.

Ordinance No. 97 was taken up for first time, and on suggestion of Councilman Pint, it was referred to the Committee which would be appointed. Mr. Marsh stated that it was very easy to pass laws but it was not so easy to enforce them.

Counsellor Marsh's semi-annual report was received and filed. In it Mr. Marsh gave the number of cases tried by him for the city and the result. The case of the city against Mr. Kilbourn, the report said, had been discontinued, as he had been informed. But upon writing to the Supreme Court Clerk he had received word that it was still on the calendar. Mr. Marsh stated that he would file a non-suit at once.

The following bills were ordered paid:

Pierson & Gayle	$1,400 00
Chamberlain & Bonner	182 80
Craig A. Marsh	250 00

Council then adjourned.

PERSONAL.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank Searles returned last night from their honeymoon.

The Misses Dora and Louise Lots, of Somerville, who have been visiting at Plainfield, have returned home.

Mrs. Catherine Garretson of Millston has returned home after a visit with the family of J. Smith Garretson of Lee place.

Miss Cecilia Staats, daughter of Postmaster Peter C. Staats of Dunellen, will spend Thanksgiving with friends at Clinton, Pennsylvania.

The New Brunswick Home News says: "Rev. Mr. Richardson, of Plainfield, will deliver the Thanksgiving sermon in the First Baptist church. The congregation of the Reformed avenue church will unite in the services."

The last sad rites the funeral service of Mrs. Wm. M. Rider, took place to-day from her late residence "Maplewood" Dunellen. The interment was made at the Hillside Cemetery. Six young men, all intimate friends of the family, acted as pall-bearers. The services at the house were very impressive. The floral decorations were most beautiful and profuse. Conspicuous among the designs was a representation of the club pin, from the Lady Oyoler of Club, of which Mrs. Rider had been a member.

North Plainfield Heads the List.

Advance sheets of Census Enumerator Matthews' report show a total of 2329 school children in Somerset county—a gain of 102 over last year. Somerville is credited with 976—a gain of 12. North Plainfield heads the list with 1001.

The Alabama Minstrels.

James Frisbie and James Scott, of the Alabama minstrel troupe, to-day went to Chatham to "visit" that place for their short three next Thursday night. Frisbie says they will show at Reform Hall next Wednesday night.

Lecture at All Souls Church To-night.

The Rev. Edward Hale will lecture at All Souls' church to-night on "A Summer in Jersey."

FELL FROM A SCAFFOLD.

JOSEPH MILLS MEETS WITH AN ACCIDENT.

He Fell a Distance of about Twelve Feet. His Fortunate Escape from Injury.

About one o'clock yesterday as Joseph Mills, a carpenter of Grandview avenue was at work upon a new house in course of erection on Plainfield avenue, he slipped and fell from the scaffold to the ground, a distance of about twelve feet.

The young man struck upon his shoulders and back. He was taken to his home and a doctor summoned.

It is not known just how the accident happened, but it is thought Mr. Mills was arranging one of the boards of the scaffold, when he lost his footing.

Dr. Hedges, the family physician, after examining the young man says he is all right. It was a fortunate escape from broken bones.

NUPTIALS.

Huff—Lorton.

THE wedding of Mr Horace Huff and Miss Ida Lorton, last evening, was the one of the prettiest home weddings in Plainfield this Fall. Miss Lorton made a charming bride, attired in a beautiful suit of white silk and brocaded satan, trimmed with duchesse lace. She carried a boquet of white chrysanthemums. The maid of honor, Miss Grace Phillips, also wore white silk. She carried a boquet of pink rosebuds.

The Rev. Mr. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, who has been enjoying his own honeymoon for the past week, came from Lakewood, where he and his bride are stopping, to perform the ceremony. He returned to Lakewood last night.

The best man was Mr. Joseph Hankinson of Newark.

The popularity of both the bride and groom was shown by the numerous wedding presents received by them from their friends. The gifts included elegant gold and silver articles as well as china and glass ware.

Among the guests present were: Mr. and Mrs Hiram Huff of Clinton, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Kilbourn, New Brunswick; Miss Parker, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Mosher, the Misses Bitenbender, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Emmons, Mr and Mrs. Fred Haberle, Mr. and Mrs. Bucnie, Mr. and Mrs. Woolston, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stryker, Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Doane, Miss Clark of Brooklyn, Mrs. Hall of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wright, Miss Huff, Mr. and Mrs. Miller Huff of Middlebush, Miss Minnie Kilbourn of New Brunswick; Mrs. Fannie Kilbourn, New Brunswick, Mr. Frank Lawrence, Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Palmer, Miss Bogert, Mr. John Poole, Miss Hannah Underhill of New York, Mrs. Veil of Perth Amboy, Mr. Charles Davis, Miss Jennie Pope, Mrs. Charles Dunham, Mrs. Lindsley, Miss Hallock, Miss Davis, Mr. and Mrs. William Mosher, and Mrs. Wilson of Long Branch.

The bride and groom left on an early train for a short honeymoon.

Bill Boards and Immoral Plays.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Woman's Christian Temperance Union held on the 9th inst, a committee consisting of Miss Peck, President, Mrs. Tomlinson, Mrs. Cahoone, Mrs. Kroon, Mrs. Yates and Mrs. Powell, was appointed to petition the Common Council and the directors of Music Hall as follows:

[The petition to the Common Council is printed in another column:

To the Board of Directors of Music Hall:

GENTLEMEN:—The Plainfield Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Plainfield appeal respectfully to you to refuse the use of Music Hall for the rooms of both sexes of our city, that you will likewise refuse all questionable plays of an indecent or immoral character in Music Hall.

A MAD BULL GETS LOOSE

HE MAKES A BRAVE FIGHT FOR HIS LIFE.

Before He is Finally Recaptured and Killed by a Jewish Rabbi for Jewish Feasts—Two Men Slightly Injured.

Farmer White on the mountain had a Jersey bull, which he sold yesterday morning to Butcher Israel Lewis, who bought it for a Jewish rabbi.

Mr. Lewis took it to his slaughter house on Somerset street to let the rabbi kill it for his people in the Orthodox Jewish way. He assisted by Constable Baldwin, George Lewis, Clark Mundy, Charles Perrine and others.

There was an iron ring in the bull's nose, and a rope through it in addition to a long rope around his neck.

While they were busy adjusting the rope in the slaughter house, the bull smelt the odor of blood. He saw it, too, and the sight aroused him as it to hold his mening. In his efforts to break away, the rope through the ring in his nose parted, and the men holding the rope which was around his neck got excited and scared very quick.

The bull gave his head a bully shake as he scented life and freedom in the air, scattering the small crowd of men laying low like "Brer Rabbits" to watch their running against his wrath. He went to the door of the shed and glanced athwart the sky. It looked like rain. He cared not for that. It was fresh him in character of the breath and he stepped defiantly forward. Whatever his thoughts were, 'twas plain he was not meditating upon the peaceful pursuits of pastures green, near purling streams, where only peaceful scenes prevailed, and where a grandsire had often stood the monarch of the herd.

At least he thought that was there was nothing in the appearance of anything eyes to show it. He meant to fight whoever stood in his way.

The bull started for Somerset street, Charley Perrine ran and caught the rope that dangled from the bull's nose, but the bull threw him down and dragged him through the mud, badly skinning his arm and leg. He held on, however, and when the bull turned on him, compelled him to seek a place of safety.

Constable Baldwin and others helped to divert the bull's attention, although Mr. Lewis also got his leg skinned by getting it caught in the rope.

The bull started down Somerset street when he met a horse and wagon belonging to Mr. Beecher, driven by his son, Willie. The boy quickly turned his horse's head to get out of the way, but the bull, lowering his head, gave the horse a lash over the face as he approached. This gave the boy a chance to drive out of the bull's way, and the bull resumed his course.

An electric car next arrived. The bull lowered his head and charged up in anger, but changed his mind about attacking on the car. Next he charged for a horse and wagon belonging to Mr. William Demler on the mountain. Mr. Demler's son William was driving and saw the danger and lashed his horse furiously so that it jumped around in short order and got by all right. The bull jumped over the stone culvert on ex-Sheriff Coddington's property.

The bull then ran across into Peter Wooden's woods back of Mr. Fritz' house. There Mr. Perrine succeeded in getting hold of the rope, and, holding it around a tree, holding the bull several, and gradually drawing him nearer to the tree until he was able to get a rope around his head.

While in this position, some of the men got a cart rung through the ring in the bull's nose, and by twisting it when ever that animal made a move, subdued him temporarily. He suddenly made a lunge, however, which was intended to do considerable damage to Perrine, but struck him a terrible blow with a club, which hit the bull's eye. He bellowed with pain and shook with rage, but he could not get away, yet he was only with great difficulty finally got back into the slaughter house, and while there for some time from the time he escaped he was put to death.

The bull was being killed as stated for a Jewish Rabbi, or rather it was being killed according for him to kill it according to Jewish law. The Rabbi cut the bull's throat when the animal was safely secured.

The Rabbi cuts the throat crosswise. The Christian butcher usually cuts the throat lengthwise, and then places the knife in deep at the end of the slit.

The bull caused considerable excitement, and it is a wonder that no one was killed, considering how many people were about, no one was seriously injured.

At the Theatres.

The management of the Star Theatre New York city announces the engagement of Alexander Salvini at that house to begin next Monday night Nov. 27th. The popular romantic actor will present for the opening bill Dumas' exhilarating romance "The Three Guardsmen." Salvini's production of this and other plays of the same school at the Windsor Opera House last Spring aroused a popular enthusiasm that we have justified an almost unlimited stay in the metropolis had it not been for the early arrival of the hot weather.

Lorraine Water Company.

The Lorraine Water Company was incorporated yesterday at Elizabeth. Capital $10,000. The incorporators and stockholders are William A. Topping and Henry S. Topping, of New York; W. J. Lansley and Henry Krouse, of Elizabeth; W. B. K. Davey, of Elmora. The plant will be at Lorraine.

One of the Wheels Came Off.

Last night as Mr. Phillips, who lives on the mountain, was driving homeward with one of the wheels of his carriage came off as he attempted to cross the car tracks on Somerset street, at the bridge above Regent street. By the aid of a passerby Mr. Phillips was unabled to put the wheel back in its place.

A DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT.

Seventh-Day Baptist Young People Enjoy Themselves.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh Day Baptist church held an entertainment at the home of Miss Mabel Maxson, on West Fourth street, last night. The affair was in charge of the Social Committee, of which Miss Maxson is chairman. A delightful programme was rendered.

The first number was a courting scene from the Biglow papers. This was followed by a solo by Miss Mabel Potter. Then came a series of tableaux, entitled "In Love," "The Quarrel," "The Peacemaker" and "The Reconciliation." A recitation was exceptionally well rendered by Miss Lulu Lewis. Refreshments were the last but not the least of the programme. Among those present were: The Misses Lewis, Miss Mabel Potter, Miss Jessie Titsworth, Miss May Tomlinson, Mr. Roland Tomlinson, Miss Lucy Dunham, Mrs. Nicholas, Miss Lizzie Sandford, Dr. Clawson, Lou Clawson, Miss Lizzie Allis, Miss Mabel Mitchell, Miss Myra Clark, Allen Mitchell, Miss Mary Clark, Allen Mitchell, Miss Mary Clark, Allen Mitchell, Miss Mary

What Is Your Recreation?

Perhaps a third of the time ought to be devoted by each individual to some serious business or work. Nobody has the right to live in this world and do nothing, though he or she is a millionaire many times over. The person who will not do something to help the world along, and the one who knows so much that he cannot learn anything new, ought alike to be cut off the face of the earth. Society has no use for either one of them.

But when the day's serious task is over, then the worker will find the greatest good and refreshment in some study or secondary pursuit which will pull the mind out of its old rut of thought and start it off upon a new road of exploration. The individual who has such a fad as this will live longer in good health and at the same time preserve his mental powers for his serious work far better than the one who lets himself wear out by thinking of the same subject all the time.

Gladstone reads classical literature, especially Greek, for one of his fads, and writes learned essays which are probably harder to read than they are for the great man to write. He has other fads, for one is not enough for this intellectual giant. He walks many miles every day and spends much time in open air exercise. The habit of chopping down trees he has almost given up since he was 80 years old. But the marvelous intellectual power he has preserved to so great an age undoubtedly is owing not a little to his various refreshing secondary pursuits. Napoleon was a solitary creature, never finding recreation in social life. But in his leisure times he used to play solitaire for hours. He was so inveterate a player that one of the solitaire games has been named for him, the Napoleon game. It is said that he even used to stake the chances of an impending battle on whether he won or lost at solitaire. If he won, then he decided to offer battle; if he lost, then he deferred the fight.

A famous American artist spends all of every Sunday in the open air, taking long tramps in the country. He wears rough clothes and easy shoes so that what he has on will not trouble him, and thus he gains health and recreation from the trees, sunshine, air and open sky. Dr. S. Weir Mitchell took up literature as a rest from the duties of his professional life. He has at length advanced to the stage where he writes novels, and good ones. Perhaps he will be giving us a play next. Music, painting, horseback and bicycle riding furnish other healthful and recreative fads that keep the worker young and bright in his mind.

The Two New War Vessels.

During the same week on each side of this republic two magnificent new ships of our navy, the Olympia, off San Francisco, the Columbia, off Philadelphia, made their trial trips, and as soon as they receive their armament will be added to the war vessels already in service. So great has been the development of naval architecture that even the Yorktown and the Chicago begin almost to be old fashioned compared to the Olympia and the Columbia. These two last are not steel ships, as has been said. The Columbia is the larger, having 7,350 tons displacement, while the Olympia has 5,500.

The Olympia was not meant for a fast ship so much as for a fighter. She has much heavier armor and heavier guns than the Columbia, although at the same time she is no slouch when it comes to swiftness. The Columbia, however, will make foreign governments that have recently been built vessels which are the swiftest vessels of her size afloat, in naval or merchant marine service. She was built for speed and for great coal capacity, both of which requirements are answered perfectly. She will equal the speed of an average American accommodation railway train. This swiftness was attained by the triple screw arrangement. One of the Columbia's screws is placed just above the keel and one at each side of the ship in the stern. Under forced draft she can travel 28 miles an hour.

The majority party of the ways and means committee in the national house have decided that they will incorporate an income tax into the bill they are to offer for raising revenue. If this is imposed, they believe that the internal revenue rates will not have to be increased and that the freeborn American citizen will still be able to get his whisky and tobacco at the old prices. It is expected that the rate of the income tax will be 2 per cent, but it will be placed only on the large incomes, so that it will not affect the toiling people and those with small salaries. The ways and means committee calculate that $90,000,000 will be added to the national revenues by this tax.

The Brazilian government ought to buy from Richard Radatz of Oshkosh the new submarine torpedo boat he has invented. The remarkable craft is 40 feet long and is driven and lighted by electricity. It sinks under water with its crew aboard and is steered in any given direction beneath the waves. On its trial trip the inventor and crew went nearly an hour and was all that time easily steered.

WILL BE A LONG STRIKE

The Struggle on the Lehigh Began In Earnest.

TRAINS PROTECTED BY POLICE.

The Road Is Hiring Many Men, but Some of Them Are Said to Be Strikers Who Do Not Intend to Work—Other Roads Still Threatened.

JERSEY CITY, Nov. 23.—A drill engine in charge of Engineer Schlager, a nonunion man, made up a freight train which went out. Jersey Central employees gathered near the Lehigh tracks, and when the locomotive of the Chicago express backed up to the roundhouse they surrounded the engine and jeered at the engineer and fireman. The arrival of the police encouraged the engineer, and the locomotive was backed into the roundhouse without violence. Details of policemen arrived later at the Lehigh freight yards at Communipaw in patrol wagons. A report that trouble was imminent drew a crowd of 1,500 to the foot of Morris street. The police went to guard the track in west Jersey City during the passage of the freight train. They were loaded, 50 strong, on two gondola cars, and under the command of Captain Farrier they were deployed along the rails from Jersey to Fairmount avenue. The departure of the train was delayed by the late arrival of 30 special policemen.

Police on the Trains.

It was understood that after the train left Jersey City the specials were to be stationed on the freight cars. They started in the caboose. Captain Craig, a detective of the Pennsylvania road, rode on the engine as one of the specials. They were expected to go to Phillipsburg.

Freight Agent Rundle said that the Lehigh would soon have seven locomotives at work in the yards at Communipaw to move freight trains. He said that the backbone of the strike was broken and that he had all the men he wanted.

The Buffalo express went out on time. The train was in charge of a nonunion engineer and fireman. In the cab were a railroad detective and a policeman. The latter left the train as it slowed up at Jersey avenue crossing.

Hiring Many Men.

BUFFALO, Nov. 23.—The Lehigh has tried hard to do something toward raising the blockade in Buffalo, but at one point it lost at another. Through trains were sent out from the East Buffalo freight yards—one of merchandise and two of empty cars. How far they will go is a question. The only trucks that are clear are between here and Sayre. No passenger trains arrived Tuesday from the east. Two passenger trains started out Wednesday for Sayre. The first contained Superintendent Fennell and 77 railroad men. The second bore 45 nonunion men, of whom 30 were engineers.

These are to be used in trying to raise the blockade at Sayre, where Fennell will now make his headquarters. At a meeting of the Lehigh firemen, at which T. A. Wilson, the representative of Chief Sargent, was present, the firemen unanimously voted to offer their services to the Sheriff Beck as deputies to protect the railroad's property.

A meeting of representatives of the brotherhood was held, at which it was decided that if any freight was handled at Suspension Bridge or Buffalo by the Lake Shore, the Erie or the West Shore, to order out the men on those roads. It is understood that the Lackawanna and Central have refused to handle freight for the Lehigh.

Long Struggle Looked For.

Everything now points to a protracted struggle, lasting perhaps until Christmas. The strikers do not think that they can win over many of the nonunion men who have hired out in the past day or two to the Lehigh. Any engineer who is induced into the brotherhood Wednesday, who that morning started to pull the throttle in place of a striker. The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy engines are coming on rapidly to take places and are being accepted almost to a man. Today the Lehigh hopes to move freight past Sayre and to keep it moving out of Buffalo.

One of the men at the terminal stated that the men with but few exceptions were brotherhood men who had hired to the Lehigh company for the purpose of disconcerting the officials of the road. He said they did not intend to go to work, but would go where directed and then abandon their employers. This plan will be kept up right along, as the agents at the recruiting office have no way of telling whether or not an applicant is a brotherhood man.

Today another batch of men will be sent out for points beyond Bethlehem. Acting General Manager Voorhees is still at Bethlehem assisting President Wilbur to get the road in running order.

Major General George A. Snowden, N. G., Pa., when seen about the possibility of the militia being called to the scene of the trouble, said that he had not been advised of any such move being made. "The people of the state should know by this time," said he, "that neither a railway president, nor a mayor, nor a burgess of a city or town has the right to use the military power. Such rights is vested only in the sheriff of the county in which trouble is anticipated or has occurred. I have had no communication whatever from the governor upon the subject of the Lehigh Valley strike."

An Engineer Rescued.

PEATH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 23.—Engineer Dewald Crensford arrived here on engine 278 after a run over the Lehigh from Easton. He said that after leaving Phillipsburg he was attacked by a number of men who stoned the cab, and several of the missiles struck him. He believes the men were strikers. Everything is quiet here, but trouble is expected. The Lehigh freights are being subjected to all kinds of annoyances by the New Jersey Central men. The notice ordering all the men back to work at wages was posted, but not a striker returned.

What the Strikers Claim.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 23.—The local board of strikers issued the following bulletin this morning to the Associated Press:

"Every operator between Sayre and Buffalo except five agents who are under bond and two nonunion men at E. Junction—all other men are out on the whole territory covered by this board. Nonunion men who have all been sent over to east side and are out. The whole territory is complete. Not a wheel is being turned. If necessary, men on the other roads will be called out. Everything points to a long contest for our favor."

A Train Leaves Auburn.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The first train to leave or arrive at the Auburn station on the Lehigh for 29 hours was made up under the protection of a large force of deputies and a squad of policemen yesterday afternoon. The intention of the company to make the attempt was known before 10 o'clock in the morning, and when the time drew for the start to be made there was a large crowd in the yards.

The train engine brought out of the roundhouse was soon surrounded by a mob of jeering friends of the strikers, and in the confusion the fire was drawn from the firebox by some unknown person. As soon as the train left the yards the crowd dispersed, and quiet once more reigns about the company's property.

Battle Ahead.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 23.—It now looks as though the strike on the Lehigh Valley would last some time. The strikers have the best of the battle so far, because the company is unable to fulfill promises made Monday. The officials stated then that they could get all the railroaders they wanted in 48 hours and by Wednesday all would be in running order again. Neither of these things has come to pass. It is a well known fact that the company has failed in the matter of securing new hands. Some have been secured of course, but they are only a drop in the bucket. A great many others that have applied are incompetents, and the company would not have them under any circumstances.

Mooted the New Arrivals.

SAYRE, Pa., Nov. 23.—The strikers became excited this morning when it was known that a trainload of men to take the strikers' places was on its way from Rochester. There were threats of vengeance, and the excitement spread in every direction. The leaders, however, were anxious to preserve peace and counseled the men not to use any violence.

About 70 men arrived when the Rochester train pulled in. They are to take the place of strikers. A big crowd of strikers surrounded the train, but beyond hooting as the new arrivals there was no disturbance.

M'KEIGHAN'S BOARD BILL.

Politics Said to Be Behind the Congressman.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 23.—Congressman W. A. McKeighan was brought in from Red Cloud in charge of a deputy sheriff, who arrested him at the instance of A. L. Hoover of the Lindell hotel, this city. McKeighan had willingly accompanied the officer. He was arraigned to plead to the charge of attempting to defraud a hotel keeper and secured a continuance to the 28th inst. The congressman refused to make any statement for publication. His friends make the matter was the work of political enemies.

One of McKeighan's friends says the congressman has Hoover's receipt for $111 for his board bill and that he has paid Lindell. Members of the Populist party say there is more behind the matter than an attempt to collect a board bill, and a general washing of Populist linen is looked for before the case is ended. The bill is alleged to have been contracted at the time of the memorable contest which resulted in the election of Allen, and the chief items are said to be for the entertainment of persons supposed to be of influence in the effort to make Senator Allen the successor to Paddock in the United States senate.

Powderly Re-elected.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—At the session of the general assembly, Knights of Labor, all the offices were declared vacant, and a new election was urged. T. V. Powderly, Labor Commissioner Savring of Iowa and T. B. Maguire of this city were the nominees for grand master workman. The result of the balloting was: Powderly, 25; Savring, 19; Maguire, 1. The election will be continued today, when it is expected that a new secretary-treasurer and an executive board will be elected.

Shot on the Train.

ALEXANDRIA, La., Nov. 23.—William Roberts, a stock raiser, was killed on a Texas and Pacific train near Moreland station by C. D. Herbert. Roberts was drunk and commenced waving his pistol in a car full of passengers, and at last he shot Herbert in the left arm. Herbert pulled his pistol and killed Roberts instantly.

Home Missionaries Killed by a Train.

XENIA, O., Nov. 23.—Three young ladies of this city, missionaries to the Shawnee Indians, Miss Lelia McDill, a daughter of Dr. McDill—were killed by a Pannaudle train at the edge of this city while on their way home from a visit to a sick girl whom they had visited in a missionary way.

French Will Colonize Soudan.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—A decree has been issued placing French Soudan under a civil governor. French rule having been firmly established in the country, it becomes necessary to organize and develop the vast resources of French Soudan and make of it a veritable colony.

Mashed Men Took to the Stakes.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Two masked men entered the rooms of the Amity club, presented revolvers, grabbed $25 from the poker tables and escaped before the 16 members who were playing could recover from their astonishment.

Vigilantes After Cattlemen.

ENID, O. T., Nov. 23.—The settlers in township No. 26, county 21, have organized a vigilance committee, with an ex-deputy United States marshal as president, to drive out "boomers" and suppress cattle thieving.

The Big Engine Leaves the Fair.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The famous New York Central engine 999, with the Wagner and old DeWitt Clinton trains, which were the attraction at the fair, will leave for New York over the Lake Shore road.

Shot His Wife at the Dinner Table.

Interscholastic Team Tournament.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 23.—The interscholastic football tournament will be held on the grounds of the Hillhouse school, New York city, commencing Dec. 23.

Chase Will Strikers Won.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 23.—The Chase mill strike has been settled at first for five years. Agent Parker conceded an advance in wages.

Off to Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Mr. Chauncey M. Depew has arrived here.

THINK SHE REIGNS NOW.

Administration of Queen Liliuokalani Has Been Restored.

LAST TUESDAY WAS THE DAY SET.

When Last Heard From Blount Would Not Say What Had Been Accomplished—Could Not Be Answered Before the Press Left.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The officers of the state department fully believe that the queen has by this time been restored to the throne. While they do not fix any precise time as to when the reinstatement took place, they assume that form a wrong one to say. It seems, however, that while actual force may not have been authorized they were to be used if those at the head of affairs in the provisional government believed that the United States would use all the power at its command to bring about the restoration. The statement was made today that if Mr. Blount found no people to the demands of Mr. Willis he should retire aside and the queen restored, even if the administration should have to go to coercion to compel compliance.

At the same time it was claimed that there would be no necessity for any such action, as the information from the Islands was to the effect that everything was working precisely as expected.

One reason for the belief in some quarters that the restoration had taken place Tuesday was because of the assertion often made that unless the restoration took place before the arrival of the first steamer from the United States since the sickness of the administration had been made public, it would not be made at all, because the settlement of the United States and the report of Minister Blount to the provisional government would have a tendency to sustain them and cause them to resist Minister Willis' efforts at restoration.

Hawaii Will Be Represented.

This phase of the case was suggested to the state department, and a reply was received that it made no difference whether Mr. Thurston had been able to communicate with the provisional government or not, even if that government would offer any resistance, the restoration would go on just the same.

It was claimed that not only the information furnished by Mr. Blount, but the reports received since Minister Willis arrested Liliuokalani, was to the effect that the provisional government was sustained on the supposition that the United States man-of-war still in the harbor for that purpose, and that as soon as it was known that the United States would not only not sustain the provisional government, but was determined to undo what had been done by the revolutionists and by the alleged assistance of Minister Stevens, the public would immediately compel the restoration, and that then the provisional government would fall, and its members would hasten to take advantage of the amnesty which Minister Willis would insist that the queen grant should grant upon being restored to power.

The Alameda is expected to arrive today. At the department there is not much expectation that the Alameda will be met by dispatches, although such a thing is barely possible. Yet it is the general impression that nothing has transpired between the time when the Australia sailed and the departure of the Alameda.

It was not possible at the time the Alameda sailed for definite news to reach the islands concerning what had happened in the United States, or that the intention of the administration to restore the queen had been definitely determined upon. Minister Willis had pursued the same course since the departure of the Australia that he pursued up to that time, so that the people of Hawaii, outside of a very few, could be unaware of his intention, and he would be allowed to pursue his plans without much interruption.

Thurston Is Ignored.

At the White House it was stated that Minister Thurston would not be given his passports, the reason being that it would be only a short time before he would be but a private citizen. It was also indicated that it was but by courtesy that Mr. Thurston was considered the Hawaiian minister, as the letter of Secretary Gresham indicated very plainly that the provisional government was at an end as soon as the annexation proposition was rejected.

The statement that Tuesday was the day on which Liliuokalani was to be put back on her throne found publicity through the same medium as the first intimation of the purpose of the administration to restore her. If that is the correct date, the steamer to arrive today will bring no word of the restoration. After that there is no steamer scheduled to arrive from Honolulu until Dec. 11, two weeks from next Monday. The people of the country do not wish until that time for news from Hawaii unless the state department shall decide to give explicit information as to the proposed course to be pursued.

The basis of the belief that Liliuokalani was restored Tuesday is supposed to be the dispatch which was received by the Australia from Minister Willis. It is said to be reported Minister Willis' confident expectation that there would be no interruption to the progress of carrying out his instructions, and all the preliminaries had been successfully attended to.

It is asserted that the progress reported by Minister Willis had been so satisfactory that it has not been considered necessary to send him anything further since he received his original instructions.

Officials in the state department assert that the statement issued by Minister Thurston yesterday would furnish sound ground for giving him his passports if the government felt disposed to send them to him. In the present state of the public mind, however, it is thought that this might seem like depriving a man of the rights into his side of the case and would prove unpopular.

Iron Ore Will Be Free.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The iron ore men have been defeated, and the men who have gone behind the scenes to keep this article off the free list were informed by members of the ways and means committee that it had been finally decided by the Democratic members that iron ore would be placed on the free list.

This is the most important development of the day, as it leaves the iron ore men of Michigan, Virginia and Michigan no alternative but to carry their fight to the floor of the house. This they are now threatening to do, and it is more freely stated than ever that the new tariff bill containing this provision will be supported in the house by the solid Democratic delegation from Alabama and in the senate by the widow Hampton and Vest.

COCHRAN FOUND GUILTY.

The Philadelphia Mint Robber Made No Defense.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—The trial of Henry S. Cochran, late chief weigher of the Philadelphia mint, was begun before Judge Butler and a jury in the United States district court. Cochran's counsel made no defense, and a verdict of guilty was rendered by the jury without leaving the box.

When the case was opened, the courtroom was crowded to its utmost capacity. Cochran was brought in about 9 o'clock by Deputy Marshal Meyers and was seated beside a table in the center of the courtroom close behind his counsel. He was neatly dressed in black, and the pallor of his countenance seemed increased by his iron gray hair and full beard. The case was opened by Mr. Newitt's address to the jury in behalf of the government.

Mr. Newitt described how the $66,000,000 was stored in a vault in the mint in the form of gold bars; how Cochran, who for 24 years was a weigher in the mint, had exclusive custody of it; how it was decided to coin some of the gold, and for this purpose to break the seals on the vault door and weigh the gold bars, and how Cochran protested at the time. Their conclusions were that Cochran is not insane and that he has a knowledge of right and wrong.

Dr. H. Ernest Goodman made a verbal report to the same effect. M. H. Cobb, chief clerk at the mint; Oliver C. Bosbyshell, superintendent of the mint, and Chief Drummond of the secret service were the other witnesses. The defense announced that they had no witnesses, and a verdict of guilty was rendered.

After the verdict had been rendered Mr. Beck called three witnesses, who testified to Cochran's good character. The case was then submitted to the court. Its decision will be important, a few days, but no definite time has yet been fixed.

General Rusk's Funeral.

VIROQUA, Wis., Nov. 23.—All of the details of General Rusk's funeral have been arranged. Services for the family exclusively will be held at the residence this afternoon, conducted by the Rev. S. S. Butler of Madison, assisted by the Rev. George W. Muzum of Viroqua. At the close of the services the body will be escorted to the Methodist church by the Masonic fraternity, where it will lie in state, guarded by Grand Army comrades, until Friday afternoon, when public services will be held.

Stevens Lectures on Hawaii.

WEST SOMERVILLE, Mass., Nov. 23.—Hon. John L. Stevens, LL. D., of Augusta, Me., late United States minister to Hawaii, lectured on Hawaii and Hawaiian affairs in a Lyceum course at West Somerville, The Baptist church, in which the lecture was delivered, was crowded to its utmost capacity. He said he had firmly refused to consider the Hawaiian question a partisan question in any sense. If others saw fit to make it so, they did so on their own responsibility.

Annual Reports Withheld.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—It was stated at the war department, after Secretary Lamont had returned from the White House, that none of the reports of the cabinet officers would be given out or made public until after congress had met and the message of the president sent to it. The reason for this is believed to be that much of what is contained in the message would be foreshadowed in the reports of members of the cabinet.

Will Fight on the River.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 23.—The final deposit of the stakes of $1,000 a side was made at Youngstown, O., for the finish fight between James Gallagher of Pittsburg and Jack Malone of Youngstown, to take place next Tuesday. The fight will take place on a barge in midstream.

An Historic Painting.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The celebrated panorama of Versailles, painted by the noted artist, John Vanderlyn, which is now in the possession of the old Senate House in this city, is to be suitably mounted and placed on exhibition in an upper room of that ancient building.

The Highest High Tide.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—The high at tide which has occurred in years created havoc along the harbor front. The water was even with the top of the highest piers at flood tide, and cellars and basements along the entire water front were flooded.

Race Horses Lost In a Fire.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 23.—The extensive breeding and racing stables of T. D. Hodgens near here were totally destroyed by fire, together with 20 of the finest thoroughbred horses in Canada, including Jim Crack.

Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The fourth class postmasters appointed were:

New Jersey—Flanders, C. H. Howell.

New York—Duraneville, John Maher; McKenzville, Henry Hein, and Schoenvia, E. F. Bennett.

Another Steel Rail Pool.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 23.—Another steel rail pool has been formed, more strongly fortified than the one that wound up its career recently.

Two Men Drowned.

KITTANNING, Pa., Nov. 23.—John Funks and Herman Retchner were drowned while crossing the river in a boat at Food City.

Another Mississippi Bridge.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 23.—An elaborate contemplates the building of another bridge across the river near here.

SET THE FIRES FOR FUN

Firebugs In Greenwich, Conn., Are Found Out.

ONE WAS A VOLUNTEER FIREMAN.

Other Members of the Fire Department Are Under Suspicion—The Prisoners Confess—They Were Suspected After the Burning of the Schoolhouse.

GREENWICH, Conn., Nov. 23.—The things men do for fun are often more than passing strange, and Greenwich, reading the history of the past two years of arson in the glare of its burning schoolhouse, holds up its hands in dumb astonishment and admits that in all its history there was never fun like this.

It was for fun, Greenwich knows now, that its many barns were burned and its schoolhouse fired, for it has learned that at least one member of the volunteer fire brigade, whose apparatus it bought and maintains, turned firebug to vary the monotony of existence and so varied it for nearly two years.

It knows, too, that of the 40 men in that company, the majority of whom are estimable and upright, three more at least are suspected of being privy to the two years of incendiarism which provided fun at the expense of thousands of dollars' worth of property and the peace of the community, for those funmakers—that by their own admission—could not rest satisfied with mere false alarms. They dabbled in arson.

Two Have Confessed.

All this Greenwich read by the light from its blazing schoolhouse a week ago. And this, startling as it was, is still funny if compared with what followed.

George Barnes and Robert Talbot, guilty of arson by their own confession, are in the hands of the law. Talbot awaits trial before the superior court, free because a wealthy grandmother gave bonds for $2,500 to guarantee his appearance to answer for fun while in jail for 2 years in prison. Barnes, whose madness seems the greater here because Greenwich saw its workings, sleeps in Stamford jail dazed and penitent.

Both have confessed that they had been implicated in the burning of the following property—this for fun also:

The Octagon House barn in Milbank avenue, owned by Miss Mary Waring Mead of New York; Fred Hubbard's barn in Greenwich avenue, immediately in the rear of a business block; a stack of hay in Greenwich avenue, the property of Smith Mead.

The prisoners were arraigned before Judge Hoyt, ex-speaker of the legislature. The complaint alleged arson in the burning of the meeting house school. Talbot, being a minor, was represented by Lawyer E. J. Schofield. Both filed a demurrer to the complaint. It was overruled, and they declined to plead further. The court found them probably guilty and held them in $2,500 bail each for trial before the superior court of Fairfield county in Bridgeport on the third Tuesday of February.

Talbot's grandmother furnished bonds, and he was released, but Barnes, who was given more time to secure bail and counsel, failed to get either and after a delay until yesterday was removed to the jail in Stamford.

Others Are Implicated.

It is known that the men implicated several other members of the fire brigade, but the names have been kept secret until further evidence can be secured. The best men in Greenwich say that the company generally is free from suspicion, and not more than four of its members are thought to have been firebugs.

Chief Engineer Knapp, a sterling official, says that Barnes and Talbot had been suspected for a year, but all attempts to secure tangible evidence failed. They were watched so closely six months ago that they became suspicious, and Greenwich enjoyed immunity from suspicions fires until the bell tolled a week ago.

It is expected that the trial before the superior court will be marked by revelations implicating other funmakers here and supplying the lost links in the story which Barnes and Talbot have told.

Fraudulent Lottery Company.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 23.—The state of Louisiana, through her attorney general, has instituted suit against L. A. Gontrelin and others doing business here under the name of J. K. Morgan and the Louisiana Loan company (fraudulent lottery), claiming to be the successors of the Louisiana State Lottery company, and obtained writs of injunction against the defendants prohibiting them from publishing, selling or sending such tickets either in or out of the state.

Proposed New England and Northern.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—The New England road has purchased about 100 acres of land at Lengyel's Point. It has an option on another large tract. The purpose of the acquirement is for a freight terminus for the proposed New York, New England and Northern. This looks as if the road would be actually built.

Springfield's Fire Losses.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 23.—The losses by the fire which raged for five hours in the heart of the city, destroying six business blocks and 50 flats, are now estimated at from $500,000 to $700,000 and are about two-thirds covered by insurance.

A Wanamaker Agent In Trouble.

TOPEKA, Nov. 23.—W. H. Wolf, agent in this city of the Wanamaker & Brown clothing firm of Philadelphia, has decamped, owing several hundred dollars to the Wanamaker company.

Sleighing In Northern New York.

WARRENSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The first real snowstorm of the season has come. More than six inches of snow fell, and cutters and sleighs are out in large numbers.

Many Idle In Orange.

ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 23.—Never in the history of this city have there been so many persons unemployed. There are 8,000 idle persons among the hatters alone.

The Olympia's Official Trip.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—The cruiser Olympia left port for Santa Barbara channel on her official trip, which takes place today or Friday.

All Quiet at Havana.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The steamer Santiago, just arrived from Havana, reports that all is quiet on the island.

Fire In a Paper Mill.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Nov. 23.—A fire in Mann's paper mills at Lambertville destroyed $1,000 worth of stock.

Cutdown at Homestead.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 23.—Notices were posted at the steel works of a reduction of wages of laborers.

WINNOWED WIRINGS.

The cholera in Russia is less virulent.

Hundreds of Indians starved in Labrador.

Three lives were lost in a fire at Newbern, Texas.

The condition of Prince Bismarck still continues to improve.

The organization of the Western Baseball league was completed.

During the recent big storm the English coast guard saved 350 lives.

A priest in Columbus, O., had a fight with burglars and drove them out of his house.

Nelson A. Merkell, the missing treasurer of the Globe theater, Boston, has returned and will not be prosecuted.

The threatened strike in Pennsylvania's steel mill industry was averted by an acceptance of a wage reduction.

The body of Samuel E. Livingstone was found in the woods near Malone, N. Y., where he had died of starvation.

Simon H. Banks, a cousin of Abraham Lincoln, fell from a load of wagon at Breckenridge, Mo., and was killed under the wheels, dying almost instantly.

John White of the Farmington football team, who is paralyzed from spinal injuries received in a game Saturday at Hartford, may not recover, and if he does he will probably be a cripple for life.

MELLO'S SUCCESSES.

The Insurgent Admiral Making Rio Hot For Peixoto.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A Times dispatch from Rio Janeiro says: There is heavy artillery fire daily. Many shots struck Villegagnon and Fort Lage, which were much damaged. An officer and 17 men were killed in the latter place by the bursting of a shell. The Italian gun at Sao Jose has been dismounted. The fire from machine guns now makes parts of the city dangerous. Many casualties occur in the streets. Diplomatists here consider it impossible to take further steps for the protection of the lives and property of foreigners.

Admiral Gama confirms the statement that Admiral Mello intends to wait until the end of the revolution and then take a vote of the country on restoring the monarchy.

Reports of insurgent successes are confirmed. They have captured Fort Lage and are making progress in the north. Peixoto is making every preparation for the defense of the city and declares that he intends to fight to the last. He expects to gain a victory when his ships arrive. The financial position of the government is difficult, as the treasury is empty. The declaration that Pernambuco is in a state of siege shows the spread of the rebels' movement.

GRANGERS AFTER MORTON.

Will Ask For the Removal of the Secretary of Agriculture.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 23.—In the National Grange the committee on the goal of the order submitted its report on the language used by Secretary of Agriculture Morton at Chicago. Referring to the Grange, it is alleged that he condemned and censured the organization. The language was characterized as unbecoming a gentleman, a man in high office and a member of the president's cabinet.

It was resolved that so far as the Grange is concerned there is not one word of truth in what the secretary said; but, on the contrary, the Grange has ever been and seeks to educate and elevate the farmer to higher, nobler citizenship, teaching proper methods of farming, marketing products and purchasing goods; that the secretary, by stating untruths, has proved himself unworthy of his position; that the president owes it to the farmers of the largest agricultural nation in the world to appoint a secretary of agriculture in sympathy with them. The report was adopted. A committee was appointed to submit the report to President Cleveland.

Shot For Jack the Slasher.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Willis Washington, a negro, was shot by Policeman Charles B. Gerry. The officer mistook the negro for Jack the Slasher.

Editor Bennett at Monte Carlo.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Mr. James Gordon Bennett is at Monte Carlo. He stoops some, but otherwise appears remarkably well.

COTTO-COTTO-COTTOLENE.

Notice the name—COTTOLENE. Not Vegetable-lene, nor Animal-lene, nor Mineral-lene, nor any other "lene" but COTTOLENE.

COTTOLENE

Is the new vegetable shortening, recognized as far superior to lard for every cooking use. The other "lenes," and "ets," and "oles," are imitations—made to sell on the merits of COTTOLENE, and to be "worked off" by sleight of hand, or the "just as good" game.

If you want good cooking and good health, get COTTOLENE—it's the only 'lene' worth having.

Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

WOMAN AND HOME.

THE VALUE OF FIRMNESS AND KINDNESS WITH CHILDREN.

Housework as an Art—Comfort in the Nursery—Lamps and Their Care—House Malaria—Artistic Halls—Society's Sins, A Dado of Linoleum.

We are doubtless all familiar with the conversation claimed to have been overheard between two boys. Said one to the other: "Are you going fishing today?" "No," replied the second boy; "mother won't let me."

"Fudge," said the first boy contemptuously; "tease her and tease her, and if she won't let you go, lie down on the floor and kick. That's the way I do. Then she will let you go."

Our first thought is one of indignation against the little rascal; our second, no—the child is not to blame. If he knows he can get what he wants by teasing, why should he not tease? Or, if kicking upon the floor will change his mother's no into a yes, he would be a very foolish boy if he did not kick. If he did not know he could get what he wants by teasing and kicking, he would not do it. The mother has only herself to blame for her boy's naughtiness. I believe that right here lies three-fourths of the trouble, anxiety and wear upon the nerves in the bringing up of children. Let your no mean no always, and it will be accepted as final, but if sometimes it may possibly mean yes you may rest assured that you will not be the one to get the benefit of the doubt. But think before you say no.

Remember that what seems to you a foolish trifle may mean a great deal to your little one, and to be deprived of the pleasure will cause a bitter disappointment. When she comes to you brimming over with some anticipated scheme that promises such lots of fun, enter into the plan with interest and be glad with her. If it seems to you not a feasible thing, do not say so, but tell her you must think it over. Then think it over carefully, and the difficulties may disappear. If not, and you find it would be unwise to grant her request, tell her lovingly, giving her the reasons why it would not be best, and tell her how sorry you are that you must deny her. If you have taught her by your daily actions that her mother is her truest friend; if she knows that you love her so well that you will grant her every happiness that is in your power, if it is best that she should have it, she will accept the decision because "mamma knows," and, though the lips may quiver and the eyes fill, there will be no "scene," no outbreak of temper such as all mothers dread.

A child brought up close to the mother's heart, with perfect confidence in the strong mother love, will give her unquestioned obedience when that obedience is necessary, because it will never enter her head to doubt the love in the demand. Share your children's joys as well as their sorrows. Be a child with them when you can, and the battle is half won.

In dealing with children a little strategy may sometimes be used with marvelously good result, and before the self willed little puss realizes that she is doing the point at issue has been so skillfully turned that she has done exactly what you wished her to and has forgotten to rebel over it.—Philadelphia Press.

Housework as an Art.

Housework should be raised from menial service to a domestic art. You must make it a profession, as here those who enter into it may be carefully trained and ranked according to their ability and paid according to their proficiency. Housework is a more involved science than it was in the old days when the mistress gave it twice as much supervision as she does now. You expect your housemaid to know all about the care of silver, of bronze, of brass, of porcelain, of mahogany, of glass, of linen, of ivory, of velvet, of satin, of brocade. Yes, and in America, where in many beautiful houses only one maid is employed, you expect her to know all about cooking; too, which is an art in itself.

You take the recently landed immigrant girl and expect her to teach your little babies good manners and to keep them clean and healthy. You will never solve the problem of the home in America in any other way than this: Build cottages where your girls may be taught scientific housekeeping and hygienic cooking, and trained to a degree of intelligence that will prevent your maid from scouring your brass with a hearth brush, or serving at the same dinner raw tomatoes, celery and grapes on hygienic principles.

Then you will come to have a different standard of treatment for maids outside your household and maids who work in the house. If a preference of respect is shown to either, you should show it to the girl or woman to whom is intrusted the health and comfort of your family. In no other country is domestic art so easy. You have so many labor saving inventions, so many delightful arrangements for simplifying the detail and routine, such easy methods for keeping the kitchen clean. You expect more of your maids than we do in many ways. In the first place, we don't expect in middle class families to be the breakfast table waited upon at all. The table is laid ready, and we have quite as much served and are more bountiful in the matter of knives and forks and plates, but we serve the meal ourselves. Just think what a difference that makes in the morning's work.—Mrs. Ormison Chant.

Comfort In the Nursery.

A bamboo screen with silk curtains, or better still, those of some washable material, is a most useful adjunct. It can be used to shield the crib from a draft, to screen a corner or shut off the washstand when it is in use.

If the nursery is far from the kitchen, a small refrigerator will be found a great convenience. Tin ones can be purchased for about $3 that answer the purpose admirably. There is room for the supply of milk for the day, beside the ice, and they are easily kept in perfect order.

If the baby is fed on artificial food, some means should be provided for heating it; an alcohol lamp, a contrivance to fit on the gas burner or covered saucepan alone, if there is an open fire.

No nursery should be without a thermometer, and when it varies much from 60 degrees the source of heat must be attended to.

A clock is always interesting and amusing to children, and as they grow older is useful in teaching them to tell time.

Beside a closet for the playthings that are owned and used in common, each child should have a receptacle for its own particular treasures, which it should be required to keep in order. The top of the chiffonier is a good lodging place for the fragile belongings whose destruction by the heedless younger ones is always so heartbreaking to the careful owner. A large cupboard, divided into compartments, is the best if it can be had. A small bookcase must not be forgotten, with room for the toy books of the babies as well as for the books of the other members of the nursery.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Lamps and Their Care.

The head of the lamp department in one of the New York shops recently contributed some points on the care of these much used means of lighting the modern house beautiful.

The greatest care should be taken, he says, in filling a lamp to wipe off every drop of oil that has got on the sides and in the crevices of the ornamentation during the process. This can best be done with a sleazily woven cloth like a piece of cheesecloth or coarse flannel, which quickly absorbs the oil. It is often the failure to do this thoroughly that makes the slight smell of kerosene so noticeable about lamps that it has come to be accepted by many as an unpreventable one. If a lamp is wiped and rewiped with a second and drier cloth, nine times out of ten its so called "evaporating" habit will vanish.

Never use scissors to trim a wick. A visiting card is one of the best trimmers: one still better, if not considered too much trouble, is to heat a pokered hot and pass the heated end over the wick. This evenly removes all the charred part. Trim a round wick toward the center; in a duplex burner, where the sticks are straight, trim the second wick with the bit of cardboard in an opposite direction from the way the first is trimmed.

Don't keep the oil in lamps many days without burning; it becomes stale and smells when lighted. Burners wear out after long and constant use and need replacing. To boil them up once or twice in strong soapsuds increases the length of their usefulness.

House Malaria.

Speaking of house malaria, which is sometimes said to be due to the earth from growing plants kept in living rooms, before even seeing if these charges be unfounded, look to the water in the flower vases, which often becomes extremely unpleasant. An expert says: If you do not change the water in your flower vases at least every other day, it will become so putrid and offensive—unless heavily charged with charcoal lumps—that no scalding can sweeten the best glazed jar. Small vases should have two or three bits of charcoal kept in them, and the water should be changed every day. Rinse well and then refill. The charcoal will serve for a week or two. If the stems of the flowers are clipped daily as far up as they have softened, they will keep as sweet as at first.

Trash, too, as regards growing plants, depend upon it that, excepting aquatics, ferns and mosses, it may be said that the plants that are healthiest in plants will be found healthy for human beings. The exceptions mentioned, naturally thriving in shaded or marshy grounds, require an atmosphere not destructive to human health. But the average plant requires sunlight, warmth and plenty of fresh air to thrive well, and the human plant requires the same. Large gardenias for plants that must be kept wet should have at least a quart of charcoal kept at the under part. —Boston Transcript.

Artistic Halls.

A large vase, such as usually serves for a potted plant, makes a good umbrella stand, and those are found in every variety of color and style. One of the new patterns is the best if it can be had. A small bookcase must not be forgotten, with room for the toy books of the babies as well as for the books of the other members of the nursery.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Society's Sins.

It would be easy to name women, prominent in society by virtue of their beauty, talent, moral purity and force of character, who have been powers for good in their time, incentives to virtuous and noble living, respected by men and acceptable to God. It would be equally easy to mention others who, notwithstanding their gifts, have done more harm than good. Handsome, rich, brilliant, capable, possessors of heart, but lax in their sense of moral obligation, indiscreet in conduct, tolerant of evil, indifferent to social scandals, they demoralize by their example.

One of the plain signs of this demoralization is afforded by the readiness of the community to overlook the sins of women whom it admires. There must be something wrong when we are prompt to forgive in a beautiful and witty woman what we would not forgive in a plain and dull one. And what is true of the leader of society is true of society in general.

The entire community has an interest in "society" and is warranted in looking to it for help and protection. Let "society" recognize the fact and meet its obligations. Let those who lead it consider their responsibility and make it their aim to keep themselves pure, to set an example of honorable and decent living, and to put to good use the privileges which they enjoy.—Rev. Morgan DIX.

A Dado of Linoleum.

Miss Charlotte Robinson, "decorator to the queen," recommends a thin quality of linoleum to be used as a dado for the walls in a kitchen. It should be glued close to the wall and may be finished at the top with a plain molding. It may easily be oiled when it or left in its natural condition as one chooses. It is in every way to be preferred to a dado of wood, which is liable to rot and leave interstices in which insects may lodge.

The dado of linoleum is as easily washed as a dado of tiling and is even more durable, while it is a good deal cheaper. In the natural wood color in which this material comes, it would make a very pretty dado for a wall painted pale blue. As linoleum is made more than the blown pulp of wood, combined with oxydised linseed oil, it can be readily seen that it can be treated in any way that wood can be stained, while it is exactly suited to this purpose and the purpose of covering kitchen floors. A dado is almost a necessity in a kitchen, because a plastered wall gets chipped with continual wear. Linoleum offers just the right material necessary for such protection.

A Homemade Chest.

It was in its first condition a packing box. It was about three feet long and rather broad, but quite shallow. It was rather an aristocratic packing box, being dovetailed instead of merely nailed at the joinings.

The woman into whose hands it fell had an inspiration. The cover was hooked off, and a carpenter fitted a cover on with hinges. Then she painted it black on the outside and white on the inside. When she had obtained the desired shade of inkiness she varnished the box. The hinges on the cover she gilded. A pair of brass handles were added to the sides, and an ornamental brass lock adorned the front. The chest reposed in a bedroom window and held madam's party dress skirts without creasing them. On top she put a few curious looking cushions—a dull red one, an old blue one and one with hands of oriental embroidery. And the popular impression is that the quaint looking chest is either an heirloom or a treasure from an antique shop.—Exchange.

How Fashions Are Made.

A Parisian hairdresser, who was a great favorite with the fashionable world, decided one day that a clever mind and hand could succeed in making almost anything fashionable. Several boon companions of the speaker took him at his word and proposed that he introduce a coiffure composed of vegetables and make the same fashionable.

The hair dresser took the bet and succeeded in persuading one of his ultra fashionable clients, the Marquise of Lesdiguieres, to permit him to arrange her hair in a new way, adorning it with cauliflower, cardoons and radishes. The lady was so well pleased with the innovation that she showed herself at once in one of the salons of her friends. The result of it was as predicted by the hairdresser; the beau monde of Paris was for a time devoted to coiffures composed of fruit and vegetables.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Angels of the Tombs.

There are four women in New York whose names are little known to the general public but who are honored by the class among whom they labor. These are Mrs. Ernestine Schaffner, Mrs. M. J. Bradwell, Mrs. Mary Foster and Mrs. A. C. Taylor, and they are sometimes styled the "Angels of the Tombs." Mrs. Schaffner interests herself in procuring bail for needy criminals. Mrs. Studwell and Mrs. Taylor sing with the Tombs prisoners on Sundays, besides doing many kindly little offices for them at other times. Mrs. Foster busies herself with missionary work among young women.—New York Correspondent.

Three Royal Cousins.

The three cousins, Princess Maud of Wales, the Grand Duchess Alexis of Russia, and Princess Marie of Greece, are all singularly like their respective mothers. The queen of Greece, for instance, often dispenses with the wearing of gloves, and so does Princess Marie, who also uses eyeglasses with a long handle, exactly in the same manner as Queen Olga. Princess Xenia, who cannot boast the same good looks as the empress, has, however, the same bright and happy smile as her mother, and that Princess Maud of Wales is much more like her beautiful mother than are her two sisters is no news.

Set Up an Æolian.

An English peeress having set an Æolian harp in the front door of her London house, it is to be expected that American chatelaines will be for following her example. An authority tells of a simple way to make one of these musical instruments. Take pieces of buttonhole twist and thoroughly wax them; tie each end firmly to a tree and thrust your pegs down the crevices between the two sashes of your southern or western windows, stretching the silk as tightly as possible.

Lady Aberdeen's Speaking.

"A characteristic of Lady Aberdeen's speaking," says one who has often listened to her public addresses, "is her clear, resonant voice, splendidly modulated and controlled. She can be heard in every corner of large auditoriums." Which is remarkable enough among women speakers to be emphasized. If women want to talk, they certainly want to be heard—a result which only a small percentage of them accomplish.

Woman In Medicine.

Nothing is more marked, especially in Philadelphia, which is itself such a medical center, that the way women physicians have come to the front. A few years ago they were but little seen or heard of; now there are a hundred or more woman doctors whose names are known far and wide and who enjoy very good lucrative practices.—Philadelphia Times.

Dana's Virtue.

English children eat unlimited bacon and thrive upon it, physicians over there estimating it almost as good as cod liver oil and certainly much more palatable. But they will not thrive upon it over here, as we Americans do. It is cut very thin, and put in a hot skillet until it curls at the edges, then quickly transferred to a hot dish and served.

Hair dyeing is a branch of the art of beautifying which is now brought to a high pitch of perfection. Red hair is, however, very difficult to operate on, and indeed an unskilled performer may work havoc with her personal appearance if she resolves to do the "coloring" herself.

Mrs. Mary F. Henderson, who wrote a good, practical cookbook, is a graceful blond woman, who looks to be the younger sister of her lawyer son. She divides her year between a brownstone castle at the head of Sixteenth street, in Washington, and her Adirondack camp.

Persons who sew a great deal often suffer from soreness in the thimble finger. Silver or plated thimbles are the best, and next to these a highly burnished steel thimble should be used. The swelling of the finger and very serious inflammation are often caused by cheap thimbles.

A clean cork is a valuable polisher used with powder or oil for such things as andirons, rods, tools, hinges, etc. For removing spots from marble it is better than a cloth in applying pumice or rotten stone.

There is not on earth a more merciless exactor of love from others than a thoroughly selfish woman.—Mrs. Stowe.

The foot of a coarse cotton stocking is superior to a sponge for bathing purposes.

He Had Enough of It.

Two brothers were once at Count von Moltke's house at an evening party. Both were captains of the general staff. The general came up to a group of gentlemen, one of whom was one of the brothers. After joining in the conversation he asked the latter: "Just tell me who is that tall officer near the fireplace on the other side. I forget his name."

"That's my brother, your excellency," was the answer.

A smile standing over the general's face suggested the idea that he had not obtained the information he wished. Some time after the general went to another group of people, and there joined the officer whose name he had inquired. Suddenly the others saw him turning away with the same smile on his face. Afterward, when they inquired from the returning officer what the general had asked him, he replied, "He asked me who that officer was over there."

"And what did you say?"

"I said that he was my brother."

The general gave up inquiring the name of the two brothers for that evening.—Argonaut.

BREVITIES.

—To-night the Pioneers of Elizabeth will visit Dunellen and roll with the Dunellen Club.

—The men of Trinity Reformed church will give a green tea in the lecture room of the church to-night.

—Summons were issued to-day by Justice Nash in the case of Tunison, et. als. vs. Harned, on contract, returnable Dec. 1st.

—A conundrum sociable was largely enjoyed at the First Baptist church last night. It was given by the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor.

—The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Park avenue Baptist church will hold its regular monthly consecration meeting this evening at eight o'clock. All are cordially invited to be present.

—The men of Holly Cross Choir were entertained at the home of Rector T. Logan Murphy last night. Glees and College songs were sung. A very enjoyable evening was spent. Refreshments were served.

—The C. Y. M. L. of this city will roll their first game in Elizabeth to-night. They will meet the Y. M. C. A. Hall team on the latter's alleys. Both teams are rolling good games this season and a sharp rub may be looked for.

—The Coachman's Beneficial Association of Plainfield has raised by subscription among themselves a purse which they have presented to Mrs. Meehan of Union avenue to help defray the funeral expenses of her son, who was a brother member, but not entitled to benefits at the time of his death.

—A union Thanksgiving service will be held in the Crescent Avenue church on Thursday morning, November 30th, at eleven o'clock. The other churches participating are the Park Avenue, the Congregational, and the Seventh Day Baptist. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. A. H Lewis, D. D.

—The failure to select Rev. Dr. Rickards as the candidate to succeed himself in the Board of Education was only because the delegates felt that Dr. Jenkins was entitled to the nomination for stepping aside a few years ago rather than that there should be any contention. Dr. Jenkins has always proved himself a good public official.

They all "Saw Sweet Nellie Home."

The birthday anniversary of Miss Nellie, daughter of Farmer John Powers, was celebrated Wednesday evening by a party given at her house, on her father's farm, near North Plainfield. There was singing and dancing and parlor games in which all heartily joined, and with many beautiful presents, wished the charming Miss Nellie, who is still in her teens, many happy returns of the event.

Among those present were Miss May Day, Miss Sarah Sharkey, Miss Kittie Flanagan, Miss Kittie Flynn, Miss Lizzie Flanagan, Miss Nellie Casey, Miss Lizzie Casey, Miss Mamie, and Miss Annie Powers, besides the sweet Nellie herself, and Messrs. James McCabe, Bert Townley, William Schaffer, Daniel Force, Ivan Pierson, Daniel Gigna, Samuel Goff, Arthur Sherman, Warner Pierson, Frederick Sutton, Harry Milligan, and Compton Vail. Altogether the affair was a very pleasant one.

Mr. Crane to go to Washingtonville.

The Rev. Mr. Crane, who has been conducting evangelistic meetings at the Y. M. C. A. rooms for two weeks past, will go to Washingtonville on Sunday and begin a series of meetings there. The meetings will be held all next week.

FORMERLY BROUGHT BY ITALIANS.

One Escape from Smallpox Ought to be a Lesson to Us,

The only case of smallpox in this city for many years was brought here through Italians who gave the disease to the contractor in charge of the construction of the Plainfield Electric Street Railway. He lay sick with it in a house in Craig Place, North Plainfield, two years ago, but the prompt action of the North Plainfield Board of Health in quarantining the house prevented the dread disease spreading. We may not be so fortunate again if we allow Italians to come here from a locality where they have already infected and made the disease such an epidemic that the courts have had to close to avoid it.

If the contractor here has thrown our own worthy laborers out of work to give it to these Italians this whole community should rise in its might and let such people know that we have some rights if we cannot entirely protect these poor men, who are of our own people, and entitled to our first consideration. In trying to protect them we are but trying to protect ourselves.

The News is on record as calling attention to the danger of smallpox, and, if any deaths occur, it may prove a serious matter for those to whom the introduction of the dread disease may be traced. One of the managers of the work on the Somerset real estate movement says all Plainfield men who asked for work got it, but that the men discharged were evidently shop hands who did not know how to do the work. The rates are about $1. a day. The manager states that there are twelve Italians from Elizabeth.

A SCOTCH SOCIABLE.

In the Sunday-school Room of the First Presbyterian Church.

The Sunday-school room of the First Presbyterian church was crowded last night, on the occasion of a Scotch sociable, given by the young people. Those who took part did themselves great credit in carrying out the Scotch characters. At the conclusion of the programme refreshments in abundance were served to the audience. The programme was as follows:

Chorus of Boys.....Scotch Airs
Recitation.....Green Grow the Rushes."
W. Vanderbeek.
Piano Duett.....Tam O'Shanter."
Burbage.....Young Lochinvar."
Selection.....Scamp Dundee."
Intermission.
Scotch Melodies.....Violin and Piano,
Recitation.....Caddie Dean."
Chorus.....Will They Tire the Rye."
Piano Solo.....Miss Benson
Quartette.....A Gude Wife of Tam."
Miss Herring, Miss Heirle, Mr. Petrie and Mr. Hazelton.
Chorus.....Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. Banner's Fox Escapes.

The fox recently received by John Banner of South avenue, for a fox chase on Thanksgiving Day, escaped Wednesday night and is at large. The fox had been chained in the cellar, but fearing he would hang himself similar to the one he had before Mr. Banner told his man, Peter Smith, to let him loose in the cellar at night. Peter Smith was to watch "Mr. Fox" at night, but he failed to do his duty Wednesday night, hence his prisoner's escape.

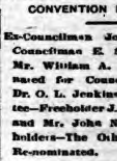
The Jerry McAuley Mission.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ballan, formerly with Dr. Parkhurst, in mission work, now superintendent of the Jerry McAuley Cremorne Mission, will hold services in the First Presbyterian church, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 28th, at 7:45. All who attend are assured of hearing an interesting talk of the great work, now being done, to reclaim fallen humanity. Mr. and Mrs. Ballan will have with them two young converts and a solo singer from the Mission.

REPUBLICAN NOMINEES.

CANDIDATES NAMED AT THE CITY CONVENTION LAST NIGHT.

Ex-Councilman John B. Dumont, Councilman E. N. Erickson and Mr. William A. Westphal Nominated for Councilman-at-Large—Dr. O. L. Jenkins for School Trustee—Freeholder J. Frank Hubbard and Mr. John H Tier for Freeholders—The Other City Officers Re-nominated.



PURSUANT to call the city Republican committee held their nomination in Republican Association rooms on East Front street, last night. It was called to order by the chairman of the city committee, Mr. Ernest R. Ackerman. Mr. Ackerman was elected chairman of the meeting and Mr. Reeve F. Murray, secretary. The chairman appointed Mr. C. B. Corwin Judge, and Messrs. E. E. Anthony and William Newcorn inspectors.

The secretary read the call and the nominations were proceeded with. For Councilman-at-Large, Councilman E. A. Glass of the Second Ward nominated ex-Councilman John B. Dumont, Councilman Charles J. Fisk nominated Councilman E. N. Erickson; Mr. H. B. York of the Fourth ward nominated Mr. William A. Westfiel. As there were only three nominees the secretary cast the ballot and the above gentlemen were declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

For Collector the present incumbent, Mr. John Johnson, was unanimously nominated.

Treasurer Alexander Titsworth was unanimously renominated for that office.

Messrs. William C. Ayers and J. Fred MacDonald were renominated for Commissioners of Appeal. The first office for which there was more than candidate was that of Freeholders. The names of Freeholders J. Frank Hubbard and Andrew Vanderbeek and Mr. John H. Tier, Sr., were placed before the convention as candidates. A ballot was taken and resulted as follows:

J. Frank Hubbard.....32
John H. Tier, Sr.....34
Andrew Vanderbeek.....1

As Messrs. Hubbard and Tier received the largest number of votes they were declared the nominees of the convention.

The next in order was the selection of a Supervisor for the Board of Education. The names of the Rev. Dr. Richards and Dr. O. L. Jenkins were presented as candidates. A ballot was taken, and resulted in the selection of Dr. O. L. Jenkins. The vote was as follows:

Dr. Jenkins.....31
Dr. Richards.....11

In seconding Mr. Richards for School Trustee Mr. R. E. Case said Mr. Richards was a broad-minded man of large experience and the best interests of the children thoroughly at heart. He has been tried in the position, and if elected will fully sustain the high reputation of the Plainfield Board of Education."

It was claimed by one of the delegates that two or three years ago Dr. Jenkins had been a candidate, but that he had stepped aside to allow the Fourth Ward a representative in the School Board.

Mr. Reeve F. Murray then said: "I have no candidate for the office but I feel honored in speaking for Mr. Richards' nomination. It seems to me that he is a man most eminently fitted for the position. We want men of culture to deal with what affects our children. I do not say that Dr. Jenkins is not qualified for the office. Both gentlemen are personal friends of mine, but Dr. Richards was chosen by the members of the Board to fill the place of the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, and the members of that body must have chosen a man they felt was fitted for the office."

Mr. Reeve spoke in favor of the nomination of Dr. Jenkins. He said: Dr. Jenkins is fully as competent to fill the position of school trustee as Dr. Richards, I believe, and he should be the nominee of this convention." He called upon the Fourth Ward to vote solidly for Dr. Jenkins.

A committee was appointed, consisting of the chairman of the meeting and the chairman of each Ward delegation, to fill any vacancies that might occur.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Rottman of Watchung avenue moved to New York to-day.

Artemus Barlow, of Connecticut, formerly of Plainfield, is visiting his cousin, Mrs. Abraham Dunham, at Dunellen.

Mrs. Hannah Underhill of New York State, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. A. L. Force of Watchung avenue, has returned home.

Rev. Frank Fletcher of Dunellen is booked to give his lecture, "Sherman's March to the Sea," at the First Church of Christ, this city, on December 12th.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church, will take for his theme next morning service: "Family Life as Related to Character and Destiny."

The evening sociable, given last night at the Watchung Club House, at Pacwood, proved very successful. A large number of Plainfielders attended. The following programme was rendered:

Piano Solo.....Miss Lucy Williams
"Shadow".....Minnie Wyman
"Chinese Love Song".....Edna Herr
"Commandments".....Eva Lance
"Hebrew".....Maude Van Dyke

SMALL-POX CHECKED.

The Elizabeth Health Authorities will Probably Stamp It Out.

The smallpox at Elizabeth seems to have been checked owing to the exertions of Dr. Mrachy. Only one case was reported yesterday. It was at No. 62 Fourth avenue in the infected district. It is a mild case.

The twelve patients in the pest-house are doing well. Unless some new complications arise they will recover.

FOR THE KING'S DAUGHTERS FUND.

Hope Chapel the Scene of a Successful Entertainment.

A STNIGHT the King's Daughters of Hope chapel gave a very successful entertainment in the chapel. It was very largely attended, the room being filled. An exceptionally fine programme was carried out. It consisted of a dialogue entitled "The Wrong Man," tableaux "Over the Garden Wall," "Forgiven" and "Book of Aces." The last named tableau, "Book of Aces," was represented by a young man rocking a cradle. There was a "Clothes pin drill" by eight girls dressed in white. Mrs. Cambold gave a piano solo, which was well rendered. Miss Dowd and Miss Nash entertained the audience with a duett. Next Harry Turner sang a selection. Then came a dialogue "Getting Ready." This was followed by a tableau "Coming thro' the Rye" by Ramah Hughes and Ray Ramsey, and a tableau "Pocahontas Begging for the Life of John Smith." Miss Florence Smith gave a recitation entitled "What They Do at the Spring." The Dialogue entitled "Genius of Christianity," as successfully given at Trinity Reformed church recently, was repeated. The characters were as follows:

"Genius of Christianity"...Oliver Wickoff
"Indian".....Laura Wickoff
"Pilgrim".....Miss Williams
"Shadow".....Minnie Wyman
"Chinese".....Edna Herr
"Commandments".....Eva Lance
"Hebrew".....Maude Van Dyke

ASSIGNMENT SET ASIDE.

Judge Dykman Decides that Edward Field was Guilty of Fraudulent Action.

Judge Dykman of White Plains yesterday afternoon handed down a decision setting aside the assignment made by Edward Field, of the firm of Field Lindley & Co. The Judge considers the assignment fraudulently made.

The collapse of the brokerage firm of Field, Lindley & Co., on November 22, 1893, was the financial sensation of the day.

The firm was composed of Edward M. Field, son of the late Cyrus W. Field; Daniel A. Lindley, a brother-in-law of the senior partner; John F. Wiechers, of Plainfield, a nephew of the late F. A. Wiechers, a wealthy sugar refiner, and Herman C. Kilmers, a brother-in-law of F. O. Matthiessen, also a wealthy sugar refiner.

The first notice to Mr. Charles W. Gould, who filed a statement of the firm's assets and liabilities on February 9 of the following year. It was a pitiable statement and showed a degree of reckless criminality on the part of the senior member of the firm that was almost dispiriting to contemplate. The firm's debts, as thus shown, amounted to $6,121,761, about one-half of which sum was unsecured in any way. The comparatively insignificant sum of $686,288 was all that could be shown in the way of available assets.

"A Summer in Jersey."

Last evening at All Souls church, Rev. Edward Hale of Orange took his old friend Maurice on a delightful trip through the Channel Islands and to the old wive-tales and Channel island of the same name across the sea.

Mr. Hale very entertainingly described the geographical situation of the island and her sister isles Guernsey, Alderney and Sark, together in size with Jersey, a little land within the smile of la belle France. Geographically Jersey belonged to France, politically it was under the dominion of Great Britain.

Mr. Hale's account of Jersey was at first one—full of quaint descriptions of the old stone cottages the heart of the traveler on finding a long-dreamed-of paradise and the desire to return thither again.

His descriptions of what he saw and observed in the country life were lit up with a poetic fancy which at times rose to the height of inspiration. The flowers in Jersey loomed in the hearts of youth and age alike who eagerly listened as he pointed out the fragrant meadows, within sight of quaint farm houses, and the hedges of fuchsia, which grew in unbroken lines of beauty. The trees trimmed behind well-trimmed hedgerows, brought vegetables, peaches, grapes, cherries, and the famous potatoes and corner crops of old ocean. Yet the palace in Jersey of Elizabeth Castle, the residence of the wife of Lieutenant Governor Hawkins, was not forgotten in the rich picture of color and tone.

No doubt many who were with Mr. Hale during the past few years will be glad to avail themselves of this rare opportunity to secure another delightful "Summer in Jersey."

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Dizzy and Dazzling Northwest.

S. A. Thompson, secretary of the Duluth chamber of commerce, furnishes to the American edition of The Review of Reviews a paper in regard to the possibilities of the northwest which fairly staggers the imagination. In his northwest Mr. Thompson includes both sides of the line between British America and the United States. The inhabitants of this colossal double northwest he tells us are one people, with similar characteristics, needs and ambitions, much more alike than the Canadians and Yankees of the Atlantic coast.

We learn from this paper that the 10 states constituting the American northwest are larger, taking out Maine, than the whole of the rest of the Union east of the Mississippi river. Great as this area is, however, it is to be swallowed up by the size of the Canadian northwest, which is nearly twice as large. Before we bought Alaska, Canada was larger than the United States. The seven provinces comprising the Canadian northwest are Manitoba, Kewatin, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Athabasca and British Columbia, and they contain an area of 1,245,995 square miles.

Neither is this vast country a barren, frozen up region, either in the Canadian or American northwest. Mr. Thompson cites as botanical law of the effect that cultivated plants yield the greatest product near the northernmost limit at which they can be grown. The cold of spring retards the leaf and sap development to the manifest advantage of fruit and seed. One of the tiny clusters in a head of wheat produces two grains in Iowa. In Peace river country, 56 degrees north latitude, it yields five plump, finely formed grains. As to fruit, apples, pears, cherries and plums already flourish in the latitude of Moscow, which is 6 degrees farther north than Winnipeg.

The line of profitable cultivation extends north in America to 62 degrees latitude, we are told. Beyond that is a vast region which will always produce the choicest furs in the market. There are untold riches of minerals in all the northwest, from the Yukon river down, precious metals as well as coal and iron. Northern Minnesota alone contains two of the greatest iron ranges in the world. West of the wheat belt in Canada comes what a citizen of Ottawa calls the chief pasture and meadow lands of North America. It is a fact that before the advent of the white man all the northwest south of Great Slave lake was covered with herds of buffalo that depended for their winter living on the grass that they pawed the snow aside to browse. We want now, in Mr. Thompson's judgment, nothing so much as ship canals and deepened waterways to develop this region in which the "time long journey shall at last be done and the race reach its final home."

If Canada or China wants to whip us, now is her best time to begin. We are just in the act of changing our Springfield army rifles for the new one of small caliber which has been ordered for the United States army. Work at the army arsenals has been stopped on the former pattern of rifle, which since the war has grown old fashioned at as rapid a rate as our fighting ships did. The United States will henceforth use the small caliber rifle at present the vogue among the armies of Europe. It will require perhaps two months for the factories to be ready to turn out the new rifle. Meantime smokeless powder must go along with the new rifle, and the war department is at sea, so to speak, as to what kind of smokeless powder to use. Ten thousand pounds of powder will charge 2,000,000 muskets, and the department has advertised for proposals for that amount. If any American with a brain that runs to powder making wants to secure a fat contract, here is his chance, provided he can hit on the right kind of an article. The war department prefers a powder in which there is no dynamite.

If certain Texas negroes had put into something useful the inventive genius they displayed in robbing trains of the Houston and Texas Central railway, they would have given shining proof of the intellectual ability of the black man. These rascals rigged an outfit of grappling machinery which could be used upon a cotton car in a manner that the train slowly pulled up grade at a steep hill the hooks were entangled in a bale of cotton, and it was clawed off the car and in the darkness carried to a plantation close by. There it was unpacked and relabeled and finally shipped by another road to Galveston and Houston.

"Megalomania" is a term the doctors have invented for a form of craziness in which the great idiahs he is the greatest man in the world and that his word is supreme law. Its meaning, according to the authorized translation, is "insanity of greatness." But we in America have a much better expression for this form of insanity. It is simply "swell head."

A masked man went into the house of the Monk family at Fishkill, N. Y., and forced Mrs. Monk to hand over to him $800. Why did the Monk family keep $800 in the house?

The greatest man may or may not be the one who is most talked about.

TROUBLES HAVE BEGUN.

Toughs and Idlers Attack Leahigh's Recruits.

THE ROAD MOVES SOME TRAINS.

Nonunion Engineers Attacked at Several Points, but the Strikers Deny All Responsibility—Non Enough Hired, but the Traffic Is Demoralized.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The disturbance in the Lehigh Valley yards in this city kept the police and a score of deputies on duty all day. A mail train, manned by nonunion men and a squad of deputies, started for Fair Haven amid the jeering taunts of the crowd. The train which left for Ithaca made the return trip. Its arrival was the signal for the first serious violence which has occurred here since the beginning of the tieup. The crowd had assembled at a street crossing, and as the locomotive backed down to the roundhouse a shower of stones was hurled at the cab, in which were Engineer Golber and Fireman Slocum, surrounded by deputies. One of the deputies was struck on the arm, but the assault culminated when the nonunion engineer stepped from the cab.

Some unknown person threw a piece of iron which struck him full on the head, inflicting a severe wound, from which the blood gushed. The injured man was quickly hustled into a cab by the deputies and taken to a hotel, where a physician attended him. The fireman fled to the master mechanic's office, pursued by a hooting herd of hoodlums.

May Call Out the Militia.

A mail train arrived from Sayre, but no further outbreak occurred, except that the mob jeered the nonunion crew. The train which left for Fair Haven at noon returned under close guard. The locomotive was housed, and the engineer escaped by means of a closed carfire without receiving much rough handling. The yards swarmed with idlers and toughs all day, but only now and then was the face of a striker visible. They deprecate the lawlessness as much as the officials. No attempt has been made as yet to move any freight.

To prevent a recurrence of the confusion and to clear the yards of loungers, who only await a chance to precipitate a riot, it has been suggested that the Second Separate company be called out today to guard the yards. The sheriff will not go to this extreme, however, until all other means fail.

An Engineer Disabled.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 24.—The Lehigh Valley Railroad company is slowly gaining on the strikers, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. Enough applicants have already applied for positions to fill every vacancy. The great trouble to the company is that they cannot utilize the labor at their command. The entire service is demoralized, but the officials say that it will take only a short time to bring order out of chaos. The indications are that it will take a very long time. One remarkable thing about the contest is that while the company is gaining ground the strikers are not losing any, as they still maintain a firm column.

There have been but few desertions since the strike began, and the strikers have been able to add not a few nonunion men to their ranks. N. T. Travis, an old nonunion engineer, was assaulted while on his way home. He had just completed his run and left his engine at the roundhouse. In a lonely part of the road he was struck on the arm by a large stone, which disabled him for the time being.

Stabbed by a Striker.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The Lehigh has certainly gained slight gains at Sayre, and although the solution of the trouble has by no means been reached the officers say they are entirely satisfied with the situation. On the other hand, the strikers remain just as firm and united as ever and say they are certain to win if the other roads continue to refuse Lehigh freight. The biggest excitement was a fight between a striker and a scab, in which the latter was badly stabbed with a knife. The new man fell, or he would have been severely handled. Chief Wilkins of the engineers was in Sayre and spoke at a meeting of the men, urging them to refrain from violence and they would win. Perhaps 30 of the men have been won over by the strikers and are being sent back to Buffalo.

Boys Hooted the Recruits.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 24.—Forty-seven nonunion men employed by the local agent of the Lehigh Valley, N. Y. Howell, left here in a special train for Sayre. Strikers influenced many to stay home. Many of those who went were armed, and all expected to fight before they got to Sayre. It was a tough looking crowd. Small boys yelled "Scabs" as the train pulled out, but nowhere was there any violent demonstration, under Lieutenant Ryan, are in the railroad yard.

In Favor of the Road.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 24.—The condition of affairs has changed somewhat for the company's favor, and the officials are claiming that they have won a decisive victory over the strikers. Passenger trains are nearly all running, and most of freight was hauled. Idlers moved. The strikers, however, are not alarmed and say that the company's hands are tied, from both ends of the road, traffic is practically at a standstill.

Guarded by Deputies.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 24.—Two coal trains have reached here, and three trains of empties have gone out. The situation from the strikers' standpoint is far from being as promising as it was. The blockade in the yards is being rapidly cleared up. Five engines manned by Knights of Labor were doing the drilling under the protection of 50 deputies from New Brunswick.

The Strike Extending.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Nov. 24.—The Lehigh Valley strike has extended to its Mahanoy division. The brotherhood men went out between Shamokin, Mount Carmel, Delano and Marsh Chunk, and freight traffic is practically suspended.

Trains Are Running.

PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., Nov. 24.—The situation in the Lehigh strike in this section is much the same. Both sides claim they are gaining. Seven trains freight were sent out. The passenger trains also ran regularly.

A Reported Outbreak.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Nov. 24.—Sheriff Apgar with a posse of twenty-two deputies was ordered to Lambertown, where a serious outbreak was expected between the freight engineers and Lehigh Valley strikers.

HAYES RE-ELECTED.

Powderly's Old Enemy Gives Additional Supporters.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—At a meeting of the general assembly of Knights of Labor the relative position of the factions was changed, and the vote for general worthy foreman is taken as an indication of Powderly's strength. There were two candidates for the place—Michael J. Bishop of Minneapolis, recognized as the candidate of the Hayes faction and those opposed to the master workman, and the present incumbent of the office, Hugh Cavanaugh, of District Assembly 49, Cincinnati. The election stood: Bishop, 25; Cavanaugh, 21.

The Hayes forces again carried their candidate to victory when the election of a general secretary and treasurer was ordered, the vote resulting the same as on the previous ballot. The announcement of the result of the ballot caused great rejoicing in the Hayes ranks, the vote standing: Hayes, 36; Martin, 21.

Master Workman Powderly, in exercising the prerogatives of his office in the general assembly, submitted eight names to be voted for in the election of a new executive board. Four only are to be elected. The presentation of this slate was very distasteful to the Hayes' faction, which claims that there will be irregularities in the election, as in all its autocratic practices. The session was a quiet one, but all hands were nevertheless very much wrought up over the list. It is claimed upon what seems to be good authority that the Powderly contingent will not be strong enough to carry his nominations through. The names of the nominees will be presented today for the consideration of the general assembly, at which time a lively fight is anticipated.

"If Mr. Powderly insists upon his nominations being voted on," said one of the delegates close to Mr. Hayes, "it is possible that a second resolution will be introduced declaring vacant the office Powderly now holds. It is understood by the Hayes delegates that Mr. Sarving of Iowa has in such an emergency consented to again become a candidate for the office of grand master workman. The very strong vote he polled against Powderly is a sufficient indication since the sentiment has turned that he would be successful.

CARLIN PARTY SAFE.

They Are Snowbound, but Well Provisioned For the Winter.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Nov. 24.—General Carlin retires today from active command with less trouble on his mind than anticipated. His son and party of hunters who have been snowbound in the Bitter Root mountains have been located at Hot Springs, on the middle fork of the Clearwater, well provisioned for the whole winter. Lieutenant Martin, who returned in advance of the Missoula troops and who came within 45 miles of the hunters' camp, has arrived here.

When 30 miles from Missoula, on Lolo trail, he struck two men—Houghton and Larson—who in September carried nine months' supplies to Jerry Johnson and partner, two trappers, with whom the hunters will winter in the mountains. A terrific storm came on today, the two packers barely escaping with their animals.

A relief party from the east is now trying to reach Missoula, with the loss of all camp equipage and some animals. Lieutenant Elliott, who is to work up the Lola trail from the west, and Lieutenant Overman, who is going up the Clearwater, are making further progress. Four men at Missoula volunteered to get to the hunting party for a reward and bring them out for an additional one. General Carlin after returning will stay here a few days and then proceed to Montana, continuing the work of rescue.

Sight Restored by Faith.

READING, Pa., Nov. 24.—John Y. Spayd had the sight of one completely destroyed six months ago by hot metal. He is a believer in the faith cure and has been unsuccessfully treated by physicians to be restored. Wednesday night, in the church which he attends, he suddenly cried, "Thank God!" and announced that he was able to see. His sight is now as good as ever. Five hundred people are witnesses to this case.

Cows Caused a Wreck.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 24.—A disastrous railroad wreck occurred near Carlson Hill, Ala., on the Louisville and Nashville main line to a drove of cows. The engine and all of the freight cars left the track. Fireman Mulwilder was caught between the engine and the tender and scalded to death.

WILLIS IS HEARD FROM.

His Message Pleased the Administration, It Is Said.

DOLE DID NOT BELIEVE THE RUMOR

Although Warned, the Hawaiian Provisional Government Evidently Did Not Credit the Report That the Queen Was to Be Restored—The Alameda's News.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Secretary Gresham received a cipher message from Minister Willis giving a complete report of the Hawaiian situation up to the departure of the Alameda from Honolulu. The message was put on the wire at San Francisco as soon as it arrived there. Being in cipher, it required several hours to translate it, and then it was at once taken to President Cleveland, who read and discussed it with several members of the cabinet.

What Willis Says.

As to the exact contents of the message no one outside of the president and his cabinet knows. It is a closely guarded state secret and will be held until the president desires it to be made public. The fact that the message was received was given out, however, and it was also stated as meant that Minister Willis was highly satisfactory not only to President Cleveland, but to Secretary Gresham and the other members of the cabinet.

Minister Willis, it is understood, has been carrying out his instructions to the letter, and the results up to the hour of departure of the dispatches indicate that the administration had anticipated they would be.

This is interpreted by officials outside of the cabinet to mean that Minister Willis had completed all the arrangements for the restoration of Queen Lilliuokalani to the Hawaiian throne.

The dispatches which came on the Alameda seem to indicate to the officials of the administration what they have heretofore asserted—that the provisional government still exists, and it feels that it is backed by the moral support of the United States, and that thus far its acts have been approved by this government. This is interpreted to be the case, because the dispatches say that members of the provisional government do not credit the report by way of New Zealand that President Cleveland intends to restore Queen Lilliuokalani.

At the same time it was plainly evident that the armed resistance to the royalists which the provisional government was making gave the officials of the administration no little concern.

No News Until Dec. 7.

Secretary Gresham having refused to say anything in reply to that portion of the news which stated that Minister Willis had said that no action would be taken until he had communicated with the American government by the Alameda and received a reply, there is great speculation as to the character of the dispatch received. It is probable that the state department has no desire to make any disclosures of these dispatches until after the whole affair is disposed of. Only by intimation were the contents of foreign dispatches been learned except as to the assurance given that they showed that matters had progressed in the Hawaiian islands as the administration expected and that everything pointed to the restoration of the queen some time during this week.

The new of the revolution in Honolulu will be looked for with special interest. The earliest date at which this news can reach the outside world by ordinary channels is Dec. 7. The Warimoo was due in Honolulu yesterday and will steam from there to Auckland, New Zealand—a two weeks' trip. This would bring her to Auckland on the 7th, and there is a cable thence to Australia and from there to India and around the world to the United States.

The state department is also sending out copies of the report of Minister Blount on the Hawaiian revolution to some of the members of the senate, with personal notes to that effect. Senator Sherman, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, has received them to give the report careful perusal. The document was in every case sent in registered envelopes and was marked "confidential."

Webster's Encyclopædic Dictionary.

It contains Webster's Unabridged Dictionary with Dennison's Patent Finger-tip Index.

"NOTE"—In the revision of Webster's grand work it has become the fashion to throw out what are called "Encyclopædic" words. Well, as the Dictionary is a "Work of Reference," we hope the original work intact.

It also contains a supplement of about 10,0 pages with a complete finger-tip index. This supplement gives the pronunciation and definition of 25,000 words which Webster's Unabridged 1 ictionaries, not 25,000 more than are contained in either, and 25,000 more than are contained in the International.

OFF FOR THE WAR.

Lieutenant O'Halloran Tells What He Will Do to Mello.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—Lieutenant T. M. O'Halloran, nautical expert of the United States hydrographic office in New York city, who is to sail for Brazil in charge of the Britannia, was in Pittsburg, bidding old friends goodby previous to his departure for the scene of conflict in the Brazilian revolution.

In an interview Lieutenant O'Halloran said: "The plan of attack decided upon by Peixoto will be to force a surrender of blow up the insurgent fleet. It is a well known fact that the rebel strength lies wholly in its fleet and that its land forces are so small as to be not worth considering. The Nictheroy and the Amerios will not be expected to combat Mello's ships single handed.

"Before reaching Rio, at the rendezvous agreed upon, these two vessels will be joined by the Riachuelo and the Benjamin Constant, two armor plated French vessels, fully equipped, and 30 first class torpedo boats. This will make a strong fleet, and it will proceed to Rio harbor to do battle with the rebel admiral.

"If Mello should see fit to stick to his position in the harbor, the Nictheroy will anchor behind a projecting portion of the mainland at the harbor mouth, within easy range of Mello's fleet, but out of range of its projectiles, and from this point of vantage will pour its charges of dynamite into the insurgents. Should Mello attempt to come out into the open sea and fight it out, he will be given a reception calculated to startle him."

MRS. HALLIDAY'S ANTICS.

Tried Starvation and Then Attempted to Set Her Cell on Fire.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Lizzie Halliday, the triple murderess, confined in the Monticello jail, is endeavoring to defeat the ends of justice by trying to take her own life. Since her fruitless efforts to strangle the sheriff's wife she has resisted the taking of any kind of solid food and seems resolutely bent on starvation. Dr. F. A. McWilliams, the jail physician, has pumped food into her stomach for four days past under a strong protest on her part.

Finding that she could not starve herself, she endeavored to end her life by firing the jail. A coal stove had been placed in her cell, which is the only means of warming it. She ignited the bed clothing from the burning coals and was only frustrated in her plans by the arrival of the sheriff, who found her cell in flames. Anticipating such an act, he had placed a barrel of water in close proximity to the cell door, and with the aid of the jail prisoners the fire was extinguished. A night and day watch is now kept over her to keep her from burning herself and the other inmates of the jail.

Threw His Life Away.

TOM'S RIVER, N. J., Nov. 24.—Chateau Larned, 19 years of age, committed suicide at his home in Barnegat Park while crazed with the thought that he had accidentally shot and killed his friend, C. Harry Kittridge. Larned was the only son of the late General P. S. Larned, a paymaster in the regular army. He was living here with his widowed mother and several sisters.

Fire In Allentown.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—A fire in Allentown, Pa., caused a loss of $20,000.

DETROIT'S FATAL FIRE.

Three Persons Dead, and Five Are Missing.

THE CLERKS CAGED IN THE STORE.

The "Fireproof" Structure of a Big Dry Goods Establishment Burned Like Tinder—Some Jumped and Were Killed. Roasted Before the Eyes of a Crowd.

DETROIT, Nov. 24.—One of the worst fires that Detroit has experienced in many years completely destroyed the five story building at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Bates street, occupied by Edson, Moore & Co., wholesale dry goods merchants, and damaged several adjacent buildings, causing a total loss of $700,000. Three men employed by the dry goods firm lost their lives in the flames, and five others who are missing are also supposed to have perished.

Dead and Missing.

The dead are:
James McKay, clerk, aged 26.
Bradley A. Dunning, porter, aged 45.
S. Gardner, entry clerk, single, aged 28.
The missing are:
Edward N. Voigt, order clerk.
Patrick Markey, aged 32; leaves widow and three children.
Daniel A. Baker, clerk.
Henry Rider, packer.
Charles W. Kirshner, clerk.

So quick was the work of the flames that in half an hour the building was completely gutted, practically only the firmly bolted iron front remained standing. For an hour the department fought with a fire which fairly defied their efforts. The blaze first broke out on the sixth floor, and it looked as though the fire would be kept in subjection, but the flames spread as quickly as though the building was a great wooden structure. At the time it was erected it was said to be fireproof, but the interior burned like tinder, and the heat from the fierce caldron was felt over half a block away.

Burned Like Tinder.

At general alarm was turned in, which called out the entire fire department of the city. A strong wind blowing from the southwest carried the sparks and embers flying everywhere, and it was feared that other fires would break out. Luckily the flames were confined mainly to the dry goods building, which was entirely consumed, and considerable damage was done to adjoining structures.

The saddest feature was not the destruction of property, however, but the loss of life. Long before the many engines responded to the general alarm two men could be seen on the window sills of the fifth story on the Bates street side of the building. A groan went up from the crowd, which in a moment realized the awful peril of the unfortunates and saw but too plainly what little chance there was to render effectual assistance. So rapid had the flames progressed that the men undoubtedly had to the time to get out of the building. Caught like rats in a trap, with the flames roaring above and beneath them and spreading every moment, with the smoke behind them thickening in suffocating volumes, the unfortunates were fairly driven to the window sills. There they clung. The crowd shouted: "Don't jump! Don't jump! Help is coming!" But even as those below called out their words of useless encouragement the flames behind them advanced and burst around them.

A bale of jute was procured by the spectators and placed below the window in which Bradley Dunning was perched. Driven by the flames which roared around him, he sprang from the window and landed on the bale. He bounded off and fell to the sidewalk, where he lay limp and apparently lifeless. An ambulance carried him to the hospital, where he died soon after.

Back Into the Flames.

By this time the firemen who had arrived spread a net to catch McKay, who fell into it. His injuries were such that he died soon after being taken to a hospital. Hardly had this double tragedy transpired than another man was seen near the upper window nearest the corner. He was evidently nearly suffocated, for although he succeeded in reaching the sill his strength apparently gave out, and after another effort to raise himself—one arm having been thrown over the sill—he slowly sank back and disappeared from view, being swallowed up in the fury behind him. He is thought to have been Edward Genther.

After the firm established temporary headquarters and opened a register all employees who reported signed the roll. By comparing notes it became evident that Genther, Rider, Voit, Markey, Baker and Kirchner were missing.

Next to the dead and missing the chief topic of conversation was the remarkable suddenness with which the fire broke out and swept through the building. Men on the second and third floors had barely time to escape and if lost their lives. The fire ate down through the floors to the ground with inconceivable rapidity.

The elevator boy says that when the fire broke out he left the elevator for several minutes at the top floor and begged the employes there to get in and go down, but they seemed so rattled and excited that they paid no attention to him. He finally went down alone and left them to their fate.

It is thought that the flames started in a lot of cotton bagging on the top floor used for packing. How the fire was ignited is not known.

WINNOWED WIRINGS.

The Imperial crownbearer of Russia is dead.

Governor Flower has refused to pardon Stanis Walden.

The wife of Count Herbert Bismarck has given birth to a daughter.

California redwood lumber manufacturers have combined to raise prices.

Kristian Kortzard, president of the defunct State bank of Minneapolis, has been indicted.

Six masked men held up a trolley car near Latonia, Ky., and robbed the conductor and motorman.

Football at the United States Military academy has received the formal sanction of the war department.

Governor Flower refused to grant the appeal of the relatives of John Delino, the Brooklyn murderer, to commute his sentence.

Lord Sholto Douglas, a son of the Marquis of Queensberry, was fined 50 shillings for raising a disturbance in the Alhambra Music hall, London.

The police and militia were called out in Spokane, Wash., to disperse a mob which threatened to blow up public buildings because work on the waterworks had not been begun.

CRISIS AT MELILLA.

Mulay, the Sultan's Brother, In Conference With the Spanish.

MADRID, Nov. 24.—The news from Tangier tends to dispel the hopes of an early settlement of the troubles at Melilla. It is reported that the sultan's brother has no authority to negotiate in regard to the question of the amount of indemnity that shall be paid to Spain, and doubts are expressed with reference to his influence over the natives.

A divergence of opinion has arisen within the cabinet regarding the prudence of the instructions given to General Marcias to reopen hostilities, which, some of the members think, are calculated to cause the postponement of the indemnity for years.

It is feared that this difference of views will lead to a crisis and a temporary reconstruction of the cabinet, in which General Martinez Campos will play an important part.

News was received from Melilla that a tent was pitched outside the walls of Melilla for a conference. Muley Araaf, the sultan's brother, arrived, accompanied by an escort bearing white flags and the sultan's red flag. A conference between Muley Araaf and the governor was opened immediately.

Voorhees Sustains Cleveland.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 24.—In an integview with Senator Voorhees he said, relative to the Hawaiian question, that if the evidence be true with reference to ex-United States Minister Stevens' action, the action of Secretary Gresham had placed the present administration on solid ground and that this government could not rightfully do other than it had done. Senator Voorhees also said he was not, as has been reported, preparing a speech attacking the administration's pension policy.

The Big Steel Combine.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—Additional information about the new steel rail pool shows it to be more extensive than was at first suspected. In addition to leasing the steel rail plant at Sparrow's Point, Md., the new pool has also leased the Pennsylvania Steel company's plant at Steelton, Pa. These two plants, which employ about 5,000 men, will be kept closed indefinitely.

Will Sell Bottled Gas.

ALBANY, Nov. 24.—Saratoga Springs is liable to have fame in another direction. There has been incorporated a company which proposes to sell bottled and tanked gas obtained from the natural sources. The projectors claim that the sea of mineral water under Saratoga contains an immense quantity of gas and that it can be obtained by boring.

Football Pleasantries.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—In a game of football on Berkeley oval between the Cutler and Berkeley shevens the latter were victorious by a score of 30 to 8. Left Halfback Brower was caught in a scrimmage, and during the interference which followed he was kicked in the head accidentally and was unconscious for an hour.

Cronin Case Sensations.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—State Attorney Kearns says that he has unearthed startling evidence which he thinks will enable him to secure the conviction of two men besides ex-Detective Daniel Coughlin, now on trial charged with complicity in the murder of Cronin.

STRICTLY DOMESTIC.

WIVES WHO ARE TOO MUCH ABSORBED IN HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS.

Husbands Are Sometimes Driven to Seek Relief at the Club From Those Who Should Bring and Get Discouraged Through Failure to Enlarge the Field of Thought.

The union of many couples would appear to be rather a dissunion, as rarely are they seen together, so little have they to show in common. Such of their neighbors and acquaintances as take it on themselves to criticise their relation are apt to blame the husband for neglecting his wife, for seeking recreations and pleasures in which she cannot share. While the blame may in such cases be generally deserved, it is not always. There are women, and not a few, so absorbed in their own home, in their children and all household details, as to leave small space for any large consideration of their husbands. They are the women known as entirely, strictly domestic. Such men, however exacting matrimonially, could ask for more physical comfort, for ampler supervision of his material concerns, than they provide.

The husband and father is inseparable from the home, is part of the household and is included therefore in their idea as well as their ideal of domesticity. But their idea does not embrace his intellectual needs, his wholesome appetite for variety, his reminiscent love of his early married days. Toward these ideals, as they think, in a narrow round of practicalities. They are supreme housewives and most devoted mothers. They look after everything themselves or for a pittance, leaving the drudgery to servants, but acting as constant supervisors. Having no executive power, they are without faith in subordinates, and as a result they are overwhelmed with tasks that they might better have delegated to others. They are acquainted with the exact condition of the larder and their sons' and daughters' wardrobes, and they plume themselves immensely on such knowledge. It belongs to their domesticity, about which they are really flattered, and of which they are ever prating.

The virtue of domesticity indeed, as they practice it, acquires a strong seasoning of vice—at least in the eyes of their husbands, who can seldom draw them away from its contemplation. However domestic a husband may be, he can hardly be so severely domestically, domestic as a wife will become after following and stimulating her bent for years. He usually wants some distraction, some hint of novelty, some whiff of the outer world. He cannot always listen with interest to the daily epic of untrial cares and trials. The recital of discords in the kitchen, of tradesmen's exorbitant bills, of the children's ailments, have their limit of fascination. If he is not impelled in self defense to seek the club and kind oblivion, which is a negative solace, he goes to a neighbor's, to an adjacent hotel where his professional or business associates resort, or to the club, for company or entertainment. But he does not generally adopt such remedies for relief—men who marry intelligently are usually weary of their household and he has tried to beguile his wife out of her settled moods and occupations.

Day after day, week after week, month after month, he has probably listened to give a new direction to her thoughts, a fresh purpose to her life. Believing that there is an outdoor world not less than an indoor world, that domesticity is a concentration of those things that animate the universe, he is pretty likely to attempt to wean her from its engrossment by various devices. He may have offered to lend her a new volume of travels or essays, the last clever novel or record of travel in strange lands. He may have urged her to read to him some of the delightful things they pored over, head to heart, in their wooing time or their honeymoon. He may have invited her to short evening strolls they first knew and loved of, to hear music, to see plays, to take journeys endeared by association. She has not, by any means, invariably declined. In truth, she has often proposed a warmth that her warmth loomed as she fulfilled her acceptances.

When read to, she grew drowsy. When she read herself, she was soon tired. After one or two strolls, she found that she had neglected some household duty. Music made her nervous. The theater wearied her. Journeys interfered with the maternal plans she had formed. "After all," she sighed, "there's no place like home;" and her husband, fully realizing the literal truth of her declaration and that he really bores her by his laudable efforts to enlarge her sphere, relinquishes his object with sorrow and mortification.

"Why, then, for the impossible?" he mentally asks.

There are aggravations of domesticity that refuse to be cured. Asked to prevent himself from irritation in them he feels that he must pursue his own course. He hesitates; he delays for awhile. Being wholly loyal and conscientious, pursuits of his own course seem at first like partial desertion. He renews his overtures to alleviate the pressure of his wife's exclusiveness. Asked to accompany her somewhere, declined; yet still declined. He quickly and clearly perceives that she is more contented in her self imposed bondage than in the comparative freedom he has vainly sought to press upon her.

It may be true that man can never secure liberty enough, and that woman may readily have too much for her own comfort.

The mass of husbands, it may be conceded, are not afflicted by domestic, but many, reasonably, healthfully domestic at the outset, have certainly been healed by the excessive domesticity of their wives. And they have appeared erratic, inconsistent, unmaritat, from that cause. They have been harshly judged, too, and will continue to be.

It is a thousand pities that a man really inclined to domesticity should ever be made a whit less domestic by a constrained interpretation of the constituency, on the part of his wife, of its many and diversified beauties.—Junius Henri Browne in Harper's Bazar.

A Pretty Conceit.

Mrs. Van Rensselaer Crugar's home, Idlesse, on Long Island, has its guest-rooms furnished after flowers, each following in its title, designs of hangings and the like some particular blossom. Then, so far as possible, a guest is treated with the charming courtesy of an environment of her favorite flower. Can the poetry of hospitality be carried further than this?

A MODERN SPARTACUS.

Younger Than the Original, He Is None the Less Eloquent.

In a deep recess of the down town saloon a little band of gladiators were crowded together. Their muscles were grown flabby from lack of exercise, and the foam of the beer still lingered on their lips. After a painful pause, in which no sucker arrived to spend his sestrces upon their drinks, O'Sullivancus arose and thus addressed them:

"Ye call me champ'n, and ye do well to call him champ'n who for 15 long years has not in the newspapers every form of human beast that could get touching enough ter send er tellygram an yet never closed his mont'. An if eany uv yous blokes t'ink I can't hit as hard as I kin talk let 'im put up 'is stuff; see? an sign articles for a go wid de gloves for de stake munny. An yet I wan't allus in dis shape—a chunnin windbag, a bluffin stiff. Before de gurv'ners an sheriff's began ter jump on our necks I win lots er dee in straight fightin an spent it like a gentleman.

"But now, indeed er bein lugged round on de shoulders uv plug hat sports, we've handid over to turnkeys an uther minyons of the law that we never user pay no 'tention to, excepin slavin a lenerd or two to der cheef er perlice if he was inclined ter git funny. An now it's gittin so de papers don't say more'n six lines well stacked up afore the gurv'ners come out wid a swift talk ter ketch the churchies, and the play's off afore the stake munny's posted.

"Today I met a mate uv mine on de avenoo, an w'en I struck 'im for a fiver 'e knew me, but 'e didn't see me. He grinned, slickylike, gasped an quit. We can't fight, as it's gittin to where talkin don't count. We gotter make a break for de stoige, see?" —Detroit Tribune.

Innocent Mr. Tompkins.

"Mistah Tompkins, has yo' bin to the Christian anthem show at de Abt museum store?"

"Yes, Mr. Johnsing, I has, an I wish yo' hadn't axed me nuffin 'bout it, 'cose I'd wish to disremember de fac' dat I was dere."

"Why, what's de 'casion fo' regret? Didn't yo' 'joy de show?"

"Well, I did the fus' part of de ebenin, 'cose I had Miss Lucinda wid me."

"Well, undah dem circumstances I don't see as yo' could hab 'joyin yo'se'f," and Mr. Johnson heaved an envious sigh.

"You see, Sam, as I ought, I did, but you see I done put my foot in it." Mr. Johnson looked at Mr. Tompkins' feet and expected no further explanation, but Tompkins went on:

"Yo' see, Luciada were dressed in an amber called gown, and when I done send dat beautiful variety called de 'Bronze Giant' I see kin o' sentimental like I here Sam winced), 'Cindy, dat Christian anthem 'minds me ob you some way.' But she done flew up de chimbly right off, and says she, 'I done task you, Mistah Tompkins. I knowed I didn't hab on a brass' new gown jess from Worthington's, but I hope I'm not so ragged as dat heaven thing,' as she turn on her heel as marched off, an den I noticed dat her gown were a little fringy. But I didn' mean nuffin," and Tompkins walked sadly off, leaving his friend deep in thought.—Chicago Tribune.

Cause For Congratulation.

Briggs—Girls are queer things, aren't they?

Griggs—Very. But what makes you say so?

Briggs—I was thinking of Miss Rodbud, I happened to meet her on the avenue yesterday about noon, and having a few cold bones in my pocket and being inspired by her new tailor made gown, I asked her into Del's.

Griggs—Did she accept?

Briggs—At first she said she didn't care for anything, and then she said she believed she did feel a little faint. Say, old man, did you ever take a girl out to lunch when she felt a little faint?

Griggs—No. Did she eat anything?

Briggs—Did she eat anything! Well, sir, that girl grabbed the menu, took a lightning glance at it, and she wasn't feeling very hungry, and then she ordered—

Griggs—Well, what did she order?

Briggs (impressively)—She ordered clams and bouillon, lobster cutlet, sweetbreads and peas, chicken a la Maryland, shrimp salad, biscuit glace, macaroons, coffee and a creme de menthe. Great Scott! It cost me $14.

Griggs (thoughtfully)—Well, old fellow, you ought to be glad.

Briggs—Glad! What for?

Griggs—Why, glad that she wasn't hungry.—Harper's Bazar.

A Philosophical Millionaire.

Attorney—If you leave all your property to your second wife, your children will certainly try to break your will.

Rich Client—Of course. That's what I want them to do. I want them to have their full share of my money.

"Then why bequeath it all to your wife?"

Not Altogether a Stranger.

"I s'pose I'll have to go and get somebody to identify me before you'll cash this check," said the man at the bank cashier's window doleefully, "and I'm a stranger in this town. There ain't a soul here that knows me."

"Your name," replied the cashier, after a moment's inspection of his caller, "is Ambrose Haybreaker."

"That's right!" exclaimed the other in surprise. "How do you know my name?"

"You were cured of nervous exhaustion and kidney disease of 11 years' standing," was the reply, "by taking 14 bottles of Blankham's Sarsaparilla, price $1 a bottle, sold by all druggists, some genuine without the name of the manufacturer in raised letters on the bottle," continued the cashier, raising his voice and speaking with growing irritation, "and a cure guaranteed in all cases where taken according to directions or money cheerfully refunded, hand over your check and be quick about it, $50, all right, here's your money, and I'll give you $10 more if you'll find some way to get the publishers of The Advocate of Gospel Liberty that I've been taking for the last 25 years to quit printing your portrait in their advertising columns, I've seen it every week for 19 months, and I'm tired to death of it, and if you haven't any other business you can take your money and go good afternoon!"—Chicago Tribune.

THE MEN'S GREEN TEA.

SUCCESS CROWNED THE EFFORTS OF TRINITY REFORMED MEN.

Woman's Queen of Beverages Made and Dispensed by Men -They Proved Themselves not Green at it by any Means SUCCESS crowned the efforts of the men of the Trinity Reformed church in giving a green tea last night.

The lecture room of the church was filled to overflowing, a number being unable to procure seats. The gentlemen who gave the tea were decorated in various ways with green. Some wore sashes of green, while others wore green neckties. The entertainment was given for the benefit of the Sunday-school fund and it is needless to say that it was enlarged.

The programme consisted of singing by several of the men and recitations by Master Albert Ford.

BREVITIES.

—To-night a song service will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—Mr. Edsall's announcement on page four to-day is of special interest to ladies.

—The employees of the Railway Co. were notified yesterday that their wages were to be reduced.

—All young men interested in the study of applied mechanics should call at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-night.

—The members of Gazelle Engine Company will take their apparatus out for a "wash" Thanksgiving Day.

—Allen's stage collided with the Somerset street car last night. The horse had no driver, and getting scared, ran into the car.

—Mr. White says if you doubt it a visit to his store will prove that he is offering the greatest values in goods that you want at this time of the year.

—Yesterday afternoon a horse belonging to Mr. William C. Smith, the mason, ran from in front of the school house on Somerset street, where it had been left standing, to its home on Grandview avenue. No damage resulted.

The Republican Councilmen Candidates.

In the selection of its public officials the Plainfield Republicans have shown a due regard for experience in municipal affairs. When they select for Councilmen-at-large, Messrs. John B. Dumont and E. N. Erickson, and the third of three men on the ticket—though new and inexperienced—is good company, and with his good record is not likely to go amiss.

Of the other names, Councilman Bird has been a tried and faithful official ready and willing to do whatever was to be done; Councilman Frost also is already in his term, and has proven himself a most valuable member especially in relation to the sewerage question, he being an expert in such matters.

Mr. Stockton has the enthusiastic confidence of his friends in a ward in which a nomination on the Republican ticket means an election.

Mr. Magee, the candidate from the Fourth Ward, is the choice of a locality which is gradually coming around to the Republican column, and has shown considerable activity, especially at the last city election.

PERSONAL.

Miss Josie Cadmus starts for her home in Virginia to-day, after a pleasant visit with relatives on Duer street.

Mr. Aden Boice has recently bought the house 404 West Third street, corner of Central avenue, from a western lady.

Mrs. Andrew E. Keeney has returned to her home on Manning avenue, after a visit of one week with Mr. and Mrs. James C. Keegan of New York.

Mr. Joseph Schermerhorn of Trenton, a brother of Manager Charles Schermerhorn of the Western Union Telegraph office, was in Plainfield to-day, in the interests of a commercial hose and shoe house.

Riding Club of Young People.

A young people's riding club is being organized in this city by the younger equestrians. The club will take its first ride on Thanksgiving Day at two o'clock in the afternoon. A ride across country will be given and all who are interested in such a club, are invited to attend. The start will be made from in front of the Crescent Riding Academy.

A Costly Loaf of Bread.

A horse belonging to Henry Voebl of Somerset street ran away while Mr. Voebl was delivering a loaf of bread at a house in a country route about Warrenville. When the horse stopped running about the only part of the wagon undamaged was the step.

The wagon was new and had only just been received from the factory.

Two Brakemen Reported Killed.

In a wreck of a coal train on the Central Railroad at Lebanon, this morning, it is reported that two brakemen were killed and a number of cars demolished.

The Weather.

The weather to-morrow promises to be generally clear and slightly colder, followed by a slight rise of temperature.

WON BY 14 PINS.

THE N. J. A. C. DEFEAT THE PARK CLUB LAST EVENING.

A Close and Exciting Game.—What it Looked Like to a Novice at Bowling.—The Way the Players Enthused.—Spelling Classes and Incantations.—Charming Ladies as Mascots.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

N WASHINGTON avenue is a cheerful place for social life known as the Park Club House. Last evening I wandered in there out of cold moonlight and saw a match bowling game between two powerful clubs in the bowling field, named respectively "The New Jersey Athletic Club," and "The Park Club."

Bowling is a wonderful game. Let me explain my newly acquired knowledge. There is a long lane of highly polished hard-wood, with a boy and some clubs—or nine-pins as they call them—at one end, and the bowler at the other.

The bowler takes a huge, solid wooden ball, and then he and the boy have a contest. The bowler keeps knocking the pins down, the boy with equal celerity replaces them. That seems to be the main point in bowling.

Each bowler has some little peculiarity. A tall, good-looking, stiff young man, a member of the New Jersey Athletic Club, after he had bowled, would place his hands on his hips and stand looking at the end of the alley as if wondering how that boy at the other end always managed to escape, or his regret may have been because one, or two pins were still standing and he would have to roll another ball at them.

Then a broad shouldered, deep chested, young man, who, before the game, was shaking hands most cordially with everyone, when he bowled would make his fingers snap, in a very odd sort of way, if he failed to upset every pin with the first ball. When he did this his friends would say consolingly, "Never mind Peter, old man, that's an easy spare." A "spare" seemed to mean that the bowler had a good chance to knock over the remaining pin or pins with the spare balls.

Then another bowler, in a white sweater, when bowling, would pass his left leg over in front of his right and hold it there in suspense while the ball rolled toward the pins. If he missed, his friends would remind him. "Take every pin, Ben, we need them all."

There was another Park Club player who frequently knocked down all the pins, and the spectators would then shout to each other "Oh, what an eye!" "Good eye, Sam!" and other personal remarks. I looked, at the first opportunity, at this gentleman's eyes, but they seemed the same as other mortals have, except they were very bright and keen.

Players of both sides would occasionally knock over every pin. This seemed a signal for a round of spelling class. One group I noticed was composed of a Mayor, another intellectual man named Evans, and several other leading lights of the Borough. This class, evidently, had just mastered some difficult word. I got up close to hear what it was. They were so tickled because they knew it that they commenced first "Hooray! Hooray! Hooray!" then they spelled the word "P-A-R-K."

Another group of business men would affirm in chorus, "We know our Business!" This remark was repeated after every good play, with such marked emphasis, that the visiting team evidently thought it some "Hoodoo" phrase, and they instantly got their heads together and started some incantation to the "Bowling Spirit," which ended always in a wild yell, a sort of signature to their petition "N. J. A. C."

On a blackboard cabalistic marks were made after each play. This they termed the "score." Among the group of charming ladies who added brightness to the game, by their presence, and were evidently looked upon as "mascots" was one who also had a book in which the strange figure marks were made.

The scores at the end of the game showed the following:

N. J. A. C.		PARK CLUB.
Duryee	181	Lyman	207
Cole	169	Sanford	144
W. VanWinkle	158	Reed	155

Day	167	Matthews	134
	1,588		1,574

The New Jersey Athletic Club won by 14 pins.

"GUARDSMAN."

Woman's Relief Corps to have Visitors.

On Friday night of next week the Woman's Relief Corps will meet and elect officers for the ensuing year. The Corps also expects a visit from the Rahway Corps on that night. The Winfield Scott Post has been invited to attend the meeting after the routine business is transacted.

How Plainfield is Interested in the Brazilian Revolution.

Several gear wheels and other machinery needed to work the guns of the Brazilian warships "Niotheroy" and "America" were made in the Pond Machine Tool Works and shipped a short time before the "Niotheroy" sailed.

IS THIS AN INDICATION?

Two Italians are Taken Sick and Quit Work.

It is reported among the workmen that Thursday afternoon, two Italians, of the gang imported from small-pox ridden Elizabeth and at work on the old ball-ground on Somerset street, left work at about two o'clock, too sick to continue. The other workmen can only surmise what ailed them.

It will be seen that The News has probably not called attention any too quick to the danger of these fellows spreading the dread disease among us.

The Health Plainfield Board of Health is investigating the matter. A physician was on the grounds yesterday.

After the alarm we have given there is no doubt but the gang will be closely watched. The trouble is that they usually reside beyond the Borough Board of Health's jurisdiction, and the disease might break out among them and no one in the Borough become aware of it. Our only safe-guard would seem to be to get the Italians away from the locality altogether, so that they cannot spread such a great contagion as they have already spread in Elizabeth.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

A report reaches us to-day that the Italians huddle together in a barn, where the disease, if started among them, is likely to spread.

The Union County Court found it necessary to close the term abruptly a few days ago from fear of the contagion the Italians have spread in Elizabeth, and yet they are allowed to come among us with impunity. Send them away. We don't want them to place the lives of our people in jeopary, because a contractor may, forsooth, save a few cents by their labor, and throw our own workmen out of employment to do so.

DUNELLEN AGAIN TO THE FRONT

Another 1500 Score Put up by its Team.

On the Dunellen alleys last evening the Dunellen bowling team won its second victory of the season. Their opponents were the Pioneers of Elizabeth, one of the strongest teams in the Journal League. The home team won by 154 pins. The score:

Three Italians from Elizabeth.

The Rev. W. S. Hoeymeyer, president of the Borough Board of Health, says Inspector Whiteley was sent to investigate the charge that Italians from Elizabeth were working on the new streets in the borough, and that Inspector Whitely found that there were Italians employed, but in keeping with being drunk on North avenue, was fined $2. An officers said Fox was riding a high bicycle, but the prisoner claimed he was not.

Fred Durand was tried on the charge of throwing a stone through the glass door in a Front street store. He was adjudged not guilty, and sentence was suspended.

Mary English and Ellen Rolleschock, charged with being disorderly and with using indecent language to Mrs. Mae Lennon, were adjudged guilty, and fined $5 each.

Mr. Crane's Last Appearance.

Mr. Crane's last address to men was given at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening. Mr. Crane is an evangelist of rare qualities, and his addresses appeal to a man's reason rather than his emotions. His illustrations also are well chosen and very striking.

To Hold Another Rally.

The Bethel A. M. E. church of Third street will hold a grand rally at Republican Hall, on Front street, opposite the post office, December 2. Strangers will be cordially welcomed. The public is cordially invited. Rev. T. A. V. Hunn, Pastor.

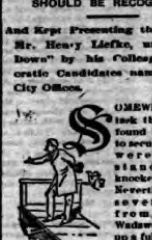
Winfield Scott Post to be Inspected.

Next Tuesday night Winfield Scott Post will make nominations for the election to take place on the first meeting night in December, at which time the Post will be inspected by the oldest Post Commander present.

"NICK'S" NOMINATIONS.

HE DETERMINED THAT HIS MAN SHOULD BE RECOGNIZED.

And Kept Presenting the Name of Mr. Henry Liefke, until "Called Down" by his Colleagues—Democratic Candidates named for the City Offices.



SOMEWHAT of a hard task the Democrats found it not to secure men who were willing to stand up to be knocked down. Nevertheless, after several suppositions from Chairman Wadsworth to make up a full ticket, candidates were found for the several city offices. Mr. L. M. Stover was chosen secretary of the meeting.

Mr. Wadsworth, in accepting the chairmanship, bragged of the Democrats not to be cast down by the recent defeat. "The Democratic party," he said, "has been in existence for 100 years, and although defeated has arisen again. If we go to the wall, let us go with our colors flying."

The following Committee on Credentials was appointed: Messrs. C. S. Loughlin, A. Saltzman, W. K. McClure and Ira G. Hartinds.

It was found that there were no delegates present from the Third Ward. Messrs. Joseph W. Yates, Samuel White and Frank Vose-Iman were appointed to take the place of the absent delegates.

Chairman Wadsworth announced that the first business to come before the Convention was the nomination of three Councilmen-at-Lage. The following nominations were made: D. C. Ivins, R. L. Barnett, Rowland Cox, B. G. Bowers and Henry Liefke. The last nomination was made by "Nick" Kelly, who insisted that Mr. Liefke was a candidate, notwithstanding James E. Martine's declaration to the contrary. In the few minutes intervening between the nominations and the appointing of tellers, "Nick," who seemed to have a little "jag" with him, nominated Mr. Liefke at least five times.

A motion was carried empowering the chairman to appoint one teller from each ward in accordance with the motion four men were appointed to act as tellers, as follows: Messrs. Gloak, Meyers, Yates and McCarthy.

No judge or inspectors were appointed as it was understood that the surplus tellers would act in that capacity. A ballot resulted as follows:

D. C. Ivins	20
R. T. Bugnett	18
P. Casey	18
Rowland Cox	21
H. Liefke	9
B. G. Bowers	1

Messrs Ivins, Casey and Burnett were declared the nominees.

For reasons all the wards announced "no nomination," but Judge Wadsworth's appeal to put up a full ticket had the effect of Mr. Frazee nominating Mr. Wm. R. Gardner, and the irresistible "Nick" Kelly placing in nomination his cand'te Henry Liefke. A ballot was taken and Mr. Gardner received 15 votes and Mr. Liefke 3.

As it was thought that "Nick" was making too many nominations a motion was made that no nomination be accepted unless it was seconded, whereupon Judge Wadsworth arose in his might and declared that by all parliamentary law every man had equal rights, and that such a motion could not be entertained. Mr. Kenney came to recognition at whether seconded or not. The attempt to shut off "Nick" had the desired effect however, and the only other nomination he made was that of Councilman Frazee for City Treasurer, which, of course, was declined.

For Collector Mr. Joseph M. Harper received the unanimous vote.

Mr. Aaron W. Rand was named for City Treasurer.

For Commissioners of Appeal Messrs. Jeremiah Manning and J. P. Taylor were the nominees.

The nominees for Freeholders were Messrs. J. Augustus Smith and James McCarthy.

For School Trustee there were three candidates named viz: Edward C. Perkins, the Rev. W. H. Richards and Peter Flynn, Jr.

When Mr. Richards' name was mentioned Mr. McClure said that as it was a Democratic Convention only Democrats could be voted for, and that Mr. Richards was a Republican they had no right to present his name.

Mr. Yates, who had presented the name of Dr. Richards, said: "I know the Democratic party as well as any man. My object is to strengthen the party. Dr. Richards, I believe, has cast a Democratic vote. I don't allow anyone to cast any reflection on my loyalty to the Democratic party. From experience I have found that it is perfectly useless to make up a ticket without giving it strength either at one end or the other. The school board ought not to have any politics in it. I have no direct authority to use Dr. Richards name, but my idea in presenting his name is to have a non-partisan and useful man to the Board, and to strengthen the ticket." When Mr Yates concluded a ballot was taken with the following result:

E. C. Perkins	15
Dr. Richards	6
Peter, Flynn, Jr.	1

Mr. Perkins was declared the choice of the Convention. Messrs. Rafferty, Meyers, Vosselman and Harding were appointed a committee to fill vacancies.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE

Death of a Centenarian

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 25.—Mary Tower, aged 100 years and four months, died this morning at Lorraine.

The Herald Now Running Fakes.

It is in order for correspondent F. W. Rumyon of the Courier to explain the column fake which he is credited with sending to the Herald as it appeared Thursday. It related a ridiculous story of a ghost at Warrenville. The owner of the property was in town Thursday, and visited Judge Coddington seeking redress at law. She says there is not a particle of truth in the story, as any intelligent person might be reasonably expected to know. In fact it is surprising that such an unsalty newspaper as the Herald would publish such rot. No other New York paper published it, though probably all received it.

A FREE CIRCUS.

TWO COLORED MEN AND A SQUIRREL AMUSE A CROWD.

The Squirrel and Two Lovers of it, up a Tree on Third Street, the "Star" Performers.—The Men Couldn't Shoot "straight and the Squirrel, After Some Acrobatic Antics Escaped.

HANDSOME "Hiney" and his little dog Sunday may have scared a plump and saucy gray squirrel out of some secure retreat Thursday afternoon, but, alone about twenty-five minutes, whoever the rogue, such an animal raised quite a commotion on Bas, Third street.

It was almost dusk when the squirrel and two colored men started a foot race, seemingly for the edification of the crowd which immediately gathered.

The spectators caused the squirrel to vary its programme and introduce a little fancy athletics up a tree.

The two individuals of sable hue licked their lips in anticipation. Then they started up the tree after the graceful acrobat above. That interesting animal turned a few handsprings, flirted its "brush" at them—and went a little higher. This continued until the supper hunters dared go no further and the gray squirrel was doing the balancing act on a fine twig many feet above.

The men held a consultation and then produced revolvers.

"Bang!" "Bang!" went first one and then the other.

The squirrel concluded, evidently, that an encore was in order and did the "silent swing"—skin-the-cat" and several other difficult acrobatic feats before meeting again. "Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!" "Bang!" The colored minstrels were getting hungry. The street was filled with spectators.

This continued applause with revolvers, meaning that the squirrel tired, for it scratched its head a moment and then as the firing continued, it did a few more stunts and leaped over the heads of the surprised darkeys, caught on a most invisible twig—a swing, and another leap, and, in an instant, it was on the ground and away. It ran toward the depot and disappeared. Only then was one of the disappointed hunters, all out of breath, remarked: "Sho out, dat ar pesky squirrel is runnin' fas' as no bode dat ar Royale Blue 'Spress train."

REFERRED IT TO CHILDS

He Declined, Though, to Arbitrate the Lehigh Strike.

TROOPS ARE HELD IN READINESS.

Mysterious Stocks of Dynamite Found in Rochester—Freight Engine Blowed by Roanoke Men Blows Up, and Three May Die—Freight Yard Being Cleared.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—The report that the general grievance committee had called upon General W. Childs to act as arbitrator in the trouble between the Lehigh Valley railway officials and their striking employes has been partially confirmed by Mr. Childs. He said that when the members of the grievance committee called upon him a day or two ago the subject was broached, but that he declined to serve in the capacity of arbitrator.

E. E. Clark, the official head of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, is speaking of the proposed arbitration of the strike, said that the conversation he and his colleagues had with George W. Childs had been misconstrued.

"What we did was this," said Mr. Clark. "We called on Mr. Childs to thank him for an editorial which had appeared in The Ledger on the subject of the strike and its causes. I wish to say that we have never gone into any fight that we have not been willing to submit to any fair minded man, as Mr. Childs is, or to talk it out on equal impartiality. This we explained to Mr. Childs, and he asked if we had any such man or committee in mind.

"I then told him that he was such a person and that we would be willing to submit our case to his hands. It was then he said he would not care to do anything of the kind. We did not ask him to ask him to act as arbitrator, but had he been willing to so act we should have been very well pleased, as his attitude on the labor question is very generally known."

Thirty-eight men were sent from here to Bethlehem, who are expected to go to work to-day. They were in charge of eight private detectives. One difficulty which confronts the railway officials is their inability to secure a sufficient number of competent freight conductors. Past Grand Operator Thurston, in speaking of the trouble anticipated by the railroad company and the application for troops, said: "There is no necessity, as far as the strikers go, for any fear as to their proper conduct. Our men will not interfere with the railway company nor with its new employees any further than to try in a peaceable manner to persuade them not to take the places of the strikers. This is our right. Our men have been instructed to go no further than that. Our reports all show that these instructions have been and are now being obeyed."

There is considerable bustle and hurry about the local armories here over the general orders for the men to hold themselves in readiness, with three days' rations, to move at once to the scene of any trouble that is likely to occur. The Sixth infantry of Chester and surrounding towns has also received such an order. The order is generally admitted to be purely a measure of precaution, but it has the appearance of business.

None of the railway officials here had any new information to give out, but reiterated that everything was going on very satisfactorily for them.

An Engine Blows Up.

BUFFALO, Nov. 25.—The Lehigh office in this city received information that engine No. 604 blew up in Rochester. The conductor Henderson and a fireman were seriously injured. They were nonunion men lately hired. The accident took place about 38 miles this side of Sayre. The engine was pulling an east bound freight.

Following the 10 trains of merchandise sent east over the Lehigh and containing 117 cars, three more freights were dispatched. This was considered to be a great day's work, and the officials said that it would be impossible to send out any more until the ability to move them to Sayre was manifested.

It was pretty well understood that the action of the engineers and firemen in the Nickleplate and Lake Shore yards in handling the west bound freights delivered to them made by the Lehigh Valley would be the subject for action. This freight was handled by nonunion men, and in accordance with the rules of the federation it should be boycotted by union men. It seems probable that the men on these roads will be asked to go out. The question of the hour is, "Will they do so?" If they should decide to join with their brethren on the Lehigh, the spread of the strike seems almost certain. Certainly the latest move on the Lehigh may be such as to encourage the men on other roads to go out. It is urged, on the other hand, that federated labor is in its "last ditch," and the fight must be made here and now.

From the hall where a number of the strikers were assembled could be seen the tracks of the Lehigh, with the trains moving easily westward. The men did not seem to be the least bit discouraged by the apparent raise of the blockade and stated that they would be reinstated within 48 hours.

Dynamite Cartridges Found.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 25.—Five dynamite cartridges, each about 8 inches long and 2 inches in diameter, were found under the platform leading to the police head last, about 100 feet away from the Lehigh tracks and a mile south of the passenger depot. They are not of the ordinary kind used in blasting, and none have been found in that neighborhood recently.

One of these cartridges would have wrecked a train of empty cars. They were tied together and evidently had been placed hurriedly there to hide them.

Officers are at work trying to ascertain who is responsible for the dynamite's possession. The strikers' committee disclaim all knowledge of the affair. Trains are still running irregularly, with no passengers. The company is still enrolling men to take the strikers' places. About 400 have so far been enrolled here.

Troops Not Ordered.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 25.—Adjutant General Greenland received a message from an official of the Lehigh Valley Railroad informing him that there was no disorder along the line and that no trouble was anticipated. The story that the troops have been ordered to the scene of disorders to Sayre in case of trouble is denied by the executive committee.

Written Threat Stones.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Beyond a single incident the day passed without excitement. It was caused by women and girl sympathizers of the strikers. An iron gate was hanging a couple of yards inward on incoming train. Story were soon hurled by a shower of stones and vituperation from the women. The alarm was had, so the officers escaped with a meagre lashing.

A Fight to a Finish.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 25.—The fight between the Lehigh Valley railroad and its employees is now on for a finish. The battle began to-day and for the first time. There was hope all along until yesterday that a compromise might be effected, but now that hope has vanished.

Wither Still Refuses.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 25.—The individual coal operators held another meeting and again declined to meet President Wither to enter into negotiations with the strikers, with a view of bringing about a settlement. Wither replied that he would open no negotiations with the strikers.

Reading Men Will Not Strike.

READING, Pa., Nov. 25.—A rumor which reached here that the Reading railroad employees might inaugurate a sympathetic strike in this region is without foundation so far as this city is concerned.

Strikers Are Quiet.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 25.—It was a quiet day at Sayre, and the strikers have almost entirely deserted the depot and yards.

THE ITALIAN CRISIS.

The Deputies Hooted Out of the Chamber With Cries of "Robbers!"

ROME, Nov. 25.—The current feeling both of the officials and the public is tending so strongly toward a ministry with Signor Crispi at its head that it is clear that a cabinet under any other man would not be likely to last long and might be dangerous to the tranquility of the country, which is weary of uncertainty and tentative measures and demands a strong government.

The excitement which followed the announcement in the chamber of deputies that the cabinet had resigned was equaled by the disgust which followed the announcement that until a new ministry was appointed he and his colleagues would conduct the business of the governments. A voice called out, "Robbers!"

At this all the ministers sprang to their feet in the wildest excitement and demanded almost in one voice, "Who said that?" It was discovered that the man who uttered the exclamation was a stranger. The ushers were thereupon ordered to clear the galleries. After this incident debate appeared impossible. There was an exchange of angry and uncomplimentary expressions between the ministers and the opposition, which finally led to the whole body of the opposition filing slowly out of the chamber, followed by deafening yells and shouts. The president then rose and declared the chamber closed.

King Humbert conferred separately with the presidents of the senate and the chamber of deputies.

The Italie says that the cabinet resigned in order to give the crown fuller liberty of action and to regain their own liberty, so that they could defend their conduct as members of the chamber of deputies. The Riforma says that never before has there been such a grave crisis in Italy or such an urgent need for a political solution.

Poured Molten Glass Over a Boy.

GLASSBORO, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Samuel Jones, a glass blower, became angry at his boy assistant, and filling a blowpipe with molten glass wound strands of the hot composition about the lad's hands and arms. The boy screamed in terror and Jones showed none. Finally his victim fell fainting. Jones continued pouring out the molten glass until the blowpipe was exhausted. It is feared the boy will die. Jones is under arrest. He has been noted for his ugly temper. The other blowers are threatening to lynch Jones.

Anarchists on the Warpath.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—An anarchist manifesto, printed on red paper, has been dispatched to Belgium, France and Spain, predicting vengeance for the execution of the Chicago anarchists and containing expressing regret that General Martinez Campos escaped Pallas' bombs. The manifesto says, "but the dynamite was not lost, as some of the subordinated ruffians of his suite were disemboweled."

Mother Burned to a Crisp.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 25.—Fire broke out in the residence of Mrs. Patrick Madden at Pittston. The women rushed out of the house, but remembered that her little daughter was asleep in an upper story room. The woman rushed through the smoke and fire, only to perish. The daughter was brought to safety. The mother was burned to a crisp.

Colored Tyson Will Be Tried.

READING, Pa., Nov. 25.—It has been definitely decided to try the charges of embezzlement and other alleged offenses in financial transactions preferred against A. H. Tyson, formerly a member of the governor's staff, during the week of criminal court, beginning Dec. 11. Tyson is still in jail here.

The Organ Grinder Must Die.

FONDA, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Pasquale Leonardi was sentenced to be electrocuted at Dannemora prison the second week of January. Leonardi murdered Aliva Di Cesare at Amsterdam on Sept. 13. He was an organ grinder and suspected Conover of having stolen his instrument.

A Coughlin Jury as Easy.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—The twelfth juror was secured for the trial of Daniel Coughlin, charged with murdering Patrick Henry Dr. Cronin. It has taken five weeks and the examination of 600 men to obtain a jury. The trial will begin at once.

NOTHING WILL BE TOLD

Administration Discusses Hawaiian Affairs in Secret.

CABINET TALKED OVER THE NEWS.

The Royal Family Yet Undecided Whether to Not Succeeded to Captain Any Definite Announcement of His Policy—The News Must Come From Honolulu First.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—If President Cleveland is disturbed over the Hawaiian situation, he does not show it. At the close of a long cabinet meeting Secretary Lamont remained with him for some time. Then Secretary Gresham called and remained a short time. After his departure the president and Mrs. Cleveland came down stairs and entered a carriage to take a drive in the crisp air. The president looked healthy and robust. His smile to those about the White House door indicated that the news which had been reported from the Pacific or any other place that disturbed him in the least.

There has been a general belief that the president would discuss the Hawaiian question in his message, and more interest than ever has been manifested in the document on this account. No news can be expected from Hawaii until after the message is sent to congress, and it was thought that in discussing the matter the president would necessarily refer to the instructions that had been given Minister Willis and inform congress of what he expected had taken place in the islands in view of the instructions.

But it was stated at the White House that this matter can easily be avoided by an allusion to the Hawaiian affair in the regular message, and the impression is that it will be treated in a special measure on the subject to be submitted when further expected information has been received.

Will Not Interfere.

This being the case, those who are awaiting a direct statement of the policy of the administration, further than which has been officially announced in the letter of Secretary Gresham to the president, will be disappointed. It has been stated several times at the state department that the administration desired that the news of its Hawaiian policy should come first from the other end of the line. That being the case, it was very likely that the president would not consider the matter until he had received more definite information as to what had been done. This would be entirely excusable, as nothing has been officially stated of the intentions of the administration, although it is known to be the intention to restore the queen.

With the matter still in doubt, and especially if the report from Honolulu be true that Minister Willis said he would wait until he received further instructions after the arrival of the Alameda before he took any decisive manner of action, there is no say that further information was necessary before the Hawaiian matter could be discussed by the executive. It seems very likely that anything done in the Hawaiian matters must come from the islands and not the administration.

It was stated after the cabinet meeting Secretary Gresham would consent to give out some additional information on Hawaii, but when seen in his office after the meeting he was very reticent, remarking men he said that he had no news to give out and seemed to resent even an inference that he had any information. There is good reason for believing that the dispatch received by the steamer Alameda was considered at the cabinet meeting. The considered at the cabinet meeting. The consideration of this dispatch, however, will determination not to enlighten the public any further on what it is proposed to do in Honolulu or what has already been done, but to wait for action upon the regular means of communication.

Sea Islanders Not Hungry.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Hamlin says that the state ment that the inhabitants of the Sea Islands, by reason of the destruction of their crops on account of the difference between the treasury department and the North American Commercial company as to the seizures of the latter for supplies furnished the natives during the past season, is without foundation.

Babe Visits the White House.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Baba Protep Mozoomdar of Calcutta, accompanied by Rev. Rush R. Shippen of the Unitarian church of the city, called at the White House. The babe, son of a king, is the leader of a religious sect in India, a disciple of Brahmoism and was the man who made the notable speech about the Brahmoism creed at the World's fair religious congress.

THEATERS BURNED.

Two Playhouses and a Hotel In Columbus Destroyed by Fire.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 25.—As the orchestra was playing the opening overture at the Harrietta theater for the opening of a play by the Felix Morris company the manager announced that there was a fire in the rear and requested the audience to quietly retire. All passed out in order. The fire originated in the auditorium and uncompleted portion of the structure and communicated to the theater proper.

It soon became evident that the new Chittenden hotel, which was a portion of the same structure, connected by a bridge, would also burn. Within two hours the whole of the quarter block had been burned over, entailing a loss estimated at from $600,000 to $700,000. Dickson & Talbott of Indianapolis were lessees of the Henrietta and opened in September, 1892, when it was completed.

They were also lessees of the Park theater in the same block, which was also consumed. A sensational drama was being presented by Gray and Stephens at the Park. The loss of Dickson & Talbott on both theaters will be about $10,000 and $15,000 respectively. The loss of Chittenden, the owner of the buildings, will be over $300,000. A firm which occupied business rooms in the building was the Ohio Savings and Trust company, whose loss will be about $5,000. A saloon, shoe house, drugstore and a small clothing house were completely destroyed.

The loss of Felix Morris & Co. is about $2,000 on wardrobes which burned. The fire takes from Columbus her best theater, her best hotel and a number of flourishing business enterprises. The ticket office of the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo Railway company was also burned out, with a comparatively small loss.

A man who was recognized as Andrew Armstrong, a stage hand who worked above the scenery, appeared at the fourth story window of the theater and cried for help. He was told not to jump, and he would be saved. He disappeared from the window and was not seen again. The walls of the theater fell in soon after. So far as now known Armstrong's was the only life lost.

The guests of the Chittenden hotel had ample time to escape, but few of them saved any property. The members of the company were dressed for their parts and fled in their costume clothes.

Governor McKinley lives at the Chittenden, but both he and Mrs. McKinley are in the east now. The private property of various members of the Felix Morris elements was saved by Captain H. O. S. Heistand of the regular army, who happened to be in the hotel.

POWDERLY LOSES GROUND.

All but One of His Candidates For the Executive Board Turned Down.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25.—General Master Workman Powderly backed water in the session of the general assembly of Knights of Labor and endeavored to placate the strong opposing forces by presenting a new list of delegates, from among whom four will be chosen for the general executive board.

Balloting for the new general executive board commenced early in the afternoon. V. B. McGuire of New York was the only one of the new nominees who succeeded in getting enough votes to elect him. Ballot after ballot was taken for the remaining seven men, but no result was reached. The election had to be declared suspended until today.

After adjournment there was a great gathering of claimants, and the claim of each nominee was pressed in the most effective manner. This was kept up even during the dinner hour and at the reception at Knights of Labor headquarters. The evening's festivities did not deter the delegates from arguing the pros and cons of the question and the qualifications of the candidates for office. It is said by those on the inside that if peace could be declared for a short time between the hostile factions the affairs of the order might be better looked after.

A resolution was presented and lost to make the executive board consist of only the master workmen, worthy foreman, secretary-treasurer and two members of the order. It was enacted that hereafter the secretary-treasurer shall act as secretary of the general assembly. At the hour of adjournment the delegates seemed determined to keep on with the fight against Powderly.

A Triple Shooting.

KANKAKEE, Ills., Nov. 25.—Jesse D. O. Smith, a former merchant of this city, murdered his divorced wife and a Mrs. Graybill and then shot himself. Both women were shot through the heart, and death was instantaneous. He shot himself in the right temple about three minutes before the sheriff arrived. Jealousy is the probable cause.

WILLIAM CAMP KILLED.

The Millionaire's Son Struck by an Express Train.

PARENTS WERE BOTH STRICKEN.

The Young Man Was on His Way Home to Dine and Stepped in Front of a Train. His Father Not Expected to Live.—Was a Prominent Football Player.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—William H. Camp, 21 years old, son of Hugh N. Camp, the millionaire real estate owner, whose home is at Fairlawn, four miles from Morris Heights, was instantly killed by an express train at the Morris Heights station of the New York Central railroad.

The young man was among the best known of college athletes in New York and was a member of the present football team of Columbia college, where he was an undergraduate. Yesterday he was in town as usual to attend to his college duties and to practice with the football team, in which he played right guard.

He left for home rather later than usual, expressing the intention of hurrying, so that he might reach Fairlawn in time for dinner.

Stepped In Front of the Train.

He caught the local train due at Morris Heights at 6:40 p. m., and it reached Morris Heights on time. He stepped from the train in front of a south bound express train. Bystanders saw him, and many shouted a warning, but it was too late.

The train was running at a high rate of speed, and before the least assistance could be given the pilot of the locomotive struck him with terrific force, throwing him 30 feet and killing him at once. The right side of his skull was crushed, and his nose, jaw and left leg were broken.

The express train, which was in charge of Engineer Kessted and Conductor J. Kelmer, was brought to a standstill, and the trainmen picked up the body with the intention of taking it to the Grand Central station.

Friends of the unfortunate young man who were on the train recognized the body, and upon their information that he lived near Morris Heights the idea was abandoned, and Policeman Corbley of the Morris Heights station, assisted by horrified friends of the young man, carried the body to the High Bridge station.

To Roundsman Back was assigned the sad duty of carrying the news to Fairlawn. The Camps had just finished dinner, and there had been some wonder expressed as to the nonarrival of William.

The mother, sister and brother of the dead man were in the room. The mother had a presentiment that something had happened to her son.

"Tell me," said she, turning pale, "has William been hurt at football?"

The policeman said he would prefer to tell the brother alone.

"No," said she, now thoroughly frightened, "I will not leave the room until I know."

The Father Stricken.

Then the brother asked whether it was true that William had been hurt in the field, and the policeman answered, "No."

"Has he—has he," faltered the mother, "been killed by a train?"

The tears ran down the policeman's face, and he was only able to nod his assent. The mother fainted. The father, who is an invalid and confined to his room, was utterly prostrated by the news.

He suffers from heart failure, and the doctor, who was quickly called to attend the stricken parent, regards his condition as critical.

Young Camp was one of the most popular men of his college class and was both an enthusiastic student and a skilled athlete. He weighed about 170 pounds, and in the football field he was regarded as an unusually active and careful player.

Mexicans Held For Ransom.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 25.—A report came from Las Cruces, N. M., that Guadalaupe Ascarato, with his brothers, were captured by the Mexican revolutionists between Ascension and Janos, and are held for a ransom of $10,000 each. The Ascaratos are very wealthy, and had just sold a big ranch property near Janos. It is said the money is demanded to carry on the present war against the government.

Two Fatal Burning Accidents.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 25.—A 6-year-old daughter of John Callahan was playing near a redhot stove when her clothing caught fire, and she was burned to death. At Columbia, Mo., Mattie Winn, aged 16, was ironing near an open fireplace. The flames communicated to her clothing, burning her so badly that she died in a few minutes.

Ex-Governor Jacob Died on the Street.

WHEELING, Nov. 25.—Ex-Governor John I. Jacob dropped dead on Twelfth street from heart disease. He was apparently in good health, and death came without warning while he was walking along the street. Governor Jacob was born in Hampshire county Dec. 9, 1822.

TODAY'S BIG GAME.

Springfield In Full of Yale and Harvard Football Enthusiasts.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 25.—There are great crowds of people here today to witness the big Harvard-Yale football match. The women are parading in blue and crimson stairs. The stores are displaying fresh and left over stocks of blue and crimson banners and huge baskets filled with fashions of sizes assorted to fit big lungs and little ones.

When the Yale team arrived on a special train from New Haven, an enthusiastic crowd was at the depot. The train consisted of four coaches, the first were filled with town and Y. M. C. A. students, and in the second the coachers and their invited friends, while the "rubbers," cooks, servants and waiters occupied the remaining car. Yale men, nearly every one of them giants in stature and looking fine and rosy, were received with enthusiasm by their friends and admirers.

The Yale men are the guests of the International Y. M. C. A. training school under the guardianship of F. N. Seeley, M. D., instructor of the physical culture class. Of course they are accompanied by their mascot, white haired Pop Smith.

The Harvard men were given an ovation upon their arrival. The train which brought them and their friends was in two sections, the last section being a special, and it was on this train that the Harvard team and students were.

There is every possibility that today's game will prove less interesting to the vast number of spectators than have the meets heretofore. For the past two seasons, and particularly since the introduction of the wedge, the plays of individual men, so interesting to the spectators, have become few, and the game has become the mass playing that prevents the ball from being seen by the spectator and productive of more injury to the player.

To Make Portland Impregnable.

A WONDERFUL NATIVE PLANT.

Flower Fanciers Are Directing Attention to the Cactus of Tropical America.

Of the exogenous plants called cactaceæ there are about 500 species known, all of which are natives of America. In noticing the Brooklyn Prospect park collection of about 3,000 plants, divided among over 100 species, and varying in size from the enormous "Cochineal cactus" down to the tiny "Button cactus," the New York Tribune comments as follows upon cactuses in general and one species in particular:

PHYLLOCACTUS LATIFRONS.

Many people regard these wonders of the vegetable kingdom as "horrid things," and with good cause. Some of the most awkward, ungainly shapes that ever a crazy botanist dreamed of are reproduced in a big cactus bed. For all that the plants are an interesting study, and the number of cactus fanciers is steadily increasing.

Phyllocactus latifrons is a species closely allied to the true night flowering Cereus grandiflorus. To a lover of flowers it is a treat to see a good, strong plant of the species laid out and flowers. The stem has few spines, short and soft, growing at regular intervals on the ridges, of which there are five. For weeks it will show no sign of life, and then there will come a swelling, generally near the top. This swelling will gradually open and a little woolly tuft appear. This may be a bud, or it may be a new shoot, and it takes several days before that point is settled. If it be a bud, when it has become about 6 inches long and somewhat lighter in color toward the end it should be watched, as it may bloom before any one is aware of it. The flowers usually open about 8 o'clock in the evening, and when once the end of the bud bursts the flower can be seen to swell and grow and spread out into a sweet smelling thing of beauty

Hollow House Walls.

In building brick houses where they are not protected by surrounding property it should be considered that hollow walls will add greatly to the convenience of the occupants. Hollow walls will render the house cooler in summer and warmer in winter, and will assist materially in keeping the house dry. The cost of hollow walls is only very little higher than that of walls built solid, says The Canadian Architect.

A Multiple Photograph.

Popular Science News tells that a New Jersey photographer has produced a photograph at a single exposure which gives five different images of the same person in different positions.

This is accomplished by placing the sitter between two mirrors placed at an angle of 45 degrees to each other. The double reflection between these mirrors produces four images of the person placed in front of them, the principle being the same as that of the ordinary kaleidoscope. The original face is made in profile, and the reflections give the full face, opposite profile and two rear views. The result is curious and interesting and, it has been suggested, would be useful in identifying criminals and an improvement upon the single photograph for that purpose.

FIVE VIEWS OF ONE PERSON.

Scientific Brevities.

The Eiffel tower is to be "put to sleep" Near London there is in process of construction a gigantic tower which is to overtop the Eiffel by 175 feet, and which, with its base 165 feet above the level of the sea, will reach 1,330 feet above sea level.

A gaseous compound of oxygen and hydrogen is the remarkable discovery reported from a German laboratory. This new substance is said to dissolve metal and to form powerful explosives with silver and mercury.

An advocate of electrical cooking claims that of every 100 tons of coal used in a cooking stove 95 tons go to waste.

The action of smoke upon the precious metals is to form an oxide which is hard to remove. Gold is soft and it absorbs easily, says a trade journal. Silver of the best quality becomes copper colored when left for any length of time in contact with an atmosphere laden with smoke.

Webster's Encyclopædic Dictionary.

It contains Webster's Unabridged Dictionary with Dennison's Patent Finger-tip Index.

"NOTA"—In the revision of Webster's grand work it has become the fashion to throw out what they are pleased to call "obsolete" words. Well, as the Dictionary is a "Work of Reference," we kept the original work intact.

It also contains a supplement of about 1000 pages with a complete finger-tip index. This supplement not only contains every word in the latest editions of both "Webster's and Worcester's Unabridged Dictionaries, but 45,000 more than are contained in either, and 25,000 more than are contained in the International.

Endorsed by Julius H. Seelye, President of Amherst College; E. G. Robinson, President of Brown University; Thos. W. Fickwell, President of Chautauqua Teachers' Reading Union, and other leading educators.

Price in full Library Sheep, $9 50. Price in full Russia, $10.50. Terms, $1 on delivery, balance $1 a month. Respectfully, THE WERNER CO., of New York and Chicago. [27]It is still impossible to make a house to house canvass, any person desiring to see the work can drop a postal to W. J. Cook, Hotel Grenada, who will be pleased to show the work [27]

GOOD HEALTH

THE CARE OF AN INVALID.

Of the Following Hints the Last Two Are Specially Recommended to the Reader.

An invalid's room should be as large as it is possible to have it—bright, sheery and airy and comfortably furnished. A point that should be studied carefully by the sickroom attendants is variety. The invalid cannot change her room, so change the room for her and try to make its daylight appearance as different as possible from its night look.

Invalids take a keen interest in life if kept part of the family circle and thoroughly enjoy little glimpses of outside, such as are afforded by a new book or magazine, a knicknack brought from abroad, a fresh plant, etc. Fortunately it is easy enough in these days to keep up a fairly continuous change of literary food at no over great expense, and it is wonderful how clever one becomes at picking up all kinds of trifles that may serve as amusement and interest to the dear one at home, who can only take her walks by deputy.

It is also needless to add that fresh air, and plenty of it, is imperative. This does not imply either cold air or drafts. The latter are easily guarded against by portieres and screens, while the former is obviated by warming the air before it reaches the invalid. Except in really warm weather, it is always best, where possible, not to let the air come direct into the sickroom. Set the windows wide open on the stairs, or in a neighboring room, leaving the doors open.

In a well kept sickroom there is little fear of actual stuffiness, but unless frequently changed the atmosphere becomes, so to say, overbreathed and loses its freshness, which is frequently the cause of much of the misery of the fits of depression, mental and physical, that puzzle inexperienced sickroom attendants.

The making of the bed should also be studied, and here is one piece of advice—make all your preparations for this out of the room. People weakened by long confined illness become actually tired from watching the preparations for their bedmaking. This sounds absurd, but trained nurses will tell you it is nevertheless a fact.

Petroleum For Diphtheria.

During an epidemic of diphtheria in a French town, in which a large per cent died under the ordinary treatment, a physician tried local applications of petroleum. As reported by a foreign journal, he says: "I commenced this mode of treatment on a little girl whose fauces, tonsils and soft palate were covered with thick false membranes. From the very first applications of the petroleum the membranes were seen to whiten, retract and almost dissolve under the brush. The same evening she breathed more easily and expelled some membranous exudations. Five days later the child was, if not absolutely cured, out of danger, and complete recovery was only a question of time. From that time forth I employed petroleum locally in all my cases, and I congratulate myself on having done so, since they all recovered.

"A throat brush dipped into the petroleum and shaken free of any excess of the liquid, is passed every hour or every two hours, according to the gravity of the case, over the parts covered by membrane. The application is said not to be painful—on the contrary, it produces a soothing effect. The only disagreeable are the disagreeable taste and odor of the petroleum. Membranes expelled by patients and received into cupshaped containing petroleum are almost totally dissolved after a gradual process of disintegration. The treatment lasted on an average a fortnight, at the end of which recovery generally occurred almost suddenly."

ART FOR AMATEURS

DECORATION FOR PLATES.

Center Design of Cupids With Border of Harrison Gold on Stone or Pink Ground.

Cupids, or figures in quaint costume for plate centers, with border designs in tinted golds, flat or raised, and more or less burnished, on pink or blue deep borders, are always in vogue, and Art Amateur makes the following suggestions in regard to them:

The costume of the figures suggests the style of ornament to be used for the border design, which should be of a similar period if copied, or the decoration or surroundings of the central subject will suggest ideas for conventional treatment to the original designer.

The deeper or hard kiln colors are best laid on before the final baking of the porcelain during its manufacture. Therefore in buying plates see that the colored border (deep blue, or whatever you desire) are already on, and when painting avoid carefully any touch or smear of gold or raised enamel that would injure the brilliancy of the polished surface of these borders, as the slightest film would be visible after the painting fire. A very suitable plate on which to paint cupids is the smooth, slightly concave, round plate. Among the newest ware for the dinner table are the square shaped dinner services in relief and open work ornament, Louis Quinze and Louis Quatorze.

Scheme For a Rose Pink Boudoir.

A rose pink boudoir! The very sound of it captivates the fancy. The Art Interchange gives a simple scheme for one which, with some modifications as to materials, need not be particularly costly: Ceiling in turquoise blue, with frieze, picture molding of gilt; woodwork, ivory white enamel; shades, lace curtains, rose colored; silk sash curtains for the windows; carpet of old rose in arabesque design; furniture, maple, with upholstered easy chairs and sofa. On the walls hang water colors. Follow color scheme throughout.

Easy Flowers to Paint.

Buttercups are easy to paint. The necessary colors are cadmium pale shaded into cadmium No. 3. For the darkest parts use raw umber, black and white. The stamens, which are very small, should be painted with a light shade of green, says an art authority.

Ahead of a Year Ago!

Notwithstanding the great cry of "Hard Times," our trade up to the present date is considerably in excess of last year. The result we believe of FAIR DEALING—giving the very best goods possible for the least money. In other words, REAL MERIT.

The people of Plainfield have found out that in the filling of a mammoth or a dozen or more articles in our line, they can do just as well at EDSALL'S, in price, quality, style and variety, as in any one store in New York.

Patrons often remark in our store: "Well, if I can't get it here, there is no use of my looking for it in Plainfield, for I will have hard work to find it in New York.

We have now so many good things to advertise, that it is impossible to mention them in our space, and urge buyers to call at our store and see for themselves the many new things we offer.

Prodigies.

Nature abhors a vacuum and shows but little consideration for a prodigy. The child known as a prodigy is unknown as a man. Now and then an exception to this rule appears in the domain of music; a musical child becomes a musical man. Straightway it is asserted that genius always manifests itself in childhood. But "one swallow maketh not summer." To the precocity of Bach, Handel and Mozart we may offset the slow development of Wagner, Weber and Beethoven. The first lessons in music were irksome to Beethoven, and Weber was told by his father, "Karl, you may become anything else; but a musician you will never be." Wagner's teacher often greeted him with a similar remark.

Parents who grieve over the slow development of their children should be comforted by these two facts of nature: Most prodigies are doomed to early oblivion; the higher an organism, the longer it requires to reach maturity. A willow can be grown in three or four years; an oak requires from 50 to 100 years to mature. But when it is grown it is the oak and not the willow.—Youth's Companion.

A Mother's Expedient.

A writer in The Decorator and Furnisher tells of the expedient of a thoughtful mother, who saved wide strips of flannel made much laundry work. For breakfast and luncheon, instead of large tablecloths, she provided half yard squares of the same good quality of luncheon's linen. These were hemmed, and an initial worked in one corner—eight or ten squares for the use of the family. These were laid diamondwise under each plate, and renewed as needed, the laundress finding these small pieces much easier to care for than the large cloths.

The same writer offers the suggestion that, if good sized, milky white glass beads are sewed on table mats crocheted in heavy cotton, made of coarse thread, they are efficacy in protecting the table from hot dishes is absolute. For general use this is certainly a good idea, though these mats are not specially pretty for company days.

The Dining Room.

A cheerful, orderly dining room is the nine qua non of an appetizing meal. This can be managed in families of even most limited resources, if the habit is persisted in by the mistress and maid. Many dining rooms are in the morning cloak and bonnet rooms for the young students, who eat a hasty meal with the suggestive surroundings of hats and coats thrown across chairs, books piled on mantel or sideboard, and a general air of coming departure pervading the apartment.

Too often, also, books are not even on the mantels. They are on the table, bored over between mouthfuls by the unhappy victims of the much boasted "book system." Every mother should put a stop to such practices at once. Let your child drop a study if he has to cram it with his food.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Hang Pictures Artistically.

If there is one thing worse than another in the inartistic hanging of pictures, it is that habit of stringing them, single file, around a room. Group them as evidences of refinement—that is, have a central picture of large size and range small ones around it. But don't repeat such "bunchings." That would produce a stiff effect.

Always give the lower position to that picture which has the most details or figures, as the eye takes them in to better advantage if in a direct line of vision.

Regulate the hanging of dark and light pictures according to the light in your room and don't place your somber selections in the gloom. Study the effect of the light upon the picture before consigning it to a special place on the wall.—Detroit Free Press.

Afghan Making.

Bits of worsted always accumulate in a family where much fancy work is carried on. It is a good thing for some member of it to have always an afghan in course of construction, in which these odds and ends can go. The making is a clear pleasure, it is so simple and satisfactory, and there are several patterns that call for many shades of yarn. An afghan is in constant request—not as once for the carriage, but to keep at hand when one lies down, to make a light covering to throw over one. When all the materials were bought outright, it made about as expensive a piece of work as could be engaged upon. But by adopting this "bit or mite" plan it is quickly and cheaply obtained.

New Notion in Pincushions.

A new notion in pincushions is to make them flat, the size and shape of a square envelope. The pins are inserted at the edge. They are made of two pieces of cardboard covered with silk and put together over a half inch stuffed bag of the same size. The address of the person for whom they are intended is written on a bit of tracing paper, laid over the cushion to the silk and outlined. A stamp is put on one corner—it may be painted there if one is clever with a brush, or a genuine stamp affixed in the usual way. A ribbon loop is attached to one corner by which to hang them.

Sandwiches.

Chestnut sandwiches are not at all common and can be excellently made. Boil the chestnuts soft, then peel and pass through a wire sieve, spreading the paste thus obtained between small oblongs or triangles of bread. Ginger sandwiches, all for bits of dry candied ginger as filling, and chocolate sandwiches require an abundance of grated sweet chocolate. These are a few sorts not often seen, and a little ingenuity will suggest numerous combinations. Almost anything edible, from roast beef to candied violets, may serve between sandwich covers.

French Girls Dress Well.

It does not seem to me that French girls think any more about their dress than other girls, but they go to work on the problem more scientifically. They know how to make the most of themselves, and it becomes as instinctive for them to care for their appearance as it is for them to brush their hair. The little shopgirl, who goes to her work at 9 in the morning and stays till 9 at night, will achieve a toilet as dainty, fresh and suitable that it is the envy of many a foreign patron.—Exchange.

How to Use Stale Bread.

Housekeepers who have too much principle to throw away stale bread and who cannot bring their families to relish bread pudding will find they can put their loaves to practical use by making what an experienced mother calls "bread omelet." Cut the bread in very thin slices, and there is nothing that one can slice as thin as stale bread, and dip the slices in beaten eggs. Fry in butter. A most substantial, economical and satisfactory dish for breakfast.

Just In Time.

"What do you call this?" asked Officer McGobb as he pulled a dangerous looking bludgeon out of the pocket of his prisoner. "This is called a 'life preserver,'" answered the derelict.

"An' what right have you with a life preserver, I'd would like to know?"

"Because I belong to the floating population. See?"

But the officer refused to see.—Indianapolis Journal.

A Question.

"I don't know what to make of Miss Blinks," he said.

"Why?"

"The other evening everybody was begging her to play the piano, but she persistently refused."

A POOR WOMAN KILLED.

WHILE PICKING COAL ON THE RAILROAD TRACK.

She was Struck by a Royal Blue Express and Killed Instantly. — Attempting to Get Out of the Way When Struck

WHILE picking coal on the railroad tracks this morning Mrs. John English was run down and instantly killed by the Royal Blue Line Express which passes through here, bound West, at 8:40.

Mrs. English went out upon the tracks near her home, above the Netherwood station. She had a tin pail almost filled with coal, which she set down just outside the track as the engine struck her.

Mrs. English had a hood over her head which hindered her from hearing the whistle until it was too late. She was trying to get out of the way when struck.

Engineer "Bert" Munn of the flyer said he blew his whistle when he first caught a glimpse of the woman, and that she had plenty of time to get off the track, if she had heard its first shrill blast. He said she appeared to be deaf, but the continued whistle finally attracted her attention so that she looked up, and, seeing her danger, started off of the track. One step more and she would have been saved. The engine struck her in the breast and face as she stood half bent over, and hurled her to one side, so that she escaped the wheels.

Her face bore the visible mark of her injuries. A deep gash was cut across the cheek.

The engineer said he had his engine reversed before it struck the woman, and that he stopped his train within its length after the accident. The sudden stop of the train threw passengers out of their seats.

The body was taken on board the train and brought to the North avenue station. From there it was taken to Casey's morgue.

The unfortunate woman leaves a husband and four children. The husband works in Scott's Press Works.

FRACTURED A RIB.

Dr. Boone in a Runaway Accident Last Friday.

At about 9.30 o'clock Friday afternoon, Dr. Boone's carriage was run into on Fourth street, by another vehicle, and badly smashed. Dr. Boone was thrown out and injured. The doctor was taken to his home, where it was found that his injuries consisted of several bruises and a fractured rib.

BREVITIES.

—It is time to put your ice house in order for the next harvest.

—Weather sharps predict a severely cold spell from now to December 9. Winter weather in its season is always due.

—"If Christmas day on Monday be,
A great winter that year you'll see."
So says an old proverb; but does it mean the winter of '93 or '94?

—A meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will be held on Tuesday, at two p. m., in the lecture room of the church.

—The Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and Other Liberal Christian Women will hold its monthly meeting at All Souls church, Tuesday, at three p. m. promptly. Subject: "Books and Reading."

—At the Bethel A. M. E. Mission on West Third street the Rev. T. A. V. Henry will preach a Thanksgiving sermon Thursday at 11 a. m. Theme: "The Duty of All Men Toward God." All are invited.

—The Supreme Court has rendered a decision that is of interest to parties who renew insurance policies. It was held that where a policy of fire insurance is renewed from year to year the description of insured property in the original policy must be applied to the condition of the property at date of last renewal.

C. B. L. Convention.

The New Jersey state convention of the Catholic Benevolent Legion will take place in Elizabeth on Tuesday, Nov. 28th, when several amendments to the constitution will be presented. At present the Legion has seventy councils in the State and about 5,000 members. There are 32,000 members in the United States. Since the organization of the Legion, benefits have been paid for 20,000 deceased members amounting to about $4,200,000.

She Belongs in North Plainfield.

In ex-Judge William B. Codington's office this morning a case was tried of an Italian woman and two children to find out, if possible, if she was legally entitled to alms from the Fanwood Township or North Plainfield. The case was tried before Judge Moore and Mr. W. L. Reifsnid. It was decided that she had only been a resident of Fanwood for nine months, and would, therefore, have to be taken care of by North Plainfield.

KILLED BY A WAGON.

JOHN OBERLAND FATALLY INJURED THIS MORNING.

He was Loading Baled Hay Upon a Wagon from a Box Car, When the Horses Ran Away, Throwing Him Under the Wheels.

About nine o'clock this morning, John Oberland, an employe of Mr. P. M. French, was loading baled hay upon a wagon from a box car, which had been switched upon the siding back of the freight house.

The wagon was almost loaded, and Oberland was standing on the hay, when some of the bales on the front part of the wagon slipped off and fell against the horses legs. This frightened the team and they started down the incline toward Fourth street.

Oberland grasped the reins and attempted to stop the horses. The reins broke. The team, with increasing speed, turned into Fourth street and Oberland was thrown off. It is supposed he fell between the wheels and the hind wheels passed over his chest. The wagon passed over the man lay in the road groaning, as if in terrible pain. The injured man was carried into Mr. N. W. French's store, where he was made as comfortable as possible, until a doctor could be summoned. His injuries seemed to be internal.

Dr. Long arrived and examined the poor fellow, whose pulse by this time had almost ceased. Dr. Long said he was dying, and nothing could be done for him. Blood flowed at times from the man's mouth.

At about 9.25 John Oberland was no more, death had come to relieve his pain. While he lay in the feed store he was continually gasping for breath. He was an unmarried man and had worked for Mr. French about six months. His mother lives at Dog Watch Hollow.

One of his brothers works for Mr. Bartlett who has a stone yard in this city, while another is employed by Mr. P. C. Osborn of New Market.

Oberland had recently joined the Salvation Army and spoke three times at a meeting yesterday, and sang a solo at the service last evening.

The horses ran around into Park avenue and were caught by Policeman Kiely and other men.

Princeton Glee Club in Plainfield.

The Princeton Musical Association, comprising the glee, banjo, and mandolin clubs, will give a concert in Plainfield Thursday, December 7, at the Casino. The organizations altogether comprise about fifty men and this year the Glee Club is exceptionally fine. A special feature of Princeton concerts has always been in the mandolin club which is unrivalled by any organization of the kind in American colleges. The concert is given with the support of the Princeton Alumni of Plainfield and the list of patronesses which will be published in The News, in a few days, will be sufficient to warrant the social success of the undertaking.

City Court Cases.

In the city court, this morning, the following cases were disposed of:

"Smokestack Jack," arrested for being drunk, was adjudged guilty and fined $5.

Michael Fox, who was fined $3 Saturday for drunkenness, was arrested again Saturday night for a like offense. A six dollar fine was imposed.

August Dels, was fined $5 for drunkenness.

Two tramps, who were arrested this morning for riding on a coal train, were given 10 days in the county jail.

The Jerry McAuley Mission.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ballou, formerly with Jerry Parkhurst, in mission work, now superintendent of the Jerry McAuley Cremorne Mission, will hold services in the First Presbyterian church to-morrow evening at 7.45. All who attend are assured of hearing an interesting talk of the great work, now being done, to reclaim fallen humanity. Mr. and Mrs. Ballou will have with them two young converts and a solo singer from the Mission.

To Consider Organized Charity.

A meeting to consider the question of organized charity, and to devise ways and means for the prevention of suffering among the large number who, owing to the recent business depression, may be unemployed during the Winter, will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church, Tuesday, 28th inst., at eight p. m.

Mr Casey Declines the Nomination.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

At the city convention meeting held in this city Friday evening, the nomination of councilmen-at-large was bestowed upon me. I think the convention for the honor, but, owing to business engagements, I most respectfully decline the nomination. Respectfully

Elizabeth's Smallpox Scare Over.

For the first day since election day, when the smallpox epidemic broke out in Elizabeth, no new cases were reported for the past thirty hours. The disease appears to be effectually checked. The health authorities are taking a rest and are delighted at the success which has attended their efforts.

75 YEARS OLD.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE ORGANIZATION OF THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

In Seventy-Five Years the Church Has Had but Four Pastors, including the Present One, the Rev. Dr. Yerkes

SEVENTY-FIVE years ago yesterday the First Baptist church of this city was organized. In celebration of the event the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, the pastor, preached an historical sermon yesterday morning to a large congregation. The church has had, in that time, but four pastors, as follows: The Rev Jacob Fitz Randolph was the first pastor, from January, 1818, till his death in January, 1826. The Rev. Daniel T. Hill was the second pastor, from August, 1826, till his resignation in May, 1830. The Rev. Simeon J. Drake was the third pastor, from August, 1830, till his death in April, 1862. The Rev. David J. Yerkes entered upon the fourth pastorate of the church in October, 1863.

REV. DR. YERKES.

1st Corinthian 1-6—"To the Church of God, which is at Corinth."

This was the subject taken by the pastor for his sermon. He first defined the word "church" as meaning, strictly—an assembly. The assembling of Christians formed the "church." The only Bishops known to these churches were the pastors of the separate churches. Churches were separate and independent bodies. There was no universal authority centered in one man or body of men.

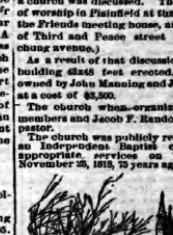
Referring then to the church of which he is pastor Dr. Yerkes said, in part:

"On January 12, 1818, the building of a church was discussed. The only place of worship in Plainfield at that time was the Friends meeting house, at the corner of Third and Peace street (now Watchung avenue.)

As a result of that discussion a frame building sixty feet square, on lands owned by John Manning and John Wilson, at a cost of $3,500.

The church when organized had 24 members and Jacob F. Randolph was the pastor.

The church was publicly recognized as an independent Baptist church, by appropriate services on Wednesday, November 25, 1818, 75 years ago to-day."



THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. Daniel Dodge of Piscataway preached the sermon on that occasion.

In 1842 the church was again enlarged at a cost of $5,200. This was the building occupied until the present edifice was erected, and occupied in 1866.

PERSONAL.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Laddy was buried this morning in St. Mary's cemetery.

The deposition of M. Marvin Dunham was taken this morning by Charles A. Reed, master in chancery, in the contest over admitting to probate the will of Mrs. Jane James Brand. Mr. Dunham was one of the witnesses to the will. Ex-Judge William M. Stillman represented the proponent of the will and Jackson & Anderson the caveator.

Saturday Mrs. Schermerhorn, wife of Manager Schermerhorn of the Western Union Telegraph office, returned from Saranac Lake, N. Y., where she went three weeks ago with her son, Charles, Jr., who was advised to visit the Adirondacks for his health, which was very poor. He has improved so rapidly that it was deemed safe for Mrs. Schermerhorn to return home and leave him alone.

A "Past and Present" Supper.

Under the above title, given above, the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church will give a supper at Vincent chapel Tuesday evening. This Society's suppers are declared, by all who have attended, in the past, to be worth three times the amount paid. See advertisement.

SAW GEN. WASHINGTON.

MRS. TOWER, WHO HAS JUST DIED AT ELIZABETH, WAS 100 YEARS OLD.

Her Memory was Good—She Loved to Tell of the Old Days, and her Statements Made Youngsters Stare.

Mrs. Mary Tower, the centenarian of Elizabeth, breathed her last on Saturday morning, as told in our dispatches, was born on July 23, 1793, and lived under the administration of every President of this great Republic, and witnessed the growth of this country from the swaddling clothes period to the robust prime of the present day.

Mrs. Tower, or "Aunt Mary," as she was called by the residents of Elizabeth, was born in West Jersey street, Elizabeth near the bridge. Her father was Samuel Sayre, one of the first carpenters of that vicinity. For years she painted the dwellings which had felt the touch of her father's hand, and among her earliest recollections and the one which she delighted to relate was the passage of Gen. Washington through the village. As she grew older her memory of the incident grew more vivid, and she would tell how, when arrayed in her Sunday best homespun, she was lifted upon her father's shoulder to watch the great man pass. His white wig and queue, the four white horses that drew his coach and the cumbrous old driver are all photographed and etched in upon her mind. A year later he had passed away and the Father of his Country only lived in history.

She married early, and was left a widow at the age of 28, with four children to support. She was short of stature, with regular features, and a piercing black eye that indicated her indomitable energy and perseverance. The necessity of supporting her little family caused her to adopt the role of a nurse. With all the old-fashioned home-made and simple remedies at her finger ends, from ostrich tea up, combined with an experience of her own, she was looked upon as a woman in her proper place.

Until she was incapacitated by years she kept on at her work, and often asserted with pardonable pride that she had nursed 250 and odd babies and children who first made their entrance into the world at Elizabeth. Many of these children are old, bent men, loitering around in Elizabeth to-day.

About fifteen years ago she became blind and the parishioners took charge of her and sent her to board with the family of Elias R. Whaley in Westfield avenue, Lorraine, a suburb of Elizabeth, which was a forest in the old lady's younger years. Her memory grew younger as she grew older and she kept up a lively interest in the progress of the county, as if it were one of her special charges.

FROM "THE VISITOR."

Interesting Church Items from a Bright Paper.

The Junior League expect to give an entertainment the week before Christmas. They will please you very much. Notice will be given in these notes.

Our Epworth League are invited to join in a union meeting of the Young People's Societies, in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, Thanksgiving morning, at ten o'clock. The Rev. C. E. Herring will lead.

Thanksgiving will find many people cold and hungry this year. Our Mercy and Help Department has made arrangements to distribute gifts of groceries, provisions, clothing, etc., to needy members of our pew's household. A committee will be on hand at the pastor's room in the church on Monday evening, from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock, to receive donations. Not only the members of the League, but all generous hearts in the church and Sunday-school are asked to give something, however small, to help on this charity.

The district convention at Junction, October 21, was a prime success—more delegates to Plainfield. Chapter No. 1 had four delegates, Mrs. Hull, Misses Minnie and Gertie Sharp, and Mr. Jay. Mr. Newman and Mr. James McGee represented Monroe. Miss Emma Smalley reported for Green church. Dr. Eckman's address at night was worth the trouble one had to take to get home from Junction at that time o'clock. Our old friend Walter Winans, presided with dignity. He is in Drew Seminary studying for the ministry.

Harry McGee, son of H. A. McGee has been chosen a "temporary deacon" of the Presbyterian class at Yale. This is the office which his brother Clifford held in '92 S. These college deacons are not ordained but are really the devotional committee of the class, having charge of its prayer meetings and of all its religious activity. They would go far to find a worthier young man than Harry.

Literary Notes.

The Forum, which its readers regard as the foremost of our periodicals, reduces its price, beginning with the December number, from 50 to 25 a year, from 50 cts to 25 cts. a copy. This is the most noteworthy reduction in periodical literature that has taken place.

WRECKERS AT WORK.

AN ATTEMPT MADE BY STRIKERS TO WRECK A PASSENGER TRAIN.

WRECKING trains, or at least attempts to do so, have been resorted to by Lehigh Valley strikers. An attempt last night was almost successful and was only averted by accidental discovery. It seems that just before train No. 9 was due, a switch had been "cocked," between New Market and Bound Brook. No. 9 was a passenger train, and was due at ten o'clock. "Cocking" a switch is a term used by railroad men and means the turning of the switch half way so as to make the engine jump the track.

There are ten deputies at South Plainfield guarding the Lehigh's tracks and switches now.

A Fact is worth Volumes of Theory.

Instruction given at a large institution in New York city costs more than equal or better instruction obtainable in Plainfield for which a small charge is made. A case in point: A young man going to the Cooper Institute two evenings a week for an hour's practice in free-hand drawing and perspective, being one of a class of thirty, received two minutes instruction each lesson, at a cost of one dollar and fifty-five cents car fare, and the inconvenience of being out until midnight twice a week in all weather.

He heard of the Plainfield Manual Training School, 209 East Front street, and inquiry elicited the information that he could obtain two hours' tuition in fifteen branches of study, connected with the minor arts, for two dollars per week, between the hours of two and four o'clock, five days each week, leaving his evenings free, and receiving constant oversight and direction in his studies. Mr. Dalziel is the gentleman in charge of the school.

Tours to Washington, D. C., via Pennsylvania Railroad.

A more economical or pleasant way to spend three days could not be devised than that offered by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in its personally conducted tours to Washington, leaving New York, 611 from Philadelphia, and proportionately low rates from intermediate points. Special trains, quick transportation and hotel expenses during the period of the trip.

The historic and contemporaneous associations of this beautiful city are numberless and render a visit replete with interest. Tours will leave New York at 11.00 A. M. and Philadelphia 1.50 P. M., November 29th. Other dates are December 13th, January 10th, February 7th, March 7th, March 21st and 22d, April 13th, May 2d and 24th. A tourist agent and chaperon will accompany each party, and materially aid in the general welfare of the participants.

The Teachers' Institute.

The final session of the Union County Teachers' Institute was held Saturday morning, in the Cherry Street School building, Elizabeth. The opening exercises were again conducted by Supt. Hix. Dr. M. J. Brumbaugh of Philadelphia, made the opening address. No speaker has ever more thoroughly gratified, entiated and benefited the teachers of our county. His addresses on "Pedagogical Geography," and "Languages," were able, original, and furnished not only much valuable information, but much to incite others to prosecute inquiries. Supt. Dix gave a very highly interesting talk about his association with American authors, and Dr. J. M. Green.

HIS DEATH DOUBTED.

AN INSURANCE COMPANY THINKS CHAUNCEY B. RIPLEY STILL ALIVE.

His Friends Ridicule the Idea—The Face of Mr. Ripley Not Exposed After the Body Had Been Put in the Casket.

A report has been circulated that the insurance company in which the late Chauncey B. Ripley of Westfield was insured for $10,000 has expressed doubts as to Mr. Ripley being dead at all. One of the chief reasons for the insurance company believing Mr. Ripley to be yet among the living was the peculiar funeral, which by the company appeared mysterious in the fact that the face of the supposed dead was not exposed to view.

Westfielders think that there is considerable mystery connected with the funeral, as they hold there was no reason why the face of the dead should not have been exposed to view, Mr. Ripley having died while in apparent health.

Mr. Ripley was well liked in Westfield, and many of those who had known him best felt much grieved when they were refused the privilege of looking upon the face of their dead friend.

It has been stated that while Mr. Ripley was considered a wealthy man, yet upon his death he was in debt.

The insurance company and friends of Mr. Ripley declare that he is indeed dead and those think it hard that any trickery is suspected.

Saturday afternoon it was stated that the insurance men proposed having the body which now lies in Fairview Cemetery exhumed before they will pay over the $10,000.

Mr. McCormick Not to Blame.

Saturday James McCormick was tried before Judge Coddington on the charge of running over Patrick Waters, about a week ago. The evidence showed that Mr. McCormick was not at fault and that the plaintiff alone was to blame, as he had been seemingly under the influence of liquor and walked into the wagon at the crossing.

If you are sick, or if any of your relatives are sick, a cure can be found in Sedam's Mineral Elixir, 20 years' success. Fifty cents per bottle. Free sample sent free, with full information, at L. W. Randolph's, 145 West Front street.

PROCLAMATION.

In accordance with established custom, I, George T. Werts, Governor of the State of New Jersey, do hereby designate and appoint THURSDAY, THE FOURTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, INSTANT, to be observed as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God.

I recommend that on the day named the people of this State abstain, so far as possible, from their ordinary secular pursuits, and assemble at their usual places of worship, and there observe the appointed observance of the occasion, and offer up their thanksgiving of thanks to the Heavenly Father for His continued blessings upon this State and people, with prayer that peace, good will and prosperity may be extended to us in the future.

Witness my hand and the seal of the State of New Jersey hereunto affixed, [L.S.] at the city of Trenton, this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundredth and eighteenth.

GEORGE T. WERTS.

By the Governor,
JOHN S. McMASTER,
Private Secretary.

Ahead of a Year Ago!

Notwithstanding the great cry of "Hard Times," our trade up to the present date is considerably in excess of last year. The result we believe of PAIR DEALING—giving the very best goods possible for the least money. In other words, REAL MERIT.

The people of Plainfield have found out that in the filling of a memorandum of a dozen or more articles in our line, they can do just as well at EDSALL'S, in price, quality, style and variety, as in any one store in New York.

Our confidence remark is our store. "Well, if I can't get it here, there is no use of my looking for it in Plainfield, for, if will have hard work to find it in New York."

We have now so many good things to advertise, that it is impossible to mention them in our space, and urge buyers to call at our store and see for themselves the handy new things we offer.

EDSALL'S.

LIKE HOT CAKES!

On a frosty morning. That's the way those Cork Sole Boots are going. These are not the old-fashioned clumsy boots, but are cut in the latest shapes, and are just the thing for damp or cold days when you do not want to wear rubbers. Ladies' Kidey cole, calf skin. EDITORIAL NOTES

New Literature of France.

The late M. Taine used to say that the Anglo-Saxon race were moralists by nature and that in their literature they never lost sight of matters of conscience and ethics. To their fiction, as to every other kind of writing, there was always attached the moral lesson to be drawn. The French, on the other hand, Taine contended, were artists and looked only to the artistic effect of their writings, regardless of whether they were moral or immoral.

But the signs are now that after centuries of suffering and artistic dissipation, in which the manhood of France almost went down, there is in that country a moral awakening. Paul Bourget says that one of the signs of it was the sudden admiration which Frenchmen began to feel for first English, then Russian literature, as illustrated in Count Tolstoi's work. This was not a fad. It was an outward sign of the deep revolution in French literature which began 20 years ago. The first exponent of the new moral drift in French literature was Zola, who, though he is generally misunderstood, and is considered very bad when he really means to be very good, nevertheless stands out as the moralist in his novels and in a truly horrible manner shows his readers what not to do.

Paul Bourget, in his paper in The Forum, considers the moral awakening in French literature as consequent on the scientific spirit of the time. Science, with its overwhelming wonders and infinite achievement by means of inductive precision, had its effect on literature and naturally introduced the method of dissection and microscopic analysis into the novel as well as into the laboratory. The new trend in French writing is the outcome of a great practical impulse which led the young writers of the nation to "reduce the literature of the imagination to the rigor of an observation, or even of a scientific consideration." Direct came realism as a result; then "the literature of scientific observation was constrained to unfold into a psychological literature."

From imagination and passion the writers brought under the literary microscope emotions, character, motives and ethics. Bourget says, "While romance, poetry, the theater and criticism are engaged more and more with moral questions, the symptoms of a veritable religious renascence are discernible among the young." It is a sign of the times on which the sun of the nineteenth century will set.

Law Cases Out of Court.

The slow and lumbering progress of legal trials have developed a new use for attorneys, so that a lawyer might now almost be called a man who settles law cases out of court. The most famous and successful lawyers in the country have at this time on their hands perhaps twice as many cases in dispute to settle out of court as they have in fact. Each great corporation now has its own attorney to whom all legal points or differences are referred. He meets the attorney of the opposing party, they two talk the matter over, each trying to get the better of the other, like the natives who state their grievances before his black majesty, King Lobengula.

In the case of the great corporation lawyers, however, the two legal gentlemen are their own advocates, judge and jury, and invariably come to a compromise on the dispute. This they offer each to his client, who usually accepts it, and thus the matter ends, certainly with great saving of time to the client. It is not so certain that there is a saving of money, however, as in this case the attorney's fees are apt to be high enough to cover all the costs if the matter had been settled before the courts.

Immense fees are thus earned by leading lawyers, the average of a single legal firm in a few cases reaching as high as $1,000,000 a year. One lawyer some time ago received $350,000 in one fee for his work done for the Sugar trust.

There are not so many life saving stations as there ought to be on the great lakes. Of the total 244 of these stations 183 are on the Atlantic coast alone, with only 60 on all the lakes. When it is remembered that the lake commerce amounts to more than all that of the Atlantic coast put together, this unequal distribution will be plain. It is also to be remembered that there are more terrific storms upon the lakes, and more vessels go down there than even in the Atlantic. The cost of the whole service last year was less than $1,000,000, and its gallant crew saved over $10,000,000 worth of property and 3,541 lives.

There is one thing a plain American citizen would like to know, and that is, when the United States is in a state of profound peace and harmonious agreement with every other nation on the globe, why it is necessary for the government to communicate with its servants in Brazil or elsewhere by means of the complicated cipher despatches. Why should not the telegraphic code be exactly the same as that used ordinarily? Every citizen is entitled to know what the officers he elected are doing. Let there be light.

The joy of those who imagined no end to was only equaled by the gloom of those who stopped down and out.

TARIFF BILL IS READY.

Submitted to the Ways and Means Committee Today.

IT IS SOMETHING OF A SURPRISE.

The Free List Includes Wool, Iron Ore, Coal, Cotton Ties, Lumber, Flax and Lead Ore—Manufactured Textiles Well Protected—The Revenue Schedule Reserved.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The new Democratic bill will be laid before the full membership of the ways and means committee today. The call for a full meeting of the committee was issued nearly a week ago by Chairman Wilson, and the Republican members from various parts of the country arrived in the city Sunday. So far the Republicans of the committee know nothing of the bill that is to be submitted by the Democratic majority except the knowledge derived from newspaper reports, and it is not expected that today's meeting will be at all a deliberative one. The committee will convene, and five minutes later the bill will be submitted by Chairman Wilson and read at length, and a Democratic member will then promptly move that it be adopted by the committee. The measure will be adopted by a strict party vote.

It is now definitely announced that the internal revenue schedule will be reserved until a later date, as it is not yet completed. The practical certainty, however, is that the income feature of the law will be slight, and that the increase of the whisky tax, if an increase at all, will not exceed 10 cents per gallon. Deprive the internal revenue schedule of any great public interest.

A Free List.

In its general sense the new tariff bill may be denominated a radical measure. The free list will be a surprise to the country. It will include wool, iron ore, coal, cotton ties, pepper, hides, chocolate, salt, binding twine, flax, lead ore and many other articles of less importance to the large commercial interests.

The disposition of wool and woolen goods has been one of the most difficult problems that the committee had to solve. After two months of deliberation it has been finally decided to adopt the Springer policy of the last congress in this respect in all its material details, and the writers purport to accompany this portion of the bill will also be substantially the report of the last chairman of the ways and means committee. The schedule on wool and woolen schedule will be as follows:

All woods, hair of the camel, goat, alpaca and other like animals, and all wool and hair on the skin; all tops, slubbing waste, roving waste, ring waste, yarn waste, card waste, bur waste and flocks, including all waste or rags composed wholly or in part of wool; worsted or hair of the camel, goat, etc., valued at not more than 30 cents per pound, are rated at 35 per cent, which is the same rate under the present tariff law, without the specific duty which that bill provides.

On all woolen or worsted cloths, shawls and knit fabrics, and all fabrics made on knitting machines or frames, and all manufactures of every description made wholly or in part of wool and worsted, of hair of the camel, goat, etc., valued at not more than 30 cents per pound, the duty is 40 per cent. On blankets, hats of wool, flannels for underwearing composed wholly or in part of wool or hair of the camel, goat, etc., valued as not more than 30 cents per pound, the duty is 35 per cent; valued at more than 30 cents and not more than 50 cents per pound, the duty is 40 per cent; valued at more than 50 cents per pound, the duty is 45 per cent.

Clothing Well Protected.

There is likewise a well accredited forecast as to the schedule which includes women's and children's dress goods, on which, with cost linings, Italian cloths and goods of similar character, the warp of cotton, and the woof of the finer grades of wool, and all of which were taxed 40 per cent in the Springer bill, the duty in this bill is somewhat less. The cut in the dress schedule is quite marked, on silk it is comparatively light, and the cut in the cotton schedule is nothing like as great as the cut in wool.

The last information is that steel rails will probably be put at $6 or $9 a ton, a smaller figure, representing a tariff of 40 per cent ad valorem while rails are selling at a much lower price of $20. Rails will be one of the few articles upon which a specific duty will be retained. Pig iron will probably be put at $4 per ton, while the bar iron will be reduced about 20 per cent. The rate on nearly all manufactures of cotton will be 40 per cent. This will include hosiery, which now pays compound duties ranging as high as 72 per cent, and the classifications of different grades of goods will be abandoned. Woven fabrics of flax, hemp and jute will be greatly reduced in view of the placing of the raw materials on the free list.

The compound duty on collars and cuffs, it is said, will be abandoned, and nothing left but the ad valorem rate of 35 or 40 per cent. The ultimate schedules will probably be retained 10 per cent on the existing rates of 60 per cent and 35 per cent.

The McKinley bill, instead the duty on coverings, which are a large element in the cost of shawls, was practically made the increase to duty more greater than the present change in the ad valorem rate.

The bill will show the following changes in the sugar schedule: The duty on refined sugar is reduced from ½ to ¼ of a cent a pound. Raw sugar remains free of tax. The McKinley bounty is repealed progressively—that is, on eighth each year, so that at the end of eight years it is to cease entirely.

Mr. Wilson Talks.

The Republican members of the committee are to be given 10 days' time in which to prepare a minority report dissenting from the recommendations of the majority of the committee.

In regard to the new tariff bill Chairman Wilson said: "The tariff bill will be given to the public when the committee agrees. The internal revenue schedule is not yet completed and will therefore be preserved until a later date.

"The regular schedule we made public sooner because it was reported that speculators were attempting to manipulate the market on the strength of alleged inside information, and we did not desire to be considered a party to anything of this kind. The tariff bill will be quite voluminous. It will really comprise two bills in one, as it is to embrace both the customs bill proper and the administrative bill. Mr. McKinley, you will remember, prescribed two bills. One was the tariff bill and the other the administrative bill. We make one bill of these, the administrative provisions following the customs schedules. It will therefore come the same ground as these two bills and be of the same length. In some of the provisions there will naturally be no change at all. This will be particularly true of the administrative provisions, where the changes are not so numerous."

CARNOT'S DILEMMA.

Many Unsuccessful Attempts Made to Reconstruct His Cabinet.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—It was semi-officially announced that M. Casimir-Perier, president of the chamber of deputies, who was summoned by President Carnot shortly after the resignation of the cabinet, has informed M. Carnot that he has irrevocably decided not to form a cabinet, and that he has advised the president to appeal to the public spirit of ex-Premier Dupuy, who, in the opinion of M. Casimir-Perier, might be prevailed upon to form a cabinet.

It is added that President Carnot thereupon summoned M. Dupuy, who declared that he did not consider himself to be in a position to acquit himself of such a task, and therefore he respectfully declined to undertake the formation of the new cabinet.

Later President Carnot summoned M. Melline and thoroughly discussed the situation with him. To M. Melline the president intimated the delicate mission of endeavoring to persuade M. Casimir-Perier or M. Dupuy to reconsider their decisions not to undertake the reconstruction of the French cabinet, but it is understood, however, that M. Casimir-Perier emphatically declined to be persuaded to undertake this difficult task proposed to him, and, it is added, M. Melline met with an equally firm refusal from M. Dupuy.

After completing his unsuccessful mission M. Melline called upon President Carnot and informed him of his failure to persuade M. Casimir-Perier or M. Dupuy to change their minds.

It is said that the president was somewhat disappointed at the result of the mission with which he had intrusted M. Melline.

Later it was reported that President Carnot had entrusted M. Bourgeois, who was formerly minister of justice, in order to consult with him as to the formation of the new cabinet.

The Italian Crisis.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The Times' correspondent at Rome says that no progress has been made toward a solution of the crisis, although the Italian people are still hopeful that Italian statesmen. The Radicals at this moment are masters of the situation, and dissatisfaction, with a weak government which has not the confidence of the country, would only result in sending the Radical deputies back to their constituencies with all the prestige of such a victory, and with the resources of bank clerks and parliamentary corruption to create an agitation which might endanger the dynasty.

AN UGLY MOB AT SUGAR NOTCH.

Telegraph Operators Driven Out and Train Crews Stoned—Several Accidents Caused by Green Hands.—The Road Claims That the Strike Is a Failure.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 27.—At midnight violence was reported all along the line of the Lehigh Valley road. At Sugar Notch a mob attacked the station and drove the operators from the premises. The men abandoned their work for the time being. Burgess Shields of Sugar Notch has notified Sheriff Walters that he is not in a position to preserve the public peace.

The sheriff will send deputies to that town today. A freight train was uncoupled in three places. The railroad officials say the strikers were at the bottom of it.

At Warrior Run two freight brakemen were stoned, and their lives were in danger. They deserted the trains. The telegraphers between this city and White did not leave their posts last evening. They had received threatening letters.

The train service is badly crippled. Two nonunion freight crews refused to take out freight trains from the Coxton yards. Two hundred men and boys were gathered in the yards, every one of whom was armed. Sheriff Walters will swear in 50 deputies and station them in the Coxton yards.

Colonel Krock of the Ninth regiment, national guards, says he has received no word from Harrisburg as yet to move the regiment. It is now clear that the sheriffs in the various counties cannot protect the company's property, and it is generally admitted that the governor will call out the state troops.

At Pittston a nonunion brakeman was struck in the head with a stone and knocked from a moving train. Sixty nonunion men are quartered in the garret of the passenger depot of this city. Six armed men tried to effect an entrance into the place, but were repulsed by deputy sheriffs.

Crowds of Men and Boys.

There was a large crowd at the Lackawanna and Bloomsburg junction all day Sunday, consisting largely of Slavs and young men, among whom no strikers were numbered. These fellows greeted every man at work about the yards with cries of "Scab!" "You'll get your throat cut!" and similar expressions.

The incompetency of the crews manning the freight trains was manifested by several accidents along the line. A freight passed through Pittston at 5 o'clock. After passing the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad tracks the fireman left the switch open behind him. The train following plunged down the embankment, doing great damage.

In the Coxton yards two caboose collided and were totally wrecked. At South Wilkesbarre a train in charge of nonunion men was cut in two by mischievous boys. At Sugar Notch an angry crowd was assembled and broke the windows in the telegraph office. The operator had to flee for his life.

Strikers Practically Beaten.

BUFFALO, Nov. 27.—The Lehigh strike is practically over. The strikers have been whipped for 48 hours now past and are hardly aware of it yet. The leaders realize that defeat had overtaken the first and only strike of the much vaunted Federation of Brotherhoods of Railway Employes in much shorter time than in the little fracas of 1892 by the single, unassisted, unfederated Association of Switchmen a year ago, but they hate to acknowledge it. The men on the Lehigh will have much to mind the bluster of the chiefs there is very little armament for further trouble. Though the order, "Strike is off; get back as best you can," has not been issued, it is almost inevitable.

The only thing that can prolong the strike will be the enlistment of men on other roads, but this will not cripple the Lehigh. It will be at best an ineffectual contribution to the general compilation of affairs. The Lehigh has bled all the men it want.

All these men need now is experience. Twenty-one trains of freight were received and dispatched at Buffalo Sunday. That is a gain over the preceding two days. Similar gains all along the line are reported and are naturally to be expected. While the men on the Lehigh will have much command of the situation that it can cause no worry at all, while the strikers will simply be out of a job. So we look with no fear upon the employees of the Lehigh.

Some apprehension has been felt by officials on connecting lines lest their men might be ordered out, but this fear is little likelihood of it. In the first place, the strike managers have not any point against handling of "scab" freight.

Trouble Ended on the Reading.

Their position, precisely stated by one of their number, is this: "We have no objection to accepting per se any lines handling their regular quota of freight, even if requested to them from the Lehigh, provided the freight is none other than what they would ordinarily handle if there was no strike, but it is not intended that they shall go out of their way to assist the Lehigh by handling freight for them which, if there was no strike, they would never receive."

The Reading company has within the last few minutes—the Nickelplate and Lake Shore here, for instance, which were notified a week ago that the Lehigh could no longer receive freight, and which have not since been sending this freight to the Lehigh's parallel two bound line—are now warned that they must receive it. The men of the Lehigh, which just now is very glad to have such a cut stranded, put on their rivals, since they are getting able to do their own rightful share of the freight haul.

Thus a strike ordered on any other road now would help the Lehigh more than it would hurt it.

There is no insurance which gives rise to the idea that possibly another road may be involved is a cause to benefit the West shore is concerned. It is the thought of the officials of the Lehigh that the employees on that road are sold to have a grievance of their own, but the Associated Press correspondent is confident, after communication with leaders on both sides, that the Lehigh strike will not extend and that the strike is absolutely practically ended this morning.

Sign Fall of Flight.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—The indications are that the company has gained a big advantage over its former employers in the Lehigh strike. "We feel that the strike is about over, so far as our late employes are concerned. Our prospects for handling business are very brighter, and we are continually getting the affairs of the road into a much better condition than that which has prevailed since the strike commenced."

President Wilbur, in speaking of the endeavors of mine operators to have a compromise made, said: "Under no conditions will we enter into a compromise. Our plans are laid down, and we are supported in the operation by the stockholders of the road. I am sorry for the men who have left our employ, but we intend running the road as we think it should be run and will adhere strictly to these plans. Officially I am not aware that a strike exists, as our reports show that trains are being run over all divisions."

E. E. Clark, chairman of the grievance committee, is strong in his assertions that there is only one thing for the strikers, and that is for the strike to win. He said:

"There are a great many desertions of new men so far, and they will continue to desert. The company is trying to stampede our men, but it will fail in the attempt. In fact, the company is surprised at the stand our men have taken.

"Our reports show that for the past 24 hours three new men have been killed while at work. We did not learn their names. I received word from the New Jersey state board of arbitration that a committee of that body would meet our committee today. I expect Grand Master F. P. Sargent of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen to be present."

Chief Thurston said that thus far nine engines have been destroyed on the Buffalo division, and that not nearly as many trains are being run as the company claims, as he has just returned from a run over the line. He does not think the Jersey Central employees will strike.

Wreck on the Lehigh.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 27.—There was a fatal wreck on the line directly to the strike, on the Lehigh Valley road. The accident occurred at the crossing of the Lehigh Valley and the Central. The engine of a coal train crashed into the engine of a freight. The blow threw the engine on its side, and Engineer Mallory of the Lehigh was buried in the wreckage of his cab. Fireman Hauser and Pilot Crubb of the Lehigh engine jumped before the crossing was reached and escaped injury.

The fatality was not known was brought to a standstill by the shock, and the coal cars were piled upon the wreck. The shock threw Engineer Driver from the cab of his engine to the street. His face was badly ignited. He was removed to his home in Burlington at once.

Conductor Burke ordered Mallory's body removed to the morgue, and an inquest will be held on Tuesday evening. Mallory was not known here. He was filling a striker's place and belonged in New York city.

Sergeant Hanly Summoned.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 27.—Grand Master Sargent of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen was called to Philadelphia by a telegram from Grand Secretary Arnold, who stated that the Lehigh Valley strike was becoming serious.

WHOLESALE MURDER.

Jordan Killed Four of His Wife's Family and Ended His Own Life.

SEYMOUR, Ind., Nov. 27.—As the result of a terrible tragedy growing out of a family feud five people are dead in their country home several miles from this city. Perry Jordan, aged 35 years, and about 21 years old, married a daughter of Joshua Foster, with whom he has never lived happily. Last week they separated, and she returned to the home of her father.

Late Saturday, Jordan met his father-in-law and accompanied him home, contrary to the wishes of the latter, who feared trouble. Jordan promised to behave himself, but soon after his arrival at Foster's home he began a quarrel. Foster then ordered him out of the house, when Jordan fired at the old man, but missed him, the ball striking Cora Foster, aged 17, in the head, killing her instantly. His second shot hit Foster in the head, and he fell, but as soon rose and ran a quarter of a mile to the home of another son-in-law, William Powell, where he fell. He lingered until late in the afternoon, when he died.

Jordan then turned his revolver toward Mrs. Foster, his mother-in-law, shooting her in the neck, the ball ranging downward and causing a wound from which she died.

Jordan's wife attempted to defend her mother, and he stabbed her repeatedly in the breast, hands and face and ended by shooting her through the head. Jordan then opened his vest, and placing the revolver against his breast sent a ball through his heart. He dropped dead, falling across the dead body of his wife. The pistol was placed so close to his breast that Jordan's clothing caught fire and was literally burned off of him, the skin dropping from his body when it was lifted and his corpse presenting a horrible sight.

Sister Feucht Burned to Death.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 27.—Terza Feucht, aged 60 years, sister of Henry Feucht, the leader in the recent secession from the Economite society, was burned to death at her home at Leechdale, Pa. The old lady was winding a clock in front of the grate when her clothing ignited, and before assistance arrived she was burned to a crisp.

Died on the Train.

BRIGHT DAYS DAWNING.

Mill Wheels Are Turning Merrily Once More.

BETTER OUTLOOK EVERYWHERE.

New England's Industries Are Active, and Reports of Increased Trade Come From All Parts of the Country—Millions Ready For Investment.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The Herald today prints a page of dispatches mainly from eastern states telling of the revival of business and says: The night of panic and disaster is past, and the rising sun of prosperity begins to gild the horizon. It is not yet day by any means, but it is dawn, and a myriad busy workers with brain and hand are inspired with new hope and courage. From all parts of the country correspondents send dispatches of an optimistic tenor touching the outlook for manufactures and trade, and in the views of local merchants, manufacturers and bankers which we present this morning there is a similar note of cheer.

Ever since the repeal of the Sherman law assured the country of a sound currency the people have taken new heart, and the tendency of business has improved. Although the tariff agitation is temporarily a disturbing element, there is a growing belief that the changes in the law will be made cautiously and conservatively, and in this conviction many manufacturers have already resumed operations, while an army of others are preparing to do so as soon as congress shall settle the question and let them know just what they are to expect.

New England Mills Running.

The sale of 82,000,000 worth of cotton goods at auction in this city last week at better prices than were expected has given a notable stimulus to the trade in that class of commodities.

In wool the sales of raw material for the last week have been larger than at any time for more than a year past, and in various other lines there are evidences of reviving activity.

The dispatches from New England manufacturing centers are particularly encouraging, and southern enterprise appears to be awakening with renewed vigor. Even the silver producing states, which were to be ruined by the repeal of the Sherman law, are looking up and declaring that they have a boom ahead. Even where actual conditions are still unsatisfactory there are indications that the tendency is right, and men are encouraged to stand fast and make ready to take advantage of the better times that are at hand.

For more than half a year, since the first symptoms of the panic became apparent, the country has been pinching and economizing. Consumption has been restricted, while production has been at a standstill. Because of the financial crisis even the wealthy have refrained from making purchases. The people have exhausted their supplies and worn out their old clothes, and now, with the return of confidence, there must soon be such a general replenishing as will set the mill wheels and factory spindles turning at a merry pace.

Millions of Surplus.

Railway traffic usually furnishes a fair indication of the condition of business, and while the fall off in gross and net as compared with the corresponding month of last year is considerable, the decrease is largely due to the fact that the returns for the present month include the heavy traffic of the World's fair period, while those for last year do not. Other roads that depend largely upon the iron industry are making an unfavorable showing the vast majority of lines report earnings that are only about 2 per cent smaller than they were a year ago—before the panic had struck the country.

Now that thorough confidence in the currency has been restored and hoarded money has been released, there is a plethora of loanable funds at the service of merchants and to push new enterprises. The associated banks of this city alone now hold more than $70,000,000 of surplus funds.

Wall street, always quick to discern any change in the drift of affairs, seems to have last week reached the conclusion that business was improving, for there was a general advance in the prices of bonds and stocks. In short, all the indications obtainable in every direction point to good times in the not distant future.

Mello Seizes British Cattle.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Captain Barclay of the British steamer Indian Prince, which arrived here, states that he sailed from Rio Janeiro in ballast to load at Pernambuco, his steamer carrying cattle from the River Plate for Rio Janeiro. Mello's vessels endeavored to intercept the Indian Prince, but failed. The captain steamed close up under the forts and succeeded in making his escape. Shot and shell passed repeatedly over the vessel. The Sardinian Prince, another vessel of the same line, was stopped and boarded by Mello. His officers seized 73 head of cattle. One of the crew of the Sardinian Prince was wounded.

Rioting in Rome.

ROME, Nov. 27.—A serious disturbance took place on the Piazza Colonna. While the military band was playing on the square a mob, chiefly composed of workmen, gathered in front of the chamber of deputies and soon began to make threatening demonstrations and to utter loud cries of "Down with the thieves!" "Down with the malefactors!" "Up prison with the rascals!" and other violent cries of the same description. A force of police finally dispersed the crowd.

Almost Drowned by Highwaymen.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Nov. 27.—Florence McCarty, a wealthy stock dealer of Stockton, was assaulted by four highwaymen. He refused to give up his money, and they rolled him into the canal and tried to drown him. He succeeded in breaking away, however, and swam to the opposite shore.

Relief For Starving Miners.

HURLEY, Wis., Nov. 27.—Governor Peck and his military staff spent Sunday on the Gogebic range furnishing relief to the idle and suffering miners, several thousand of whom have been out of work for many months and are almost in a starving condition.

Quarrymen Win a Strike.

CALAIS, Me., Nov. 27.—The striking quarrymen of the New Brunswick Red Granite company returned to work today. The company acceded to the demands of the men.

Alexander's Body at Sofia.

SOFIA, Nov. 27.—The body of Count Hartenau, Prince Alexander of Battenberg, was received here with much ceremony.

Thousands of Idle Miners.

DETROIT, Nov. 27.—The closing down of the iron mines in the upper peninsula has thrown thousands of men out of employment.

Bishop of Potters Dead.

PARIS, N. Y., Nov. 27.—The bishop of Potters is dead.

FRANK JONES' COUP.

The Boston and Maine Absorbs All the Down East Roads.

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—The culmination of one of the greatest railroad deals known to New England for years appears to be at hand. The deal is to lend to a combination of the most farreaching character—a deal which means the consolidation of the leading railroads in two states in conjunction with the most powerful corporation in a third. The companies in question are the Boston and Maine, the Concord and Montreal and the Maine Central, with another in view, as yet unnamed.

By the terms of the agreement the Concord railroad will pass into the control of the Boston and Maine for a long term of years. The Boston and Maine railroad will guarantee to the stockholders of the Concord railroad such a sum as will equal the dividend of 10 per cent for years paid by the Concord railroad.

It will guarantee to keep in its present repair and efficiency the roadbed, its rolling stock and all of its property, and to operate the same in a manner equally advantageous to the stockholders and the public.

The consummation of the deal will end the bitter warfare in New Hampshire and prove a serious blow to the personal ambition of the men who have been the leading spirits in the strife. Those members of the Concord directory, headed by John H. Pearson of Concord, N. H., one of the managing directors of the road, will be obliged to retire from active participation in its affairs. It is understood that they will be replaced by Hon. Frank Jones and others who have in the past been associated with the Boston and Maine. By this accession the Boston and Maine will absolutely control the passenger and freight traffic of eastern New England.

A prominent railroad man, who has a reputation for looking into the future, and who five years ago announced the union of the Boston and Maine and the Concord and Montreal as imminent, said:

"The Concord and Montreal and the Boston and Maine deal means in the near future that the control of these important properties will pass into the hands of the Canadian Pacific railway. This Dominion corporation has long been seeking, by a business agreement or otherwise, to secure an entrance into Boston."

SOVEREIGN FOR LEADER.

He Will Accept Powderly's Place as General Master Workman.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—It is tacitly understood by the majority of the delegates to the general assembly of Knights of Labor that upon the opening of the session today Mr. Powderly's resignation will be almost unanimously accepted.

Members of the press committee denied that any caucus was held, but the action of 19 of the delegates seems at variance with that statement. A telegram was sent to James R. Sovereign of Des Moines asking him if he would accept the office Mr. Powderly seeks to vacate. It was signed by 19 delegates, some of whom have heretofore been known as being very friendly to the interests of Mr. Powderly. One of the delegates who signed the telegram said:

"If all the names of all who signed the message were known, it would create considerable surprise in the Powderly camp. Mr. Powderly has said that the order could not get along without him, but the action of the delegates seems to show that the world have been mistaken when he made that assertion. Mr. Sovereign, who is the labor commissioner of Iowa, is the most fitted for the position. He has no fights on hand, and is, we believe, the only one who could amalgamate the different interests of the order and make it what it once was—the strongest labor organization in the world."

A reply to the telegram sent to Mr. Sovereign was received by the delegates, in which Mr. Sovereign said, "If Mr. Powderly has resigned, I will accept the office of general master workman if tendered me and will do all in my power to work for the good of the order."

This practically puts an end to the controversy now going on. The anti-Powderlyites still hold their vote of 24, which is a majority, and upon reassembling will get right down to business.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Points About Carpet Mending of Interest to the Economically Minded.

Brussels and other tap carpets may be pieced so neatly that the seam almost escapes notice. In order to do this the parts to be joined, having been carefully matched in pattern, should be trimmed smoothly, following the line of the weft. Next buttonhole the edges carefully with carpet thread of a color as near as possible the wool of the carpet. Stitches must be taken evenly on wrong side through at least two threads of the weft, taking care not to entangle and fasten or to ravel wool on the edges. When this is done, overhand together on wrong side the two buttonholed edges, and if the work is done neatly when the carpet is tacked down the seam will be perfectly smooth. By the ingenious and capable sewer pieces may be so inserted where holes or ineradicable spots have been as to defy scrutiny, and the diligent be condemned carpet may be rendered useful for at least another year.

Stair carpets so treated will be entirely without the lumpy seams so disagreeable to the tread, and which so soon present a gray, faded ridge destitute of wool.

When carpets have been worn in spots or lines so that the gray weft is exposed, temporary relief may be had by applying liquid dyes with a small paint brush, using colors nearest the wool of the carpet.

A pretty bedly worn stair carpet was made quite presentable by a skillful treatment with colors used for painting on bolting cloth. Shiny carpet sweepers during the year were necessary, and this ingenious frescoing stood admirably the test of frequent dusting and brushing. Care should be taken not to drop the staining liquid in large spots. If not sufficiently colored, allow to dry and repeat treatment next day. Colored bits of various shades are also useful in this direction, according to a writer in Harper's Bazar, who gives the foregoing practical information.

New England Pie of the Real Sort.

In New England there is pie for the morning meal, and the whole hearted farmer boasts, "I may not be as forehanded as some, but I've never seen my breakfast table without pie." Henry Ward Beecher never did a grander deed than when he sang the glories of apple pie. And there are other kinds of pie. Pumpkin pie, made in the proportion of a cupful of pumpkin to a pint of milk, with a beaten egg and a dainty flavoring of spice, baked in a crust which hardened a bit in the oven while the boiling went on; mince pie which is not the tough little mass of jellied citron and candied orange peel, baked in the shape of what the small girls calls a "tarapper" and supplied with syrup through a hole in the top crust in a way unpleasantly suggestive of a lamp being fed with oil, as are the lamps of England.

In this land the housewife adds to one-third of minced apple two-thirds of chopped and cooked lean beef, puts in a cupful of molasses for each pie, adds a soupcon of brandy if she doesn't belong to the W. C. T. U., and some cold, black coffee if she does, spreads the filling on the crust, sticks it full of plump raisins and covers it with a delicate blanket of dough crimped on the edges with a fork. It is baked almost as lengthy a time as the Paterkin quince sauce was cooked, "as long as the fire lasts and then better to put on the next day," and it's more than worth eating when done, writes one who celebrates in Good Housekeeping the praise of New England cookery.

Cushion For Sidekpins.

This is undoubtedly worthy of a place in one's collection of pretty things for Christmas gifts. It consists of a circular pad bound and lined with emerald green velvet, ornamented with a diagonal band of gold embroidery and fancy gimp. The graduated flounce of lace is caught up at the sides with loops and ends of satin ribbon corresponding with the one which hides the wall hook and depending from the center of the twist holder.

Ammonia as a Carpet Cleaner.

If you wish to clean and brighten your carpets after they have been beaten and put down, wipe with a cloth wrung from water, to which a little ammonia has been added. A tablespoonful of ammonia in a gallon of water will often restore colors in carpets. It will also remove whitewash stains from them. In fact, the housekeeper has no better help than her bottle of ammonia.

Cold Slaw.

One head of fine white cabbage, minced fine; 3 hard boiled eggs; 2 tablespoonfuls salad oil; 2 teaspoonfuls white sugar; 1 teaspoonful salt; 1 teaspoonful pepper; 1 teaspoonful made mustard; 1 teacupful vinegar. Mix and pour upon the chopped cabbage.

Rabbit Stew.

Joint rabbits, fry in hot bacon fat with one sliced onion. Cover with one quart of boiling water, add one sweet pepper cut small, three cloves, salt and pepper. Simmer till meat tender, thicken with a little flour and add chopped parsley.

HER DILEMMA.

After Some Blushing She Told Him Her Secret.

A tall woman with lustrous black eyes and a beautiful complexion, wearing a seal cape and some expensive jewelry, walked nervously back and forth in front of a Main street cigar store shortly after 6 o'clock last evening. She clasped and unclasped her hands nervously and was evidently very much worried about something or other.

Men who passed along looked curiously at her, but no one ventured to speak. Finally a benevolent looking man with close cropped gray whiskers came along. He looked at the woman and passed on. Before he had gone half a block he almost stopped walking. Then he did stop, and then he turned and came back to the woman.

"Madam," he said politely, "you seem to be distressed."

She blushed scarlet in the glare of the electric light, stammered and then said, "Oh, sir".

"There, there, madam," said the benevolent looking man soothingly, "calm yourself. Do not be distressed. Tell me what is troubling you, and I will use every endeavor to aid you. Tell me, madam, what it is that is on your mind."

The tall woman blushed again. She raised her downcast eyes, stammered again and said, "Oh, sir, you are very kind, but"——

"There, there, madam!" said the benevolent looking man's smile was gone, "no buts. Tell me what it is that is preying on your mind. Confide in me, and I will cheerfully help you out of your trouble and undertake whatever you may desire. What is it that has so deeply agitated you?"

The tall woman seemed to gain control of herself. She glanced searchingly at the benevolent looking man, and then said: "I am ashamed to confess to you, sir, a perfect stranger, yet I must find a way out of my quandary."

The benevolent looking man's smile expanded. "Tell me!" he insisted.

The tall woman blushed again. She hesitated in the prettiest manner imaginable, and said confusedly, "I know I am awfully ignorant, but my husband told me to buy him some tea of chewing tobacco, and I don't know whether they sell it by the quart or by the yard."

And, strange to say, the benevolent looking man didn't stop to inform her.—Buffalo Express.

His Assurance.

"I wish to know," said the elderly female physician who had been admitted to the office of the western lawyer, "if it is safe for a lone woman to go on the streets here at night?"

And the lawyer looked as serious and solemn as the circumstances would permit when he replied, "Madam, I can't look you in the face and say that it is not."—Detroit Tribune.

The Meaning of D. P. P.

A crusty old Irishman with a grizzled beard of the Horace Greeley type and a stoop that almost doubled him up was laboriously shoving a heavy push cart full of dried leaves and other debris along the mall in Central park a few mornings ago, now and then pausing to rest for a moment. On the cart were painted in white the D. P. P., initials of the department of public parks. A gentleman who was strolling by accosted the aged Celt with the question, "What do those letters stand for?"

The old man gazed intently at the letters, and then said slowly and thoughtfully: "Day, pay, pay—day, pay, pay. Shure, Oi'm not quite sartain, sor. But Oi'm afther thinkin they do be standin for does poor pay."—New York Herald.

Tit For Tat.

He—I didn't marry you. You were sold to me.

She—Yes. I was the one who was sold.—Truth.

No Doubt of It.

If you have ever been in the Quaker City, you have seen rows and rows of red brick houses, each one having from two to six white marble steps leading to the white painted front door and just at the threshold on the right hand side an old fashioned iron foot scraper. In one of these houses lives a little boy who is too much of an invalid to care about romping in the streets, so he sits in the front window day after day, watching the other boys and girls and children.

One day last week it was raining hard, and the streets were very muddy. It was Wednesday and the maid's day out. Harry sat as usual in his window and counted the umbrellas as they passed. His mother had a headache and was lying on a couch near the fire.

Presently one of the passing umbrellas paused in front of Harry's front door; it hesitated and suddly collapsed, revealing the form of a strange man. This individual proceeded to rub the doorbell vigorously. Harry's mother stirred uneasily, but did not rise. Again the bell rang, and she sat up, with a gesture of pain.

"Oh, dear!" she moaned. "Harry, who is it?"

"I don't know, mamma."

"Is in a rage, is he?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Do you suppose he really wants to get in?"

At this the poor woman looked appealingly at the boy.

Harry craned his neck so as to get a better view of this troublesome visitor, then turning he said hopefully:

"I guess he really does, mamma, for he is sharpening his feet."—Exchange.

At the Past and Present supper in Vincent chapel, this evening, cake, candy and lemonade will be on sale, in connection with the supper.

Mrs. Pike is chairman of the supper committee and her co-workers are Mrs. Packer, Mrs. Salmon Baker, Mrs. Lyons, Mrs. Lord, Mrs. Hamble, Mrs. Horne, Mrs. Peck, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. Lucky, Mrs. Hyde, Miss S. Jackson and Miss Sharp.

Mrs. J. W. Jackson is to have charge of the cakes, and she will be assisted by Mrs. H. A. McCoy, Mrs. G. Evans, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Howell, Miss Chandler and Miss Barnes.

Mrs. Clark will be assisted with the lemonade by Miss Minnie French and Miss Whitney.

The candy is all to be home-made and Miss Mary E. Brown, Miss M. Barnes, Miss Douglass, Mrs. Joy, Mrs. Lyman, Miss Morrison, Mrs. Colles T. Pond, Miss Pangborn, Mrs. P. M. Smith and Miss Yeale are the makers.

The funds raised from affairs held by the Society are devoted to the interests of the church.

BREVITIES.

—Thanksgiving Thursday.

—"Past and Present Supper" at Vincent chapel to-night.

—The sheriff of Somerset county draws the petit jurors to-day.

—On Friday night the Borough Council will hold its regular December meeting.

—The bowling game between the Elizabeth Field Club and the C. Y. M. I. of this city, which was to have taken place to-night, has been postponed to to Dec. 4th.

—The partnership of Hallock & Davis was dissolved to-day. Mr. Hallock will continue the business, while Mr. Davis will devote his time to the business of Davis & Stevens.

—The phenomenal business of "1893" at Palmer's keeps right up undisturbed by any kind of competition. It is a gay and gorgeous show of the period, absolutely unique, and by far the merriest and most vivacious entertainment in New York. It has been said in jest that "1492" may become an established institution as Palmer's just as pantomime is at Drury Lane, in London.

—It is with pleasure we record that Mr. F. W. Runyon denies that he sent the "fake" ghost story to the New York Herald which was published therein last week. He says it was done by some one from the Herald who ought to have known better. Mr. Runyon claims to assume that our criticism was made to injure him with the Herald, and that a marked copy of the paper was sent to the Herald for that purpose. A marked copy may have been sent, but not by any one connected with THE NEWS, so far as we are aware or believe, We consider, however, that "fake" writers ought to be exposed, in every possible way, as public frauds and swindlers, and THE NEWS will with pleasure engage in such work in the interest of the public, but this does not appear to be a case deserving such medicine, in view of Mr. Runyon's denial. THE NEWS said it was in order for him to explain, as he was credited with the authorship of the fake. He has, we think, explained quite satisfactorily. The verdict is "Not guilty, but don't do it again."

Meeting for Organized Charity To-Night.

PROVISIONS DONATED BY THE SCHOOL CHILDREN FOR THE POOR.

A List of the Articles Given by Each School as Thanksgiving Donations The Gifts Distributed in a Number of Cases.

HE following is a list of provisions donated by the school children and taken to the schools by them on Monday, as a Thanksgiving offering to the poor of our city. There has been much enthusiasm among the children, and they have enjoyed deeply the pleasure of giving, some even going without butter that they might be able to give.

The gifts at the Irving school were distributed in that district by a committee of ladies from the chapel there. Some families were supplied by the other schools and the rest collected and delivered to the Relief Association free of charge by Mr. Lewis B. Coddington.

The plan was suggested by Prof. Maxson, principal of the schools.

The Crescent Wheelmen's 20-Mile Road Race.

Among the events for Thanksgiving Day is the twenty-mile handicap road race of the Crescent Wheelmen, to be decide over the Park avenue course. The entries promise excellent sport and a close finish. As an incentive to good work the prizes offered are very valuable, the first being a Credenda racer, presented by Mr. Rogers. The other trophies are: Second prize, field telescope; third, rifle; fourth, pair of pneumatic tires; fifth, sweater; sixth, bicycle lamp; time prize, gold medal. The first batch of riders will be sent off at 10.30 a. m. promptly.

A Lunch Box Sociable.

On Thanksgiving night a lunch box sociable will be held at the home of Mr. John Herrman, on Regent street, by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Warren chapel. The arrangements are in charge of the Social Committee, comprised of Fred L. Walker, chairman; Miss Jennie M. Sulphen, treasurer; and Albert Johnson, secretary. These socialables will be given every two weeks during the Winter.

TURNED A SOMERSAULT

THE REMARKABLE PERFORMANCE OF A GROCER'S HORSE.

This Equine Wonder Not Only got its Head Where its Feet Ought to be, but did it so Gracefully that but Little Damage was Done.

A horse owned by a grocer named Shirley, while being driven quite rapidly on West Third street near Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday noon, stumbled and fell. That was simply a small accident. The odd part of it was that, as the animal fell, its head went down between its forelegs and it turned a complete somersault.

The wrench on the reins yanked the driver from his seat, but he escaped with a few slight bruises.

The horse may have had a slight headache, but, otherwise, seemed to suffer no inconvenience from his little effort in the acrobatic line.

The harness and wagon were somewhat damaged.

TO PERMANTLY ORGANIZE.

Meeting of the City Democrats Last Night.

SEVEN Democrats were appointed a committee last night to draft resolutions favoring the permanent organization of the city Democracy, at a meeting held at headquarters to discuss the matter.

Judge Wadsworth acted as chairman of the meeting and Mr. William Wright was chosen secretary.

Mr. Marine made a speech, setting forth the benefits to be derived from such organization. He also spoke on the tariff question.

The committee appointed consisted of Messrs. John J. Kenny, William Gioss, C. F. Ball, Frank Vosseler, William O'Connor, Peter Flynn, and Ira Burlbut.

The resignation of Mr. Peter Casey as nominee for Councilman-at-large was accepted, and Mr. Henry C. Ely was given the nomination. Mr. Ely was present and made a speech, thanking those present for the honor.

THE WAGON FELL ON HIM.

One of Neuman Bros.' Clerks Severely Injured.

Harley Apgar, a clerk in the employ of Neuman Bros., was severely injured this morning in a runaway accident. As Mr. Apgar came out of a customer's house, his horse started off. He ran and jumped upon the step. As he did so the horse turned suddenly to one side overturning the wagon upon Mr. Apgar. He was dragged a considerable distance before the horse was stopped.

The wagon was badly wrecked.

Mr. Apgar was taken to Dr. Tomlinson's office where his injuries were attended to.

No bones were broken. His injuries consist of muscular bruises.

PERSONAL.

Mr. H. P. Reynolds of Washington avenue left this morning for a few days' visit at Philadelphia with relatives.

—Yesterday Justice Nash issued summons in the case of Frohnsan vs. Blankenagale, in tort, returnable Dec. 7th.

Miss Nellie Breen of Elizabeth has returned home, after a pleasant visit with Miss Addie Weaver of Orchard place.

Justice of the Peace Mosher yesterday started for Boston. He is to help settle up the estate of his wife's sister, who died there last week.

Mr. David King of Craig place, North Plainfield, has received word that his father, Mr. J. W. King, formerly of this city, is ill at his home on Pacific street, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Thomas Rutledge of Warren street, North Plainfield, died suddenly early this morning of apoplexy. Mrs. Rutledge sat up late last night writing a letter. She finished it at eleven o'clock and made a mustard plaster and placed it on her husband's neck, who complained of a stiffness of the neck. This was the last act of the wife for the husband. He retired leaving her down stairs. She followed her husband to bed shortly afterwards. At about 3.30 o'clock this morning Mr. Rutledge was awakened by a peculiar noise made by his wife. He did not think anything was the matter with her, as she said nothing. In a few moments, the baby cried, and as Mrs. Rutledge, who always awoke at the least noise made by the baby, did not stir, the husband concluded that something was the matter with her. He discovered that she was dying. Dr. Long was summoned, but before he arrived she was dead. County Physician Rood, was sent for, and his investigation concurred with that of Dr. Long that death was due to apoplexy.

Machinists to Hold a Public Meeting.

On December 5th the International Association of Machinists will hold a public meeting in Red Men's Hall, on West Front street. Addresses will be made by Councilman Herman Weber and Vincent L. Frazee. A musical programme will also be rendered.

The meeting was to have been held tomorrow night, but was changed by request of the committee.

TO BUY A PEST HOUSE.

THE BOROUGH BOARD OF HEALTH ACTIVE.

At Last Night's Meeting the Health Inspector was Directed to see if a Building Suitable for a Pest House Could be Obtained.

GOULD smallpox come upon us the Borough Board of Health does not intend; to be taken unawares. At their meeting last night, at which the Rev. Dr. Honeyman, Dr. J. B. Carman, Mr. H. M. French and Mr. Frank Curtis were present, Health Inspector Whitely was directed to see if there was a suitable house procurable in the borough for a pest house in case an epidemic of smallpox or any other disease should break out. Mr. Whitely was also authorized to see what arrangements could be made regarding the prompt securing of horses. Such an epidemic is not expected but the Board thinks that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and are thus going to be prepared for any emergency. The school children were all vaccinated two years ago, and so no fear is felt of a contagious disease among them.

A report was read from Mr. Whitely stating that he had made an investiga- tion of the report that Italians from the smallpox section of Elizabeth, were at work upon the grading of Fairview avenue, and that he found there were three men from Elizabeth at work there. This was the investigation called for by THE NEWS to protect our people from the contagion.

At Mr. Whitely's request the men were discharged.

Health Officer Pangborn reported that he and John Gunn had made another inspection of the raceway, and found that all the connections for sewerage purposes had been discontinued except one, and that one about eight days ago was also cut off.

STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Preparations Already Being Made for the Next Annual Convention

The New Jersey State Epworth League will hold its second annual convention in the Simpson Methodist Episcopal church, Camden, on May 9 and 10. The first convention, held last May, in Newark, was attended by 800 delegates.

Every local chapter will be entitled to send two delegates for a membership of 100, and one additional delegate for the major fraction of over 100 after the first. The State officers are already making arrangements for the convention.

There are nearly 25,000 Epworth Leaguers in the State of New Jersey.

DOGS WITHOUT OWNERS.

A General Howl Against the Dog Tax.

The lobby of the Council Chamber was filled with people this afternoon at the meeting of the Commissioners of Appeal. Most of the complaints seemed to be from people who had been taxed for dogs and had none.

Refused to Pay the Extra Tax.

The citizens of Bernards Township will meet at Louis Doty's Hotel on Saturday to discuss the paying of the railroad bonds of Bernards Township, that are thought to be illegal by the people. An extra tax of about sixty cents on every hundred dollars has got to be paid on account of the Town Committee deciding to pay the bonds. A number of the leading men of Bernards Township have refused to pay the extra tax.

Getting Ready for the Celebration.

The committee having in charge the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the formation of Westfield Township, which occurs January 27, are holding frequent meetings and pushing forward the preparations for the event. All the townships that have been formed out of the original Westfield Township—Cranford, Fanwood, Clark and Plainfield—will send representatives to take part in the celebration.

John Oberlaud to be Buried Friday.

John Oberlaud, who was run over and killed yesterday by a wagon will be buried Friday. His body has been taken to his mother's home, Washington Valley, where the funeral services will be held, at twelve o'clock at the house and one o'clock at the Crossroads church. Deceased was a member of the Salvation Army and of the Warren chapel Christian Endeavor Society. The latter will attend his funeral in a body.

Burnt Out a Fuse.

This noon no. 5 burnt out a fuse while on Somerset street, near Mountain avenue. In consequence it had to wait until the other car come up, and furnished a new fuse for it. The cars then transferred passengers and No. 5 went back to the stable while No. 2 returned to the depot.

The Weather.

The weather to-morrow promises to be generally colder, clearing and fair.

SPREADING SMALLPOX.

A MAN BROKEN OUT WITH THE DISEASE WALKS ABROAD.

He Calmly Walked into Dr. O'Reilly's Office, at Elizabeth, after Traveling through the City.

Consternation prevailed yesterday in the family of City and County Physician E. R. O'Reilly, at Elizabeth, when a man walked into the house, his face and hands covered with pustules, and calmly announced that he had smallpox and asked to see the physician. The servant fled in terror from the room, and with the children of Dr. O'Reilly sought refuge in another part of the house, first taking precaution to lock themselves in.

Telephone messages were sent to police headquarters, and the health officials to remove the man, who for the time being had the lower part of the premises to himself. He sat down in the office and remained there until an ambulance arrived and conveyed him to the pest house.

The man said he came from Lorraine and walked to the car through the streets of Elizabeth, where City Physician O'Reilly lives.

The Board of Health fears that the patient came part of the way in a horsecar.

Dr. O'Reilly is a member of the State Board of Health. His residence will have to be quarantined for fifteen days. Dr. O'Reilly's wife has for the past week been hovering between life and death. Her condition was only slightly improved yesterday. It is feared that in her enfeebled state she may contract the infection, in which case there would be no hope of saving her life.

Story of Democratic Legislation.

The story of Democratic legislation is one of extravagance. They have made the boast that no State tax has been necessary under the management of affairs. Yet in all parts of the State, by their interference with local affairs in overthrowing municipal governments, and forcing new and more elaborate and more expensive systems of government upon communities, they have greatly added to the burdens of the people. A comparison of the financial reports of the years 1891 and 1892, respectively, shows a marked increase in the rates of local taxation all over the State. Even Somerset was not exempted by this era of extravagance, inaugurated by the ring democracy. The following table shows the rates on each $100 worth of property in the various townships:

	1892.	1891.
Bedminster	....	99
Bernards	95	1 14
Branchburg	78	1 17
Bridgewater	1 02	1 20
Franklin	99	1 00
Hillsborough	70	1 00
Montgomery	1 00	1 00
North Plainfield	1 07	1 00
Warren	1 00	1 00

The tax means a great addition to the burdens of the people in ten years.—Unionist Gazette.

An Example of Genuine Political Honesty.

[Westfield Standard.]

Since we quit writing love letters we have never, it seems to us, jabbed a pen into an ink pot with greater gladness than we do to write that Geo. Kyte, now sheriff of Union county, is positively known to have refused a large sum of money which was offered to him by the race track people when he was in the Legislature. We say this with the greater gladness because, in these days of political rascality, it is refreshing to point to an example of genuine political honesty. Nothing in Mr. Kyte's record as a loyal soldier stands more to his credit than his loyalty as a citizen under the firm of a gang of political thieves.

First Baptist Church Statistics.

In the First Baptist church, which celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary, Sunday, as reported in yesterday's NEWS, there are at present 683 members. During the seventy-five years 2,300 have joined the church.

The present church cost about $75,000. During the last thirty years money was raised as follows: For benevolence, $115,-214.61; current expenses, $127,288.05; building and repairs, $100,470.09; sundries, $15,000. Total, $483,980.99.

An Exploding Lamp Causes Nearly $3,000 Loss.

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 28.—About ten o'clock last night a hanging lamp in the parlor of Dr. Lewis Easburn, a dentist on Church street, exploded, setting fire to the premises, which caused damage to the extent of nearly $2,000. The dentist's wife and only child barely escaped with their lives. The loss to the family was $600 in furniture and $300 in cash. Their house was over a clothing store which was damaged by water about $1,400. The building belonged to the Conover estate. The promptness of the fire department saved it from greater destruction.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Stead Approves of the Bible.

W. T. Stead of The Review of Reviews made a very religious address before a large audience in the chapel of the University of Chicago not long ago. Editor Stead being religious, it was Steadesque all through. The famous editor told the audience to remember that God had the ordinary common sense of an American citizen. They would not dare to tell any man of average intelligence the lies they told God and expected him to think the more of them for it. Mr. Stead thought it was not likely that he would ever see any audience of that night again, but he wanted to leave with them his life message condensed. It was: "Don't preach much. Do a kindness where you can."

Stead declares further that the editor is to the people of our time what the old Jewish prophets were to theirs, and that he himself considers that he succeeds just so far as he is able to incorporate the spirit of the Bible into his journal. He adds:

"Don't think I am talking shop, but I have sometimes wished I could make a Review of Reviews editor of the Bible—that is, for the present I am not thinking of publishing it, but in the first chapter of Isaiah. The old prophets correspond to the modern editor. The editor in our time will always take it seriously enough to convey the truth—that is, the "word of the Lord." But without the telegraph and news gatherer's machinery the old prophet interpreted the facts of the times. Many a time has this editorial of Isaiah shaken me in my own difficulties. When in doubt, as to whether to tell the truth or the expedient thing, the manly fear has been of desertion to duty. He told the Jews squarely that they were no better than the Edomites and heaped on them the most terrible epithets as proud of their country as you are of yours, and that's saying a great deal. If you are to be a prophet to editors, it must come down into the marrow of your life, and you will not go far wrong, no matter how old or abused your theories of inspiration may be.

If a Horse Could Talk.

The first words a horse would utter if he could talk would be: "Loosen that overdraw check. It is torturing me out of life. It injures my windpipe, weakens my knees, makes me stumble and stiffens the muscles of my neck so that I can never again straighten it, but after a year or two I must finish my brief career with a neck fixed in the shape of that of the worst looking rackabones that ever drew a rag wagon. In many a case the rackabones was just as good looking a horse as I am now, only the check rein ruined him. How would you like to go through life with your head pulled back and kept back of your neck and kept there by means of a strap that was fastened to a steel bar in your mouth? Try it an hour and then release me from torture.

"If I am a good horse, I do not need this cruel check rein. Only a bad horse wants it, and bad horses are very few. Even when it is used on one of these, it should be attached to a separate bit, for the check rein pulls an ordinary bit one way while the driver pulls the other way with the carriage rein, and makes a seesaw upon the horse's tongue and the corners of his mouth. This wicked strap comes with every new set of harness, it is true, but that is no reason why my mouth should be pried open with it and my neck broken. In the name of horsehood I protest against the overdraw check rein as most drivers use it."

This country is large enough and varied enough as to its climate and productions to have an interesting exposition going on in some part of it the year around. Georgia has followed up the World's fair with a state exposition at Augusta which was attractive enough to draw out 50,000 people to attend its opening. South Carolina has joined in making the show a success, and the agricultural department displays the finest exhibit of southern products ever brought together. If Georgia has been able to keep some of her biggest watermelons on ice for this exposition, she will astonish the natives from the north astonished as she is. The fire drill was brought into requisition at once, and the children were marched out in perfect safety. Then it was found out that the fire drill had so impressed one of the pupils, a 14-year-old boy, that he had set fire to the building just to see how the children would get out in case of a real fire.

A New York paper that prides itself on its superiority lately had a sparkling headline anent the horse show as follows, "Equine Stars on Dress Parade." Of course one would not venture to pick flaws in the gifted head lining of a great metropolitan newspaper, but really, when it comes to horse stars on dress parade, is it not rather a jumbling of metaphors somehow? Come, now!

South Carolina moonshiners defy even Governor Tillman, and now they will continue to exercise their American citizen's right to make and sell whisky when and where they please. Governor Tillman knows how the federal authorities felt when the moonshiners defied them.

THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

It Proposes Some Sweeping Reductions In Duties.

A RADICAL MEASURE OF REFORM.

A Synopsis of the Chief Features of the Democratic Measure Shows That Wool, Coal, Iron Ore, Lumber, Copper, Salt and Many Minor Articles Are to Be Free.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The meeting of the ways and means committee, at which the new tariff bill was presented, was very brief. All the Democratic members were on hand, but the only Republican members present were Messrs. Reed, Burrows, Hopkins, Payne and Dalzell. Immediately after the roll call Chairman Wilson spread the tariff bill before the committee. The only advance copy furnished was one given to the White House messenger a half hour previous for transmission to the president. No business of importance was transacted by the committee. The Republican members were supplied with copies of the bill, a few minutes before being ready, and the committee adjourned to give time to the minority to examine the measure.

TALKING OF THE BILL.

Democratic Tariff Framers Are Enthusiastic Over It.

TOM REED'S SHARP CRITICISM.

Republicans Unable To Denouncing the New Tariff Measure as Almost Wholly Bad. Governor McKinley Says Business Interests Are Ignored.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The new tariff bill is naturally the general topic in official circles today. The Democratic members of the ways and means committee point out its benefits with enthusiasm, and the Republicans criticise it freely.

Ex-Speaker Reed, a member of the ways and means committee, said: "Of course it is very easy for the gentlemen who prepared this bill to present their views, since they have been busily engaged in the work for a number of weeks, while the first sight that the minority had of the bill was at 11 o'clock yesterday. Like any other tariff bill which covers so many different objects and takes up so much space, all any one could do who has but seen it is to make some obvious comments on certain portions of it. In the first place, the country ought to understand that there has been a certain degree of unfairness about the preparation of this bill—unfairness to the country rather than to individuals—arising from the composition of the committees.

"The Democracy have taken the lion's share of the committee. They have done this for a purpose, for while the northern Democrats are represented upon the committees, they are represented in such a way that the south holds a strange and very unfortunate predomination. As their industrial status is very much different from the average of the whole country, it necessarily follows, and absolutely in fact has followed, that the bill is about as bad as could be reasonably imagined. This may not be true with regard to every item, but it is certainly true with regard to the most important matters in the bill.

Favors the Farmers.

"In the first place, one of the most striking things objected to is the frequent unnecessary changes from specific duties to ad valorem duties. Probably no one who has actual business to in the United States can see, even if the ad valorem duties were calculated upon the same basis as the specific duties, that in actual practice, owing to the wrongful and underhandedness and appraisements are made, it would be a reduction of at least 10 per cent in the tariff on this basis.

"In the cotton schedule specific rates have been retained undoubtedly because the south was more or less interested in cotton manufactures, and the desire to protect their own local interests has caused them to adopt the system which they have rejected elsewhere to the disadvantage of their neighbors.

"In the cotton schedule the lowering of rates on fine goods is likely to work very much disaster to mills that are engaged in the production of such work and also in cotton yarn mills.

"In wool the schedule rates are not only too low generally, but they are so uneven in their classification that the lowering of wages will not by any possibility save some industries, so that the workingmen in some parts of this industry will not have the comparative good fortune to only have their wages reduced, but are quite likely to lose them altogether. This is true in some extent, as it seems, in the cotton schedule.

"Coal has been placed upon the free list for the advantage of Nova Scotia mines, which have been purchased by gentlemen who have been interested in the tariff, and West Virginia is likely thereby, according to the Democratic governor of the state, to suffer largely in damage and be arrested in its development.

"Iron ore is quite free, which will cause a lowering of wages in the iron mines and will require the attention of the fields of effort which had already got to be very large and which were tending to the reduction of prices.

"New England seems to have been very severely treated in many ways. Our fishermen on the coast of Maine have been especially considered to their very great disadvantage in the putting of fresh fish on the free list, without even the saving clause 'for immediate consumption.'

"I think and will remain that it is as unsatisfactory as could well be imagined. What they have in store for us in the revenue bill, it seems, we are not to know, so that we cannot judge their scheme as a whole; but, judging from the sample which has been presented, it is an unfortunate one for the country. It would seem impossible that such a bill could become a law."

From a Democratic View.

The following statement explaining the provisions of the new tariff bill was made by Hon. Clifton R. Breckinridge of Arkansas, one of the ways and means committee:

"The new tariff bill, if it is proposed, shall go into effect on the 1st day of March next. It is in most schedules a very substantial reduction from the present law. The general average of reduction will be closely stated until the elaborate tables which are being prepared are completed. Some $50,000,000 of objections in taxes are taken off, and of this amount about $10,000,000 pertains to raw materials placed on the free list.

"The revenue deficiency caused by the reform made and present depression is a temporary deficiency, and it will doubtless be provided for by a temporary expedient. We cannot generalize upon this, and some provision is contemplated to meet such emergencies as they arise.

"But, taking matters at a normal state, it may be said that we must provide for $50,000,000, or a figure less or less, in ways not expressed in the new tariff. This will follow very soon—in time to be incorporated with the present bill. But as this is not expected to be of a character to materially affect manufacturing or trade, and the people were extremely anxious to know what is proposed doing in regard to the tariff, we concluded to make the new bill public as soon as it was finally completed."

Mr. Benton McMillan of Tennessee, one of the most prominent members of the committee, summarized the bill by saying, "It may be generally stated that the bill heavily reduces woolen goods, iron and steel products, cotton goods, chemicals and many other things essential to the prosperity of the people, and it will when tried, if it becomes a law, prove a great benefit to the country."

McKinley on Wilson's Bill.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 28.—Governor McKinley, on arriving here, was asked his opinion of the Wilson tariff bill. He said that he had not read the abstract of the measure and had only glanced through Mr. Wilson's review of it. He said that it was such a measure as he had expected, yet a little more sweeping than he had anticipated. It was, however, in line with the expressed determination of the Democracy to ignore the business interests and the working people of the country.

The objectionable feature of the bill, Mr. McKinley said, was the substitution of ad valorem for specific duties. That above ought to defeat the entire measure. The ad valorem system, he said, rests upon the foreign valuation, which is hard to determine, and puts a premium upon undervaluation frauds. All of the leading nations of the world, he declared, had abandoned the ad valorem system of levying tariff duties for the reason that the valuation is made thousands of miles from the port of entry and can never be depended upon.

Iron Men Protest.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 28.—The Wilson tariff bill is the theme of conversation among iron, steel and glass manufacturers, coal operators and business men generally. Hon. B. F. Jones of the Jones & Laughlin American iron and steel works said the effect of the proposed bill would be disastrous to the iron and steel industries of the country. "If the measure should be signed by the president," said he, "50 per cent of the labor now employed would be rendered idle, and the remainder would have to work for one-half the present wages."

H. W. Oliver of the Oliver Iron and Steel company said: "As present prices are below the cost of production, must be borne by labor and freights. The change to ad valorem duties is indefensible, and it is simply brutal to have the bill go into effect on March 1."

THE KNIGHTS' NEW LEADER.

Powderly Goes Out Gracefully, and Sovereign Steps In.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—T. V. Powderly's resignation as grand master workman of the Knights of Labor was accepted, and J. R. Sovereign of Iowa has been elected to succeed him. An entirely new executive board has been chosen. The news of his election was immediately telegraphed to Mr. Sovereign, who is expected to be present before the adjournment of the general assembly. There was great rejoicing in the camp of the so called Hayes faction over the result.

Mr. Powderly, when seen shortly afterward, seemed in excellent humor. When asked his opinion of the assembly's action, he said:

"The ring is dead. Long live the king! Mr. Sovereign will have no heartier support by any individual of the order than he will receive from me. He is eminently worthy of the position, and I believe he will fill the office as well as any one can.

At one time our numerical strength was not below the 500,000 mark, and now it is barely 60,000, but then rises and falls have ever been the portion of empires. We will again rise—perhaps higher than ever. Personally I bear no ill will against any one. I am perfectly satisfied that events have so shaped themselves.

"True, I only exercised the right that the constitution vested in me and attempted to carry out my idea as to who should constitute the general executive board. The gentlemen I named were all friends of mine and good, true Knights. I was determined to stand by them and believed that my proposition was the right one, and rather than see my friends fall alone I was willing to go down with them.

"The welfare of the order has always been the aim of my life, and no man can say that I did not conscientiously discharge the duties that were intrusted to me. As for the order being indebted to me to the tune of $5,000, but I am not uneasy about that. I shall remain in the order and do what I can for its benefit. I do not know who will carry out my unification or amalgamated ideas."

THAT EARTHQUAKE.

It Was Felt All Through Northern New York and Canada.

MALONE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Two severe shocks of earthquake were felt in Malone. They followed each other in quick succession. No rumbling sound was heard, the shocks appearing like a concussion. The most substantial buildings trembled as if about to fall, and the occupants ran frightened into the streets. The wall of the academy building was thrown outward from its position. A panic ensued among the scholars, who rushed for the doors. Some of the pupils on the first floor jumped to the ground. No one was severely injured. A few chimneys were shattered. Clocks, vases, dishes, etc., were shaken from their places and were smashing to the floor. Only slight damage is reported from the adjoining towns. The earthquake was distinctly felt at Plattsburg, Burlington and Saranac Lake.

ODGENSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Several distinct earthquake shocks were felt, but no damage was done.

GRANVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The shock of an earthquake was felt in this city. A few people ran out of their houses, the vibration being quite perceptible. The shock was felt in Northville and other parts of Fulton county.

Canada Shaken Too.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—The earthquake caused great excitement, and the people were thoroughly frightened. People in large buildings like the Windsor hotel, Canadian Pacific railroad offices, etc., all rushed into the street expecting the buildings to come down. The ice in the canal here broke up. A man working on a building in Sherbrooke street was thrown from his ladder and seriously injured.

The disturbance seemed to be horizontal rather than vertical. Sir William Dawson of McGill college said it was the most marked disturbance of the earth's surface in Canada since 1886. Every town in eastern Canada felt it.

Boston Will Play Chicago.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The Boston Athletic association's football team started for Chicago today, where the Chicago Athletic club will meet them on Thanksgiving day in a match.

Contraband Chinese Captured.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Four Chinese laborers who were attempting to enter the United States were captured here.

Fire in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 28.—Fire in a warehouse owned by the Johns Hopkins estate did $75,000 damage.

French Deputy Dead.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Vicomte Kermen guy, member of the chamber of deputies, is dead.

Something the Matter With the Timepiece.

"I bought this thing at your store two or three weeks ago," said an exasperated citizen the other morning, taking a fine gold watch out of his pocket and handing it over the counter at a jewelry establishment on Madison street, "and paid you $75 in cash for it."

"Well," observed the jeweler, "you got a bargain. I don't see anything wrong with it."

"Oh, no! You don't see anything wrong! You warranted it to keep good time, didn't you?"

"Certainly. It's exactly with our time. It doesn't seem to have varied a minute since you got it."

"It doesn't, hey?" snorted the other. "Look here! You said it would keep time just as well when I was carrying it round to me as when it was hanging up at home, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"You said it I would wind it up regularly every morning at about the same hour I never would have any trouble with it, didn't you?"

"I think it very likely I did."

"I think it very likely! Well, sir, ever since I got that watch I've wound it every morning at 9 o'clock exactly. Haven't varied a minute. Ten days ago I had to go to Denver on business. Found my watch had gained a whole hour. Came back home the other day and found it had slowed up a whole hour and was just about as it was when I went away. I've got no use for a watch that will gain and lose like that. Darn such a watch! I want a better one in place of it or, I want my money back, and I want it mighty quick!"—Chicago Tribune.

Bound to Go to Jail, Anyhow.

"It appears, prisoner," said the judge, "that you are a pick pocket."

"Well, if your honor says so," said the prisoner, "I guess I don't deny it, for I'm not committed for contempt."—Harper's Bazar.

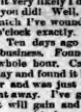
All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet, pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and ensure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.



Sold in 3 and 5 pound pails.

Webster's Encyclopædic Dictionary.

It contains Webster's Unabridged Dictionary with Dennison's Patent Finger-tip Index.

"NOTA"—In the revision of Webster's grand work it has become the fashion to throw out what they consider obsolete words. Well, as the Dictionary is a "Work of Reference," we kept the original work intact.

It also contains a supplement of about 1000 pages with a complete finger-tip index. This supplement not only contains every word in the home edition of both Webster's and Worcester's Unabridged Dictionaries, but 45,000 more than are contained in either, and 25,000 more than are contained in the latest issue of both.

Endorsed by Julius H. Seelye, President of Amherst College; R. G. Robinson, President of Brown University; Thos. W. Bicknell, President of Chautauqua Teachers' Reading Union, and other leading educators.

Price in Half Morocco Binding, $23.50. Price in full Russia, $10.50. Terms, $1 on delivery, balance $1 a month. Respectfully, THE WERNER CO., of New York and Chicago. 12 27 Sa 15 w Tu Th 1 m

EDITORIAL NOTES

Stead Approves of the Bible.

W. T. Stead of The Review of Reviews made a very religious address before an audience in the chapel of the University of Chicago not long ago. Because being religious, it was Steadesque all through. The famous editor told his audience to remember that God had the ordinary common sense of an American citizen. They would not dare to tell any man of average intelligence the lies they told God and expected him to think the nature of them for it. Mr. Stead thought it was not likely that he would ever see the audience of that night again, but he wanted to leave with them his life message condensed. It was: "Don't preach much. Do a kindness where you can."

Stead declares further that the editor is to the people of our time what the old Jewish prophets were to theirs, and that he himself considers that he succeeds best so far as he is able to incorporate the spirit of the Bible into his journalistic work.

"Don't think I am talking shop, but I have sometimes wished I could make a Review of Reviews edition of the Bible—that is, for the practical use of the present time. I should put it in the first chapter of Isaiah. The old prophets correspond to the modern editor. The editor on our staff who don't take it seriously ought to cover the truth—that is, THE WORD of the Lord. But, with all the telegraph and news gatherer appliances the old prophet interpreted the facts of the times. Many a time has this editorial of Isaiah shaped me in newspaper difficulties. When in doubt as to whether to tell the truth or the opposite of the truth, the man will learn an inspiration to duty. He told the Jews squarely that they were no better than the Edomites and heathen around. You know the Jews are as proud of their country as you are of yours, and that's saying a great deal. If you are to be a prophet of labor, work these verses into the narrow of your life, and you will not go far wrong. Don't waste time on absurd pet theories of inspiration may be.

If a Horse Could Talk.

The first words a horse would utter if he could talk would be: "Loosen that overdraw check. It is torturing me out of life. It injures my windpipe, weakens my knees, makes me stumble and stiffens the muscles of my neck so that I can never again straighten it, but after a year or two I must finish my brief career with a neck fixed in the shape of that of the worst looking rickabones that ever drew a rag wagon. In many a case the rackabones was just as good looking a horse as I am now, only the check rein ruined him. How would you like to go through life with your head pulled toward the back of your neck and kept there by means of a strap that was fastened to a steel bar in your mouth? Try it an hour and then release me from torture.

"If I am a good horse, I do not need this cruel check rein. Only a bad horse wants it, and bad horses are very few. Even when it is used on one of these, it would be a great deal better if instead of the check rein pulls an ordinary bit one way while the driver pulls the other way with the carriage rein, and makes a seesaw upon the horse's tongue and the corners of his mouth. This wicked strap comes with every new set of harness, it is true, but that is no reason why my mouth should be pried open with it and my neck broken. In the name of horsehood I protest against the overdraw check rein as most drivers use it."

This country is large enough and varied enough as to its climate and productions to have an interesting exposition going on in some part of it the year around. Georgia has followed up the World's fair with a state exposition at Augusta which was attractive enough to draw out 50,000 people to attend its opening. South Carolina has joined in making the show a success, and the agricultural department displays the finest exhibit of southern products ever brought together. If Georgia has been able to keep some of her biggest watermelons on ice for this exposition, she will astonish the natives from the north beyond measure. Georgia raises and sells a million dollars' worth of watermelons a year. May her exposition bring splendid results!

The object lesson which has been given to public school pupils about how to get out of a burning building because in one instance too realistic. A San Francisco schoolhouse was found to be on fire. The fire drill was brought into requisition at once, and the children were marched out in perfect safety. Then it was found out that the fire drill had so impressed one of the pupils, a 14-year-old boy, that he had set fire to the building just to see how the children would get out in case of a real fire.

A New York paper that prides itself on its sequerciety lately had a sprawling headline across the home show as follows, "Equine Stars on Dress Parade." Of course one would not venture to pick flaws in the gifted head lining of a great metropolitan newspaper, but really, when it comes to horse stars on dress parade, is it not rather a jumbling of metaphors somehow? Come, now!

South Carolina accompliments duly upon Governor Tillman's vow that he will continue to execute those laws of nature's right to make just such "likely" whelps and shoot their pizens. Now Governor Tillman knows how the federal authorities felt when the moonshiners defied them.

THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

It Proposes Some Sweeping Reductions In Duties.

A RADICAL MEASURE OF REFORM.

A Synopsis of the Chief Features of the Democratic Measure Shows That Wool, Coal, Iron Ore, Lumber, Copper, Salt and Many Minor Articles Are to Be Free.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The meeting of the ways and means committee, at which the new tariff bill was presented, was very brief. All the Democratic members were on hand, but the only Republican members present were Messrs. Reed, Burrows, Hopkins, Payne and Dalzell. Immediately after the roll call Chairman Wilson spread the tariff bill before the committee. The only advance copy furnished was one given to the White House messenger a half hour previous for transmission to the president.

No business whatever was transacted by the committee. The Republican members were given copies of the bills, a few particular remarks being made, and the committee adjourned to give time to the minority to examine the measure.

TALKING OF THE BILL.

Democratic Tariff Framers Are Enthusiastic Over It.

TOM REED'S SHARP CRITICISM.

Republicans Unite in Denouncing the New Tariff Measure as Almost Wholly Bad. Governor McKinley Says Business Interests Are Ignored.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The new tariff bill is naturally the general topic in official circles today. The Democratic members of the ways and means committee point out the benefits with enthusiasm, and the Republicans criticise it freely.

Ex-Speaker Reed, a member of the ways and means committee, said: "Of course it is very easy for the gentlemen who prepared this bill to present their views, since they have been busily engaged in the work for a number of weeks, while the first sight that the minority had of the bill was at 11 o'clock yesterday. Like any other tariff bill which covers so many different subjects and takes up so much space, all any one could do who has but seen it is to make some obvious comments on certain portions of it. In the first place, the country ought to understand that there has been a certain degree of unfairness about the preparation of this bill—unfairness to the country rather than individuals—in allowing that the composition of the committee.

"The Democracy have taken the lion's share of the committee. They have done this for a purpose, for well they know the Democrats are represented upon the committee, they are represented in such a way that the south holds a strange and very unfortunate predomination. As their industrial status is very much different from the average of the whole country, it necessarily follows, and absolutely to be looked for, that this bill is about as bad as could be reasonably imagined. This may not be true with regard to every item, but it is certainly true with regard to the most important interests in the bill.

Favors the South.

"In the first place, one of the most striking things objected to is the frequent unnecessary changes from specific duties to ad valorem duties. Probably any one who has actual business in the United States can see, even if the ad valorem duties were calculated upon the actual basis as the specific duties, that in actual practice, owing to the ways in which undervaluations and appraisements are made, it would be a reduction of at least 10 per cent in the tariff on this basis.

"In the cotton schedule specific rates have been retained undoubtedly because the south was more or less interested in cotton manufactures, and the desire to protect their own local interests has caused them to adopt the system which they have rejected elsewhere to the disadvantage of their neighbors.

"In the cotton schedule the lowering of rates on fine goods is likely to work very much disaster to mills that are engaged in the production of such work and also in cotton yarn mills.

"In wool the schedule rates are not only too low generally, but they are so uneven in their reduction that the lowering of wages will not by any possibility save some industries, so that the working men in some parts of this industry will not have the comparative good fortune to only have their wages reduced, but are quite likely to lose them altogether. This is true to some extent, as it seems, in the cotton schedule.

"Coal has been placed upon the free list for the advantage of Nova Scotia mines, which have been purchased by gentlemen who have been interested in the tariff, and West Virginia is likely thereby, according to the Democratic governor of the state, to suffer irreparable damage and be arrested in its development.

"Iron ore is quite free, which will cause a lowering of wages in the iron mines and will repress the extension of the fields of effort which had already got to be very large and which were tending to the reduction of prices.

"New England seems to have been very severely treated in many ways. Our fisherman on the coast of Maine have been especially considered to their very great disadvantage in the putting of fresh fish on the free list, without even the saving clause for the consumption.

"I think it will be found that it is as unsatisfactory as could well be imagined. What they have in store for us in the revenue bill, it seems, we are not to know, so that we cannot judge their scheme as a whole; but, judging from the sample which has been presented, it is an unfortunate one for the country. It would seem impossible that such a bill could become a law."

From a Democratic View.

The following statement explaining the provisions of the new tariff bill was made by Hon. Clifton R. Breckinridge of Arkansas, one of the ways and means committee:

"The new tariff bill, it is proposed, shall go into effect on the 1st day of March next. It is in most, should the proposed substantial reduction from the present law. The general average cannot be precisely stated until the elaborate tables which are being prepared are completed. Some $20,000,000 of objectionable taxes are taken off, and of this amount about $13,000,000 pertains to raw materials placed on the free list.

"The revenue deficiency caused by the recent panic and present depression is a temporary deficiency, and it will doubtless be provided for by a temporary expedient. We cannot generalize upon this, and some provision is contemplated to meet such emergencies as they arise.

"But, taking matters at a normal state, it may be said that we must provide for $60,000,000, or a possibly less sum, in ways not expressed in the new tariff. This will follow very largely from the increased activity consequent upon the present bill. But as this is not expected to be of a character to materially affect manufacturing or trade, and the people were extremely anxious to know what we proposed doing in regard to the tariff, we concluded to make the new bill public as soon as it was finally completed."

Mr. Benton McMillan of Tennessee, one of the most prominent members of the committee, summarized the bill by saying, "It may be generally stated that the bill heavily reduces woolen goods, iron and steel products, cotton goods, chemicals and many other things essential to the prosperity of the people, and it will when tried, if it becomes a law, prove a great benefit to the country."

McKinley on Wilson's Bill.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 28.—Governor McKinley, on arriving here, was asked his opinion of the Wilson tariff bill. He said that he had not read the abstract of the measure and had only glanced through Mr. Wilson's review of it. He said that it was such a measure as he had expected, yet a little more sweeping than he had anticipated. It was, however, in line with the expressed determination of the Democracy to ignore the business interests and the working people of the country.

The objectionable feature of the bill, Mr. McKinley said, was the substitution of ad valorem for specific duties. That alone ought to defeat the entire measure. The ad valorem system, he said, rests upon the foreign valuation, which is hard to determine, and puts a premium upon undervaluation frauds. All of the leading nations of the world, he declared, had abandoned the ad valorem system of levying tariff duties for the reason that the valuation is made thousands of miles from the port of entry and can never be depended upon.

Iron Men Protest.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 28.—The Wilson tariff bill is the theme of conversation among iron, steel and glass manufacturers, coal operators and business men generally. Hon. B. F. Jones of the Jones & Laughlin American iron and steel works said the effect of the proposed bill would be disastrous to the iron and steel industries of the country. "If the measure should be signed by the president," said he, "50 per cent of the labor now employed would be thrown out of work, the remainder would have to work for one-half the present wages."

H. W. Oliver of the Oliver Iron and Steel company said: "As present prices are below the cost, the reduction must be borne by labor and freights. The change to ad valorem duties is objectionable, and it is simply brutal to have the bill go into effect on March 1."

THE KNIGHTS' NEW LEADER.

Powderly Goes Out Gracefully, and Sovereign Steps In.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—T. V. Powderly's resignation as grand master workman of the Knights of Labor was accepted, and J. R. Sovereign of Iowa has been elected to succeed him. An entirely new executive board has been chosen. The news of his election was immediately telegraphed to Mr. Sovereign, who is expected to be present before the adjournment of the general assembly. There was great rejoicing in the camp of the so called Hayes faction over the result.

Mr. Powderly, when seen shortly afterward, seemed in excellent humor. When asked his opinion of the assembly's action, he said:

"The ring is dead. Long live the king! Mr. Sovereign will have no heartier supporter by any individual of the order than he will receive from me. He is eminently worthy of the position, and I believe he will fill the office as well as any one can. At one time our numerical strength was not below the 500,000 mark, and now it is barely 60,000, but then rises and falls have ever been the portion of empires. We will again rise—perhaps higher than ever. Personally I bear no ill will against any one. I am perfectly satisfied that events have so shaped themselves.

"True, I only exercised the right that the constitution vested in me and attempted to carry out my ideas as to who should constitute the general executive board. The gentlemen I named were all friends of mine and good, true Knights. I was determined to stand by them and believed that my proposition was the right one, and rather than see my friends fall alone I was willing to go down with them.

"The welfare of the order has always been the aim of my life, and no man can say that I did not conscientiously discharge my duties to it, so far as I was able to do so. It is, the order is indebted to me about $5,000, but I am not uneasy about that. I shall remain in the order and do what I can for its benefit. I do not know who will carry out my unification or amalgamated ideas."

THAT EARTHQUAKE.

It Was Felt All Through Northern New York and Canada.

MALONE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Two severe shocks of earthquake were felt in Malone. They followed each other in quick succession. No rumbling sound was heard, the shocks appearing like explosions. The most substantial buildings trembled as if about to fall, and the occupants ran frightened into the streets. The wall of the Academy building was forced outward from its position. A panic ensued among the scholars, who rushed for the doors. Some of the pupils on the first floor jumped to the ground. No one was severely injured. A few chimneys were shattered. Clocks, vases, dishes, etc., were shaken from their places and went smashing to the floor. Only slight damage is reported from the adjoining towns. The earthquake was distinctly felt at Plattsburg, Burlington and Saranac Lake.

ODGENSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Several distinct earthquake shocks were felt, but no damage was done.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The shock of an earthquake was felt in this city. A few people ran out of their houses, the vibration being quite perceptible. The shock was felt in Northville and other parts of Fulton county.

Canada Shaken Too.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—The earthquake caused great excitement, and the people were thoroughly frightened. People in large buildings like the Windsor hotel, Canadian Pacific railroad offices, etc., all rushed into the streets regarding the buildings to come down. The ice in the canal was broken up. A man working on a building in Sherbrooke street was thrown from his ladder and seriously injured.

The disturbance seemed to be horizontal rather than vertical. Sir William Dawson of McGill college said it was the most marked disturbance of the earth's surface in Canada since 1869. Every town in eastern Canada felt it.

Boston Will Play Chicago.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The Boston Athletic association's football team started for Chicago today, where the Chicago Athletic club will meet them on Thanksgiving day in a match.

Dublin's Dynamite Scare.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—The box found outside of the walls of the Aldershagh barracks contained dynamite. The announcement has caused a sensation.

State Senator Erwin Near Death.

POTSDAM, N. Y., Nov. 28.—State Senator George Z. Erwin's physicians have given up hopes of his recovery, and his death is hourly expected.

Contraband Chinese Captured.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Four Chinese laborers who were attempting to enter the United States were captured here.

Fire In Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 28.—Fire in a warehouse owned by the Johns Hopkins estate did $75,000 damage.

French Deputy Dead.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Vicomte Kermenguy, member of the chamber of deputies, is dead.

Something the Matter With the Timepiece.

"I bought this thing at your store two or three weeks ago," said an exasperated citizen the other morning, taking a fine gold watch out of his pocket and handing it over the counter at a jewelry establishment on Madison street, "and paid you $75 in cash for it."

"Well," observed the jeweler, "you got a bargain. I don't see anything wrong with it."

"Oh, no! You don't see anything wrong! You warranted it to keep good time, didn't you?"

"Certainly. It's exactly with our time. It doesn't seem to have varied a minute since you got it."

"It doesn't, hey?" snorted the other. "Look here! You said it would keep time just as well when I was carrying it round with me as when it was hanging up at home, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"You said it I would wind it up regularly every morning at about the same hour I never would have any trouble with it, didn't you?"

"I think it very likely I did."

"I know you did! Well, sir, ever since I got that watch I've wound it every morning at 9 o'clock exactly. Haven't varied a minute. Ten days ago I had to go to Denver on business. Found my watch had gained a whole hour. Came back home the other day and found it had slowed up a whole hour. Been going just about as it was when I went away. I've got no use for a watch that will gain and lose like that. Darn such a watch! I want a better one in place of it or I want my money back, and I want it mighty quick!"—Chicago Tribune.

Bound to Go to Jail, Anyhow.

"It appears, prisoner," said the judge, "that you are a pickpocket."

"Well, if your honor says so," said the prisoner, "I dasn't deny it, for fear of being committed for contempt."—Harper's Bazar.

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

There's hardly a housekeeper in the country but has heard of Cottolene the new vegetable shortening. It is a strictly natural product; composed only of clarified cotton seed oil, thickened for convenience in use, with refined beef suet, pure and sweet. So composed,

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and ensure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.

TIRED OF HER PRINCE.

Mrs. John W. Mackay's Daughter Seeks a Separation.

SHE MARRIED AN ITALIAN PRINCE.

Saving Their Ten Years of Wedded Life. Millionaire Mackay Paid Gambling Debts of Prince Colonna Amounting to 1,000,000 Francs—The Suit Come Off Soon.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The Herald today prints the following dispatch from Paris:

Princess Colonna, the daughter of Mrs. John W. Mackay, has applied for a legal separation from Prince Prospero Colonna. The petition for the custody of her three children—Andrea, 8, Bianca, 6, and Marco, 4 years of age. The marriage took place in Paris in 1883. Mgr. di Rende, the papal nuncio to France, officiated at the religious ceremony, which was one of the social events of that season.

Two years before the marriage Prince Colonna met Mrs. Mackay's daughter, then Miss Bryant, in Italy. She is known here to Paris and marked Mrs. Mackay for her band. She replied:

"I don't approve of her marrying a foreigner. Moreover, don't be deluded. She is not Mr. Mackay's child, but his stepdaughter. She has no money of her own. Therefore, she has no dot. She is my daughter by my first husband, but she takes Mr. Mackay's name at his request." The prince persisted, and his uncle, Prince Stigliano Colonna, wrote to his behalf, saying that money was of no consequence, as it was a love match.

Married Without Settlements.

Mrs. Mackay eventually gave way. The bride was married without a dot or settlements, but Mrs. Mackay allowed her an income of $175,000 a year, besides giving her many valuable presents.

The prince and his bride went to Naples. Six months after the marriage the prince began demanding money of his wife. She then discovered that he had a taste for gambling, horse racing and a fast life. She bore his abuse, taunts and vulgarity until October last, when she left him in Paris and took her three children to the Hotel Brighton, where her grandmother, Mrs. Hungerford, was staying. Mrs. Mackay at the same time came on from Scotland to her daughter's aid.

The Herald correspondent saw an intimate friend of the family, who said:

"Prince Colonna and Mrs. Mackay have not spoken for years. No one would believe the enormous sums Mr. Mackay has paid for the prince's gambling debts—over 1,000,000 francs in five years, apart from the allowance he made his stepdaughter. He also gave her the money with which to furnish their home. All went in gambling.

"When his wife left their apartment, the prince sold all the tapestries and furniture and even her wedding presents, and he is now living on the proceeds. He frequently said to his wife, 'I will take your American independence out of you.' She replied, 'You may if you kill me.'"

Mr. Mackay Glad of It.

The friend added that such a long suffering and devoted wife as the princess was never known. Finally she lost all respect for her husband and determined to leave him. The only time they have since met was during the preliminary proceedings in court.

Pussy Cat Mew.

Pussy Cat Mew and I one day
Merrily drifted far away,
Down the river, into the bay.
Out where the great fog, cold and gray,
Rests on the ocean night and day.

Pussy Cat Mew in glad surprise
Opened her big, wide wonder eyes,
As round us two green lichen's glow
Watched the waters gentle rise;
Listened to the sea birds' cries.

Pussy Cat Mew, as I could see,
Thought it as strange as it could be,
'Twas all so new, so vast and free,
And naughty waves rose from the sea,
Spraying Pussy Cat Mew and me.

And then, at last, the moon's soft ray
Frightened the fog and chased it away,
And I rowed back to the little bay
And up the river, afraid to stay,
While Pussy Cat Mew in slumber lay.

The Grand Mufti.

This is a very old game, and one which makes lots of fun. One of the players stands on a stool in the midst of the other children who are in the game, impersonating that mysterious grandee, the grand mufti. He or she makes any motions desired, the more absurd the funnier, such as lifting the arms, extending the hand, squatting, standing on one foot, dancing a jig, hopping from one foot to the other, etc., at the same time saying: "Thus does the grand mufti!" or, "So does the grand mufti!" The two words, "thus" and "so," making the game, for when the grand mufti says "Thus does the grand mufti," every one must make the same gesture, or do the same thing, but when the grand mufti says, "So does the grand mufti," no one must imitate, under penalty of paying a forfeit. Great attention and quickness are required not to get confused as the game quickens.

An Easy Electrical Experiment.

Take a glass, expose it to the fire so that it shall be perfectly dry and place it upside down upon a table. Afterward take a tray, perfectly dry, and place it upon the glass in such a way that it shall preserve its equilibrium. Finally take a sheet of paper slightly smaller than the tray, heat it and rub it rapidly with a brush, and it will become quickly electrified. Then place it upon the tray.

An electrical machine will thus have been constructed without any expense. If the finger be brought near the tray, a spark will appear. This spark will be so much the brighter and the series of sparks will be so much the longer in proportion as the glass and tray are dry.

If, while the sparks are being drawn from the tray, the room be darkened, these sparks will appear extremely brilliant.

Grandpa's Fault.

Katharine's grandmother left her sailing some tin ducks with a magnet in a bowl of water one day while she went down stairs for a few minutes on errand. Very soon her grandfather, looking up from his book, discovered that the little maiden was having a frolic indeed and had succeeded in drenching herself from head to foot. Quite dismayed, he said: "Why! Why! What will grandma say?" To which the little lady quietly and confidently replied, "Oh, she will spank you for letting me do it."

No Idols For Her Dolls.

Helen was restless and fretful, crying for something to do. Her mother mentioned one or two amusements, but they did not seem to fit her case. At last she offered her some "Bronson" wrapping paper, but the suggestion that she cut out the figures and imagine them to be idols brought forth the indignant reply: "Idols! Well! The Bible says that is the most wicked sin it can be, and I won't have any dolls worshiping idols!"

"Please Spank Me."

Walcott, a 5-year-old, who when he is good is very good, and when he is bad is horrid, is usually overwhelmed with remorse after his various misdemeanors. One evening when his papa came home from the office the little man, with a burden on his conscience, walked up to him and said: "Papa, I have been a naughty boy today. I was not good to my mamma; please spank me."

HOW SHE GOT EVEN.

Mrs. Nuwed Shows Her Husband Just How Smart She Is.

Mrs. Nuwed conceived the idea of buying her husband a birthday present out of money she had saved and earned herself. So every cent she could scrimp from the household allowance was put away, and many other little devices resorted to in order to get the required sum. One of her plans was to save rags. She instructed the servant to be very careful to save every piece of old cloth that could be found, and she herself spent hours in gathering all sorts of odds and ends and stuffing them into the ragbag.

One day the bag was full, and a man came along the street shouting: "Wragsi Wragsi!" Mrs. Nuwed opened a window and said, "Here, man; I've got some rags to sell!"

The ragman came in and the portly bag was produced. He lifted it and then attached his scales to it. "TwelufF pounds," he said.

"What's that?" inquired Mrs. Nuwed sharply.

"TwelufF pounds, lady."

"Why, the idea! I weighed them myself yesterday, and there were 32 pounds there."

"Vill the lady long for herselluf?" asked the ragman, attaching his scales to the bag again and holding it up.

Mrs. Nuwed looked. The scales registered 32 pounds and no more. "Oh-y," she said, "how could I have made such a mistake!" and she took what the ragman offered her and went into the house.

That night she told her husband about the transaction. "I'm sure," she said, "that those rags weighed more than 32 pounds, but there was no getting around those scales. Why, he didn't try to cheat a bit. He held them right up and let me see just where the pointer stopped."

"What kind of scales were they?" asked the husband.

"Why, those common scales like we use in the kitchen."

"And did you ever stop to think that the capacity of those scales is but 12 pounds?"

A faint light began to dawn on Mrs. Nuwed. "What difference would that make?" she asked tremulously.

"Oh," replied Mr. Nuwed, "it wouldn't make the least bit of difference! Of course not. Only if those rags had weighed a ton that honest ragman's scales would have registered them as 12 pounds." Then Mr. Nuwed laughed boisterously.

"Well!" said his wife sharply, "you needn't make so much fuss about it. I guess those two paving stones I put in made up the difference all right."—Buffalo Express.

Witty Thaddeus Stevens.

Many a joke, good and bad, is credited to Thaddeus Stevens, the "great commoner," as he was sometimes called.

When he had taken to his bed for the last time, a visitor told him he was looking well.

"Oh, John," was the quick reply, "it is not my appearance but my disappearance that troubles me!"

One day a member of the house of representatives, who was noted for his unexcitable course on all questions, and who confessed that he never investigated a point under discussion without flatting himself a neutral, asked for leave of absence.

"Mr. Speaker," said Stevens, "I do not rise to object, but to suggest that the honorable member may not ask this favor, for he can easily pair off with himself."

One anecdote always remembered in connection with Stevens illustrates his unostentatious charity. A beggar woman met him one morning as he was limping to the house.

"Oh, sir," she said, "I have just lost all the money I had in the world!"

"And how much was that?"

"Oh, sir, it was 75 cents!"

"You don't say so!" he replied, putting a $5 bill in her hand. "And how wonderful it is that I should have found what you lost!"—Youth's Companion.

Seeing Him Off.

—Truth.

Its Fatal Defect.

"So young," mused the editor, looking over a poem that had just come in by mail. "So young and so gifted! Hardly 16, yet a genius of one of the most excitable and expensive female seminaries in the country! There is a vigor about this production, a dash, a brightness, a wealth of imagination and a facility of expression truly wonderful in one of her youth and inexperience. And yet," added the editor, firing it energetically into the waste basket, "she can't work off on this paper a poem that tries to make 'virago' rhyme with 'Chicago!'"—Chicago Tribune.

A Serious Loss.

Mistress—What did you do with that old brown dress that hung in my closet?

Domestic—You told me to get rid of all the rags, ma'am, and so I gave it to the rag man.

Mistress—Goodness me! How do you suppose I am ever to get any new clothes if I haven't an old dress to put on when my husband comes home?—New York Weekly.

He Looked It.

Judge Duffy—The evidence that you called this gentleman a donkey is overwhelming. Have you better admit the fact and withdraw your plea of not guilty?

Accused—May be I had, your honor. The longer I look at the presenting witness face the more probable it seems to me that I did call him a donkey.—Texas Siftings.

Good Evidence of It.

"I tell you that billiards don't pay. The surest way for a person to get ahead is to keep moving."

"Guess you're right. That's the way four or five tenants got ahead of me last week."—Buffalo Courier.

An Eye For Bargains.

Father—Is that young girl you're going to marry economical?

Son (enthusiastically)—I should say so! Why, last year she spent $1,500 in bargains!—Chicago Record.

RELIEF FOR THE POOR.

A MEETING AT CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH PARLOR LAST EVENING.

To Consider Measures of Charity—Mayors Gilbert and Saunders, Mr. Pliny J. Fisk, Father Smythe and Rev. Mr. Newell Appointed a Committee to Receive Contributions.

THERE was a meeting last evening in the Crescent Avenue church parlor of people specially invited by Mayor Gilbert to decide upon measures to afford relief during the Winter to the worthy poor of this vicinity.

There were about 125 persons present when the meeting at eight o'clock was called to order by Rev. Dr. Richards, the pastor of the church, and upon motion Mayor Gilbert was chosen chairman and Mr. George H. Goddard secretary.

Mayor Gilbert spoke at some length on the need of something being done. He referred to the various plans which, however, did not meet his approval sufficiently to justify him in recommending them. He knew that there were people in Plainfield able and willing to give money for so worthy a purpose, if they could be assured that it was properly expended, and that it really reached and benefited the persons who needed and were worthy of assistance.

There never was a time, he said, in the history of Plainfield when there were so many poor and needy. The regular organized charities were taxed to their utmost. Some extraordinary measures of relief were necessary to help the most unfortunate at least through the months of December, January and February.

He suggested, as one plan, some form of an organization of givers auxiliary to the Relief Association, who are the workers.

He suggested as another plan the giving of as much work as possible, getting done now work that it may have been intended to do next Spring. There are many of the poor who would accept help in this way, who would rather work for than ever ask for help as paupers. It would enable them to preserve their self-respect.

Mr. Gilbert then read an article by Edward Everett Hale in the Recorder, pointing out various ways in which the poor could be greatly helped by work.

Ex-Councilman Rowland Cox moved that a committee of five be appointed, to include Mr. Vanderbeek, the Overseer of the Poor, Councilman C. J. Fisk, and a member of the Relief Association to report during the evening a plan of organization auxiliary to the Relief Association in the line of the suggestions of the chairman.

Mr. Lovell offered a series of resolutions as a substitute for Mr. Cox's motion, and providing among other things that a committee of two from each church be appointed. Mr. Lovell's resolutions, after being duly seconded were discussed, and then withdrawn. Remarks were made pro and con by Messrs. Kauffman, Cox, Fisk, Tiffany, Richards, Rodman, Yerkes, Fisk, Ginns, Marsh, Patterson, McCutchen, Sorrell and others.

Mrs. Gilbert by request explained the methods of the Relief Association, and a young lady explained the work of the Dorcas Circles of Plainfield in helping the poor.

Councilman C. J. Fisk explained that the Union Co. Country Club had had this question under consideration for some time, and had arranged to raise money by public contributions to be disposed of under the direction of a committee consisting of Mayor Gilbert of Plainfield, Mayor Saunders of North Plainfield, Pliny J. Fisk, President of the Union County Club, Father Smythe, and Rev. Mr. Newell, and moved that they be made a committee of this meeting to raise funds. Mr. Tiffany moved that funds so raised be disposed of by the Relief Association subject to the direction of the committee. So ordered.

A motion to reconsider was lost, after which the meeting adjourned.

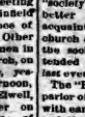
MRS. ELWELL AT ALL SOULS.

A Paper Read on the Ethics of Shakespeare.



IMMEDIATELY after the meeting of the Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and Other Christian Women in All Souls' church, on Park avenue, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. J. D. Elwell, read a paper on "The Ethics of Shakespeare," illustrated by the tragedy of "Othello." The paper was exceedingly interesting, and Shakespeare's work was described in an intelligent manner by a splendid speaker. She said that Shakespeare's works were, many of them, misunderstood. He was a master of the human heart and an observer of men. His best work was brought out in 1603, six years after his death. This was "Othello," which was written in 1604. The original tale from which it is believed Othello was taken, was written in 1565, and the scene was laid in Venice. From 1603 to 1610 Shakespeare wrote nothing but tragedy. He was then at his best.

RETRIBUTION.

IT WAS A SUCCESS.

The "Past and Present Supper" Served a Double Purpose.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal church feel well satisfied with the results of the "Past and Present Supper" given in Vincent chapel last evening.

It was not only beneficial in lining the society's pocketbook," but it served a better purpose in getting people acquainted. Church people, as a rule, at church entertainments, are "stiff," but the sociability of the many who attended the "Past and Present Supper" last evening was noticeable.

The "Past" supper was served in the parlor of the chapel which was festooned with ears of corn, pumpkin rings etc., and the only light furnished was from candles. The main dish was a dressed pig. Pork and beans, mush, and a profusion of side dishes, all prepared in an appetizing manner, and served by young ladies of the present in dresses of the past satisfied all the five senses of the hungry guests.

The "Present" supper was served in the side room, in the most approved modern way.

Those who had charge of the affair were:

Supper—Mrs. Pike, chairman, Mrs. G. Q. Packer, Mrs. S. Baker, Mrs. Lyons, Mrs. Love, Mrs. Humble, Mrs. Chas. Morse, Mrs. J. F. Peck, Mrs. D. L. Davis, Mrs. L. M. French, Miss Jackson, Miss M. Sharp, Miss G. Sharp.

Cake—Mrs. J. W. Jackson, chairman, Mrs. H. A. McGee, Mrs. George Evans, Mrs. Howell, Mrs. George Rogers, Miss Chandler, Miss Barnes, Miss Penny.

Lemonade—Mrs. Clark, chairman, Miss Minnie French, Miss Whitney.

Candy—Mrs. Collen Pond, chairman, Mrs. Chas. Lyman, Mrs. J. R. Joy, Miss Morrison, Miss Douglas, Miss Pangborn Miss Mary E. Rogers, Miss Anna Teale, Miss Marguerite Barnes, Mrs F. M. Smith.

Press Notices—Mrs. J. McNaughton.

Cloak Room—Mrs Hall.

Free Organ Recital.

Mr. William E. MacClymont, organist of the First Baptist church, gave his seventh free organ recital in that church last night. It was largely attended. Mr. MacClymont was assisted by Mr. Raymond W. Smith of Newark. The programme was as follows:

J. S. Bach.....Prelude And Fugue C Minor
W. Faulkes.....Andante Pastorale
H. Isenbrey.....Hidden Song

A. Guilmant { Tempo di Minuetto / March Funebre and Chant Seraphique }

L. Weir.....Offertorio No. 6
H. W. Parker.....Berceuse
G. W. Reeves.....Serenade

Bd. Gretz.....'In the Morning,' Four Gypsy Suite / Allegretto Scherzando, Romanza, Rondo Capriccioso / Dance Wedge—Mackay.....Overture to the Forest

Hats and Coats Were Missing.

Last night when the Senior Class of the High School, were ready to go home, after their turkey supper it was found that three overcoats, two ladies' coats and two ladies' hats and one bicycle were missing. Search revealed these not, and the unfortunate persons had to go home coatless, hatless and "bicycleless." The matter was reported to Chief Grant, this morning, who found the missing things in a closet where they had been placed by some practical joker.

Sued for $17 for Wages.

The case of Royce vs. John was tried before Justice Nash, yesterday afternoon. The suit was brought by Mr. Royce for $17 he claimed was due him for wages. Mr. John said he had hired Mr. Royce with the understanding that he was to do certain work, and when he found that he was incompetent he refused to pay him according to contract. Justice Nash reserved his decision.

PERSONAL.

A party was held Monday night at the house of Mrs. John Lewis, on East Front street. About 20 couple were present.

Miss Maggie C. Jones and Miss Hester C. Marsh, teachers at the Bryant School, will spend Thanksgiving out of town. The former at Red Bank and the latter at New York.

HAD A BAG OF CHICKENS.

Tramps Arrested with Their Thanksgiving Dinner.

As an east bound freight train stopped in this city to switch in several cars at the freight house, just before seven o'clock this morning, the conductor called Police Sergeant Kiely's attention to several tramps who were stealing a ride in an empty car. Mr. Kiely made a raid on them and succeeded in catching two. Three escaped. They must have climbed aboard the train again, for about ten o'clock word was received by Policeman Corsa at the depot, that two more had been arrested on the same train when it stopped at Cranford. A bag of chickens was found in the car occupied by the men, and it is supposed that they robbed some farmer's hen roost in the vicinity of the tanks.

Thanks from the Woman's Board.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—At the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That we extend a vote of thanks to all who have helped to sweeten sadness at the late funeral held by the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital, and especially gratefully to the officers of our Daily Prayer for their kind words expressed in behalf of our Board, to the choir for their services, to the floral committee, and to our many friends who have remembered us with cards and flowers and money, and to all others who have added to the sweetness and the result which is the fulfilment of our expectations.

Our treasurer reports that the net receipt amounts to $1,215, but by the sale of some of the floral offerings left over and are now being sold at reduced prices, we shall probably add a further small amount.

EMMA SCHUYLER,
Corresponding Secretary.

Dr. Lewis at the Crescent Avenue Church.

At the union Thanksgiving services in the Crescent avenue church to-morrow at 11 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church, will preach on "Facts, Fears, Hopes, and Prospects Concerning the Future of the United States."

The congregations in the Crescent Avenue, Park Avenue Baptist, Seventh-Day Baptist and Congregational churches will unite at this service.

William L. Patton Arrested Again.

William L. Patton, of the firm of William L. Patton & Co., brokers and bankers, who was arrested recently on the complaint of the trustees of the estate of Robert Craig, charged with the wrongful conversion of railroad stocks and bonds worth over $30,000, and who gave bail in that proceeding, was rearrested yesterday and sent to Ludlow street jail. At the present term of court the plaintiffs obtained a judgment of $34,586.60 against Patton & Co., upon which an execution was issued, and Patton was issued and Patton sent to jail.

Mr. Patton formerly lived on North Front, this city.

A Change of Janitors.

Robert Walker, janitor of the Irving School has resigned, and Henry P. Pugh appointed in his place by the Board of Education.

THE CREMORNE MISSION

MR. AND MRS. BALLOU TELL OF ITS WORK.

To a Large Congregation in the First Presbyterian Church Last Night.—The Meeting of Much Interest.

THE First Presbyterian church was well-filled last night to hear Mr. and Mrs. Ballou, from the Jerry McAuley Mission in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Ballou were accompanied by three others from the Mission. Mr. Ballou said, among other things, "Jesus Christ can save anyone. He can save the hard looking man, as well as the well dressed and wealthy. We have a hard looking crowd at the mission usually, but Christ saves them, although they are tramps. Most of them have not been tramps always, but have been college bred young men, who, through drink, have gone down lower and lower till at last in their misery they step into the mission, and we plead with them until they accept Jesus. I was a drunkard, myself. In my boyhood I had as bright a home as anyone, but I wandered away in the wretchedness of a drunken mother and became degraded in sin. For years I did not draw a sober breath. One night I wandered into the mission and by the grace of God I was saved. And it was all through the earnest pleading of a woman.

"A woman can plead harder and longer than a man. This woman pleaded with me for about a half hour before I would give in. I told her I was too fond of drink and that if I joined the mission I would be drunk inside of 24 hours. She kept at me, and thank God she did, for since that hour I have not had a single desire for liquor. When a man gets God into his heart he becomes a kind hearted, honest and loving being.

"You, no doubt, will go to your homes to-night and say it is hard times. But if you could see the 400 homeless, tired looking men at the mission to-night in New York, with scarcely anything to eat all day, and their clothing consisting of rags, you would not say it was hard times with you, when you have a warm fire to sit down beside and enough in your house to eat. It is more blessed to give than to receive' and you can help us by sending in any old things you have packed away in your closets."

After Mr. Ballou had finished speaking, Miss Wright sangs solo and spoke for a time. Mrs. Ballou was the last speaker.

MR. A. M. POWELL CHOSEN AUDITOR.

At the Meeting of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association took place at Newark yesterday. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall of this city was re-elected president, and the remainder of the old board of officers was re-elected, with one exception. Mr. Aaron M. Powell of Plainfield was chosen for auditor.

Reports were read showing the progress of the work in the State, and the rapidly increasing interest in the cause. The association has greatly increased its membership. Dr. Ida Husted Harper, Mrs. Ella Hoffman, Mrs. S. M. Perkins and others, have given numerous lectures under its auspices during the last year. It was decided to hold a memorial meeting in remembrance of the late Mrs. Lucy Stone, at Newark, in December.

Nearly $3,000 in the Catholic Benevolent League's Treasury.

The State convention of the councils of the Catholic Benevolent League of New Jersey was held yesterday in the Home Mission Library Association Building at Elizabeth. There are seventy-five councils in the State and seventy-five delegates were present, and made their reports. President of the League, James H. Fallon of Trenton, presided. Secretary Jere. F. Gleason reported showed that the League had 4,627 members. The treasurer said that there was a balance of nearly $3,000 in the treasury. These officers were elected:

President, James A. Rowe, Newark; vice-presidents, T. B. Fay, Long Branch; orator, M. J. Breeder, Newark; secretary, J. J. Gheran, Newark; treasurer, F. A. Huber, Paterson; spiritual director, Rev. Father Kramer, West Hoboken; marshal, James J. Fallon; representatives to the Supreme Council, J. E. Hardy, New Brunswick and Thomas Gallagher, Newark; deputy supreme chancellor, John Hardiman, New Brunswick. The next convention will be held at Bayonne on the second Tuesday of next October.

Smallpox Patient Escapes.

James O'Rourke, who tramped from Lorraine to Elizabeth on Monday, suffering from smallpox, and was consigned to the pesthouse, escaped from the cell of that institution in a mysterious manner yesterday morning. He turned up in Newark, where he walked through the streets, and, entering a dispensary there, asked to be treated.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Will It Fly?

Mr. Hiram Maxim's airship has not been heard of in some time. It is with general satisfaction therefore that the public receives information from London that this ingenious American is almost ready to make the trial trip with his machine. To be sure the same announcement has been made several times before, but now perhaps the inventor may really make a go of it, at least a go of the attempt to float through the air in a machine propelled by naphtha and steam. He announces confidently that Mr. Maxim will make the ascent with him, which looks as if he had faith in his own work.

The Maxim machine is built on the principle of the kite, which is supported on the air by the resistance its surface affords to the wind. Mr. Maxim has two great kite surfaces, which he names propellers, affixed to his ship. The larger one of these contains 9,000 square feet, the smaller 3,500 square feet of surface. It will not, however, depend on the wind of heaven to lift and float his machine, but he will raise the wind himself. He does this by means of a twin screw apparatus worked like the propellers of steamships. The inventor believes that this machine will make a speed of 25 miles an hour, the minimum at which it must go to create current strong enough to sustain the aeroplanes. If successful he expects airships will be constructed capable of traveling 90 miles an hour.

The New Reformation.

Newspapers that understand their own interests, even if they act from interest only, will not attempt to cast too much derision on the so called moral reformation wave that is sweeping cities in both Europe and America. That there is such a wave is proved precisely by the need of it. An evil is never so near destruction as when it seems most powerful and insolent. There is nearly as much need of spiritual and moral reformation today in the world as there was 2,000 years ago. The race is no worse than it was two centuries ago, but the morality and philanthropy that served the purpose two centuries ago are not good enough for the human race today in its march toward the higher civilization. We want cleaner, finer, gentler, honester, better mannered men and women to meet the coming of the grand civilization of the future.

We have advanced beyond the stage when a man's property was only that which he could rob his weaker neighbor of. The next stage in our progress will be that where men are too fine and high to wallow in debauchery, gluttony and drunkenness. The time will come when each one's law of conduct will be the golden rule. In France young men are foremost in the new move. In America and England many noble workers are devoting their lives to the effort to solve civilization's toughest problems.

To Read Music at Sight.

It is the difficulty of learning to read music at sight that makes many a good singer pass through life dumb as an oyster. Voice and ear do not always go together. If one could only learn to read music as he learns to read his native language and to think sounds as he thinks sentences, the difficulty would be got over.

It is claimed that by a new method of musical notation any pupil of ordinary intelligence can learn in six months to read all common music. With long or training he can compose simple melodies for himself. The system is called the Cheve method. Three men of unselfish aim set themselves to the task of elaborating a system of musical notation whereby every common person and schoolchild might become able to sing notes at sight. They at least have effected their mission, and it has been given to the public.

The system was so perfect that the minister of education for Belgium has ordered its adoption in all the public schools there. We must have it in America if it will do so much. Our musical training has been neglected among the people at large because we have had as much else to do. It is time to change this now, however, and bring the United States up level with the rest of the world.

Stead wants judges, journalists, saloon keepers, gambling house keepers, tramps, lawyers and all the other bad people of both sexes to write to him confidentially and tell him how to their judgment the crime and suffering they know most about, each in his own especial line, can be diminished. Address W. T. Stead, office of The Review of Reviews, Mowbray House, Norfolk street, Strand, W. C., London. Mr. Stead will give the information to the public in a pamphlet, duly edited in his own sprightly manner.

A recent financial statement announces that we have at present in this country $1,200,000,000 in silver, notes and currency outside of gold and gold certificates. A report of the director of the mint puts the amount of gold, silver and gold notes at $1,654,000,000. That would make the total amount of gold, silver and paper money in the country $1,654,000,000.

Still another resolution of an old story. When honest men get their lines repaired, fall out.

TARIFF WORK GOES ON.

Ways and Means Committee Tackle the Internal Revenue.

REPUBLICANS PREPARE TO FIGHT.

The Democratic Excess Have the Deficit of $25,000,000 Is to Be Overcome by Stimulated Importations — Commissioner Jerome Disagreed and Was Retired.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The ways and means committee will today devote its attention to the internal revenue schedule of the new tariff system. The strain of the past week has been very severe on all the Democratic members, the sessions frequently running far into the night, and it was resolved that nothing should be done yesterday. Today Messrs. McMillin, Bryan and Montgomery, members of the subcommittee on internal revenue, begin the formulation of the internal revenue and income tax provisions.

The internal revenue schedule proper will not be a very difficult one, but the income tax schedule will involve considerable labor. It still appears that the increase of the whisky tax, if any increase be made, will not exceed 10 cents per gallon, and the changes in the tobacco schedule will be very slight and directed rather to more logical classifications than to an increase in the tax.

The whole income tax question is opened up anew, and it is now possible that the tax may, after all, be of such a sweeping character as to include all individuals of incomes of $1,000 per annum or over.

The Republicans are already preparing for a vigorous fight on the new tariff bill. Circular letters are now being sent out by the thousand signed by Justice, Bateman & Co., the Philadelphia wool commission merchants, asking that certain data be sent to Mr. J. C. Burrows, a Republican member of the ways and means committee, in regard to the wool question.

Of course the principal theme of discussion in congressional circles still the new tariff bill. Con-servative Democrats are figuring that the deficit caused by the new bill will not exceed $25,000,000.

They claim that in addition to the revenue to be derived from the stimulated importation by the relief of articles taxed to the degree of prohibition, which they claim will amount to from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, the natural increase in importation under the McKinley bill, had not the hard times set in, would have amounted this year to from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000. With the resumption of business this increase, they think, will be fully realized and so materially reduce the amount to be raised by the internal revenue and from some new measure yet to be inaugurated.

In the south generally the effect of the new tariff bill will not be felt so severely as elsewhere on account of the local character of its great industries. In those localities however, the wool will be felt to a very considerable extent. Rice, sugar, iron ore and coal are the principal articles in which the southerners are interested, and all have been subjected to vigorous treatment.

The western members seem to be fairly well satisfied with the bill. The Democrats of that section are literally free traders anyway. Up in Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern Michigan there are some of the largest and most easily worked deposits of iron in the country. Representative Baldwin, whose district in Minnesota includes many of these mines, is far from being displeased with the prospect of free iron.

"It may possibly retard the development of that country for a short time," said he, "but it will bring the iron business to it-proper position on a basis that due attention will be directed to those fields where the ore can be most easily worked. When that time comes, the western mines will be developed with marvelous rapidity."

Assistant Secretary Hamlin was asked for a statement of the principal changes in the customs administrative act made by the Wilson bill. He said, "It is believed that the amendments reported by the ways and means committee to the customs administrative act will soften many of the harsher provisions of the law and yet leave the law in a much more perfect condition than it is at present."

Commissioner Johnston Removed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—George D. Johnston, civil service commissioner, has been removed by the president. He was the only Democrat on the commission and was appointed from Louisiana by President Harrison to succeed Hugh S. Thompson. The removal grew out of a report made by the commission on appointments under the postoffice department. Commissioners Lyman and Roosevelt made the ruling and reports, to which Johnston dissented in separate opinions. He submitted a minority report, which he desired to make public, and it is understood that to this the other commissioners objected. The matter being carried to the president, the majority was sustained and the minority report ordered suppressed. Commissioner Johnston sent in his resignation was called for, which he refused to tender, and the president removed him.

The Postal Finances.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The annual report of Postmaster General Bissell was given out. The postmaster general shows that the total receipts during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, at $64,457,748 and the gross estimated expenditures at $66,300,000, leaving an estimated deficiency of $3,941,787, which, however, will be increased $1,350,000 by funds taken from the unpaid money order accounts.

Postmaster Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The following fourth class postmasters were appointed: New York—Chateaugay Lake, G. D. Hayes; Morley, W. S. Whitney; Thayer's Corners, Mrs. E. E. Hayes; Tenth Brook, J. W. Ayres and Tribes Hill, J. P. Bailey.

Message Practically Passed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—It is said that the state department has received information that Manager Barrundia, of Guatemala, on behalf of, has been located in Honduras.

Pension Commissioner Resigns.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Commissioner of pensions Charles H. Dunning postmaster at Boone, N. Y., vice William P. Scripture, resigned.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The steamship Sir John Hawkins, from Gibraltar to Liverpool, is supposed to have foundered with all on board, numbering 25 persons.

Steamship Stateboard Capsized.

KINGSTON, O. T., Nov. 29.—The Stateboard steamship Oconestoa capsized in the Red river. Twenty-two persons were drowned.

STRIKE MAY SOON END.

Officials of the Reading Road Have Another Conference with Strikers.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—The chiefs representing the several railway organizations of the United States and the chairmen of the different local committees of the Lehigh Valley strikers held a long secret session at the Bingham House here. It was currently reported that the conference was held for the purpose of discussing the advisability of declaring the strike off at a stated time and giving the striking employes a chance to get back positions already taken by the new men hired by the company.

Chiefs Clark and Wilkinson were positive in their denials that such action was under contemplated. Mr. Wilkinson said a conference would be held, and Mr. Clark later said that there would be none, and if there was one he would give out nothing for publication at that time.

Notwithstanding these contradictory statements, Messrs. Iliss, Donavon, Dempsey and Davids, chairmen of the strikers' committees, together with seven Jersey Central railroad men and the members of the general grievance committee, were in executive session. The presence of the Jersey Central men is significant. Some reports gained circulation that the Jersey Central men would be asked to join the strikers in the event of the Lehigh Valley company continuing to hold to its avowed plans, and it was for the purpose of protecting against such action, it is said, that the men had called.

General Manager Voorhees returned from Bethlehem and said that the company has signed more men than it can use. He admits that the road is now in the best running order now, but says the company will select the most competent of the new men it has and put them to work.

President Wilbur of the Lehigh Valley has consented to meet the New York and New Jersey state boards of arbitration at Wilkesbarre, Pa.

Speaking of the strike, President Wilbur said: "Business is improving at all points along the line. There are a large number of coal trains now moving. I don't see but that the strike is over. I do not mean to say that things are altogether in as good shape now as before the strike began, but we are running trains on all divisions without inconvenience."

Want Wilbur to Arbitrate.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 29.—A petition signed by nearly all the merchants in Wilkesbarre was forwarded to President Wilbur, asking him to arbitrate. The estimated loss to the Lehigh on account of the strike is $500,000 a day.

Another Wreck on the Lehigh.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Two cars were badly wrecked by a collision between the Lehigh Valley and a Jersey Central freight train at South Wilkesbarre. No one was injured.

Shocked For a Week.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A dispatch from Teheran says that an earthquake as the result of the disaster at Kuchan recently are only just arriving. It is now learned that the first shock, which occurred on Nov. 17, completely destroyed the town and all the villages within a radius of 30 miles of the town. The shocks continued daily until Nov. 24. Altogether there were 160 distinct shocks.

Strike In Stevenson's Mine.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., Nov. 29.—Fifty men and boys employed at the McLean County Coal company's shaft struck on account of the reduction in wages. On account of this strike the whole force of miners was obliged to quit work. Vice President Stevenson is president of the company, and the strikers decided to appeal to him.

Fatally Hurt by His Insane Wife.

PLAINFIELD, Ind., Nov. 29.—Julius Blow of Altona, Clinton county, was struck on the head with an ax by his wife, cutting the skull open and exposing the brain. Blow is still living, but cannot recover. Mrs. Blow was temporarily insane.

The Lowell Tablet Unveiled.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The memorial tablet erected to the memory of the late James Russell Lowell in the old Chapter house of Westminster abbey, by the subscription of his English admirers, was unveiled with impressive ceremonies.

German Anarchists Sent the Boxes.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—A dispatch from Orleans, from which place the infernal machines and letter-bombs supposing them were sent to Emperor William and the German chancellor, alleges that the work was done by German anarchists.

Democrats Nullified Republicans.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 29.—Governor Tillman's message to the legislature recommends the abolishment of the system of conducting the railroads in this state through the medium of receivers.

Will Not Close the Gloucester Track.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 29.—Mayor Jackson of Gloucester City said that he would take no steps to enforce the antiprize fighting bill, but would allow the Gloucester race track to continue.

A Harvard Tutor Kills Himself.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 29.—Harmon W. Haley, a tutor of Latin in Harvard college, cut his throat at his room in Harvard square. Overwork was the cause of his suicide.

Shot Because She Wanted a Divorce.

ST. JAMES, Minn., Nov. 29.—Peter Larson shot his wife four times because she refused to withdraw her suit for a divorce. She is still alive. A posse is after the murderer.

Negroes Would Be State Prison.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 29.—Emma Woods, convicted of killing Lew Brown, was taken to Trenton prison to serve a seven years' sentence.

Uneasy Italy.

LASHED IN THE RIGGING

Vain Efforts Made to Rescue a Wrecked Schooner's Crew.

NINE MEN AND A WOMAN ON BOARD

The Vessel Went Ashore on Long Island in the Storm, and For Hours the Crew Waited For Aid That Could Not Reach Them—Lifeliner Fell Short.

BAYPORT, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Patrolman Harry Corwin of the life saving station at Smith's point, Great South bay, on coming west on his sunrise patrol saw a four masted schooner, stern down, in four fathoms of water, about a quarter of a mile off shore. Only a small portion of her forward bulwarks was above water. Ten person were in the rigging. One woman and three men were in the foretop, four in the mainyard, one clinging to the main shrouds and one at the mainmasthead.

Word was immediately telephoned to all the stations along the line. The lifesaving crews from Fargo station, Smith's point and Bayport hastened to the beach at a point opposite where the wrecked vessel lay.

The breakers were solid and lashed into fury on the beach, and it was impossible to launch a lifeboat. The life saving crews shot out their lifelines; but, although they were well aimed, the lines either burned or fell short. The attempts to send them across the rigging of the wreck were all unsuccessful, but the trials were continued until every cartridge had been used.

Identified by Letters.

Captain Frank Rourke arrived on the scene in the afternoon with two rockets, but these were just as ineffectual as the other shots. The wind was blowing from the west, and, although the rockets were fired against the wind, the lines were blown wide of the wreck.

Mrs. Samuel Newey, the wife of a life saving patolman, picked up a bundle of letters which were washed ashore during the forenoon. They were all dated about 12 months ago and were addressed to Captain W. H. Randall, owner of Lombard H. Randall, Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Many of these were of a purely business character and were from C. H. Jenkins, of Pack avenue, New York, who was evidently a partowner in the schooner. From these letters the identity of the schooner was learned.

The beach is strewn with wreckage. Two portions of an oak and a mahogany bedroom suite were washed ashore, which evidently came from the deck cabins of the ill fated vessel.

Among the driftwood were a number of broken piano frames and ivory keyboards, and the men on shore think the schooner might have been laden with partly completed pianos.

At nightfall the unfortunate people were still in the fore and mainrigging. All sorts of rumors are heard along the beach. Some people say they saw two men clinging to a floating spar early in the morning, but a heavy sea struck them, and they disappeared.

From the size of the vessel the life savers think that there must have been 12 or 14 men on board and that some of them are lost.

Sufferings of the Crew.

It was also said that a boy was seen with the four men at the foremasthead, but if such was the case there was no sign of him during the afternoon.

The Life Saving wrecking company's tug was sold to be on the way to rescue the survivors. The wind was piercingly cold, and there was no doubt that some of those in the rigging would succumb to hunger and exposure. If the tug reaches the vicinity of the wreck, it will be almost impossible for her to get close enough to the Randall to take the crew off.

The breakers were dashing over the wreck when night set in, and the people in the rigging were still clinging.

When daylight finded, the wreck was scarcely discernible, and darkness, coming on swiftly, hid the unfortunate beings who clung to the spars from the view of those on shore, who were willing but helpless to render them any assistance.

The Louise Randall belongs in Newport, R. I. She left Philadelphia on Nov. 23 for Boston. She was carrying, it was stated, a cargo of coal. She registered 1,534 gross tons. She is a comparatively new boat having been built in Boston about a year ago.

Went Down With All on Board.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—An unknown schooner foundered off Cape Ann and sank with all and all on board are supposed to have been lost. The spot where the schooner disappeared is about midway between Egg rock and Gilloway beacon in Ipswich bay. The lifeboat which put out to the scene reported, at 1 o'clock, that wreckage was floating around the spot, spreading a coal dust belt. In the pocket of the coat was a card, upon which was printed the name "C. Hines, Bangor, Me." This was the only clue. John the ill fated schooner that could be found. A small section of her topmast is sticking out of the water, but there was nothing which would lead to the discovery of her identity, cargo or her lost crew.

The men who watched her as she went down reported seeing two men and four or five people on board a moment before she was engulfed, and among the number there appeared to be the fluttering of the skirts of a woman. The unknown vessel is supposed to have been a coaster. The name of the coaster is attributed to a squall, which struck her a few moments before she seemed to suddenly lurch to port and went down with a mighty swirl.

Coal Barges Adrift.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 29.—Tug Mary A. Beveridge, Captain L. D. Potter, bound for St. Johnland, N. Y., with a tow of three coal barges, put into this port. She was compelled for her own safety to cut loose from them because of a gale and heavy sea. No trace has yet been seen of the barges, on which were several people.

Fishing Schooner Ashore.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Nov. 29.—A dispatch received by the Gloucester Fishing and Fishing Insurance company from Little Glass bay, C. B., states that the schooner C. S. Tapper is ashore at that point.

Ashore in Western Bay.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—Lloyd's agent reports that the coal schooner is ashore on the rear side of Deer Island. She is on a rocky bottom and is supposed to be a British vessel.

THE DAY IN HISTORY.

A FEW POINTS ABOUT ITS EARLY OBSERVANCE.

Some Old Proclamations—Origin of the Festival—Recognition by Congress—No Reason Why the Turkey Should Be Censured in It.

THANKSGIVING day dates back to the times when the Puritan fathers sought liberty of conscience on the shores of New England, whither they were driven to take refuge from the intolerance and persecution of a state church, landing in this country—as every intelligent schoolboy can tell—on Monday, Dec. 21, 1620. The first celebration of the kind in modern times was in October, 1578, at Leyden, where there was a Thanksgiving celebration of the first anniversary of the city's deliverance from siege. Forty-six years later, in the fall of 1621, Governor Bradford, after the first harvest of the Plymouth colony in New England, proclaimed a day of thanksgiving and sent out four men in search of game to enable them to observe it better.

These Puritan fathers, whose watchfulness had imparted to their devotion a certain degree of sternness, were very thankful for a bountiful harvest after a period of sore distress and looked upon the first fruits of their toil in their new home as a symbol of blessings to come. The four sportsmen came back staggering under a burden of turkeys and other wild fowl enough to provision the colony for a week. The commencement of the festival was announced by the roar of one of the great guns on the hillside, and the day was Thursday, Oct. 24, rather less than one year after their arrival in Cape Cod bay.

There was a solemn procession first to the meeting house, the men marching three abreast, with the sergeant in command and Governor Bradford following behind, while Elder Brewster, in his preacher's cloak, walked alongside bearing the Bible and looking as grave as the occasion demanded. Miles Standish, the warlike military chief, was there, and clad in the dress of the times would cut a strange figure if present among us now. No doubt that Thanksgiving dinner was enjoyed keenly and was the biggest thing in the way of a family party that has occurred since. Most of the game was cooked in the open air, and the thrifty Puritan housewives concocted dishes that were tempting and ingenious. The dinner was followed by the singing of psalms and of favorite songs that they had often sung around English firesides.

In the midst of their rejoicings an Indian shout was heard, causing a momentary panic, and every man grasped his weapon, but only a number of friendly savages, led by Chief Massasoit, who had come to thank the white man for assistance rendered and to share in the festivities. They brought a contribution to the fest in the way of venison, and while they were being regaled to an exhibition of their war dances, causing demure Puritan maidens to scream and their lovers to look gallant and fearless as they reassured them. Captain Standish in turn gave the braves a start by putting his troops through a military drill, the savages being alarmed by the rattling of the musketry and the roar of the ordnance. The feast continued three days amid prayers, psalm singing, Indian dances and war-hoops and hearty artillery, after which the Indians were escorted a short distance from the settlement by Captain Standish and his troops, who gave them a parting salute.

Days of thanksgiving were officially appointed in the Massachusetts Bay colony for several years prior to 1639. The New Netherlands Dutch rulers also set apart regular days of thanksgiving between the years 1644 and 1665, and 100 years later on the English governors of New York followed their example.

The proclamation of the New Netherlands council, sitting at Fort Amsterdam in 1645, was as follows:

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God in his fatherly clemency and mercy, in addition to many previous blessings, to suffer us to reach the long looked for peace with the Indians.

Therefore is it deemed necessary to proclaim the fact to all those of New England to be and that in all places in the aforesaid country where Dutch and English churches are established a day of publicity may be especially thanksgiven and blessed on next Wednesday in September, being the 8th of September, the text to be appropriate and the sermon to be applicable thereto.

Your reverence will please announce this matter to the congregation next Sunday so that they may have notice.

On which we rely.

Throughout the Revolution the annual observance of Thanksgiving day was duly recognized by congress. After peace, however, it was thought to be no longer necessary till 1789, when the adoption of the constitution was made a national thanksgiving "by the appointment of President Washington. Like rejoicings took place in celebration of the suppression of insurrection in 1795 and the restoration of peace in 1815. The first Thursday in November was recommended as a day of national thanksgiving by the prayer book of the Protestant Episcopal church in 1789, since when other denominations have made similar provisions. The governor of New York 70 years ago appointed a regular day, and the other northern states quickly followed, the southern states joining in after the war.

The staid and chastened rejoicing with which the honest but austere pilgrim fathers observed the day may be learned from the proclamation in 1627 of Petrus Stuyvesant, or rather of the council of the New Netherlands, in which he enjoins thankfulness, but forbids certain worldly pleasures in the following words:

In order that these services may be observed with the greatest harmony the director general and council forbid during the exercises on the said day of Thanksgiving all such pleasures as playing tennis or ball, hunting, fishing, driving, plowing, mowing, together with all forbidden plays, as dice, conviviality and such like, under pain of arbitrary banishment, and we admonish at the same time all ministers of the holy gospel within our jurisdiction to formulate their sermons and prayers accordingly. Given in council held at Fort Amsterdam, in New Netherlands, 6th of February, 1627.

As to the cause for national thanksgiving, no true American can say there is not abundant reason for thankfulness. This is the year of the commemoration of the centenary of the institution, greater liberty is enjoyed than in perhaps any other country, and while there always will be rich and poor, there are less poverty and higher wages proportionately for workmen than in any other country in the world. The chances of rising to wealth are open to all. The laboring man of today may possibly be a millionaire 10 or 20 years hence. The agricultural resources of the country are so great that double the present population of this country could be sustained in the United States without increasing the area of a single farm or adding one to their number by merely bringing the product up to the standard of reasonably good agriculture. Besides this, there might remain for export twice the quantity required for home use, which could be sent abroad to feed the hungry.

The first Thanksgiving proclamation of Washington as president of the United States was made in New York on Oct. 3, 1789, setting apart Thursday, Nov. 26, of that year "to be devoted by the people of these states to the service of that great and glorious Being who is the Author of all the good that is, that was or that will be," etc.

His second Thanksgiving proclamation was made in Philadelphia on Jan. 1, 1795, the occasion to be one of special observance.

Of all the Thanksgiving proclamations ever issued, that which caused the bitterest comment was the one by Governor John Jay of New York. It stands conspicuous in the pages of history by marking the acrimony and enmity of his assailants in the way in which it is worded, and is as follows:

Whereas, The governor of the state of New York is vested with authority to appoint a day for this purpose, and to require and enjoin the observance of it in a manner which, circumstanced as it is, I consider as being more appropriate for the legislature than for me to decide. But, as the people of this state have constituted me their chief magistrate, and being perfectly convinced that nation al prosperity obtained and ought to obtain national gratitude to the Supreme Ruler of all nations, I think it appropriate to recommend, and I therefore do earnestly recommend, to the clergy and others of my fellow citizens throughout this state to assemble apart Thursday, the 26th of November, for the purpose aforesaid and to observe it accordingly.

The question why the turkey becomes the national bird, as far as the table is concerned, on Thanksgiving day has never been settled and probably never will be. Most likely it is because this gallinaceous fowl is in prime order for killing at this time and possibly because most of the pilgrim fathers relied on "Turkey" at their first Thanksgiving feast. The same mystery prevails regarding the association of cranberry sauce with turkey at this time. It will probably never be revealed. Let those who wish to lift the veil of secrecy direct their curiosity to such what is hidden may reveal a cause so utterly prosaic as to take away some of the charms of a feast consecrated by over two centuries of observance.

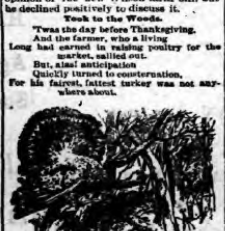
INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 29.—Ex-President Harrison was asked for a statement of his opinion of the new Wilson tariff bill, but he declined positively to discuss it.

Twas the day before Thanksgiving.
And the farmer, who a living
Long had earned in raising poultry for the market, sallied out.
But, alas! anticipation
Quickly turned to consternation,
For his fairest, fattest turker was not anywhere about.



Long he searched, but unattended
With success, therefore he ended
Soon the lives of those remaining, and to market brought his stock,
Off the crowd came hard berating,
And his mind the while debating
What ill fortune had deprived him of the seventh turkey hen.

Do not doubt some fowls can reason
And can keep track of the season,
Since a turkey proved all wise pates are not modern date.
Oh, he'd seen to town his kind mate,
So he knew what knives a-grinding meant
And betimes left him 'mid the proper time for taking to the woods.

Webster's Encyclopædic Dictionary.

It contains Webster's Unabridged Dictionary with Denison's Patent Finger-tip Index.

"NOTA"—In the revision of Webster's grand work it has become the fashion to throw out what they are pleased to call "obsolete" words. Well, as the Dictionary is a "Work of Reference," we kept the original work intact.

It also contains a supplement of about 1000 pages with a complete finger-tip index. This supplement not only contains every word in the latest edition of both Webster's and Worcester's Unabridged Dictionaries, but 45,000 more than are contained in either, and 25,000 more than are contained in the International.

Endorsed by Julius H. Seelye, President of Amherst College; E. G. Robinson, President of Brown University; Thos. W. Bicknell, President of Chautauqua Teachers' Reading Union, and other leading educators.

A SOLDIER'S HEART.

[Copyright, 1893. All rights reserved.]

A cold, bleak November day; a Virginia turnpike; a horseman in blue, riding at a gallop.

A turn in the road; a bushwhacker hidden in the bushes; a shot and a fall from the saddle.

It was Little Jim, our third sergeant, riding across the country to carry a dispatch from Custer to Torbett. We called him Little Jim because he was small of stature and because everybody liked him. He was only a boy, and one look into his frank face and big blue eyes made you his friend. The bushwhacker peered over the log and saw his victim lying on the stony road and the horse galloping away in affright, and a smile of satisfaction came to his face as he rose up and hurried through the woods. War is not always war. Sometimes it is assassination—murder.

Twenty rods beyond the body lying in the road is a humble cabin, tenanted only by a woman and two children. War has forced the husband and father into the ranks. At sound of the shot and the clatter of hoofs they rise up from their frugal noonday meal and run down to the gate. A dead man is by no means a rare sight to mother and children. Hundreds of dead have been left on that highway in the last two years, and at times the cabin has been full of wounded men who groaned and cursed.

"It's a Yankee who's been bushwhacked," whispers the mother as she leads the way down the road, and presently the trio are looking down upon the lifeless form of our Little Jim. No, not lifeless. The bullet struck him in the side and inflicted a severe wound, but even while they gaze at him he opens his blue eyes and tries to realize his situation.

"Let's be good to him!" pleads the other.

She would. Assisted a bit by the children, she got him in the house and had captured a prisoner and a patient at the same time. Her husband and her neighbors had come home with gunshot wounds, and she had helped to nurse them and send them back to fight for the cause she believed was right. Aside from a surgeon our Little Jim could not have fallen into better hands. She probed for the bullet and found it, and if living today he wears it on his watchchain. The Federals had been holding that road for weeks, and all that afternoon and evening the woman listened for the clatter of hoofs that she might report what had occurred and have her patient taken away. Not a horseman passed. A shift of war had left that cabin the center of neutral ground, and the armies were preparing to go into winter quarters.

There were days and nights when Little Jim was out of his head and raving of home and sweetheart. There were days and nights when his life hung on a thread. He had the care his own mother would have given him. Many and many a time he called her his mother, and blessed her that she had come down from the old home to nurse him back to life. By and by the crisis passed, and the soldier knew where he was and the situation outside. He knew more than the good woman would have him. That little family was being put to sore straits to find him such food as an invalid must have, and he heard the children cry out at night because they had not enough covering to keep them warm. After a few days, when he found there was no chance to get word into the Federal line, he begged of the woman to deliver him up to the Confederate authorities and relieve herself of the burden. She indignantly refused, and the children, who had insisted on calling him Uncle Daniel, cried at the thought of his going away.

Pretty soon a new peril threatened. The neutral territory was given up to bushwhackers and guerrillas. One day a long haired, evil looking man, whose garb was that of a farmer, and who was probably the would be assassin of Little Jim, was seen lurking about the premises. The woman put another pillow behind the soldier, handed him his revolver and quietly said:

"I have your carbine and shall try to kill him if he persists in entering the house. If I am killed, then you must take care of yourself."

The sergeant could hear every word of the conversation as the man finally advanced to the house, and the woman stepped outside to meet him.

"Look yere, woman," he began, "who yo' got in yo'r house?"

"My want rigin on you ask that?" she demanded in turn.

"By the right everybody has to kill a cussed Yankee wharever he kin find him. Stand aside and let me see what sort of a fowl yo've had cooped in yere fur two or three weeks."

Click! Click! sounded the hammer of her carbine, and as she brought the muzzle on a line with the man's heart she said:

"There's the road! Yo' scatter! I'll count 20, and then I'll shoot!"

He backed away, muttering and cursing, and for the next three days the cabin was in a state of siege. He hung about, determined to investigate the reports which had somehow leaked out, but finding the woman on her guard he finally went away to report to the military authorities. Thanksgiving day came—cold, bleak and a flutter of snowflakes in the air. Little Jim had been shot just three weeks before, but such was the nursing that on this day he was helped out of bed and bolstered up in the big rocking chair to eat Thanksgiving dinner. Tears came to his eyes as he saw what efforts the woman had put forth and how meager the results. Mother, children and soldier were gathered at the table when there came a clatter of hoofs and a clanking of sabers, and a dozen troopers in gray galloped up to the door. At their head was a sergeant, who pushed his way in and seized wife and children and kissed them before he looked at the pale faced man at his table. He was followed by a corporal who had scarcely inside the door before the children cried out:

"Uncle Daniel! Uncle Daniel! Our other Uncle Daniel has come home."

The bushwhacker had made his report to the nearest camp, and the sergeant had been sent to bring the prisoner in. He sat at the head of the table and heard the story, and when it was concluded he patted his wife on the head and said:

"You did just right, Mary. When a Yank is up, he's our enemy; when he's down, we can't strike him. I wish some one else had come, though. My orders are to take him back, and I've got to do it or stand trial."

"I'll go with you," said Little Jim, waving the woman to silence. "After the kindness shown me here I won't see you get into trouble."

"It'll kill him, Jim!" protested the woman. "His wound is not healed yet, and he's no more strength than a baby."

"Yanks in sight, sir!" reported a man at the door.

"How far away?"

"About a mile."

"Then there's no time. Twelve of us can't fight no thousand Yanks. Goodby, Mary; goodby, children! Say, Yank, I'm dog gone glad of it! Orders is orders, but I reckon I'd a-gone back to camp and told 'em it wasn't in me to bust up a dying man's Thanksgiving, no matter whether he was a reb or a Yank!"

Five minutes later the highway was full of Federal cavalry, and half a dozen officers were in the house. This time it was Little Jim who told the story, and when he finished every one put out his hand to the woman and said "God bless you!" They took the sergeant away in an ambulance, but on the plate on which he had eaten his Thanksgiving dinner they left a dollar reward, and many a soldier's haversack was emptied that want might be put afar off. After the war Little Jim rode over that highway again to find the cabin in ashes, but the soldier and his family alive and well. His greenback built a new and better house, fenced in the fields again, bought horses and plows and seed and started the ex-Confederate on the road to prosperity. Well, the sergeant feels that he can never repay the debt, and the family think there was never such another Yankee in the world, and so, take it all around, it came out as good as the ending of any story, and hasn't been concluded yet. M. QUAD.

RHODE ISLAND'S ELECTION.

Fiscality Elections Decided on by an Almost Unanimous Vote.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 29.—The people of the state voted on an amendment to the constitution in favor of plurality elections in place of majority elections, as at present. The change has been demanded for years, and the proposed amendment was introduced into the last senate by a Republican, but received the support of all parties, and yesterday the people by an overwhelming majority decided in its favor.

The election was a great victory for the Republicans. They elected their candidate for mayor, Colonel Frank F. Olney, by a majority of 300 and secured control of both branches of the city council. The Democrats made a desperate fight, and in some of their strongholds discovered errors in the first count which favored their nominee. Whether these mistakes were actually made does not affect the result. The amendment to the constitution providing for plurality instead of majority elections was adopted by a practically unanimous vote.

BRISTOL, R. I., Nov. 29.—Coghall, Republican, was elected state senator by 74 majority. He succeeds Joshua Wilbour, Republican, who resigned on account of the financial trouble of his banking firm—Wilbour, Jackson & Co. of Providence.

Hanged Her Stepfather.

VINCENNES, Ind., Nov. 29.—Henry Wesley, living near Monroe City, was hacked to pieces with an ax by his stepdaughter, Lulu Meyers. The girl was being lectured by her stepfather for staying out late at night.

Notwithstanding the great cry of "Hard Times," our trade up to the present date is considerably in excess of last year. The result we believe of FAIR DEALING—giving the very best goods possible for the least money. In other words, REAL MERIT.

The people of Plainfield have found out that in the filling of a memorandum of a dozen or more articles in our lines, they can do just as well at EDSALL'S, in price, quality, style and variety, as in any one store in New York.

Patrons often remark in our store: "Well, if I can't get it here, it is one of my holidays for it in Plainfield, for I will have hard work to find it in New York.

We have now so many good things to advertise, that it is impossible to mention them in our space, and urge buyers to call at our store and see for themselves the many new things we offer.

A HUNT FOR A WILD MAN

Shipwrecked and Insane Sailor Terrorizes Rockaway Beach.

ARMED WITH A GUN AND A SWORD.

For Two Weeks the Maniac Made of a Lost Schooner Has Been Wild on Long Island, and Now It Is Proposed to Hunt Him Down With a Posse and Lock Him Up.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—There will be a man hunt at Rockaway beach today, in which some one is sure to get hurt. On one side will be a maniac armed with a fowling piece and knife, and on the other 10 resolute fishermen headed by the six foot chief of police. For two weeks the inhabitants of Rockaway beach, Long Island, have been terrorized by what has been described as a "wild man." It now turns out that he is a maniac sailor.

Three weeks ago the schooner Maggie Devine ran on the rocks just outside of Rockaway inlet in a heavy gale. She went to pieces in the breakers, but part of her crew escaped save one. This was the mate, James Rush, who was washed overboard and was given up as lost. The "wild man" and the mate are now supposed to be one and the same.

Lives on Raw Clams.

Ever since the night of the wreck the "wild man" has made his home in the woods near the village and among the rocks on the beach, at times seeking shelter in a dilapidated oyster shed known as "Uncle Dick's shanty."

His nether limbs are incased in tattered blue overalls. He wears a frayed and soiled white blouse and a sailor's hat. His feet are bare, and his long, unkempt hair and beard hang down upon his brawny shoulders and massive chest.

Eight days ago John Lauth, a wealthy hardware merchant of this city, while driving on Rockaway beach, saw the "wild man." He ran into the undergrowth and disappeared. On the same day a fisherman named McDonald and George Farrell came upon him. He scared them so badly that they got away as fast as they could.

The "wild man" was not seen again until Friday last. Then he chased from the beach to the village Edward Tracy, one of the oldest inhabitants. On the same day in the forenoon John Corning, a contractor of Rockaway, with one of his workmen, William McVay, was returning from Rockaway park. In the middle of the road they encountered the demented sailor. He struck Corning on the back of the neck with a club and felled him. McVay grappled with the "wild man," but he escaped into the brush.

A Posse After Him.

The same afternoon Mrs. H. L. MacArthur, the wife of Rockaway's chief of police, was returning home from Rockaway park, when the "wild man" came behind her and seized her by the throat. He tore her right ear with his talon-like nails and pounded her head on the ground, rendering her unconscious. As she is in a delicate condition, her physician fears for her life.

He has a captured gun and has become more than ever a menace to the safety of the people of Rockaway beach. Police Captain MacArthur, with a posse, was out looking for him yesterday afternoon, but without success.

Captain MacArthur went to Long Island City last night to obtain an armed posse of deputy sheriffs to capture him. A reward of $500 has been offered for his arrest by the citizens of Rockaway.

A Financial Transaction.

His Son (just returned from Africa)—I brought a silver mine down there, father, for $6,000.

His Father—I knew they'd swindle you. So you were fool enough to buy a mine?

His Son—Yes; I formed a company and sold half the stock to an American for $12,000.

His Father (breathing heavily)—You did? I'll bet I'm the one who bought it!

His Son (trying to appear at home)—I know you are.—Truth.

Only In the Past Tense.

Tenderfoot (to cowboy)—What do you mean by shooting my dog. He's worth $150.
